Ninety-Seven Years

The Varsity extends its best wishes and congratulations to Sir William Mulock, chancellor of the University, who yesterday celebrated his ninety-seventh birthday.

Keep Drama Alive

The coming of war to darken the world necessarily means the temporary loss of many of the activities of our ordinary life. Throughout the world men must constantly be on the alert to protect and preserve those things which they cherish, without interfering of course with the successful prosecution of the war. To the universities falls the responsibility of carrying on many of the worthwhile activities which add so much to the way of life for which we are fighting. One of our responsibilities surely is the preservation of cultural activities on a scale sufficient to endure through the war and burst into renewed life with the coming again of peace.

The various campus dramatic groups in this university, although hampered by lack of time, are carrying on their activities this year. Tomorrow night the University Drama Committee will present in Hart House the fifth annual University Drama Festival in which dramatic groups from three colleges will compete for the Cody Award won last year by University College.

We feel that much credit is due the members of the Drama Committee and the various college groups for carrying on the Festival this year. Tuesday's bill of fare promises to be one worthy of a record attendance. The three-play program runs the gamut from comedy through satire to melodrama, and there should be something to please all tastes. Last year the attendance was small but extremely enthusiastic. This year we feel there should be full student support of this worthy effort. Fill Hart House Theatre on Tuesday night and help keep drama in the university alive.

Editorial Headaches

Lo, the poor editor!

By day he slaveth, and by night his candles burn. And with 25 new reporters, most of whom couldn't write two inches on the Chicago fire, the editor himself is beginning to burn already!

"A campfire will be carried out with games and singing," wrote one of the most brilliant of the embryo Hearsts, and the copy reader is still confined to hospital with nervous heebie-jeebies.

"Two love seats have been purchased from the dormitories. A clothing class will cover them," reads another and members of that clothing class were madder than 16 kinds of hades at the implication.

"Swedish" costumes and games figured three times in one story, as Webster was relegated to the trash basket, and the author began her own particular style of spelling.

"Professor (censored) has just come back from (censored) where he stayed this summer. He was there on vacation. He said that he had a very good time. He will start to work on his master's degree next summer." This, readers, is NEWS!

Typical of the dashing style in which many stories are begun, is this gem—written at the cost of hours of real work: "Casa Linda elected officers the past week. Casa Linda is the only cooperative girls' house on the campus." Of course we can hope that the girls in the house are cooperative. But what Dean Doak is going to say about publishing such information is another thing.

And so, kind friend, if perchance a weary, sad-faced man, with gentle eyes, should be found in a pool of his own blood in front of The Toreador office—you will know that the editor has finally given up the struggle, laid down his weary head, and passed into the quiet and peace beyond—where reporters do not exist, and where there is no such thing as "Swedish" monsters or "cooperative girls."

—Toreador, Texas Technological College.

Vienna and Madrid

Joyce Trio in Sunday Evening Concert

It is unfortunate that last impressions remain. Through the consummate corn of a Drink to me Only with Thine Eyes arrangement done in drink to me only with thine eyes style, one has vague recollections of the Joyce Trio doing adequate Brahms and new Turina. The Brahms was more than adequate. They proceeded from the rather involved allegro con brio with its heavy piano to a dainty and charming scherzo. The adagio was interesting and on the whole more closely knit than the two preceding movements, but only with the final allegro was one able to catch a hint of the unity of interpretation and performance so essential in group playing.

Turina's Trio No. 2 in B minor for a new work was surprisingly orthodox and suffered somewhat because of it. The form was logical and the piece correspondingly easy to listen to. Second hearings, though, often improve one's appreciation of these scholastic works.

I enjoyed Simeon Joyce's pianism, though it was at times a trifle conspicuous. There must always remain that difficulty in performing and composing trios of combining a powerful instrument on equal terms with two much weaker ones.

As one of an appreciative audience, I found the program thoroughly enjoyable but as a critic, the encore most unfortunate.

Worth Watching

Lorne Watson's Friday Recital

The number of young pianists in Toronto who possess the abundant and quite electrifying technique of Lorne Watson can be counted on the fingers of one hand. He has a very congenial manner and this, with his excellent technique and adequate musicianship, provided a most refreshing and enjoyable recital of fine piano music.

No loverless number could have been chosen to begin the program than the Chopin Nocturne in F Sharp Major. There followed three Chopin Etudes—the Octave, played very brilliantly, the E Major, which as Mr. Watson stated possesses one of the most inspired melodies that Chopin ever wrote, and finally the March Wind, a tour de force which demanded all Watson's technical equipment. The group was brought to a close with the rather melancholy, but magnificent Ballade in F Minor.

The latter part of the program was more modern and more melodious. Debussy's Claire de lune was played with fine aesthetic feeling. The same composer's Iberian Fantasy was purely rhythmic and again demonstrated the pianist's fine technique. The brilliant and very difficult Etude in F Minor of Liszt brought the formal program to a close. There were two encores: the Chopin Butterfly Etude and Mendelssohn's On Wings of Song, both played with a grace and a charm which proved again Mr. Watson's musicianship.

Church-Organ Recital

Casavant Organ Society

Florence MacKay Joyce is the first Canadian pianist to appear this year in the Casavant Recital Series. She is completely adequate, her program was well-chosen, but she is entirely unspectacular. It is perhaps a good thing to have a concert by someone who is "standard", who does the safe, perfect, and ordinary thing at every opportunity. As a Canadian Church organist, Mrs. Joyce is hampered by her profession. A Frenchman can play something and his congregation will understand it—it is not sacrilegious to use unorthodox tone colours where they add to the musicianship.

Lack of space may limit the complete justice of this review. The Rheinberger number which opened the program was unfair to the composer. He has written many infinitely superior. It was evidently chosen because it did not demand too much technically to open the program. I hope that is not unkind.

The Bach Prelude and Fugue in E Flat (St. Anne's) was the highlight which closed the first half of the program. In it Mrs. Joyce rose to heights which she did not achieve during the rest of the afternoon. She nearly got there in the Finale of Louis Vierne's first Organ Symphony.

It is interesting to note that the organ is one of the few instruments in upon which a woman may make the same loud noises as a man.

EMMANUEL TOPS KNOX DENTS, SCHOOL TIE IN 12-6 VICTORY IN MUSHBALL TILT

Knox and Emmanuel engaged in a mushball contest on Friday afternoon in the big gym and the latter finally emerged victorious to the tune of 12-6. Neither pitcher held much mastery over the opposing batters and hence the game was a merry slugfest.

Emmanuel garnered four runs in the first inning while holding their opponents to a goose-egg. In the second inning neither team scored while in the third Knox got five runs and the theologs retaliated with eight runs. In the last inning, Knox got their final run to complete the scoring.

Jones and Frid were the leaders for the victorious Purple and Gold as each got three hits while for the Presbyterians Len Self stood out with three solid clouts. "Bathing Shorts" Kitchen was the better of the two pitchers, holding the losers to nine hits.

Dent C and School III mushballers battled to a three-all tie on Saturday in the big gym. Loucks, pitching for Dents, turned in a starry performance as he fanned ten men in twelve outs.

Both teams failed to score in the first inning and in the second Dents broke ahead 2-1. In the third S.P.S. caught up by getting two runs to Dents' one. Neither team scored in the fourth inning.

Malkin and Green for Dents each had two hits while for School, Livingston got a single and a double.

Dents: Malkin, Loucks, Samuels, Castaldi, Margolese, Chapwick, Green, Hooks, Lipman, Witchel.

Durnan Trophy Struggle To Begin WednesdaySPORT
SPLASHES

By Doug Green

In the first water polo tussle last Friday afternoon at Hart House pool Knox flourished through to win their first game of the season, beating Wyelife 2-0. Led by Swallow, their fastest swimmer and best shot, who scored both goals, the Presbyterians had little difficulty with their struggling opponents and kept the play well away from their own goal.

Wyelife: Coleman, Hunt, Hill, Noel, Conybeare, Thomson, McDonald and Robinson.

In the second game St. Mike's and Sr. U.C. put on a much better exhibition and when the final whistle blew the former team found themselves ahead by a 2-1 score. Leon Slotwinski scored the first goal for St. Mike's but Rotenberg drilled a really hot one past the enemy goalie to even the count and the half ended 1-1. During most of the second period U.C. played a man short but in spite of this handicap it was not until late in the period that Slotwinski heaved in the winning counter. U.C. tried mightily hard to get the tying goal and Clawson, Waddis, Beames, etc. swam their heads off but just couldn't score. Those St. Mike's boys who were members of last year's squad showed evidence of their excellent coaching in their perfect timing and ball-handling and fast breaking, and were not to be denied.

St. Mike's: Kieffer, Crane, Flaherty, Slotwinski, Brady, Shantz, Giucfranceschi, Remner, Dun.

Sr. U.C.: Beames, Clawson, Meen, Rotenberg, McKinley, Patchet, Hall, Waddis.

BY DOWNING U.C. 11-0

S.P.S. IV stickmen fattened their scoring averages at the expense of U.C. III when they downed the Red and White 11-0 in a one-sided tilt at Workmen's Ice-Box Friday afternoon. The Engineers put on a sterling display of power that completely baffled the Royal Collegians.

The School Blitzkrieg began early in the first period when Boa scored from Kelly. The attack gained momentum and before the end of the period the Toke-Oilers had rammed in eight goals. The Royal Collegians' scoring chances were restricted to two lone rushes by Duncan who was cut down as soon as he crossed the Engineers' blue line.

U.C. began to pick up in the second period and held the Engineers to three goals. Only the stellar net-minding of Ross Skinner saved the Royal College from a more disastrous defeat.

Jim Boa and Bill Cummings led the School snipers with three tallies apiece. LeSueur got two more while Kelly, Mooser and Harris got the rest. Big "Dud" Wilcox stood out on the rear guard.

McGrew and Duncan starred on the offensive for the Red and White.

S.P.S. IV: Boa, Kelly, Kent, Quintenton, Mooser, Cummings, Harris, LeSueur, Wilcox, Bennett, Gregg.

U.C. III: Skinner, Collins, Lofmark, Pank, McIntosh, Bailey, Duncan, McDiarmid, McGrew, Sztokola.

The Sportswoman

By Beryl Pollock

On Thursday, Jan. 30 at 5 o'clock, examinations for the Bronze and Silver Medallions of the Royal Life Saving Society will be held at the Lillian Massey Pool. Those wishing to try the Silver should see Miss Edwards as soon as possible.

An athletic fee of $4.00 will entitle you to instruction in swimming, life saving and diving, any day from 3 to 5.30 p.m. from Mondays to Fridays, and from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Tuesdays. All the instruction is individual, and it is a real opportunity that should not be overlooked.

At long last, the hockey schedule has been finally decided upon. U.C., St. Mike's, St. Hilda's, Meds and O.T. & P. are each entering a team. Vic has announced its intention of sending two teams into the fray. It should be a good league this year, with 21 games to be played. We promise you plenty of spills and thrills, and — well, perhaps not exactly a professional brand of hockey — but at least a lot of fun for both players and spectators.

Pity help us if there is no ice for the next few weeks! If any of the games are changed, this column will try to the best of its ability, to inform its readers.

All the games with the exception of the Vic II vs Vic I, Vic I vs U.C., Vic II vs St. Mike's, Vic II vs Meds, Vic I vs O.T. & P., and Vic I vs Meds, will be played on the cushion on the Trinity back campus. The others will be at Little Vic.

The turnout to practices could be improved and anyone interested be sure to come out. U.C. is being ably coached by Tommy Jarvis and Willie Davey, every Monday and Thursday from 5-6. If pleading interferes with fresher's coming out today, notify some of the team members that you will be out in future. St. Hilda's practice from 5-6 on Wednesdays and Fridays, while St. Mike's under Bill Quigley's direction, work out on Tuesdays from 5-6, and Thursdays from 7-8. O.T. & P. have Mondays and Tuesdays from 7-8 and Meds have Tuesdays and Fridays from 7 to 8. These practices are held on the Trinity hockey cushion.

The hockey schedule—
Jan. 22: Vic II vs Vic I, 6-7; O.T. & P. vs St. Hilda's 7-8.

Jan. 23: St. Mike's vs Meds, 7-8.

Jan. 27: Vic I vs U.C. 6-7; Meds vs St. Hilda's 6-7.

Jan. 29: Vic II vs St. Mike's 6-7; O.T. & P. vs U.C. 7-8.

Jan. 31: St. Hilda's vs Vic I 5-6.

All-Round Swimming Championship Competition Starts with 50-yard and 440-yard Free-Style Events

CLAWSON FAVOURITE

The annual struggle for the Durnan Trophy emblematic of the individual all-round swimming championship of the university, gets under way next Wednesday when the would-be champs churn up the pool in the 50 and 440 free style. On Wednesday, January 29 the 100 back and 100 free will be raced off.

Ged Clawson, probably the best swimmer Varsity has ever had and holder of the Durnan Trophy for the past three years, is once again the heavy favourite to grab off this much-coveted mug, plus about 100 points for U.C. in the T. A. Reed Trophy race. Clawson swam for Canada in the 1932 Olympics and at present holds the 200 breast-stroke intercollegiate record plus other records in the United States and so on.

The present intercollegiate record is taken as a standard and in proportion as the swimmer comes close to it he is given points. Points towards the T. A. Reed Trophy are allotted for each individual event and also for standing when all the different races are finished. Last year around forty natators "joined up" and of these a goodly number completed all events with the required number of points. Some even had the "minimum" with two or three races to go so it can be seen by the prospect, that he doesn't have to be a super swimmer to get points for his faculty.

DENTS EDGE VIC
IN CLOSE STRUGGLE

A speedy Dents hockey sextet downed Vic 2-1 in a hard fought tilt in Varsity Arena on Friday afternoon. The Molarmen, resplendent in brand-new uniforms, sailed into an early lead which they never relinquished.

Fitzgerald opened the scoring for the Tooth-Tuggers when a solo rush culminated in pay-dirt. Crouch bulged the twine a few minutes later on a pass from Castaldi.

Vic's lone counter came late in the final period when Gerry Stone scored on a set up made by Jack Brown while Beattie of the Molarmen was serving a penalty.

Beigman and Young got the gate half-way through the second period when they began throwing punches, the latter drawing a major.

Wood starred between the pipes for the Tooth-Tuggers with Fitzgerald, Crouch and Castaldi sparking the front line.

Dents: Beigman, Sibbold, Fitzgerald, Bigelow, McKie, Hambley, Beattie, Wood, Crouch, Castaldi.
Vic I: Deacon, R. MacKenzie, Purvis, Hogg, Stone, Brown, MacLeod, Young, Wheeler, D. MacKenzie.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Owen Prichard

We usually try to start the week with a cheery outlook and a resolve to be benign and constructive; but it's hard to resist a playful jibe or two at some of the stuff we find in the sports pages of last week-end. For instance, Ken Smith of the Sunday Mirror comes through with a thesis on the inadvisability of playing college football if you want to become a top-notch baseball player. But you must admit, Ken old boy, that colleges are still good places to go for education.

Columnist Dan Parker plays a reminiscent note on his "Broadway Bugle" as Brother Richard, Athletic Director of St. Francis College, harks back to 1918 for a basketball oddity. We have it from Brother Richard that in that bygone day the present St. Francis coach Roddy Cooney scored 31 foul shots in a game with Eastern Division "in which the only other points scored in a field goal, provided their margin of victory in a 33-31 contest." We think a plaque should be erected to the memory of the ref. who called all those fouls in favour of the seemingly much-abused Cooney. It reminds us of a bit of business we saw once by a vaudeville gagster who was describing a mythical boxing match held in some Brooklyn arena between a couple of fisticuffs named Greenberg and Flanagan. At the opening bell Flanagan came out punching and in no time at all had Greenberg reeling. Three minutes of this, and the bell rang. Greenberg's round. More of the same, till Greenberg was rocking on his heels. Greenberg's round. So on till the tenth, with the final gong clanging as the beleaguered Greenberg was draped across the ropes. "The decision—Greenberg. The judges—Cohen, Shapiro and Fink."

Sparking of referees, and we might as well fill a column, one of the few cases we know of when seeming immediate retribution was visited on an official, occurred during a baseball game. We used to know a Cuban named Chico Fernandez who caught ball in the Three-I League of the Middle Western States. This Chico disagreed with an umpire's calling on a close one, so when the next pitch came he signalled for a high one from the pitcher, then crouched 'way down as if he meant to pick the next ball out of the dust. For months afterwards, the ump's in that league were calling them very cautiously.

Another item in Dan Parker's very informative column lists the reported allotments of pocket money doled out to the football players in the various Bowl brawls staged during the holiday season. "The Texas A. and M. players received $100 apiece for spending money at the time of the Cotton Bowl game, Tennessee's Sugar Bowlers received $75, Boston College players $50, Georgetown's $35 and Fordham men $11." The Texans always were heavy tipsters.

WHAT'S TO DO ABOUT SCHOOL?

The amazing Engineers are a safe call, even for the sports prediction department, to take the T. A. Reed Trophy with the greatest of ease. Witness the most recent developments, an S.P.S. victory in the Interfaculty Swimming meet and an astounding performance in hockey as the School IV's trounced U.C. III by an 11-0 blankout. The Engineers are the New York Yankees of the intramural system, except that the Yankees did finally crack, and S.P.S. just goes on winning title after title. And after reading the box-scores of that O.C.E.-Pharmacy A basketball tilt, the whole intramural committee joins in a sigh of thanksgiving that Charlie Prince and the Brown Twins didn't register at School.

NEAT TRICK OF THE WEEK DEPT.

Excitedly reporting the goal-keeping gymnastics of the ubiquitous Frankie Brimsek in Saturday's tussle between Toronto and Boston, Announcer Foster Hewitt informed a breathless Canada that on one particularly sensational save "Brimsek sprawled all over himself."

SCHOOL TAKES VIC WITH EARLY LEAD

Jr. School's basketball team had a celebration even before they got to the Royal York for their At-Home Friday night by downing Jr. Vic 30-23 in the Upper Gym.

The Engineers ran up an early lead that a fighting Vic second half assault couldn't make up. S.P.S. were in front 19-11 at the half, and held the Scarlet and Gold off for the rest of the game.

Workman, Kellern and Wilson led the victorious School attack with a fine passing and shooting display which netted them 5, 7, and 5 points respectively. Johnny Lucas played a perfectly grand game for his team.

For the losers M. Johnston scored 5 points, McDonald and Stamos got 4 apiece. Rutledge and R. Johnston were close behind with 3 points each.

MEDS BASKETBALLERS
TOO GOOD FOR S.P.S.

Meds III were just twice as good as S.P.S. III in their Upper Gym basketball joust last Saturday as the Medicos outclassed the Engineers by a 26-13 margin.

Murray led the sharp-shooting forces of the Men in White, swishing the twine for 10 points.

King, McClure and Wilson were also valuable snipers for the Doctors. Campbell and McCallum accounted for most of the School total.

Meds III: Kling (6), McClure (4), Murray (10), Clark (2), Wilson (4), S.P.S. III: Di Marco, Campbell (4), Berrin, McCallum (4), Johnson (2), Turner, Levarne, Onasick, T. Campbell (4).

Part I

(45) CAP BADGE CEREMONY

Detachment members must reach Hart House by 7.45 p.m. Enter through West Archway and proceed direct to the Remedial Room in Gymnasium Wing where outdoor garments will be left. It is essential that shoes worn in Hart House gymnasium be thoroughly dry.

Members will proceed in a quiet and orderly manner through Hart House corridors and will assemble by platoons in the corridor outside the Great Hall. As space is limited conversation should be kept to a minimum so that orders may be heard.

(46) DRESS

Complete uniform must be worn by all members appearing on parade. Low-heeled shoes (preferably all-dark in colour) must be worn, and without ankle socks.

Uniforms which were returned for adjustment will not be delivered before noon on Monday, January 20. These may be obtained in Room 62, U.C., up until 5.30 p.m. Instructions posted on bulletin board in corridor should be followed.

(47) GUESTS

The University public and friends of members will be accommodated in the gymnasium gallery.

(48) LECTURE

Women Editor
Is Appointed
At Dalhousie

Halifax, N.S., Jan. 19 (C.U.P.) — For the first time in the history of the Dalhousie Gazette a woman has become its editor. In fact two women have taken up the job laid down at mid-term by W. John Windbank, who found his time-table too crowded to continue the journalistic work. Jacqueline Cahan and Rowena Benson have taken up the duties of editorship jointly and will continue to publish the periodical for the rest of the college year. The Gazette has been in publication since 1869 but this is the first occasion on which female talent has filled the editorial post.

The two new editors have held posts on the staff of the paper in various capacities for the past two years. This year Miss Cahan was literary editor and Miss Benson proof editor.

FACULTIES SUPPORT
UNIVERSITY NIGHTS

Faculty representatives guaranteed their whole-hearted support to the new plan for University Nights in the weekly Friday afternoon session of the Intramural Committee. Intramural Director Mac McCutcheon advised the members of the plan and most of the meeting was devoted to its discussion.

Several of the larger faculties intimated a keen desire to act as host colleges and representatives of the smaller faculties, despite the fact that they cannot act as hosts, expressed the wish to supply the opposing teams for the inter-faculty highlights.

Many new ideas that were brought forward upon the approval of the Committee, and formal announcement of these is pending.

Vic has added a fourth team to the list of basketball entries, bringing the total to 40 squads. This is by far the largest number of entries in any sport in the history of the inter-faculty system, and it means 120 league games, a dozen or more play-offs and approximately 15 games per week to be run off.

MURALS ARE FEATURE OF SCHOOL AT-HOME

Originality was the theme as "the best School-at-home ever" passed into history Friday night in the Royal York banquet hall, decorated on three sides by 1200 square feet of murals portraying every phase of life in the Little Red Schoolhouse. The murals, done during the Christmas holidays by the architects, had a section devoted to each department at S.P.S.

Loew's for the first half of this week are Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy in a dual recital. On an average Loew's of a little less than once BITTER (or both) Sarah Millicot or SWEET (and) her Austrian music teacher, Carl Linden break into beautiful melody. No doubt about it—the singing is marvelous. So is the technical.

However, the story and the acting—especially Eddy's—are sadly the reverse. The dialogue of Coward's original has been cut so much that the plot has been hacked threadbare, and the short sequences between the dozen or so different songs give the actors very little chance. The finale is a production of the now-dead Linden's opera, "Zigeuner"—a thing beautiful in itself.

The picture is worth seeing, and Wednesday is the last day at Loew's. Rounding out the program are a number of shorts—very interesting ones: news, education, and humour—arm.

THE SADDEST SIGHT we have witnessed in a long time met our eyes Saturday afternoon, as we made our lack-lustre way along the corridor past the Hart House Chess Room. . . . Renovations had forced the card-sharks and chess-fiends to remove their tables across to the Music Room, and the overflow, consisting of four underprivileged Schoolmen, was constrained to settle down in the corridor itself for a rubber of bridge. . . . Passing kibitzers were in their element as they officiously peered over engineering shoulders to scream in stage whispers "Lead the ace," and "Trump it with the 'lead one.'" . . . Is there no longer any privacy for a man as he goes down four, doubled and redoubled? What is the world coming to? As we lurched away, overcome by the unfairness of it all, we had no recourse but to rant once more that THIS SORT OF THING MUST STOP.

MISPRINTS are pretty amusing at times, and goodness knows The Varsity is not guiltless of these typographical embarrassments. . . . But there is a limit, and we feel that it has been reached. . . . The Argosy Weekly, in quoting as recently, referred to our innocent little column as the "Hiller and Yon" . . . That's fightin' talk. . . .

FRIDAY AT NOON the following police made its appearance on the bulletin board in the main hall of Vic. . . . "All Those Who Have Joined the 'Men-Are-Only-Good-To-Dance-With-Club' Sign Below." Below was a lone signature, that of one solitary babe. . . . All the implications of this telling bit of social satire are not at once apparent but scouts inform us that several retaliatory movements are being formulated. First of these is the formation of a Girls-Are-Only-Good-To-Dance-With-Club, of which seven brutish lugs are members already. . . . We await developments in this new conflict of the sexes with avid interest. . . .

THE VARSITY STAFF has formed, of all things, an Athletic Club. . . . Volleyball with balloons, soccer with ping pong balls and curling on the office floor with ash-trays are the chief sports indulged in. . . . Rapidly the Varsity A.C. is turning out a number of trained all-round athletes, and it won't be long

500 Expected
At Irish Dance

Menus and programs will reflect the college's Double Blue colour scheme when St. Mike's celebrants attend their annual ball in Hart House this Friday.

Half a thousand or more will throng the gymnasium for the event to dance to the music of George Hooey and his well-known band. The college orchestra will play during the intermission when a sit-down supper will be served.

Graduates of the college are expected to come from all sections of the province and from across the border to the south as well. Hours for dancing have been set as "nine to two".

Conveners for the ball are Dr. Florence Quinlan, graduate committee chairman, Tom McDermott, chairman of the undergraduate committee, and Ed Crawford, president of the college students' council.

now before we are ready to hold de-cathlon meet for the championship of the back campus. . . . Teams from Toke Oike, Acta Vic, the Undergrad and the Review will probably receive invitations in the mail. . . . Only the ruling which bars intercollegiate sport for this year prevents us from issuing an immediate challenge to the boys of the McGill Daily and the Queen's Journal to settle, once and for all, the cherry-stone-spitting championship of the east.

A SHOCKING COMMENTARY on something or other is provided by the fact that the librarians at Duquesne University have recently decided to Fill a Long-Standing Need by providing the men of the college with a ten-volume encyclopedia on the ways and wiles of women. . . . And the women of the University of Maryland have decided, according to a poll conducted by the Maryland Diamondback, that in choosing a husband money is a more important factor than intelligence. . . . O tempora, O mores!

EN ROUTE to the Press after dark last night the A. M. & D. Editor was horrified to notice that the flag was still flying from the University flagpole. . . . He is as British as the proverbial roast beef, but even he balked at this shocking breach of flag-flying etiquette. . . . Only force restrained him from shinning up the pole to do his daily good deed. . . .

A TWO-WORD ORATION which utterly silenced a Professor of Speech at the University of Washington was spoken in class the other day. . . . It seems that one of the boys mentioned to the prof that another of his studies was seen walking the campus a little while before in company with an amazingly pretty girl. . . . The prof waxed kittenish, and started to kid the lad about it. "What was she?" he asked coyly. . . . The student surveyed him dispassionately . . . and replied, "YOUR WIFE."

In sketching the rise of different forms of government in Europe, Professor McIlwain commented on the fact that while England began after the Norman Conquest with an almost absolute monarchy which gradually became limited, France and Spain started with limited monarchies which grew into despotism.

Toronto Blooms
Aid War Effort
At Queen's Ball

Kington, Jan. 19 (CUP) — Corsages from Toronto florists helped boost the war effort at the annual Queen's University Arts Ball Friday night. Decked out in Queen's colours of red, yellow and blue, the corsages, 250 in number, were rushed to the scene of the festivities after a hurried telegraphic conversation via Canadian University Press revealed that the blooms were to be had at a cheaper rate from Toronto merchants than from their Kingston contemporaries.

The corsages were sold the night of the dance at a profit of 225 dollars which will go to the 1400 dollar ambulance objective of the Queen's War Aid Commission. All but eight of the 250 were sold.

Although there was no compulsion to buy the special corsages, only a dozen blooms purchased outside were sported by the dancers.

BY O.C.E., 75-12

Round leather spheres poured through the Pharmacy A basket in an almost steady stream Friday afternoon as O. C.E. swamped the Druggists by an immense 75-12 count in a lower gym basketball show.

The Brown twins, Prince, and Bel-chamber led their team in administering the trouncing, but every man on the team hit the score sheet.

Charlie Prince was the scoring hero with twenty-two points to his credit. 2 more than Harold Brown. Brother Wally notched fourteen while Bel-chamber picked up ten.

Back from Dental Work On Eskimos and Mounties Cavanagh Teaches Nurses

Prosthetics Lecturer Interviewed Relates Experiences as Dentist on Annual Arctic
Patrol Boat "Nascopie"

14 WEEKS' VOYAGE

By Don Moore

A cub reporter, chilled to the marrow of his bones by the Arctic blasts, hied himself off to find out something about life in the Canadian Arctic. Dr. W. D. Cavanagh, of the faculty of Dentistry, University of Toronto, was sought out, due to the fact that he had spent over three months in the Arctic last summer and fall. Barging into a dental lab, this reporter found Dr. Cavanagh teaching Prosthetics to a bevy of pretty dental nurses.

"The hand of friendship and hospitality spoken of so widely in the Southern States, is at least equal, if not surpassed, by the dwellers of the Northern wastes," Dr. Cavanagh said. Last July the Dental lecturer left for the Arctic aboard the R.M.S. "Nascopie" in order to attend to the dental needs of the traders of the Hudson Bay Company and their families; to provide dental service to the red-coated mounted police and to examine and record the dental condition among the Eskimos.

Many rare adventures were encountered in the 14 weeks that the doctor spent in the Canadian Arctic and in covering the west coast of Greenland (Continued on Page 4)

RADIO STAR TO SING AT CO-OP DANCE

Pat Bailey, Soon to Make Debut on Hollywood Program, will Sing with Jim Bottomley's Orchestra

LOCAL TALENT FLOOR-SHOW

Pat Bailey, who co-stars with Charles Jordan on the C.B.C. program, "Today's Music", will be the special guest of the Campus Co-op at their dance Friday night, George Umahara, chairman of the dance committee, disclosed last night.

Miss Bailey, he said, has been chosen from a number of Canadian-born singers for Al Pearce's Hollywood program. She will fly to the cinema capital early in February, it was learned.

Miss Bailey is classed in C.B.C. lists as a "popular artist", Umahara said. She is a veteran of radio at 22, as her radio debut was made on a Santa Claus program at the age of eight. For the last four years she has been with the C.B.C., being heard in "The Music Makers", "Waltz Serenade" and "Time on My Hands."

The Co-op dance is to take place on Friday, Jan. 24th in the Odd-fellows' Hall, with Jim Bottomley and his orchestra providing the music. Local talent will provide the floor show.

Women's War Unit Receives Red Cross Hat Badges

Clad in smart new uniforms, the University of Toronto Women's War Unit invaded Hart House last night, held a ceremony in the Gymnasium in which they received Red Cross Hat Badges, and heard addresses from President Cody and other officials.

Mrs. Arthur Ellis, Commandant of the Administration Section of the Red Cross, with her aide, Miss Margaret Eaton, and Senior Lieutenant A. E. M. Parkes, presented the hat badges to every member as she inspected the Women's Service Training Detachment. The badges consist of a distinctive red cross in relief on a grey background.

Dr. and Mrs. Cody, Dr. C. C. Benson, president of the Women's Athletic Association, and a number of interested members of the staff and student bodies attended. President Cody took the salute with Mrs. Ellis as the six platoons marched past, headed by Senior Lieutenant Parkes.

"You will ask yourself, 'Is this training a waste of time?'" Mrs. Ellis said in addressing the detachment, "but the work now being done in the various branches of the W.S.V.C. gives the answer." The Commandant told the girls to "wear your badges proudly, wear them with dignity, and wear them with honour."

Dr. Cody commented upon the "neat and efficient" unit and its smart appearance, and expressed the opinion that the grey uniforms were "becoming and helped create the necessary esprit de corps."

University girls of disciplined intelligence are able to master the intricacies of military work in both drill and lectures, said Dr. Cody, so that they can make decided progress in a comparatively short time. There will be a need for trained women units as the war progresses, he added.

Victoria Athlete, Frank Hoffman Struck by Car

Cycling along Bloor Street, Frank Hoffman of fourth year Victoria, was struck by an east-bound street car late Saturday night at the corner of Huntley Street.

Injuries received were mostly confined to the head and face. Unconscious, he was taken to Wellesley Hospital where it was at first feared he suffered from concussion of the brain, but such fears were unfounded. It was not until the next morning that Frank regained consciousness, however, and even now he is unable to remember exactly what happened.

Frank Hoffman is treasurer of the Victoria College Union, and last year won the Athletic Stike given to the best all-round athlete in Vic entering the graduate year. This year he has been a member of many of his college intercollegiate teams, and last year played on a number of intercollegiate teams. He is enrolled in Sociology.

University Drama Committee will Sponsor Three Plays Put on by Trinity, Victoria and University Colleges

COMPETE FOR CODY AWARD

Trinity, Victoria, and University College dramatic societies will compete tonight in Hart House Theatre for the Cody Award, given by the President. The occasion is the fifth annual University Drama Festival, under the auspices of the University Drama Committee.

Adjudicators for the festival are Professor Gilbert Norwood of this university's classics department, Mr. Ivor Lewis, well-known Toronto amateur actor, and Mr. Edgar Stone, a former director of Hart House Theatre.

Trinity will present "An Assyrian Afternoon", an impressionistic satire by F. Sladen-Smith, directed by Paul Christie. Members of the cast are Rita Hayman, Betty Gairdner, Max Clarkson, John Martin and Stewart McKeown.

"Bedroom Suite" a comedy by Christopher Morley, will be performed by Bud Milnes, Jane Hughes, and Alice Wickinson of the University College Players' Guild. The director is Mavor Moore.

Under the direction of Tom Paton, the Victoria College Dramatic Society will present "The Valiant" by Middleton and Hall. The cast are John Mantley, Tom Nixon, Mary Ellen Fenwick, Doug Harris, Bryce Wilson and Jim McClellan.

While the adjudicators are preparing their decision, a dramatization of Dorothy Parker's "In Memoriam" will be given by Frances Halloway and Evelyn Cook, graduate students, Miss Halloway directed the winning play of last year's festival, "Mary of Scotland", in which Miss Cook played a leading part.

Tickets may be purchased from members of the societies taking part, or at Hart House Theatre.

Union in Canada Is Lecture Topic

"Canada and Union Now," will be the subject of a public address tomorrow night by Dr. B. Wilkinson, Professor of Mediaeval History at the University of Toronto. The address will be delivered at 8.30 p.m. in the Royal York Hotel under the auspices of the English-Speaking Union, and will launch a series of five Wednesday evening lectures by U. of T. staff members.

Born in Yorkshire, England, and educated at Manchester University where he received his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees, Prof. Wilkinson served on the staff of Exeter and Manchester Universities before coming to Toronto. A recognized authority on parliament and government of the middle ages, he has made a special study of Clarence Stral's "Federal Union" conception. He served in the British Army from 1916-1919, and is at present a lieutenant.

FEES PAID EARLIER THANKS TO VARSITY NOTICE

Many Varsity students have paid their second term fees earlier this time, it was learned yesterday. "There has certainly been a marked improvement in the promptness of paying fees this term, and that improvement was mainly due to the reminder printed in the Varsity last week," said C. E. Higginbottom, Bursar of the University. Mr. Higginbottom went on to say that the Varsity notice "definitely stimulated" students to make an effort to get their fees down to Simcoe Hall on time.

"The mailing of cheques makes it much easier for us here," he said. However, there were those who, for various reasons, were unable to follow this example. Just before the deadline yesterday at one o'clock, a queue of despondent individuals stood waiting outside the Bursar's office. "I don't know why I didn't pay my fees earlier," said one anonymous scholar morosely. "Just kept putting it off, I guess."

Craig Hutchison, fifth year Dentist, said, "I think they should keep the office open later than one o'clock. It is hard for those who have classes all morning to get here before that time."

Responses from Whitney Hall were many and varied. "I believe in getting there early," quoth a sage C. & F. student. "I paid my fees last week." Marie Lustig, Soc. & Phil. remarked, "I forgot my registration card the first time, but I finally made it before the deadline." Betty Verity, first year Pass Arts explained her tardiness by saying, "You wouldn't want me to give them a rubber cheque, would you?"

Evidently one of the chief difficulties is the fact that many students do not know if their fees are paid in full or not. There seems to be much uncertainty as to just what the exact sum to be paid is. It should be remembered, however, there is a fine of one dollar for each month after the closing day when fees are paid late.

S.A.C. to Collect Reading Matter

The Students' Administrative Council has taken on a new war burden. Early this month Miss Evans, assistant to Mr. E. A. Macdonald of the S.A.C., received an appeal from the National War Services Committee of the Y.M.C.A. for current issues of magazines in good condition, and has already approached various offices in Hart House and has succeeded in collecting a certain number of magazines.

This committee intends to send at least two tons of reading matter a month to troops stationed in Iceland, England, and in camps throughout Canada and will arrange to pick up the bundles of magazines from the centres of collection at the end of each month.

All those students who are not already contributing to similar organizations are urged to bring their contributions to the S.A.C. office in Hart House.

University Blood Donors May Make Application At Hart House

CORSAGELESS DANCE TO AID RED CROSS

St. Mike's Committee Will Sell Carnations at Door to Replace Banned Blooms at Friday's Ball

DOUBLE BLUE COLOURS

Another innovation has been made in the St. Mike's At-Home. Following the trend of the other colleges, both here and in the States, there will be no corsages. The chairman of the committee stated that "corsages will be taboo", but this will not be a "flowerless" dance. The dance will be held at Hart House on Fri. Jan. 24.

The committee has arranged a plan whereby everyone will have flowers. The plan is that carnations will be sold at the door, each escort will purchase his little cluster of carnations, his lady's shall be attached to her wrist with a ribbon. Even the ribbon holding the flower to the wrist, another innovation at this year's at-home, will be double blue. The flowers, however, will be varicoloured and you may pick one to suit the dress and personality of your lady fair.

Toronto, the Only Canadian City in which Blood is Processed in This Manner for Overseas Use

TRANSPORTATION TO CLINIC

Members of Hart House now have the opportunity of signing for donations to the newly-established blood-bank at the Connaught Laboratories without leaving the building, it was announced last night by W. R. Cowan, Acting Comptroller of the House.

Cards have been left at the Hall Porter's desk which may be filled out by those desirous of contributing to the Canadian Blood Donors' Clinic, sponsored by the Canadian Red Cross, which supplies the blood to the laboratories.

At the laboratories the blood is dehydrated in order that it may be shipped overseas in a dry form. This method replaces the earlier blood serum. At present, Toronto is the only city in Canada where blood is being processed and dehydrated.

The blood clinic is located at 410 Sherbourne Street, from where the blood is sent to the Connaught Laboratories for processing. Free transportation to and from the clinic will be provided by the Red Cross for those by whom it is needed. All blood will be accepted on a voluntary basis.

Applications may also be made by telephoning the Hart House Hall Porter at Mt. 6445.

Colonel H. G. Thompson Is Guest at Hart House

Commander of the First Canadian Divisional Workshop in England is Graduate of the University of Toronto

REPORTS ON BICKERSTETH

Lieutenant-Colonel H. G. Thompson, D.F.C., officer commanding the First Canadian Divisional Workshop in England, was Acting Warden J. R. Gilley's luncheon guest at Hart House yesterday.

Col. Thompson, a graduate of the University of Toronto, won his D.F.C. by sinking a German destroyer in the Caspian Sea in the Great War. He entered the School of Practical Science here in 1914 and was a member of the then newly-formed C.O.T.C. The following year he joined the 135 Battalion C.E.F. as a private, and went overseas.

In October 1916 he was transferred to the 134th Battalion and a year and a month later he foresaw the infantry for more colourful service in the Royal Naval Air Service. In the following year he again transferred, this time to the Royal Air Force with which he served until the summer of 1919.

Col. Thompson's D.F.C. and mentions in despatches were earned while on anti-submarine patrol over the Aegean and the Caspian Seas.

After the last war Col. Thompson returned to School and graduated in 1922. From the time of his graduation until the outbreak of the present war he was engaged in power plant engineering. When the first R.C.O.C. Army Field Workshop (N.P.A.M.) was formed in 1937 Col. Thompson was made commanding officer and on the outbreak of hostilities this unit was attached to the First Canadian Division. In May 1939 he was appointed Senior Ordnance Mechanical Engineer.

Col. Thompson reports Warden J. B. Bickersteth in good health and busy at his educational work with the troops in England.

BULLETIN BOARD NOTICES

Representatives of campus organizations wishing to insert notices in the Bulletin Board or Coming Events columns are warned that such notices will not be accepted over the telephone. They may be left at the Men's Office, Hart House, before 7 p.m., at the Women's Office, Room 42A, U.C., before 6 p.m., or the press before midnight. Positively no notices will be accepted after these deadlines.

Chess Club Forced to Move To New Abode

The second floor of Hart House is a shambles at the moment; fumes of some sort are emitting from the erstwhile Chess Club room, driving before them a motley horde of chairs, tables, kings, bishops, knights and unseated pawns.

It seems that there was a leak in the bathroom of the maids' quarters up above the Chess Club's haunt, the result being a hole in the ceiling and a mess on the floor. At present both are being fixed, while the exiled members of the Chess Club are sneaking furtive sessions with their pawns all over the west wing.

Their chief abodes seem to be the music room and the hallway. The casual passerby noticing several tables with a hilarious group around one and two solemn mental wizards bending over another, each with a glint of fire and determination in their respective left eyes, would think that the usual pal of smoke that hangs over that den of mystery had driven its native inhabitants out of their customary haunt. But this is not so, the Chessmen have been unwillingly evicted out into the peace and quiet of the musicians' haven.

Higher Education in the Reich

Dr. Walter Jessup, president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, describing higher education in Germany, states that free speculation is scorned in German universities; that educational liberty has been annihilated and students are judged only by their political reliability. These views are part of the thirty-fifth annual report, in which Dr. Jessup contrasts higher education in Germany, France, Great Britain and the United States.

Of the universities in Germany Dr. Jessup said: "In the twenty years that followed the Treaty of Versailles the German nation was made over, and one of the principal instruments in that process was the annihilation of educational liberty and the forcible feeding and emotional conditioning of both scholars and students. Germany's scheme of education today involves all strata of society.

"With the National Socialist party's rise to power in 1933, there came an immediate reorganization of the German schools. University attendance was sharply limited not only as to numbers but as to the type of student who should enjoy it. Students had to be certified on the basis of their political reliability.

"University undergraduates were required to give one-half year for labour service as well as two years for military service. New curricular requirements were imposed. The offerings were reduced; the program was simplified. Intellectuals were objects of national scorn. The humanist gave way to the political soldier."

The result of this system of higher education described by Dr. Jessup was a drop in the enrollment in German universities, a drop from 130,000 to 84,000.

Describing the French universities of the same period, Dr. Jessup said: "In France during these same years, 1920-40, French schoolmasters were thinking in far different terms. Although French schools have long been highly centralized under the State, the French schoolmaster had enjoyed growing freedom from direction. The humanistic ideal had been generally accepted in France. That the French were fully cognizant of the change in outlook in Germany is shown in the following words of M. Delbos, French Minister of Education, written for the Courier de l'Etudiant aux Armees, 1939:

"On the other side of the Rhine youth is taught that the peoples of the world have not an equal right to life and freedom, and that all violence is justified in the name of this doctrine. But you, students of France, have been taught to hold the human conscience sacred. You are the standard bearers of that intellectual courage which is the fruit of the critical spirit, of patient work, of a love of ideas and of moral integrity.

"The purpose of French education was what it always had been, the selection and training of an elite."

Going on to the British universities, Dr. Jessup said: "The British conception of education presents a sharp contrast to the German and the French in that its chief pride is that it lacks a unified system. A second powerful motive is operative in British education of both yesterday and today. Britons and Englishmen especially have sought to keep the channels of education open for individual advancement through a system of scholarships open to children from all classes, provided they have intellectual capacity.

"A British university scholarship is more like an appointment to West Point or Annapolis than we commonly think. In each instance the graduate is placed under obligation to render public service. The English democratic impulse is implemented by a highly selective educational system which reaches downward into the mass of the people to provide a clear path from bottom to top."

Concluding with the American universities, said Dr. Jessup: "The United States educates not for the selection of an elite but for the widest diffusion of understanding and knowledge. From the beginnings of the Republic, the American concept of democracy has provided mass education for all the people. Never in history has a nation adhered more tenaciously to its purpose of providing an education open equally to all of its youth."

Variety of Troubles!

Every now and then, for one reason or another, an editor of a college newspaper gets fired, but it is very seldom that the entire paper is suspended. However, at Brooklyn College in New York last week The Beacon, its evening session student newspaper, was suspended and publication of the literary magazine The Kaleidoscope voluntarily ceased. The editor of the Beacon was dropped from the college.

The editors of the newspaper and magazine were two of the seven student leaders placed on disciplinary probation last week for "subterfuge and misrepresentation". When this was announced, the magazine voluntarily ceased publication. (Perhaps the fact that it was said to be in financial difficulties was partly responsible for its willingness to fold.)

The night session newspaper, often accused by the president of the college as being under left-wing control, was suspended for failure "to submit by Dec. 15 a list of newly elected editors for the term starting Feb. 10 and for failure to submit by Jan. 1 a tentative budget." The paper cannot resume publication until it submits this information with a petition for reinstatement to the Faculty-Student Committee on Publications, the group that issued the suspension order. In spite of all this, the editor of the paper was reported expelled, prosaically enough, for still a different reason—"excessive absences." Quite a variety of troubles!

Compliments . . .

A few words of praise are in order at this time for the new uniforms seen about the campus the past week or so on the girls of the W.S.T.D.

The uniforms not only look appropriate, but what is better still they are extremely attractive and have been gathering more than a few compliments for their wearers. They may have been a long time coming, but the girls could scarcely have done better!

The Only Way

Once again President Roosevelt reiterated his intention to direct every force in this country in an all-out policy of aiding Britain, in his speech to Congress yesterday. The President spoke in no uncertain terms.

He notified the nation he will ask Congress for new taxes to help finance the multi-billion dollar defense program; he firmly rejected the theory of our isolation from the international conflict; he made it plain that this nation will never compromise with the doctrines of totalitarianism.

There can be no doubt which way America is headed, but there is no other way. A victory for the Axis means a complete change of life as we now know it. America will become an armed camp, waiting only the day war will be brought to our shores. Whether the road we now travel leads to war, only future events can decide, but one thing certain we can now never live in peace in an Axis-dominated world.

Roosevelt is acting decisively and courageously, but the die has been cast and there is no turning back. There can be no appeasement.

Round the World On Forty Beers

(Since Horace is busy with a letter to his Rotary Club back home the travelogue today is written by his colleague, Baron Munchapples.)

Having missed the boat to Pago-Pago we took a balloon (it was for free) and, catching a wayward trade wind, made off to the northward to see what Santa Claus did after Christmas.

After an uneventful trip across Siberia we found ourselves gaining altitude rapidly. The situation became alarming and it seemed likely that we would be carried past our objective. However, directly over that well known striped landmark, the North Pole, our forward progress halted and we began to shoot aloft. I must confess I became panicky, but Horace, pausing only to explain that the alarming updraft was merely caused by the rotation of the earth caused the prevailing winds to twist into cyclones at the poles (like candy wrappers), quickly tossed over our anchor and dexterously caught it in the cross arm of the North Pole.

With painful effort we managed to drag ourselves down the twisting, straining rope. Just in time we reached the pole, and clung to it as the violent winds ripped away our faithful old sky steed.

But our trials were not yet at an end. "Let us," panted Horace, "fortify ourselves against the rigors of the climb." And so saying drew out a fresh bottle of cream soda and asked me for the corkscrew. I handed it to him, but alas, the cyclone had unwound it. "You can't," he said, "open a bottle with a skewer."

This, however, was the least of our trials, for suddenly we noticed that the ice-cap was breaking up! The rotation was dizzying us, our grip on the Pole was slipping and as the last bit of ice under our feet was flung violently southward by centrifugal force our reeling faculties gave way and we went shooting southward with it!

Fortunately, when we recovered from our whirling we caught sight of a black line on our right, labelled 20°, and edging our whizzing ice-cake closer we clutched it and slid safely toward the equator.

The speed of our journey and the increasing temperature made short work of our vehicle and we were dropped in what seemed to be a large spinach farm in the off season. Horace, who has been around, said it was only the Sahara.

Just as we were fighting our way out of our high altitude suits which were cooking us we saw a cloud of dust approaching. Out of the cloud there materialized seventy-eight thirsty Italians with their hands up. This was indeed embarrassing. We could not take prisoners without slaking their thirst, yet we had only a bottle of cream-soda apiece. As we stood there indecisively clutching our cream sodas the liquid came to a boil, popping the problematical corks, and sent us rocketing across the Egyptian border. We lit in an abrasive cloud and tried to re-establish our bearings which had been badly damaged by the sand.

"Where are we?" I asked feebly. "Listen," commanded stern Horace. I did, and heard a spattering sound. "Machine guns?" I asked. "No," said Horace, "it's the outboard motor proving station at Buhbuk" and we turned and trudged toward the sound, little wotting our next destination.

Baron Munchapples

was good. I liked it too. Jack Paul, by W. B. Burwell is about as good an outdoor portrait as one can take outdoors. It suffers from the indistinctness of the beautiful white hair against the sky. A little more brilliancy with such a marvellous subject would have made it really memorable. A paper negative print of Richard Dryden is a perfect example of what such a technique can do for atmosphere. Judicious trimming of the portrait by F. R. Kemp of the lovely Lady in Velvet (known well in Victoria) would have made it perfect. I disagreed with the criticism of the flat-

U.C. SPORTS' LADDER LED BY PHYSICAL EDS

Mid-season results just released on the U.C. Sports' Ladder standings show the boys from the new Physical Education course leading the way. Though only six men are enrolled in the course they managed to place three men among the first ten best athletes in U.C., taking first, second and fifth places. The points are for all the sports up to the Christmas break.

Tied for first and second place are Cliff Ballagh and Spud McNulty with 884 points. Behind these two leaders is Warner "Alcy" Alcombrack with 510, which is just one point more than Ged Clawson who is entrenched in fourth spot. Fifth is Jo-Jo Gibson with 506 and sixth is Hal Axon with 484. Mac McKinley holds down seventh spot with 478 and behind him is Alex "Beantole" Duncan who has 414. Tied for ninth and tenth spots are Ollie Brett and Ken McDiarmid, each with 380.

Ballagh, McNulty, Alcombrack, Gibson and McDiarmid all were members of the U.C. lacrosse team which reached the finals in interfaculty competition. The first four named were members of the U.C. IV volleyball team which went into the play-offs undefeated and were finally eliminated by the champion Dentistry outfit in the first round.

These four also made regular spots on the rugby squad. Ged Clawson, Hal Axon and Mac McKinley all garnered many of their points via swimming meets. Clawson also starred at track while McKinley and Axon were on the rugby team, and on the U.C. volleyball sixes. Duncan got his position through volleyball, rugby, tennis and track and field. Brett cleaned up in the swimming meets and in the harrier and McDiarmid gained extra points via jiu-jitsu, lacrosse and rugby.

Three of the first ten are making their first appearance on the Ladder—Alcombrack, Axon and Brett. The former leader was McKinley while Cliff Ballagh followed on his heels.

The winner of this Ladder Race will receive a handsome cup which has previously been won by Munroe Murray in 1939 and by George Meen last year.

IRISH BASKETBALL TEAM LOSES TO PRESBYTERIANS

Knox College doubled the score on St. Mike's B in both halves of their basketball game to win through 38-19. The Presbyterians outscored the Irish 14-7 in the first stanza and 24-12 in the final chucker. Despite the fact that both teams played only four men, the speed of the contest resulted in frequent personals.

The Purple and White displayed a fast moving offensive which completely baffled the Double Blue. Moorhead, Morrison and Johnston were the big guns for the Presbyterians, getting 18, 10 and 9 points respectively. Barr got Knox's other tally.

Porn was the sole luminary for the Double Blue, potting five field goals, and leading his team both on the attack and defence. Gray got 4 points for the Irish.

Knox A: Morrison (10), Moorhead (18), Ferguson, Weir, Johnston (9), McKay, Barr (11), Crawford.

St. Mike's B: Dougherty (2), Fiabherly, Crane (1), Porn (10), Waldron, Agro, Barrett (2), Gray (4).

SCORE 7-2

Two erstwhile North Bay hockey stars—Jimmy Duff and Don Hall—turned in a starry performance to lead Aerial Navigation to a sparkling 7-2 win over Knox B in an interfaculty fixture at Varsity Arena yesterday.

Duff with three goals on solo efforts, and Hall with two goals and two assists figured in all seven counters marked up by the Aviators.

Duff opened the scoring three minutes after the starting whistle. The youthful left-winger grabbed the loose puck at centre ice, shifted at the defense, and lifted a waist-high shot into the left-hand corner. Five minutes later he again scored on a solo effort.

Hall passed to Rosenberg who scored from a scramble in front of Knox net to make it 3-0 for the Pilots. Cameron opened scoring for the Presbyterians just before the period ended.

McKay put Knox right back in the game with a goal just after the start of the second period, but from then on it was Aerial Navigation all the way. Rosenberg scored on a pass from Hall. Then Hall countered on a solo effort. Duff and Hall potted two more to end scoring activity.

Cameron and McKay tried hard for Knox, but were easily outshone by the two North Bay luminaries. Aerial Navigation: Duff, Hall, Lake, Tuckish, Moyer, Rosenberg, Sheffield, Gear.

Knox B: Evans, Swallow, Chambers, Rogers, McKay, Hamilton, Vance, Barr, Hood, Cameron.

JR. SCHOOLMEN DEFEAT U.C. JR. BASKETEERS

Jr. S.P.S. basketballers ran over University College's junior cage crew to the tune of 30-18 in a Big Gym rough and tumble yesterday. The Engineers started from the word go and were ahead all the way.

Parchello was the big scoring threat for the victorious Schoolmen, potting a total of nine points. Kellam with seven and Wilson with six were close behind. Russ Workman and Joe Lucas were the defensive stars and play-makers for the Toike Oilers.

Bill Dewar bagged four field goals to lead the Royal Collegians while Clayton and Ballagh each got a brace of baskets to back him up. Nichol and Beatty starred on the defence.

As the game was played in the Big Gym both teams used the regulation five men.

REMEMBER THE NIGHT

Remember the nights, the nights we danced, and watched basketball games, swimming, gymnastics, the massacre of boxing and wrestling, and even maybe a dash of fencing at Hart House of a Saturday eve? Remember?

Maybe you thought all that was dormant, decadent, or even dead. But you're wrong. This Saturday night you get it all back again—and more. Athletic Nights, or University Nights, or anything (nice) you like to call them, return then to cheer the sport wing of Hart House.

Several new dishes which we never enjoyed before will be added to the menu. Students will still be able to sit back comfortably in their chairs and admire the gleeful cavorting of smooth-muscled males. But this year they can do even more than that. Numerous and ingenious methods have been evolved so that the guys and gals may amuse themselves by active participation in the fun. They will be able to play table tennis—darts—skiball etc. And there will be movin' pitcher shows too—instructional—movies which will lend a helping hand to those interested in golf, skiing, archery, tennis, etc. No matter what your tastes are, there will be something very interesting for you to see or do at Hart House on Saturday night.

Two regularly scheduled interfaculty basketball games will be the centre of attraction in the big gym. Upstairs the gym club will give an exhibition of their very thrilling and spectacular skill. Farther down along the hall, in the pool, two games of water polo are carded. And there will probably be diving exhibitions.

Then, at 10 o'clock, sweet melodies will flood the barracks and the lovers of the terpsichorean art will be in their element. The loud speakers have been placed at the track level and from there the music takes on more mellow, captivating and alluring tones. There are over three hundred records, and the committee wants to know which type you prefer. So ask for the piece you want. You dance best to your own request.

To add interest to the University Nights, the faculties are to play host in turn. They will have the opportunity of forming the program, presenting skits if they wish, in general letting their initiative run rampant.

It is hoped that the Saturday night festivities will fill a gap in Varsity life, that the men will come to Hart House in groups, that the co-eds will gather in droves and drop in for a night's entertainment. To foster good will among all men and all ladies, Introduction Committees will be arranged whose duty it will be to make the various sexes acquainted with each other. These nights should help immeasurably to widen your circle of friends. They are for your pleasure and enjoyment. Come and join the fun starting Saturday evening.

NORTHERN LIGHTS

Two little guys, pals, came out of the north last September to go to college. They were joyously happy and thrilled about university, but were just a little bewildered by it all. Finally they got adjusted as members of Gate House in Burwash Hall. They were room-mates.

After they got settled they scampered across the campus and enrolled in Aerial Navigation. "What's yer names," harked the registrar. "Jim Duff," said the dark haired fellow, a roguish smile spreading over his broad, open features. "Don Hall," answered the lighter haired kid with a more serious look to his eye.

These two lads had played hockey together for North Bay Juniors last winter and could hardly wait for the interfaculty season to start. They had a moment of trepidation when it was thought that Aerial Navigation couldn't enter a team. Finally one was organized and Jim and Don turned out with it.

Yesterday afternoon at the Arena Don and Jim carried their faculty to an opening game 7-2 triumph over Knox. They may be short of stature but they proved themselves great in heart and fighting spirit as they played almost without substitution throughout the contest. Jim scored the game's opening two goals, and added another one later. Don, a grand playmaking center, set up two goals, and banged two in himself for a total of four points which ties him for the league leadership. Between them they figured in every one of their team's goals. 7 points for two very thrilled but slightly bewildered freshmen.

By Marg Foulds

Sh, but maybe we'll get in this column if we're very quiet about it, but if anybody finds out before we've hit the print, woe betide us! It is nice to be here, though, and we only hope we can carry on the truly commendable work of our colleagues who came to our rescue so admirably while we took time out to—work! Now—

Hockey is starting tomorrow in earnest and this is a true build-up story. Please listen.

Practices to date have not been too well-attended by U.C.-ites but swamped by Vico-ers. Due to the pressure of numbers, Vic has entered two teams this year, and reports have it they're rarin' to go. Tomorrow sees the two east against each other as Vic I meet Vic II on the Little Vic Hockey Cushion at 6-7, the before-dinner-hour. We certainly think Vic have shown excellent co-operation and spirit by this extraordinarily large turn-out, and are keen to see the result of tomorrow's contest.

At 7-8, the after-dinner-hour, St. Mike's meet O.T. & P. to start off the side on the "Trinity Athletic Field"—end of quote. We mentioned before that these games would be played on the outer rink at Varsity Stadium, but we were wrong. In fact, there's no

ST. MIKE'S D LOSE BY 40-27 TO ANGLICAN HOOPSTERS

Trinity C hoopsters ran wild against St. Mike's D to down the Irish 40-27 in a torrid cage tilt. Despite the fact that they played without substitutes the Red and Black at all times had the game well in hand.

The Anglicans showed remarkable teamwork especially during their scoring drives which invariably ended in baskets. The Irish were more ragged in their shooting and checking than their rivals.

Wagland and Riley with 20 and 16 points respectively led the Trinity attack while Millar with four to his credit got the remainder of the points for the Red and Black.

Cloonan with three field goals and a foul shot was high scorer for the Double Blue. Kelly and Kilka were close behind with six points apiece.

The game was played in the Upper Gym and so both squads used only four men.

such thing. We were living in the past, we fear—a bad sign.

Last year, if you can remember 'way back, the Saints were victorious over Vic in the finals, and Joan Griffiths and Tite Annesley are still skulking around intellectual corners of the campus, so watch those Saints! Q.T. & P. are as yet as unknown quantity, but if they produce a hockey team in any way approaching the calibre of that amazing basketball squad, we'll change our chant to watch out Saints!

Now, that's the set-up, so no excuses—go to it hockey fans and, fans.

St. Mike's One Run in the Final Inning Prevented O.C.E. Pitcher Eccles from Shut-out

SETTERINGTON IS STAR

O.C.E. mushballers defeated St. Mike's A 7-1 in a fast and furious slugfest in the Big Gym last night. Behind the three-hit pitching of Eccles the Pedagogues pounded out eight hits, including two doubles by Seantland and Wendorf to take the game.

The Teachers' big inning came in the initial canto when seven hits were good for as many runs. Setterington led the O.C.E. sluggers, hitting two for two.

Eccles looked good for a shutout until the final inning when the Irish pounded out a brace of hits and sent a man across the home plate to score their only run. After a shabby first inning Skudlarek settled down and pitched good ball in the last two stanzas.

O.C.E.: Setterington, Eccles, Belchamber, Jeffries, Wynne, Thom, Roberts, Swannick, Ratcliffe, Scantland, Wendorf, Goulding.

St. Mike's A: Angus, Casey, Luddy, Coughlin, Podcany, Ronayne, Skudlarek, Higgins, Blom.

PHARMACY EDGES U.C. IN ICE BATTLE

Pharmacy defeated U.C. II 3-1 in a fast but loosely played hockey game at Varsity Arena yesterday. Pharmacy, trailing 1-0 in the initial stages of the game, made a great comeback and were unfortunate in not winning by a larger margin.

Flanagan opened the scoring for U.C. early in the first period, but Russell and Binning soon sent the Druggists ahead 2-1. The Pharmacy boys missed several good scoring opportunities before the period ended.

Half way through the second period Jardine scored on a pretty passing play with Binning and Russell. U.C. lacked a coherency of attack, and the Druggists broke away repeatedly but found their efforts stymied by the great work of the University defence.

U.C. II: Flanagan, Paukert, Stokes, Trodale, Gibson, Norman, Martin, Macintosh, Park, Parke.

Pharmacy: Casselman, Bayes, Jeffers, Stevenson, Elliott, Binning, Jardine, Russell, Walther, Danning, and Quirk.

SCORE 2-1

Hal Axon stole home in the last half-inning of a four-inning engagement with Senior School yesterday afternoon to provide the Senior U.C. squad with its second straight win by a 2-1 score.

Ab Barry led off for the Engineers with a sharp single and his team-mates advanced him across the plate for their sole score. The Red and White's equalizer didn't come until the last half of the third, largely due to Walt Diak's two-hit performance. Lloyd Minaker, who turned in a four-hitter, walked, and U.C. sacrificed him home.

Axon singled, then stole second. Miles sacrificed, advancing Axon to third. Axon then nipped home as Stu Munro dropped the ball.

Sr. U.C.: Hall, Francis, Cutler, Axon, Boyce, Miles, Minaker.

SQUASH TOURNAMENT BEGINS NEXT WEEK

The annual interfaculty squash tournament is scheduled to get under way on Monday or Tuesday of next week. Entries are now being received in the Athletic Office and the list will remain open until Saturday at one o'clock.

The championship is determined on a team basis, with a maximum of four entries for each faculty. Each of these representatives is entered in one of the four flights and players in different groups do not meet one another. Points given for each win in each flight determine the team championship. It is expected that all faculties will have full representation as the usual quota of intramural points are being awarded in the T. A. Reed Trophy contest.

To declare the individual championship the four flight winners will meet in a round-robin tournament, but this will have no bearing on the team championship.

in the war. The student body heartily approves this plan. They feel that, as Tom McDermott, chairman of the committee said, "the money spent on corsages would buy something that would last only for one evening, whereas the money sent to the Red Cross will do a lasting service and aid a worthy organization in carrying on its humanitarian efforts."

The portals of Hart House will take on a new appearance as the lamps and lanterns send out their soft rays of light and dark blue. The gym shall be the scene of "the biggest dance of the year at St. Michael's." George Hooley's music will lend lightness to the feet of the dancers, and a feature of the dance will be the playing of two old waltzes. The rest of the dancing will follow the modern trend, with a de-emphasis on any "jitterbugging." The Great Hall will be the scene of the midnight repast to replenish the energy of the dancers so that they may carry on 'till the small hours of the morning.

SAUNDERS GIVES TALK ON TURKISH POSITION

Explains that the Security of Russia and Turkey Depends on Their Mutual Friendship

TEA AIDS' REFUGEE WORK

"Practically a social and political miracle has taken place in Turkey since the last war," said Dr. R. M. Saunders, addressing the Current Affairs Group of the Vic S.C.M. yesterday.

Dr. Saunders described the Turkey of 1919 as a rotten, oriental, completely broken down country, which had lost nearly everything in the post-war treaties. He explained that the Turkish political system had been completely bound up with the Moslem religion. Mustapha Kamel began by ripping out this connection. He accomplished it mainly by forcing western habits on the people. The result was a truly nationalistic Turkey.

With regard to Turkey's present position, the speaker stated that she has more in common with the democratic countries than with the dictatorships. One example of this was the fact that she requested that she be given control of the Dardanelles, while the Axis powers would have merely taken possession.

He explained that peace with Russia is essential to Turkey's interests. If England were willing to send aid to her in the event of a Russian invasion, it would be extremely difficult to do so, due to possible interference on the part of the French in Syria. On the other hand, Russia wants to be on friendly terms with Turkey, because of the necessity of the former's unhindered use of the Dardanelles.

The talk was preceded by tea, the proceeds of which are to aid refugee work.

CAVANAGH RELATES DENTAL EXPERIENCES

from Thule in the north, to Iqviut in the southern tip.

At Craig Harbour, most remote northern outpost in the British Empire, he related, a young man came aboard to marry a charming American girl. To the consternation of all concerned, he had lost, while hunting, his two upper front teeth and the ceremony was to take place the following morning. "Working half the night," said Dr. Cavanagh, "we were able to restore the teeth and I say 'we,' because half the members of the crew joined in the work to shorten my labour." The ship's members were almost as proud of those teeth as was the owner.

As the Eskimos were not allowed in the stateroom where the dental equipment was set up, much of the work was done at night on the deck, often in a howling blizzard, the only light being that provided by a hand torch held by a Royal Canadian Mounted Policeman.

It was quite common to find many practically perfect sets of teeth among the natives. "The condition of their mouths is much superior to the average persons examined in the city," declared Dr. Cavanagh. The upper front teeth do not as a rule, overlap their lowers, such as ours do, but rather meet end to end.

The Eskimos are principally meat eaters, he stated, there being practically no vegetation in the north. The meat is eaten both raw and stewed. All tanning and softening of hides is done by the natives first chewing it until soft. This results in the teeth being very markedly worn down and abraded. All the adult natives are heavily addicted to tobacco, which is both smoked and chewed.

THEY TELL A STORY about Albert Einstein, the man who expounds theories on relativity which none but he can understand, much less argue about. The great scientist is now at Princeton, living just up the street from the college where he gives occasional lectures. One of the neighbors' children, an eight-year-old girl, began to make it her custom to visit him daily. Her mother called around one afternoon to apologize for what she assumed was an unwarranted intrusion. . . . "Not at all," replied Einstein, "I enjoy her visits. We get along well together." "But what can you and an eight-year-old girl have in common?" asked the mother. . . . "Oh," replied the genius, "I love the jelly-beans she brings me, and she loves the way I do her arithmetic home-work for her."

DEAD FISH OF THE WEEK goes to the apocryphal professor, of whom the Log makes mention. . . . He was the traditional absent-minded professor, and he went into a shop to buy a jar. . . . Seizing one upside-down on the shelf, he exclaimed indignantly, "How absurd! The jar has no mouth!" . . . Then he turned it over, and was once more greatly annoyed. . . . "Preposterous," he roared. "The bottom's gone, too!"

THE BATTLE OF THE SEXES over at Vic proceeds apace. . . . Latest flash available yesterday as we collapsed from an over-dose of night-editing was to the effect that another gal had joined the Men-Are-Only-Good-To-Dance-With-Club. . . . This is as exciting as anything. . . .

A FRIEND OF OURS joined the Royal Canadian Air Force the other day. . . . He found himself standing in line behind a group of would-be-metal-workers, mechanics, cooks, carpenters, et al. . . . As the line progressed, each candidate was queried as to his intended sphere of activity. . . . As they answered they were efficiently hustled off to one examining board or another. . . . Came the turn of our friend. . . . "Pilot," he chirped airily. . . . "Hey, Joe!" screamed the harassed clerk, "where do we send pilots to be examined?" . . .

A BOON INDEED to the frenzied hack-writer is this choice bit of filler, perpetrated originally, we believe, by the Auburn Plainsman. . . .

The denn he stuck his finger out and pointed it at me and sed in fashion quite devout you're flunking bad i see; and then he shook his index digit underneath my nose and sed that he was hurt and shocked at what my grades disclose; and then he sed with wrinkled frown my lad, my lad, look here you must bear down; and so i gathered up my pluck and sed i can't i ain't no duck. . . .

WE USED TO THINK that the office of The Varsity provided as zany a display of lunacy as any collegiate journalistic hole in the wall on the continent. . . . But apparently we still have a lot to learn from the boys and girls of the staff of the University of Washington Daily. . . . The Daily proudly reports an occasion last term when one of the pros of the journalism department was taking a distinguished visitor on a tour of the premises. . . . Leading the way into The Daily Shack, he was embarrassed to perceive the editor-in-chief seated barefooted in the best chair in the office, quite undisturbed by the jam session being staged by his star reporters as the radio blared raucously. . . . He was busily engaged in taking pot-shots at the chandelier with a BB-pistol.

Gay couples, beautiful women and the thrills of circus life hit the screen at Shea's this week with the screening of "Chad Hanna". The glamour of la belle Lamour and amorous scintillations of Mlle. Darnell led the audience cold; it was that handsome SHEA'S cad Chad that really swept CHAD Hanna them off their feet. Story concerns the thrills and chills of circus days in the roaring forties, about which is wound numerous love affairs involving the cad Chad and his circus loves, but all the colour is not in the love scenes. "Jennie" (with DARK brown hair) sports in the second and lesser half of the double bill. But maybe we're prejudiced: our patriotic sentiments were thoroughly revolted by making a German family heroes of the film. Besides, Jennie just wasn't beautiful.—R.A.T.P.

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

the excellent technical job done by Keith Jackson, staff photographer of The Varsity, in Hands of an Engineer was the only one of its kind in the show. The round feeling of the hands, achieved by good lighting, was very well done.

Two beautiful prints by the one exhibitor, F. W. Evans, showed a real flair for the original, combined with an efficient technique. Shi Trails, which won the K. B. Jackson award, had the best show atmosphere of any print in the show. Very startling, both in subject, photography and montage, is To the Rescue. You'll have to see it to appreciate it. The most beautiful print technically in the exhibit is Textures, a flower picture by H. M. Saul. It is just to your left as you go in the door and you can't miss it.

The whole show is very good. Displays of technique merely as technique are rare and so are the other kind, the "arty" ones, of muddy, unfathomable depths. The scientific and nature photography is dominated by some excellent bird studies which will attract passersby who unconsciously realize the difficulties which the photographer undergoes. Record shots, as such, are efficient, but those on exhibit are rather dull.

Don't miss the superb fashion shots in colour by Randolph MacDonald, on exhibit up near the fire-place.

Conversat Ribbons Replace Flowers

Exhibition of Jiu-Jitsu by Fumio Shimidzu, Japanese Student, to Feature Conversat; Music by Stanley St. John

ARCADIAN COURT

Students of Trinity College will not give corsages to their partners at the Trinity Conversat to be held this Friday at Simpson's Arcadian Court.

Rosettes made from red and black ribbon by the girls of St. Hilda's College will be sold at the dance and proceeds will be in aid of the British air raid victims.

Special feature of the affair will be an exhibition of jiu-jitsu by Fumio Shimidzu, popular student from Japan, and Ken MacDiarmid of University College.

Music will be provided by Stanley St. John and his orchestra with Jack MacLean and Pat Arthurs sharing the vocals. Maurice London, well known in local circles as a first class trumpeter, will play in the orchestra.

Pins to Form Meds' Corsages

Not to be outdone by novel schemes put forth by various faculties to handle the corsage problem and make their dance a definite contribution to the war effort, the Medical men will substitute colourful skull-and-crossbone pins for corsages at their annual At-Home Jan. 31, it was learned last night.

With flowers under a strict ban, the metal pins will be sold at the door for 50 cents, and the proceeds of their sale will be devoted to the International Student Service.

Music for the occasion will be supplied at the Royal York Hotel by Mart Kenney and his Western Gentlemen, currently performing at the Brant Inn. The suave dealer in swanky swing played last Friday at the Queen's Arts Ball, and is well known in western dancing haunts as well as among Torontonians.

Tickets, available to students of all faculties, go on sale on the campus today. Publicity agents promise a stupendous 50-minute floor show, consisting of three or four acts.

Vic Junior-Senior to Emerge As "Joe College Party", Saturday

Junior and senior classes of Victoria College will join forces in Burwash Hall next Saturday night, January 25, for a "Joe College Party." The spring term dance, last of three class parties held by 4T1-4T2 during the year, is expected to attract large numbers, since it is the final class party that can be attended by members of this year's graduating class.

The "Joe College" theme, explained Ruth Thomson, will mean that Joe will come in a sweater, with his braces out, while Betty Co-ed will likely wear her saddle shoes and anything else that goes. "Bring your coon coats and pork pies if possible," she said.

"Any man who appears on the dance floor without his trousers legs rolled up will be kicked off," laughed Johnnie Hogg, 4T2 president, in an effort to popularize the idea. Prizes will be pre-

Civilian Defence to be Subject of Instruction; Fire, Gases, Air Raid Precautions and Food to be Studied

MARCH EXAMINATION

The W.S.T.D. course of lectures and instruction on civilian defence will be given during the spring term by instructors chosen by the Civilian Defence Committee of the province. It will include the basic A.R.P. course, which is taken by everyone entering any part of government service as a groundwork for later specialization, and a certain amount of business administration which is quite apart from the A.R.P. requirements.

"Those in charge of the Committee in Toronto, are especially interested in this university group as a training school for instructors for the rest of the province," stated Senior Lieutenant A. E. M. Parkes.

Resuscitation from shock and drowning was the subject of the first lecture, delivered this week. The second in the series will deal with fire, methods of protection, types of incendiaries, etc. Later, there will be instruction on converting homes into air-raid shelters, the protection of windows, the creation of refuge rooms. War gases will be studied, and considerable time will be devoted to methods of decontamination and the protection of food supplies. First Aid will be dealt with in connection with the problem of gas, and the course will end with a summary of transportation and traffic and communication problems.

There will be an examination for the certificate at the end of the year. It is hoped that drill, lectures, and the examination, will be completed by the middle of March so that they will not interfere with traditional cramming.

DR. ELLIS TO ADDRESS PHYSICS CLUB MEETING

The Engineering Physics Club will hold its first meeting of the new year on Thursday, January 23 at Diana Sweet's (Bloor Street). The speaker at this meeting will be Dr. Ellis of the Ontario Research Foundation, and he will speak on modern developments in metals.

Dr. Burton of the Physics Department will say a few words regarding the positions available for graduates in war industries and the services. Four graduates of Engineering Physics will also give short talks on their experiences since graduation as related to their course at the university.

sent for the most typical Joe College and Betty Co-ed costumes. A new feature of this class party will be games in the Junior Common Room, including bridge and Chinese checkers. There will be several novelty dances, one of which will be the "candle-light waltz" from the picture "Waterloo Bridge," and also prizes for elimination.

The executive reminds students enrolled in third and fourth years to bring their national registration cards, as well as university cards. No tickets for outsiders will be sold at the door.

Members of the executive in charge of the event are, for 4T1, Frank Evans, Ruth Thomson, Art Fox, Phyllis Rutherford and Cliff Lee; and for 4T2, John Hogg, Joan Foster, Jack Kenmore, Win Hardy and Pete Saunders.

Lecture Series To be Initiated By J.D. Gibson

Lectures Starting Jan. 30th to Feature Prominent Speakers; Initial Lecture by Editor of Magazine

10 LECTURES IN SERIES

Under the general title "Canadian Economy and the War", a series of 10 lectures has been arranged by the Department of Political Economy and the Dept. of University Extension, to be given on Thursdays at 8 p.m. from Jan. 30th to April 3rd in the Big Hall of the Economics Building on Bloor St. A fee of $5 for the series is being charged to meet expenses, with a reduction of $2 for groups of 5 in the same organization who send in their applications together before Jan. 28th. Application forms are to be had at the Extension Department, Room 222, Simcoe Hall.

This series is described as "a course of 10 lectures on the economic and administrative problems arising from Canada's war effort", and is offered in response to a demand on the part of many who participated in several such courses last year. Following each lecture there will be a period for questions and answers.

The first lecture on Thursday, Jan. 30th is being given by Mr. J. Douglas Gibson, Editor of the Monthly Review of the Bank of Nova Scotia and joint author of War Finance in Canada, and bears the title "Financing the War Effort".

Other prominent speakers, Mr. Plumptre and Mr. Dawson, professors in the Dept. of Political Economy and several government officials, will be heard during the ten weeks to come. Pamphlets with full details concerning these speakers are available from the Dept. of University Extension, Simcoe Hall.

Five O.T. Grads Volunteer For Overseas War Service

British War Office and Department of Health Make Requests and Arrange for O.T. Centre in England

U. OF T. ONLY O.T. COURSE

Five graduates of the Course in Occupational Therapy in the University of Toronto have volunteered for overseas service in response to two requests — one from the British War Office and the other from the Department of Health of Scotland.

Miss Amy DesBrisay, Head of the Occupational Therapy Department of the Toronto General Hospital; Miss Gertrude Ellis of the Children's Memorial Hospital, Montreal; and Miss Mary Clark of the Ontario Hospital, New Toronto, are going to Scotland where they will be attached to Orthopedic Hospitals in Strathclair, Killern, and Bangour. Miss Josephine Forbes, who has been assistant Occupational Therapist with the Workmen's Compensation Board, and Miss Dorothy Grant of the Ontario Hospital, New Toronto, are at work in the Shaftesbury Military Hospital.

The British War Office has arranged, through Dr. Frank Howitt, Colonel and Consultant in Physical Medicine to the Army, for the establishment of an Occupational Therapy Centre at Shaftesbury Military Hospital and has authorized Colonel Howitt to write to the University of Toronto asking for

Grads to Attend St. Mike's Dance

At this, the third annual St. Michael's College At-Home there will be a large representation of the graduates. St. Mike's has the largest international representation on the campus. At St. Mike's there is about nine tenths of the American student body on the campus.

Graduates are expected from all parts of Canada and the United States. A sizeable group is expected from the States, especially from New York City, Utica, N.Y., Syracuse, N.Y., and many other parts of New York State. A large contingent is expected from Rochester, Detroit, Michigan, will also have a representation.

Canadian grads will come from such places as Ottawa, Sault Ste. Marie, Winnipeg, Montreal.

two Occupational Therapists. The Canadian Red Cross Society is arranging for the travelling expenses to London of these two and is also taking under its care the three who are going to Scotland, though the expenses of these three are provided by the Scottish Department of Health.

In writing to Dr. Goldwin Rowland, President of the Canadian Association of Occupational Therapy, Colonel Howitt says that the work of Miss Mary Wilson, recently with the Astley-Ainslie Institution in Edinburgh, confirmed the high opinion he had formed, when in this country two years ago, of Canadian Occupational Therapy. Colonel Howitt obtained a post for Miss Wilson, some months ago, in one of the military hospitals in England near Oxford. He states that the War Office will probably authorize him to ask for several more Occupational Therapists from Canada. The University of Toronto conducts the only course in Canada for the training of Occupational Therapists and this year has, in preparation, more than double the usual number of young women — 61 in the first year and 36 in the second year. Most of these are looking forward to war service either overseas or in Canada. Occupational Therapy means healing by means of interesting, appropriate and worthwhile work. The value of this treatment was fully demonstrated during and after the previous war.

'The Valiant' Gains Award Incepted Five Years Ago

Saints and Vic To Debate To-day

University of Toronto system of education and that of Oxford University to be Compared in Women's Union Today

DEBATE AT 4:30 P.M.

Today St. Hilda's will endeavor to prove to Vic debaters that "the University of Toronto should adopt the University of Oxford system of education."

Gretta Riddell of Vic said in advance of the debate that the negative feels that "the tutorial system gives the student personal contact with the university professor and is more in keeping with a democratic country."

Arguing for the affirmative Mary Skeels of St. Hilda's says "We are upholding the fact that Oxford is an education rather than a waste of time."

To this, Genevieve Brownson adds, "there are a great many advantages of developing trained minds, a fact which we are inclined to lose sight of here."

Mary Winchester of the negative, stated an opposing view, saying, "We have adopted some of the Oxford system in our education and we are out to show that it is inadvisable to go further."

These and other points will be defended and the issue decided in the Women's Union at 4:30.

MEMBER OF SEVEN GROUP ADDRESSES FINE ART CLUB

Mr. A. Y. Jackson, one of the group of Seven of Canadian art, spoke informally to the Fine Art Club, guests of Mr. Charles Comfort, last night at the Seven Street studio building.

Telling of the early days of some of the artists of the Canadian group, he outlined the history of the building which has played so great a part in their lives from its beginning in 1913.

Mr. Jackson told of Tom Thompson's rise from commercial art to the position of most popular of the Seven. "After making several bad sketches one day," he said, "he threw his attempts out the tent door, following it with his paint box and swore never to take up the brush again. But," he added, "the next morning he felt better, and wandered out into the bush until he accidentally found them."

Mr. Jackson outlined his trip to Baffin Island and illustrated his talk with sketches he made on the trip and a few large canvases.

Presentation of Award Was Made to Tom Paton, Director of the Play and Pres. of Vic Drama Society

PROF. NORWOOD JUDGES

By H. Dent Hodgson

For the first time since its inception five years ago, the coveted Cody trophy, highest dramatic honour award on the University of Toronto campus, went to Victoria College Dramatic Society for its performance of "The Valiant" in Hart House Theatre last night.

The audience that gathered to see the Fifth Annual University Drama Festival was enthusiastically generous in its praise for the high calibre of the four one-act plays presented. Superlatives were the order of the night as the theatre-goers trickled out, and it was generally agreed that the University Drama Committee had registered a marked advance from an entertainment standpoint.

In the absence of President Cody, who was indisposed, Mrs. Cody made the presentation of the campus "Oscar" to Tom Paton, Director of the play and President of the Victoria College Dramatic Society. She conveyed the President's greetings and best wishes to all (Continued on Page 4)

FRIDAY RECITAL

The program for the recital on 24th January next at 5 p.m. in the Music Room, Hart House, will be under the direction of Mr. Leo Smith. The Hart House voices will be played (Viola-da-gamba — Leo Smith, Alto Viol — Cecil Figsels, Treble Viol — Harold Sumburg) and the Third Year B.A. Class from the Toronto Conservatory of Music will sing (soloists Joan Foster and Kathleen Busby). Captain T. R. C. Goff, with his clavier, will also take part in the program, which will be as follows:

- I Rota "Sumer is icumen in" (13th Century) (for 3 viols and voice)
- II Selections by Captain Goff
- III "A-dew, my hart is lust" (14th Century) (1465- ) William Cornyshe (for 3 viols and voice)
- IV Selections by Captain Goff
- V Responsive "Imitator Jesu Christe" (13th Century) (for solo Alto Viol, chorus and Viola-da-gamba)
- "Under the Greenwood Tree" (Elizabethan Period) (for solo voice, solo Viola-da-gamba and chorus)

Survey Reveals "University Night" Approved In Campus Opinion

Great enthusiasm was evinced by eds and co-eds alike when questioned about the merits of the Athletic Night to be held in Hart House beginning this Saturday. Bob Delaney of 2nd year Meds thoroughly enjoyed them last year and believes that the addition to the program of table tennis, darts, skiball, etc. in which the students may participate will make the weekly events even better than they were last year.

The first part of the evening will be spent in watching athletic contests and interfaculty basketball games. After 10 o'clock music will be enjoyed in the big gym. Each faculty in turn will play host and will have an opportunity of forming the program, employing their own original ideas.

Bob Tamblin, 11rd year S.P.S., when interviewed, decided they were a good thing—"a more sober way of spending the evening," but would prefer to have them on Fridays.

Sheila Scott, 1Vth year U.C., thinks "they are a wonderful idea." June Hall, in 1Ird year, agrees, and thinks they fill a special need in student life, answering the eternal question, "What will we do on Saturday night?"

Georgie Whitmore, 1Ird year Arts, says, "They'd be nice any night, but Saturday—I'm always busy then."

Hints on Studying

The primary functions of most libraries is the storing and preservation of books and records. The libraries around a university have two functions however: 1) the storing and preservation of books, and 2) studying. Our University Library fulfills the first function admirably, and rightly claims possession of one of the finest collections on the continent. But at present it is not performing its second function as well as it might.

There are several theories about studying. Some people cannot study without a radio at their elbow setting a tempo, sometimes loud, sometimes soft. Others, having listened to some supposed expert sound off, must have their feet higher than their head—something to do with the circulation, they say. Still others like to study with their shoes off, while there is even one class of students which insists on emitting screams at the middle of every paragraph. (Unless it's political theory, in which case the screams come regularly twice a paragraph, with extra ones tossed in to take care of the big words.)

There are as many idiosyncracies as there are students. However the generally accepted and time-tested theory is that to study efficiently the average person requires quiet, and preferably solitude. From actual tests, C.B.N., (conducted by night), it has been found next to impossible to find solitude anywhere around the university, and therefore quiet is absolutely essential. Which just about brings us via the long route to the point where we can make our present complaint—the University Library is getting to be the noisiest place on the campus, next to the pool room.

One of the most frustrating sensations of an academic career (pass arts in six years) is to spend fifteen minutes searching the files for a shelf mark, wait five minutes while it is excavated from the stacks, and then scurry into the large reading room with a burning passion to absorb knowledge for several hours—only to have a series of disturbances chase away the remotest possibility of getting any work done. Your neighbour fiddles with the light, then scrapes back his chair and stomps out for a drink (at the water fountain). A chap at the next table returns from a "smoke-conversation" intermission but brings his friends back with him and they go on discussing whatever males usually discuss. There is a constant rustling of papers, people continually walk by, and the hum of several hundred whispering voices fills the room and reverberates off the skylight. With disgust you slam your books shut and clomp out, thereby adding to the din.

The time has come for solid work, and for that there must be quiet in the library. After all, it was designed for studying, not for talking or sleeping. If you want to talk, go someplace else; if you want to sleep, go home or to a lecture; if you want to work go to the library, make your neighbour keep quiet, and remember to do the same yourself. (And after all that, we won't dare breathe in the library for fear of making a noise. Or else we'll wear a muzzle.)

Peace in Europe?

A month ago in the United States there was much talk of urging the President to use his power to bring about peace in Europe. Since then there has been little said about the matter, but during the brief concentration of interest on the matter, Senator Burton Wheeler, chief spokesman for American isolationists, put forth what he called "a working basis for a just peace." President Roosevelt answered the many peace demands by saying that a peace negotiated on the basis of the present war situation would mean Nazi domination of most of Europe, and would settle nothing permanently.

Senator Wheeler's plan embodied eight points: restoration of Germany's 1914 boundaries with an autonomous Poland and Czechoslovakia; restoration of an independent France, Holland, Norway, Belgium and Denmark; restoration of Alsace-Lorraine to France; restoration of German colonies; protection of all religious and racial minorities in all countries; internationalization of the Suez canal; no indemnities or reparations; arms limitation.

Frankly, unless the good Senator has been living in an ivory tower (and perhaps he has), it is impossible to believe that he sincerely thinks a peace with Hitler would be possible on those terms. Most Americans at the time of publication of the eight point program were of the opinion that European peace was a good thing—if you could get it; and they were certain that Senator Wheeler's way was not the miracle which would restore the world to sanity. The Nazis themselves didn't think much of the idea, for Associated Press several days later quoted a high Nazi official as saying: "The new order in Europe is something concerning which we need no advice from any other continent."

Germany wants to create a new order; she has launched herself into the world's greatest war in order to achieve that order; and she would never accept peace on those terms. Nor would Britain offer it, for it would settle nothing, absolutely nothing. If Mr. Wheeler examined his eight points he would see that only two or three are at all practical or possible. They just aren't points which can be made the basis of a negotiated peace, at least in the light of Germany, her position and avowed aims today. Rather they are terms suitable only for a dictated peace, after Germany has been decisively defeated. Germany would not agree to the first three points unless she were crushed, for they represent the abandonment of victories already gained and still held, and the relinquishing of valuable resources. No doubt Germany would like her colonies back, but this "sop" is of very little worth and would not influence Germany enough to make her swallow the other points. Actually Germany's colonies were of no great economic or strategic value, and from 1894 to 1913 the expenses of running her colonial possessions were far higher than the revenues she received. Somehow we cannot picture Hitler, at least as we see him, protecting racial and religious minorities in all countries. Suppose a peace which included this provision was achieved. How does Senator Wheeler propose to maintain and enforce such a provision? Has he some new weapon of international government which will make that provision effective? Does he not remember the troubles of the last peace settlement when no force could be found to maintain the settlement? All nations would probably like the sixth point, while battered Britain might object to the seventh. As for the eighth and last point, we agree on its desirability but fail to see how it is to be achieved, remembering the story of the twenty year interim between our two World Wars.

The eight-point proposal for a negotiated peace does not contain the elements which would make it capable of application unless it were a dictated peace. And when the question of a dictated peace is raised, there will be considerable changing of those eight points. At any rate the world must have realized by now that a peace will never be negotiated with Hitler, and that there will be no peace until he is crushed by a military defeat.

Vic Cops Dramatic Duke

University Drama Festival

Victoria College Dramatic Society drove the creaking vehicle of The Valiant to victory last night in the fifth annual University Drama Festival in Hart House Theatre.

Skillfully avoiding being super-hackneyed, a conclusion almost foregone when a drama group has the magnificent effrontery to choose a bit of melodrama that has been kicked around by every church guild from Halifax to Vancouver and back to Broadway, the Vic cast played with a restraint and sincerity that

As Marlborough-Beach and I reclined in adjacent deck-chairs, imbibing a Mellow Mandalay Malted and watching the coast of Orahau slide by the stately profile of the decanter, suddenly the soothing drone of enemy aircraft overhead was interrupted by a shattering explosion. Pausing only to collect the glasses and the decanter, we were flung into the sea.

We struck out swimming strongly for Orahau, but in a moment the island too, disappeared with another deafening explosion.

"Good Gad," gasped I. "This means that we must swim to China." He nodded grimly and swallowed the last of his Mellow Mandalay Malted.

Three months later we have to off the coast of Tsingtau.

"Land ho!" croaked Marlborough-Beach hoarsely, draining the last of my carefully-rationed drop of MMM. Laboriously we crawled up onto the beach, and dried ourselves off on Marlborough-Beach's copy of the Atlantic Monthly.

Suddenly, from behind a clump of eucalyptus-trees, a uniformed Oriental sprang at Marlborough-Beach fiercely, his teeth gleaming, his eyes mere slits of hate. He presented him with a well-aimed wine list.

"Careful," I warned. "It may be loaded."

As a matter of fact, the wine-list was loaded, but it back-fired and killed the uniformed Oriental. "Good," said Marlborough-Beach.

But almost immediately the beach was swarming with similar uniformed Orientals, all waving their loaded wine-lists at us. We dodged behind a group of palm-fronds and waited until they had disappeared over the hills and into the heavy foliage. Slowly we clambered down.

"This is dangerous country," said Marlborough-Beach. "And I am so thirsty."

"Let us go to a restaurant," I replied. "I am thirsty too."

So we went to a quiet little native place, just off the main drag, and ordered seven MMM's and a side-order of chop-suey.

When the Malay boy brought our groceries, Marlborough-Beach drained all seven of the soft drinks at one gulp.

I was about to remonstrate with him for his caddish gluttony, when I perceived that he was smiling strangely.

"Whooooopeeeee," he whoooooopeeeee. "They were loaded too."

He collapsed with a groan into the chop-suey, and disappeared from view. He did not reappear.

(Good Gad! Were the MMM's really loaded? Will Marlborough-Beach escape from the clutches of the Yellow Peril? Will the intrepid adventurers ever live to see their mellow old St. George Street Diggings again? Follow the Varsity closely, even if you aren't interested.)

gripped even the Trinity and U.C. supporters in the house.

John Mantley in the lead of The Valiant gave one of the finest performances we have ever seen on the collegiate stage. His subtle presentation of the gallant kid trying hard to keep his courage up with sheer bravado was little short of magnificent, and the difficult piece of work in the scene with his sister was handled beautifully.

Maryellen Penwick as the sister overcame the freshman stage-fright which accompanied her onto the stage, and settled down to give a finished performance as the naive little girl, a bit frightened by the situation in which she was, and horribly torn between hope and fear that the prisoner was her brother.

The prison chaplain of Doug Harris was a standard foil part, played adequately. Tom Nixon, as the warden, came closer than the rest of the players to the abyss of burlesque which lay constantly open, but escaped it after a poor opening. His one-man dialogue on the telephone was a technical difficulty which he put across well.

Bryce Wilson and Jim McLelland were satisfied not to fatten their minor parts as prison attendants, and, as Professor Norwood, spokesman for the adjudicators, pointed out, such restraint on important occasions is unusual and gratifying.

Agamemnon, sitting in his wooden horse,
Smoked Picobac to make the Trojans come across.

• Who would not—and does not—"go" for the rich, ripe aroma of Picobac? And its nutty flavour is equally enticing. It is the pick of Canada's Burley crop—always a mild, cool, sweet smoke. Students may feel that the charms of the Iliad are professionally overrated; but not the charms of Picobac!

An Assyrian Afternoon, put on by the Trinity College Dramatic Society, was not in the running for the evening's honours, not so much because it was not good, but because the other two productions were much better. It was not self-contained, as one-act plays should be, and lacked what the vulgar term "the old punch."

Rita Wayman did about all that could be done with the feminine lead, soldier Max Clarkson played her soldier-lover without a great deal of conviction.

Stewart McKeown scored with his comedy creation of an Assyrian sissy, and John Martin and Betty Gairdner backed the leads up very nicely in a play which friend Colbourne would be forced to label "moribund."

The University College Players gave Vic the closest run in the official adjudication, and also in the lobby bull-ring. The greatest flaw in the piece was that it failed to justify the appellation of "play." It was a Brenda-and-Cobina dialogue by Christopher Morley, in which the Kitty Foyle motif could plainly be seen emerging.

Bud Milnes of Follies fame, and Jane Hughes were tremendously funny with lines that were in some cases worth remembering. Even when the lines fell short of terrific, the pair got a lot of laughs out of them. An example of this was the number of gaffs which Milnes drew from the constant repetition of the mispronunciation of "suite" as "suit."

The Guest Presentation in the adjudication interval, In Memoriam, an adaptation from Dorothy Parker at her cruellest, was splendidly done by Evelyn Cook and Frances Halpeny. The piece was almost too satirical to be enjoyable, as the Parker pen flowed incredibly acidly. We laughed loudly at the first few punch-lines, and after that we just couldn't. The comedy was too brutal.

Professor Gilbert Norwood, enjoying himself tremendously, delivered the verdict of the adjudicating committee, con-of the supercolossal, extrastupendous, lallapaluscious... well... the humdrum of a senior hockey team that Varsity could have this year, were there an intercollegiate loop.

Gone from last year's championship squad are—Cam MacLachlan, Jack Maynard, and Paul Pentland (who are all in the navy now), Muchy McIlquham, Tommy Callon, Art Boddington and Johnny Taylor, who have graduated and Jack Quigley, who didn't return to school this year.

But just look at the material available.

For goal there is Bill Hunnissett, who was sub-goalie on last year's seniors or Claude Morrison who guarded the pipes for Jimmy McPherson's juniors. For defense there are the two McNamara brothers, George and Paul, Glen Munro, Audy DesRoches, Bobby Copp and Doug Marshall, and Thor Stephenson. All these boys are at present playing either for Marlboro seniors, Native Sons, or Tip Tops. For the forward line there would be Don Dunbar, Wally Glynn, Walter Halder, Ken Hignell, Staff Smythe, Bill Doyle, Gunnar Puttock and Gene Sheedy, and Shand. Halder and Glynn are up near the top of the scoring race in the Mercantile League. Smythe has come through with many scoring plays this year for Marlboro juniors. Sheedy used to play with the Detroit Olympics.

Oh well, it's no use dreaming this year because there isn't any intercollegiate... or didn't you know?

YOU GYMNASTS, TAKE NOTE

that the Barton Cup tests are being held this week in the upper gym today and Friday and also on some nights next week. The Junior Interfaculty Gymnastic Meet is scheduled for Friday, Jan. 31 at 5 p.m. and the Senior Meet will be held some time near the end of February. Charlie Zwygard also wants all those on the senior gym team to turn out to practice for the display on School Night which is Feb. 7 this year.

MORE GUFF...

Frank Hoffman, who was badly injured on Saturday while riding his bicycle, is on the mend and soon will be back leading the Victoria basketball team in interfaculty competition... and don't any of you lads or lasses forget the big shin-dig at the Male Mansion this Saturday night... fun for everyone... come double and go home single... err... that isn't right. Well, anyhow don't forget to be here Saturday... It looks as if O.C.E. are going to run away with the interfaculty basketball championship this year... they won their first game by 75-12... included in their line-up is last year's captain of the Guelph Aggies, Chuck Belchamber, the last year's captain of McMaster, Orval Wynne, and Charlie Prince, and the two six foot plus Brown twins... Jr. School also appears to have a pretty fair team as they have most of the members of last year's championship S.P.S. IV team including Frankie Kellam, Joe Prentice, Russ Workman and Parchello... In the mushball loop Sr. Meds appear to again have a fair team behind the pitching of Tiny Reingold... of course Dents always have to be considered... In hockey, Trinity, St. Mike's and Aerial Navigation all have good teams but Jr. School, led by burly Donny Grosskurth have a well balanced, high scoring squad and will in all probability grab off the Jennings Cup... From School also comes the threat that the Engineers are considering cutting off one-half of Doug Green's mustache because he called Sr. U.C. in the swimming finals by 20-12 and the Schoolmen won 18-15.

WINNERS SHOW FINE PLAY

Aerial Navigation poured basketballs through Dents C basket in an almost steady stream yesterday afternoon at Hart House to run up an overwhelming 63-26 score as Scott led the parade with the amazing total of 26 points to his own credit.

This ace sniper of the pilots was very capably assisted in the scoring spree by Tuckeh with 13 points and Lake with 9. The Dentists got their share of baskets too as Turech dropped in 12 points for himself, and Lipnar scored 8.

The airmen jumped into an early lead and had little difficulty in holding it. They led 26-12 at the half way whistle, and turned on the full fury of their powerful attack in the closing period scoring a remarkable thirty-seven points.

The winners displayed some grand combination play in their successful forays into the enemy territory, and their shooting was excellent. They put on a fine all-round display.

Aer. Nav.: Price 8, Scott 26, Reilley 1, Van Huysse 6, Lake 9, Tuckeh 13, Dents C: Goldberg, Turech 12, Samuels 2, Millen 2, Carroll 2, Lipnar 8.

DENTS SHARE WINS IN BASEBALL TILTS

The Dentists split even on the baseball double bill in the lower gym yesterday afternoon. A class-dents A crew took Trinity for a 20-2 ride while Dents B were blanked by Pharmacy 7-0.

The first edition of the Garnet and Blue has come about with about as powerful a team as seen in action to date. In every department they completely outclassed the Anglicans. Wilfrid Smaltzman exhibited a fire-ball delivery that Trinity couldn't hope to cope with; in the field the boys coveited around and at bat every member of the squad is a slugger. They batted around the roster twice in the first inning, added one in the second and completed their total in the third. Trinity's two runs came in the third.

Pharmacy's great all-round athlete, Jack Boyes, completely stymied his opponents with a masterful hurling display, and his team-mates combined for the runs, four in the first, one in the second and two in the final installment.

hard and had several good shots on goal but just couldn't beat Art Hamilton, sensational discovery who guarded the ministerial net. Nixon, Landell, Macdonald and Boville, all of Vic, are fast swimmers, but did not have the sureness and ability of the all-star aggregation from Emmanuel.

Emmanuel: Morwood, Hamilton, Eagle, Green, Jackson, Fennell, McRae, Koelgren, Jones.

Vic: Macdonald, Nixon, Taylor, Conn, Birkenshaw, Shortt, Ridley, Landell, Boville.

In the second struggle Sr. S.P.S. whitewashed Dents 3-0 with little difficulty in spite of playing a man short in the second half. Frank De Marco slammed in two and Bill Staples got the other one to make the three. "Carson" McGowan, last year's intercollegiate goalie, stopped many "impossible" shots and was best for the Tooth Tuggers. The game all around was quite a "struggle" and was best in the second half when School, with a man short, evened up the rather one-sided play.

Meds Rout S.P.S. In Basket Game

At Half Time Game was Tied at Thirteen All, with Meds Slipping Ahead in Final Minute

SCORE 28-27

Scoring a long shot basket in the dying seconds of the game Sr. Meds dropped their arch rivals from Sr. School by a narrow 28-27 score at Hart House yesterday afternoon. The game was a see-saw battle from the starting gun as one team and then the other would slip into a narrow lead.

At half time the game was tied at thirteen all. Then School forged slightly ahead. The game was tied again on a Doctor's well placed shot. And so it went.

Then as the game's final minute was fleeing and the high-flying Engineers were beginning to feel content behind their one point lead, Findlestein flipped a high shot basketballs. The ball swished the twine, the game was over, and Meds had pulled a very shaky acorn out of the fire.

Sacks led the winners' attack with 13 points and Findlestein scored 5. Don Finlayson, late of the Senior Blues, headed the Engineers with 7 points while Bryce came a close second with 6.

By Marg Foulds

Tonight's the night when Vic meets Vic and Vic beats Vic and everybody in Vic is happy 'cause they won, and dejected 'cause they lost and no on can quite figure out the psychologically proper reaction to such a set-up. But we're betting on Vic anyway, in spite of it all, and the happiest part of it is we can't lose—oh joy!

Helen Carefoot will be back pacing the Vic squad and we're hoping the Vic team will be able to cope with the situation adequately. Helen was the spark of last year's Vic team and promises to be every bit as "classy" in tonight's game. Flo Allan will do goalie duty for the Vic team while Helen Rodd will hide the nets for Vic. Beth Springer, another star of last year's team will out impressive figures for the Vic outfit. The rest of the Vic team had not been settled at a reasonable hour last night, and Vic were also dubious about their line-up.

We know we aren't being very funny about all this, but the truth of the matter is, someone's catching up on last month's dirt, and they're using the one telephone we want to do it, and just try to break in on someone catching up on dirt—especially last month's dirt.

However, we know those people mentioned will be seen on the Little Vic Rink at 6 o'clock tonight, and many other Vic and Vics players, and we hope you'll take our word for it that it will be good, and meet us there at 6.

St. Hilda's are called to meet O.T. & P. at 7 tonight on the Trinity Athletic Field—frozen over—and the last year's champs need no introduction to hockey fans of the university. Joan Griffith, Tibs Anselley and Patty Lampman are back with the grey and blue and Joyce Porritt will watch the nets. O.T. & P. are as yet a mystery as far as we're concerned, but, as we've said before, we're taking that as a good sign and holding everything until tonight at 7.

For the benefit of my fraternity sisters I beg to add this little note, that U.C. practises from 5-6 on Mondays and Thursdays. I promised I'd put it at the end 'cause they object to having to read through my whole column just to find out one vital bit of information. That's friendship!

Variety to be Outstanding Feature In "University Night" Sport Plan

That those Attending may be Participants as well as

Two Basketball Games

SPORTS STAFF HOSTS

By Owen Prichard

Everything in sport from checkers to basketball and from dominoes to water polo will be served forth on the menu of Varsity's first University Night which will be held in the Hart House Athletic Wing this Saturday night.

Athletics Director Warren Stevens is having an idea a minute in planning the program for the big night. The Varsity learned yesterday that two basketball games between top-flight interfaculty teams were on order. The Pool will be the scene of a couple of water polo games and an exhibition of diving. In the Upper Gym Charlie Zwygard and his troupe of tumblers will perform gymnastically.

But the novel element in these University Nights will be the participation element which is being stressed at these nights. No longer will Joe and Jane College come to Hart House merely to watch other people playing games. A host of attractions are being prepared to add to the enjoyment of those attending.

There will be MUSIC from ten till twelve, in the Big and Little Gyms. The sitting-out spot will be, believe-it-or-not, in the Wrestling Room. Tables are also being set up, for those who like a furious tussle across the checker board. The fencing room will be rigged up with dart boards, and at one point in the evening will be used for movies. For the hep-eats who have worked up a thirst in the jam sessions, refreshing cokes will be available.

It has been planned that various faculties will take turns at being hosts for the evening, appointing men to give directions and information and to assist in the running of the sports. For the opening night Warren Stevens has asked the Sports Staff of The Varsity to act as hosts of the evening.

Girls who come stag will be warmly welcomed by all (including the hosts), and lone "wolves" of the sterner sex will be introduced to danceable damsels who are unsecured. The price of admission will be the same nominal sum as last year. Each student is asked to bring his or her registration card. Any student is perfectly free to bring one or more guests who may or may not belong to the university, so long as the student of the party has his card with him.

S.P.S. TIES IRISH,

After retiring for facial repairs early in the game, "Robby" Robinson, stellar Senior School defenceman, returned to earn the Blue and Gold a 3-3 tie with the strong St. Mike's A sextet at Ross Workman's emporium yesterday afternoon.

Late in the initial period, Frank Bennett converted a double relay from Hector and Morrison to give the Irish a lead. It was then that Robinson—a plaster patch over one eye—took a pass from Disher to put School back in the running.

The throttle was thrown wide open throughout the second frame. Robinson dashed the length of the ice to beat Larry O'Brien, but the Double Blue bounced right back knocking the count on Hector's tally from Callahan.

Play swung from end to end with both goaltenders making seemingly impossible stops until Stu Munro set up Robinson for the latter's third goal of the game.

With but a few minutes remaining, Claude Morrison climaxed a desperate Irish assault by banging Mike Fyfe's goal-mouth pass into the rigging for the tying score.

HISTORY PROF. OUTLINES PLAN

"Union Now", he plans to extend the author's text further and approach the matter from the Canadian point of view and consider the effect of the plan on Canada's war effort. "Mr. Streib's book offers a good starting point for Canadians to think the matter over for themselves."

"I certainly do not believe that such a federation of English-speaking nations would impede our war effort," explained the noted authority on parliament and government during the Middle Ages. "On the contrary," he continued, "it would do the exact opposite by offering increased resistance to Hitler."

"But what would happen to the smaller, democratic countries left out of the Union?" The Varsity asked. "Would they not be opposed to such a federation?"

"By no means," Dr. Wilkinson replied. "I feel that such countries would most certainly not be opposed to it. After all, the British Empire is pledged in their support."

The Baldwin House professor expressed annoyance with those people who termed the plan "fantastic", and especially with the premier of one of Canada's western provinces who at the recent Dominion-Provincial Conference dismissed the idea as "subversive."

"This is a matter that ought to be discussed seriously by Canadians. To us it represents what the League of Nations did to our preceding generation, and while we may be no luckier than they, it is something worth thinking about."

"We must not be guilty of facile optimism in regard to the proposed federation," warned Professor Wilkinson, "but we cannot ignore it. It is one of the best ways to strengthen ourselves against Hitler."

BULLETIN BOARD

THEOLOGICAL COLLEGE UNION

The T.C.U. of the S.C.M. will meet this evening at 8 p.m. in Emmanuel College. Papers will be given by Wycliffe and Knox on "The Church's Attitude towards Divorce". All theologists are invited to attend.

GRADUATE STUDENTS

The attention of graduate students in the university is called to an announcement from Miss N. MacKenzie, secretary of the School of Graduate Studies. Wednesday afternoon teas have been resumed in the Union Common Room, 44 Hoskin Avenue, and grads are welcome any time between 4 and 6 o'clock.

WIDE-EYED IN GOTHAM

By Reuven Frank

(A Canadian University Press Feature)

NEW YORK: Early last summer it was announced. After almost seven years, and stormy years they were, Tobacco Road was going to close. Drama critics came out of their hard shells and rum punches and grew philosophically maudlin about the way the world had changed since the first day the Kirkland adaptation of the Caldwell story had first hit the boards. Roosevelt and the Lindbergh kidnapping and the Abyssinian and Spanish wars and Technicolor and Joe Louis and Hitler—the lusty (to say the least) drama about the po' white trash had seen them all. The newspapers said "Last two weeks!" then "Final week!"

That was last summer. Since then there have been Wendell Willkie and Tommy Harmon and the campaign in Greece and the ASCAP fight and Ballad for Americans, and still Tobacco Road goes on. The very fact of its impending closing gave such a boost to its popularity that the show refused to close. The pretense of "Final weeks" has been dropped, and spinster aunts say to young nephews, "My, how you are growing. You will soon be as old as Tobacco Road."

But it is highly doubtful that any youngster will ever catch up to Tobacco Road: the thing is deathless.

The early fall saw two old-timers come back the hard way, and both of them scored. Al Jolson brought his mammy to the Schubert Theatre in Hold on to Your Hats and people liked it. The word spread like wildfire. "Jolson's back!" And he was, slightly balding, perhaps, but the same Jolson, interrupting the show to greet the latecomers: "So glad you could come. Won't you sit down?" He waits until they do.

A week before Hold on to Your Hats landed on 44th St. Ed Wynn came to the Broadhurst, just next door. People liked that one, too. With newcomers like Saroyan and Carol Bruce and Peter Holden hogging the publicity, it was good to see that the men of yore still had what it took. Boys and Girls Together was touted as having the most beautiful girls in the world in its chorus but what the public was interested in was the giggling, lipping man who horned in on the apache dancers or clipped a piece off the rug and passed it among the audience saying, "Feel it. It's two hundred per cent wool. It came from a sheep that led a double life."

Four name-studded plays about Hollywood have come and gone—but fast. The yokels in Pine Corners may like to see movies about the glamour that is Broadway, but the audience that is the glamour that is Broadway is not interested in corny bits about kleig lights and extras and assistant directors yelling "Quiet!" No, and neither like Chase nor Otto Preminger can get it interested. Of course, Boy Meets Girl was about Hollywood, but Boy Meets Girl was a good play.

And yet, Hollywood is not entirely anathema. Last March a play starring such B-picture stalwarts as Alan Dinehart, Glenda Farrell and Lyle Talbot hit the boards. It was a farce, not too good but well done and steadily, if slowly, paced, and the name of it was Separate Rooms. It threatened to die aborning, but a clever press agent got guest appearances for the stars on radio shows, and haunted the picture-houses that were showing vehicles featuring either of his charges. He got the World's Fair to hold a Separate Rooms Day, and the three stars signed autographs. While the Fair nearly killed the theatre season, out-of-towners flocked to Separate Rooms, and today they are even packing them in for matinees. Soon it will peter out a bit, but then they will have a birthday party in March by virtue of renewed interest and Separate Rooms will stay open till some time in 1942.

is huge, with a screen about the size of the national debt, revolving stages, a full-strength symphony orchestra that appears out of virtually nowhere, plays virtually nothing and returns to its virtually nowhere. Short, fat Jan Peerce appears dressed in the costume of a Tyrolean mountaineer and sings: the Rockettes prove that the human beings can not only invent mechanical toys, but can act like them.

The crowning piece comes on towards the finale of the stage production—or it did a few weeks ago. The curtain rose on a men's chorus handsomely decked out in white tie and tails. A beautiful blonde girl entered, glowing in a satin gown. Mr. Rapee and the orchestra struck up Intermzzo, from the picture of the same name, while the men's chorus hummed impressively. The beautiful girl stepped to the centre of the stage, raised two hands to her mouth—and whistled it.

George Kaufman and Moss Hart have two on Broadway; a rather feeble thing titled George Washington Slept Here and the uproarious and masterful The Man Who Came to Dinner. Kaufman directed the comedy hit, My Sister Eileen, and another opus in which Hart (not Rodgers and Hart) had a hand, Lady in the Dark, with Gertrude Lawrence, will have opened by the time you read this. And perhaps closed, too, for it is open season on turkeys.

There are others around, but the old ones are still the best. That grand old lady of the theatre, Elaine Barrie's sister-in-law Ethel Barrymore is a smash success in that gripping drama of Wales, The Corn is Green. Green or no, it's still corn, but La Barrymore is good. While Charley's Aunt was revived for two weeks and is staying for about ten months, the wise ones estimated. Life, With Father is as much a part of the landscape as the flea circus, Elmer Rice has become a living newspaper in Flight to the West while the critics present a house divided, the Haynes-Evans tie-up is doing fine, thank you, in Twelfth Night and Buddy de Sylva is proud of his two hits, Irving Berlin's Louisiana Purchase, and Cole Porter's Panama Hattie.

That's about all for the bright lights of Broadway, except for one thing. A new comedy-mystery opened a while ago, and it must be terrific. It is one of those things you feel like robbing your nephew's bank for, even if you haven't got a nephew. And it is not Boris Karloff, even though you may like Boris Karloff. Nor is it the acclaim of the critics, since that is always a minor matter. It is not the description by one of the characters who says "What is happening is what might have occurred if Strindberg had written Helzapoppin." It isn't even the writer or the director or the producer that has put people on pins and needles since the play was announced two months ago, and made them chafe at every delay until last week's opening.

It's the title: Arsenic and Old Lace.

No Foundation—

All the way down the line

These words, spoken several times by an ancient arab philosopher and harmonica player, are practically a summary of the philosophy expressed by William Saroyan in The Time of Your Life, playing this week at the Royal Alexandra Theatre. They also serve as a commentary on the dramatic structure of the play itself. Yet there is no doubt that the play is the most exciting and original to be presented in Toronto in some years.

If the three unities, the presence of a sound and coherent plot and the other classical requirements of drama are to be taken as a criterion, The Time of Your Life is not even a very bad play—it is not a play at all. The only unifying factor in the play is Joe, a mysterious personage with plenty of money, plenty of champagne and philosophy and a childlike desire to do good. He holds court in a San Francisco dockside dive with a set of satellites, most of them wacky, and all of them fascinating. People wander in, speak a few lines, hold the stage for a few minutes, and vanish never to return.

Chief billing is deservedly given to Eddie Dowling for his capable handling of the difficult part of Joe. When an actor has one drunk scene, it's fun, but when he has to go through a five-act play in an alcoholic state it is difficult to avoid humping.

Julie Hayden is particularly striking as Kitty Dual, "a young woman with memories," a part requiring a contradictory balance of toughness and innocence. Her performance is completely satisfactory in every way—unbelievably so if one studies the extremely exacting demands of the script.

Most of the supporting cast have meaty roles, and have to be good to put them over. Most of them are. Housely Stevens Sr. is outstanding in the role of the arab referred to above. Besides his sensitive rendering of Saroyan's remarkable lines, his harmonica playing in the fourth act is superb. The throbbing pain of his old-country melody sets off this act to perfection in what is to me the most effective episode of the play.

Another fine performance is that of Reginald Beane as the coloured piano player. Beane plays his part and his piano with the same fine restraint, but breaks loose with the occasional burst of spine-tingling boogie-woogie.

Len Doyle provides some excellent play as Kih Carion, but his big scene with Joe could well have been cut at least five minutes. Curt Conway weakens his role as Dudley, the love-sick young man, by playing it completely as low comedy, contrary to Saroyan's instructions in the script. The straight part of Tom is well handled by Edward Andrews.

About the play itself a good deal remains to be said. It will be discussed more fully in this column in a succeeding issue.

Dona Nobis Pacem

Toronto Symphony Orchestra

Toronto symphony-goers, last night, were confronted by a good orchestra at its best, two excellent soloists, a glorious choir, and two colossal new works. The result was so confusing that I find it difficult to draw coherent ideas from the welter of sound running through my head. The first hearing of these two tremendous compositions—a cantata of Vaughan Williams, Dona Nobis Pacem and MacMillan's England leave only the general impression of a passionate prayer for peace and a quite desperate desire to England—however, until I have had a long sleep and have completely recovered from this program—surely the most exhausting possible mentally, in spite of the light sprinkling of Handel and Holst.

After an introduction with orchestra and soprano solo, the cantata bursts on one with full orchestra and chorus in a sweeping march—a march as chaotic as Walt Whitman's words. A dismal bit called Reconciliation (I am almost tempted to call it beautiful) is followed and his congratulations to the winning society.

In adjudging the Victoria production superior, Professor Gilbert Norwood complimented the society on its acting, which he termed "very good throughout," and upon its choice of a plot of considerably better construction than the other two plays chosen.

Particularly excellent, he declared, were the performances of Maryellen Fenwick, as "Josephine Paris" and John Mantley, as "James Dyke," the prisoner. He also praised the acting of Tom Nixon as "Warden Holt."

The consensus of the foyer, where players and audience mingled to discuss the relative merits and fallacies of the evening's entertainment, was in accordance with that of the adjudicators, and gave Victoria a slight edge over the performance of Christopher Morley's "Bedroom Suite," performed by the University College Players' Guild.

Scene for the U.C. production was laid in the show-window of a large department store, and Bud Milnes as "Jerry, the window dresser," Jane Hughes as "Alice, from the book department" and Alice Wickson, as "Mabel, the scrub woman," were the sole actors.

The Trinity and Victoria presentations were of a more serious nature than "Bedroom Suite" which was a fast-moving conversational sketch rather than a play. Prof. Norwood said. Lauding the efforts of the Milne-Hughes team, he paid particular tribute to the interpretation of the scrub-woman by Alice Wickson.

Trinity College Dramatic Society presented "An Assyrian Afternoon" by F. Sladen-Smith. Plot of the drama centred about the Bible story of Noah's pre-deluge campaign, from the outsiders' point of view, and it ended with the actual beginnings of the disaster. Criticizing the manner in which the piece was written more harshly than the acting of the players, the adjudicator said he felt the actors were called upon to do more than their job in putting it across.

He was lavish in his praise of Rita Wayman, who played the lead role of "Kotsa" but found fault with many aspects of the performance, and spoke deprecatingly of the makeup, the detachment of the lines and the indifferent and civilian qualities of the soldier, "Katun," played by Max Clarkson.

Ivor Lewis and W. S. Milne acted as the other adjudicators, the latter replacing Edgar Stone, former manager of Hart House Theatre, who had been chosen to help in the judging but was unable to attend.

During the judging interval, Evelyn Cook and Frances Halpeny entertained with a guest presentation of "In Memoriam," a shattering satire dramatized from a story by Dorothy Parker.

Both Mrs. Cody and Prof. Norwood expressed their approval of the continuance of campus dramas despite the war, regarding them as "natural and normal civilized activities" too worthwhile to relinquish.

by an equally dismal funeral march for our war dead. The fifth part is of an almost indescribable intensity with the theme:

The Angel of Death has been abroad throughout the land. But there is ultimate hope in the concluding chorus with solo:

Glory to God in the highest and on earth, peace, goodwill toward men; Dona nobis pacem.

The vehement nationalism of Sir Ernest's England may seem slightly out of keeping with the cantata's solemnities. It is a work of great power, with extremes of tone colour, extravagant in the use of orchestra and chorus, moving to exhortation:

Music made of change and conquest, glory born of evil, slain.

These two works, both nationalistic, one restricted, make hacked Verdi seem trite by comparison. Their value, as pure music, though, must be judged by time. They are similar in many respects and this, combined with their difficulty make it regrettable that they should have to be on the same program. But the program must be a high point in Toronto's musical history.

New Course Offered In Nursing

Graduates and Students Are Eligible for Enrolment in Emergency Nursing and St. John's Ambulance Training

LAST SIX WEEKS

Graduates as well as students of the School of Nursing are eligible for enrolment in two First Aid Courses which will be begun for the first time at the school next week according to an announcement made yesterday.

A formal St. John's Ambulance Course in First Aid will start on Monday, January 27th and will consist of six consecutive weekly sessions. For this course the usual fee will be charged.

For those who wish to brush up on their first aid and emergency nursing, a second less standardized course will be offered by the school. This is to start on Friday, January 31, and, like the first course, will continue for six weeks. The fee for this course will depend on the number enrolled.

Neither of these courses is compulsory to anyone. While a definite limit has not been made, about fifty or sixty are expected to enrol in each course.

Eds and Co-ed's Stage 'Mixer'

Skits, dancing and refreshments featured the second joint meeting of University College at the Women's Union last night. The men of U.C. did "take-offs" on the recent rushing activities among the female population of the college.

Cleverest skit of the program centred around a fishing trip in which Al Park and Jim Lillio were the fishermen deluxe.

Most novel feature of the meeting was the new U.C. male quartette who gave a heart-rending rendition of "You're Nobody's Sweetheart Now," plus the latest College Song.

Also on the skit program was "Information Squeeze" featuring that notorious critic, Squeal MacDonald, as guest of the evening.

Informal community singing went on between scenes, with songs by composers of Royal College, with Hugh Pedlar of Follies' fame leading the enthusiasts.

After a strenuous session over coffee and through donuts the U.C. lads and lassies clambered upstairs and danced to the hot licks of Howard Cable and his orchestra. As usual the girls were rather outnumbered by stags but a happy time was had by all.

Dancers at St. Mike's At-Home Will Trip to Graceful Waltz-Time

In this modern day of flying feet and quickened tempo it is not often that we hear of a waltz being played at a dance where the younger and more exuberant generation are in the majority. It will be so Friday night at the St. Michael's Annual At-Home.

It was but a few generations ago that the younger set used to delight in showing their elders their proficiency in tracing out the graceful measures of the waltz to some Strauss air.

"It is somewhat out of deference to the older graduates and friends of St. Mike's that will be in attendance that we have set aside several sets of waltzes," stated Tom McDermott, chair-

Graduating Engineers At McGill May Quit for War-Work

Those Who Take Advantage of the Opportunity will Receive Degrees in October if Work is Satisfactory

DECREED BY SENATE

Montreal, Jan. 22 (CUP) — A resolution passed today by the Senate of McGill makes it possible for undergraduate students in Chemistry and Chemical Engineering to obtain positions in war industry. If their work proves to be satisfactory they will be awarded degrees at the October convocation.

The Engineering Faculty has already arranged for some students to take advantage of this ruling. In the field of Chemistry plans have been made to give students theoretical knowledge in the first half of the year with practical work to be taken in industry.

This offer applies only to fourth year students in Honour Chemistry and Chemical Engineering. Those who take advantage of this offer to enter upon war work vital to the country will be recommended for degrees in October if their work in industry has proven satisfactory.

HONOUR SCIENCE CLUB TO CELEBRATE BIRTHDAY

Celebrating its 20th anniversary on the campus, the Honour Science Club has planned a party for next Wednesday night at the Women's Union.

For the past 20 years the club has existed as a meeting place for students in Household Economics and Honour Science, providing a medium where students could meet outside of lectures and labs for social gatherings. In the past, its functions have included year parties and an annual dance, but this year the activities of the club have had to be curtailed due to the war.

Skits, dancing and refreshments will feature Wednesday's party, to which the Honour Science Club cordially invites all science students.

MODERN HISTORY CLUB TO HEAR OF PIONEER LIFE

Tonight the theatre of the Women's Union will swarm with budding historians at the third meeting of the Modern History Club, to hear about pioneer life in Ontario.

Dr. J. H. Elliott of the Department of Medicine will be the speaker. He will treat especially aspects of industrial life in the districts of Rice Lake and Bowmanville. Dr. Elliott comes from an old pioneer family, and has been keenly interested in his subject for many years.

man of the dance committee. McDermott also stated that he and other members of the committee had inquired of the students and that those queried were in favour of it. Several of the students voiced opinions that "tails are not the things to be jiggerbugging in," and "when I go formal I want to dance and not jump about like I was half daft." It seems that the student body as a whole is in favour of the movement.

Even the college Salon Orchestra has arrangements of several Strauss waltzes. These are to be played during the midnight lull. One of the selections is to be "Wine, Women and Song."

STUDENT MINISTERS DISCUSS DIVORCE

"The Church's Attitude to Divorce"

was discussed at the regular monthly meeting of the Theological College Union, held in the A. E. Ames Common Room of Emmanuel College last night. Two papers were presented by members of the Union, following which Rev. J. D. Parks led a discussion in which students from Emmanuel, Trinity, Knox and Wycliffe participated.

"The Church cannot allow divorce by consent," said D. V. Wade, M.A., of Knox College, who presented the "liberal" viewpoint with regard to divorce. He pointed out that the Christian attitude was that the conditions for divorce do not exist in the Kingdom of God. Inasmuch as death is recognized ordinarily as permitting the surviving partner to re-marry, schools of thought feel that infidelity dissolves the life of the partnership, leaving the morally surviving partner free to enter matrimony with another.

A paper outlining the "orthodox" attitude of the Church to the divorce question was read by Owen P. Prichard, B.A., of Wycliffe College. Mr. Prichard pointed out that the Church bases its teachings on divorce on its concept of marriage. Tracing the Church's idea of matrimony as seen in the Marriage Service, the speaker showed how the Church stresses the seriousness and the basic purposes of the institution. "A great part of the Church's task is to train its people toward the highest possible concept of marriage. Reviewing the orthodox attitude to di-

Union Now Is Urged By Professor

Canada Stands to Gain by a Federation of the English Speaking Nations, Claims Prof. Wilkinson

CONTRADICTS ABERHART

"No one would gain more than Canada herself by such a federation of English speaking nations as Clarence Streit suggests in his 'Union Now' and we should discuss and seriously consider it, regardless of what anyone might say on the contrary," said Prof. B. Wilkinson, addressing the English Speaking Union at the Royal York Hotel last night.

Prof. Wilkinson based his address on a discussion of the three assumptions which might be deduced from Premier Aberhart's recent remarks on the subject, namely, that the formation of such a union would hinder Canada's war effort, that it is aimed at the sovereignty of the British Empire and that it would be harmful to Canadian nationalism.

The march of progress is making inevitable the emergence of great super-states; we are now on the threshold of the death of small nations. For this reason a guarantee of security for the future of the British Empire is necessary and it must be based on he does possible co-operation with the United States," the speaker stated, stressing the necessity of contemplating conditions which may arise after the war.

"There has been an incredible change in public opinion in the United States with regard to Great Britain. The future of United States is inextricably bound up with Great Britain; they are engaged in an enterprise which means victory or defeat for both," he concluded.

George Morley of 4T2 Succumbs on Ice Due to Heart Condition

CZECH OUTLINES CONDITIONS AT HOME

The Commerce Club held its second luncheon this term at Diana Sweets yesterday. Mr. K. Rybka, well-known Czech engineer who had returned from his country in 1937, being guest-speaker. His subject was "conditions in Czechoslovakia." He stressed the importance of social regulations in maintaining a population of 15 million on very limited natural resources. Security against unwarranted dismissal and unemployment insurance to be among two of the most important items in Czech legislation. The success of this legislation was clearly evident in the world renown of Škoda arms, Pilsen beer, Bohemian glass and Bata shoes, not to mention the Bren gun.

Education had always been to the fore in Czechoslovakia, Mr. Rybka said. There was no illiteracy, in that country, scholarships existed only for the needy, the system of non-compulsory lectures had been instituted there long before it appeared in the U.S.

In conclusion, Mr. Rybka gave some details of the recent massacres of Prague students, and read parts of a speech by Goebbels admitting unrest in Czechoslovakia. Not only are the people actively resisting from without, but they are also carrying on passive resistance within their own borders.

PROFESSOR FROM HARVARD TO LECTURE ON ST. SOPHIA

Professor Kenneth Conant of the Department of Architecture, Harvard University, will deliver an illustrated lecture on "Saint Sophia in Constantinople" at 5 p.m. this afternoon in the Household Science Building.

"Professor Conant has taken part in the survey of the famous church which has recently been carried out by the Byzantine Institute of America," explained H. A. Thompson, Assistant Professor of Archaeology at U. of T. and Secretary-Treasurer of the Toronto Chapter of the Archaeological Institute. "He will report on the new discoveries of fundamental importance for its structural history, as well as on the magnificent mosaics of the sixth, ninth and tenth centuries which have now been patiently chipped free of their coating of Moslem whitewash."

Music Room Program will Feature Treasured Viols of Hart House

This Friday at five o'clock members of Hart House are to hear a very unique program in the Music Room: the Hart House Viols will be played by Leo Smith, Cecil Figelski and Harold Sumberg, along with Captain T. R. C. Goff playing his clavichord, and some singers from the Conservatory.

The viol is the English name for a family of bowed instruments whose heyday stretched from the 15th to the 18th century, dying out after that as private drawing-room music was gradually displaced by the concert.

The Hart House collection was purchased by the Massey Foundation shortly after the last war. The instruments are all encased in a large 17th century chest which has been lined with zinc and plush inside of that, and following the old custom, nests have been made to hold the various instruments. Four

Had Been on the Ice for Only Five Minutes and Had not yet Taken Any Active Part in the Game

RESPIRATION FAILED

George T. Morley, 23, third year S.P.S. student, died yesterday while participating in an interfaculty hockey game at Varsity Arena. Coroner R. J. Brooke stated that death was due to a heart condition. No inquest will be held.

Morley, playing in goal, had been on the ice for only five minutes and had taken no active part in the game, as play had centred at the far end of the rink during that time. While his team-mates stormed their opponents' net, Morley was seen to collapse on the ice. Although carried immediately to the dressing room, he died before medical aid could reach him.

Prayer Defined At Noon Lecture

"Prayer is our whole attitude towards God," stated Dr. R. Armitage, M.C., Principal of Wycliffe College, summing up his S.C.M. noon hour talk on "Prayer in Everyday Life" in the Music Room at Hart House yesterday.

The speaker explained that in a struggle such as the present one it is not the number of machines that counts most, but the spirit of the people. "Prayer," he said, "is the spirit of the people towards God."

"In prayer," Dr. Armitage pointed out, "even more than we are seeking God, God is seeking us." He also expressed the belief that there is no such thing as unanswered prayer.

To illustrate his statement that prayer is an essential to Christianity, Dr. Armitage used several illustrations. For instance, the password of the persecuted Christians throughout the Roman Empire was, "Our Father," the first two words of the Lord's Prayer.

The address is the second in the series entitled, "Your Job and God," which has in view the purpose of guiding students in finding their life's work. The talk yesterday was to give a general background for the next five Wednesday noon hour addresses, each of which will deal with a particular profession.

of the collection are old Italian viols and the other two are French.

Viols were made in five sizes. The treble or discant is the precursor of the violin, the alto viol that of the viola, and the viola da gamba that of the 'cello. The tenor viola da gamba has left no successor since it was made in a size which, acoustically, is not suitable to its pitch.

Generally speaking the viols differ from the violin family in that they have deeper ribs and flatter backs; the shoulders curve upwards, joining the neck at a tangent instead of at right-angles; the peg-box is usually surmounted by a carved head; they have six strings instead of four; they are tuned differently and the bridge is flat. The tone, while very beautiful, is not so loud as that of the violin.

Our Deepest Sympathy

The university mourns today the sudden and tragic death of George Morley. He was an excellent student, taking a keen interest in his work and the general activities of the university. A host of friends are evidence of his popularity. To those many friends, and to the members of his family, we extend the deep sympathy of the whole university.

Radio Journalism

Radio fans who always listen to the eleven o'clock nightly newscast are no doubt aware of the change in its manner of presentation that took place at the beginning of the new year. Instead of reporting a summary of the day's news supplied by the Canadian Press, the C.B.C. now gathers its own information from various news agencies and rewrites it especially for broadcasting purposes so that it may have listening appeal.

The art of writing for radio, as distinct from writing for a newspaper or magazine, has become so important in the last few years that a new phase of journalism—radio journalism—has grown up, and has even progressed to the extent of being taught in several American universities.

According to the "professors" of this new art, the first question a radio news writer must ask himself is "Is it listenable?" The way to get the answer is to read the story out loud and then begin to rewrite it by eliminating hard-to-pronounce words and phrases.

The writer must remember that he is really telling a story orally, and therefore must use a conversational, narrative style. Since colour and simplicity are the keystones of an interesting story, conversational words should be used and formality avoided. The best plan is said to be to write in rhythm style, which enables announcers to get a swing, with good snappy verbs and nouns that can be enunciated with considerable distinction and bang. This with straight, simple sentences brings the desired result. The good old grammar school rule of simple separate sentences really is the way you talk, and therefore is the best for radio news writing.

One of the principal things that the radio writer must remember is that his material is not read by his audience; it is heard. People hear at the average rate of 160 words a minute, while the normal person reads at little less than 100 words a minute. In radio people cannot backtrack while hearing the news. There is just one short shot and if the copy is not simply written there is apt to be nothing left at the end of the story but a jumbled impression that somebody did something somewhere. The majority of people tire of listening after a couple of minutes on one subject so experience proves that the biggest stories are worth not more than 400 words.

Too many adjectives should be avoided as they tend to obscure the all important noun. Verbs denoting action should be used as they help create an image in the listener's mind. Words with double meanings should always be avoided because, according to one authority, the average radio audience seems to have a perfect passion for getting the wrong meaning if one is humanly possible.

The opening sentence of a news report should not try to tell too much. The average radio listener requires a little time to get adjusted after each story.

One network has a rule that requires the insertion of transitional phrases like this: "Now the news from abroad", or "Now back home".

The same principle applies to the start of a story. If too many details are crowded into the first sentence the listener gets lost. For that reason stories should not start off with unfamiliar names. If the announcer slurs it the name is gone forever, and according to the already mentioned authority, it leaves the listener confused and sometimes angry; and often he will call up the station for confirmation, thereby adding to its burdens.

In regard to topics and words that should not be used, the radio news writer is taught to avoid the following:—gruesome stories; court trials with unpleasant angles, particularly sex; the words "blood", "birth control", divorces (except of famous personalities and then avoid any sex angles); crime (only outstanding cases and then play them down); electrocutions (outstanding ones and then briefly); use of the words "rats", "bugs" or unpleasant parasites of any kind; and foreign phrases, technical and obscure words.

All these tips on how to write for radio, by the way, come from Webb C. Artz, Radio News Manager of the United Press. He should know!

Here and There

A Bit Rough

The people down in Cuba and such countries always were a bit excitable, especially when it comes to elections, but things are getting so that they can't even hold a student meeting without them all having a little difference of opinion and shooting at each other.

It was reported in the press that one student was shot and wounded when a meeting of the Student Congress in a high school in the city of Santa Clara earlier this week terminated in a minor riot. Police restored order and detained thirty persons. The controversy arose between rival groups at the opening of the congress, attended by delegates from various districts of the island.

Maybe they had a heat wave!

Musical Suit

ASCAP members from coast to coast must have been glued to their radios waiting for BMI to slip up, because it didn't take them long after Jan. 1 to start suing the networks for what they claimed was infringement on their rights. Just to make it tough they decided to sue in various courts clear across the country.

Nevertheless the future looks dark for ASCAP, because the networks seem to be doing all right. It is true most of the old songs are no longer aired, and the programs all have new theme songs—but it doesn't take the public long to get used to new things.

Even Healthier

One of the chief causes for debate last fall in connection with the wholesale herding of people into air-raid shelters in England was the question of disease and epidemics. Doctors and health authorities expected a sharp increase in disease, but the most recent public health statistics show that Britain in 1940 was healthier than it was the year before the war started, especially in relation to contagious diseases. In the year before the war there were more than 215,000 reported cases of the five principal diseases, while in 1940, which included four months of heavy bombing, the number dropped to 171,000 cases.

Toss Up—Pianist or Conductor?

Reginald Stewart, at Eaton Auditorium

It was as great a pleasure last night to hear Reginald Stewart as a pianist as it is always to hear him as a conductor. He is amazingly good on the podium and, after his Eaton Auditorium performance, no one could fail to admire his superb technique as a pianist, a technique used to reveal, as in his conducting, the delicate imaginative treatment of all he undertakes.

His first group by Lully, Rameau, and Scarlatti was handled simply and delicately. The Bach Prelude and Fugue in B Flat Minor was played smoothly, but with a regrettable lack of emotion, particularly in the Prelude which is the most emotional of

Hari-Kari IN Hong Kong

(As we left our heroes, Fotheringham and Marlborough-Beach, they had arrived in China, which is a Very Dangerous Country. They were thirsty, and went to a sinister native restaurant, where Marlborough-Beach was overcome by a series of seven loaded Mellow Mandalay Maltdes, and collapsed into a bowl of chop-suey. He disappeared from view, and left Fotheringham peering over the rim of the bowl, wondering what had become of him.)

"Good Gad," I gasped, "I must do something." Pausing only to sniff with relish at the empty MMM glasses, I leapt in after him.

Down, down, down I swam, holding my breath until it seemed my lungs would burst. Suddenly, I found that I had reached the bottom of the bowl. Fumbling about, I found the inert body of Marlborough-Beach with my groping fingers.

I was about to strike out for the surface, when my hand struck an iron ring attached to a mysterious trapdoor. I wrenched it open, and dragged Marlborough-Beach through the aperture.

He was gurgling feebly. As I looked about, I perceived that we were in an exotic Oriental garden, surrounded by banyan trees and lichen nuts. Peacocks struts proudly across the spacious lawns.

"Back up, man," I admonished him. "We must watch every step we make."

Scarcely had I spoken when a wicked-looking Oriental approached us, bowed ceremoniously and presented Marlborough-Beach with a well-aimed stiletto which sank his floating rib. Apologizing gracefully, the Oriental then withdrew.

"Good Gad," gasped Marlborough-Beach, salvaging the rib, "there's foul play afoot. Can it be that we have become involved in a WAR?"

"Possibly," I replied curtly as another Oriental opened fire on us from the other end of the garden with a tommy gun.

(Good Gad. This China is a dangerous country. Will the gallant Marlborough-Beach and the dauntless Fotheringham ever escape from this new predicament in which they find themselves? They probably will, but follow The Varsity closely anyway. You can never tell.)

all the Forty-Eight. But it is from the choice of the Bach Tocatta and Fugue in D Minor that a bone of contention arises. It is a pity that such superb technique should stoop to make common (almost to hack) such beautiful music as this selection and Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring. In the same category falls the hauntingly lovely Berceuse and Ballade in A Flat of Chopin. The Tocatta and Fugue in D Minor has suffered from over-arrangement. Busoni, an organist, has arranged it with a fellow organist's feeling for Bach; various pianists, including Stewart, have also tried it, from the pianist's point of view.

The Beethoven Sonata Opus 2, No. 3 was treated with exquisite technical skill. The last movement was especially well done. The Rubinstein Staccato Etude, a very standard work, again showed Stewart's technical skill. Jardins sous la pluie and Reverie, both as haunting and fanciful as anything Debussy ever wrote, were played with a sensitive interpretative feeling. Ravel and Chabrier were full of graceful rhythm. The encore, Jeu d'Eau, of Ravel, was another example of Stewart's gift of fanciful imagination.

Altogether, excluding Mr. Stewart's monotonous choice of the over-familiar and standard, to ensure abundant applause and approbation, he proved himself undoubtedly Toronto's outstanding pianist, with an admirable technique, a delicate imagination, and best of all a generally high standard of musicianship.

New Intramural Rules Limit Player Transfer

Rules Adopted by Intramural Committee Prohibit More Than Four Transfers to or from Any Interfaculty Team

MANAGERS WARNED

New rules governing the transfer of players in all league sports have been released by the Intramural Committee and all managers are warned that these rules have been in effect from the commencement of the spring term.

Now, as in previous years, extra teams are allowed in the faculties on the understanding that they be chosen after the regular teams are picked, and rules were drafted to permit transfer of players to and from these teams.

However, extra teams have so increased in the past two years that a new set of rules was found necessary to control the continuous change of players. The present ruling limits any team to four transfers to or from that team during the season, and a player is allowed to play on only two teams in the same sport in the same season. The following previous rule holds as well: a man may move from an extra team to a regular team up to and including the last game of the series but is prohibited from moving from a regular team to an extra team if he has played more than one game with a regular team.

Sub-goalkeepers have been made eligible for play-offs without participating in the regular schedule but all other players must participate in at least one regular game before eligible for the post-season series.

It is felt by the Committee that these rules will eliminate any misuse of privileges in the indiscriminate switching of men so as to bolster extra or weaker teams for important games. While this practice is not general by any means, it is possible and is neither fair to the opposing team or the team members displaced because of the transfer.

ST. MIKE'S EDGE DENTS C. IN CLOSE MUSHBALL GAME

St. Mike's mushballers, short-handed, won a close 3-2 game over Dents C in the lower gym. The Irish scored two runs in the first on O'Reilly's hit and one in the third when Kelly stole home. Dents got one in each of the last two frames.

Robertson, well held by O'Sullivan, pitched a magnificent game for the Saints, allowing five hits and striking out ten. Loucks of Dents allowed only four hits.

St. Mike's: Kelly, Agro, Barrett, O'Sullivan, O'Reilly, Addario, Robertson.

Dents C: Malkin, Margolese, Green, Channell, Wittchell, Samuels, Loucks, Lipman, Goldberg, Chiersan.

S.P.S. JR. HOCKEY--

PILOTS AND U.C. TIE IN BASEBALL TILT

Artsmen Rally with an Eight-Run Scoring Spurge in Fourth Inning to Earn 15-15 Draw

U.C. III came from behind last night in the lower gym to tie Aerial Navigation 15-15 in a free-scoring baseball game. Going into the last half of the fourth, the Airmen were leading by eight runs. Then Waisglass singled to start a rally that netted eight runs for U.C. III. The Artsmen had scored two in the second and five in the third.

The Airmen started off with two in the first, then five in the second, seven in the third and added their final tally in the last frame. Clavir led U.C. with five hits in five attempts, getting a home run, two doubles, and a single.

U.C. III: Hunter, Duncan, Waisglass, Grant, White, McNulty, Clavir. Aer. Nav.: Wismer, Brown, Tuckak, Vanhuysse, Dodds, McLaurin, Green-side.

SPORT SPLASHES

By Doug Green

Bill Moffatt of School and Stew Robinson of Meds reeled off the best times yesterday in the first two events of the Durnan Trophy competition. The swimmer who turns in the slowest time in each event, being run off from time to time over a period of three weeks, will cop the single event championship, and if he can obtain the highest number of placings, said swimmer will win the Individual Championship of the university and the Durnan Cup that goes with it. Ged Clawson of U.C. is the present holder of the Trophy.

Moffatt raced off the 50 free in 25.3 seconds, 1.3 seconds better than Stew Robinson and Johnny Northwood. Other times were: D. Rogers, 28.2; C. Rimmer, 29.3; J. Brace, 31.6.

Robinson beat out the best time in the 200 breast with a 3 minutes and 14.3 seconds effort. Rogers was clocked in 31' 31.9" and Brace in 3' 45".

S K I

The usual weekly meeting of the Ski Club will be held in the Meds Building, Room 111, at five o'clock today. Special feature will be a women's meeting to be held after the regular one, so come coeds, come all.

Here is the intramural team setup: Group I--S.P.S. 1sts and 2nds, Trinity 1sts, U.C. 1sts, Vic 1sts and Meds. Three of these will go into the finals. Group II--S.P.S. 3rds, Trinity 2nds, U.C. 2nds, Vic 2nds, Dents, and St. Mike's if there is one. One of these will go into the finals.

Officials are needed. All interested please sign up in the athletic office. Regular referees' fees will be paid.

AROUND THE TRACK

Last fall Hec Phillips selected an intercollegiate track team, a right smart bunch, well able to carry the Blue and White colours against any opposition. And anybody that cares to, may get a second chance to see that squad in action as they break up into sub-units and race against each other in the interfaculty indoor meet, due to start tomorrow.

There have been big turnouts, and results have been promising. The first two events, the 50 yards and the half mile, are slated for Friday, and they both look like anybody's race from here. Several new faces will appear in the initial event, particularly those of Herlick and Sully, two Victorians. Then of course there will be the Brown Bros. and Gerry Frederick, also at Vic.

Lloyd Delaney has been turning in a brilliant half-mile of late, but the rest of the 880 old-timers will provide enough opposition to make it the race of the night. These include Tom Barnett, Ged Clawson, Gard Lorimer and newcomers Lionel Peckover, Geoff Parke-Taylor and McDougall. The race will be divided into two sections, one for the known and one for the unknown quantities.

A game leg has forced Larry O'Connor to cancel his entry in the Knights of Columbus Meet, being held Saturday. Canada's ace hurdler was to have defended his 45-yard high hurdle title which he won last year. However, Larry plans to enter later meets in the Oo Ess Ay. He will be the starter for the meets and Dr. Campbell the timer.

DUCK FOR THE OYSTER . . .

Interfaculty competition will reach the climax of its brilliant career on Saturday night when we all gather to make merry, tra-la. Yesiree, you cornhuskers, things have reached about as mad a state as the Varsity A.C. In the midst of everything else, there will be a square dance. There seems to be a bit of a hitch in the rigging at present, for nobody who can call the darn things has been brought to light. So c'mon you fellows you can still crawl out of bed at four a.m. and milk a cow. Here's your chance to shine. How about Aerial Navigation taking on Knox in an it-smells-of-the-barn affair? Pull on your jeans, city-breds, and swing, swing yow moath-in-law. . . There will be no points awarded for this in the T. A. Reed Trophy competition, it was announced by the Athletic Office.

And while we're on the subject of University Night, it seems that we of the s.s. have been invited to act as general won't-you-sit-in-on-a-bridge-game-it's-only-five-cents-a-point ambassadors of good will. To say the least, this has its points. Shop around fellows and bring the snazziest babes you can find. We'll meet you at the door . . . with bells on.

OF INTEREST TO SKIERS

There has been a great deal of general clattering up on the Varsity skiing property. From now on, members of the Ski Club will police the grounds in order to keep unauthorized people off. Not that the Club has turned into a bunch of Martins or Coys, but the property was purchased for the benefit of the students, and others have chosen to occupy it outright, spoiling trails, etc. To facilitate matters, skiers, take your registration card along with you. Non-Varsiteers may use the grounds providing they pay the police a nominal fee, for which they will be issued a tag for the day. This will also permit use of the property of the Newmarket Ski Club, while students must sport a Varsity Ski Club badge when they enter the Newmarket precincts. These badges may be purchased in the Athletic Office. Please bear in mind these few simple things when you plan to ski next time. A little co-operation will mean a lot to the Club.

Well, what can we do if it rains, and the rain doesn't freeze, and there isn't any ice, and the hockey games are cancelled, and we haven't anything to write about? What can we do, I say, what can we do?

Well (again), we're making no rash promises this time, but we'll wait for further information to take up the cry once more.

Girl ski-enthusiasts, would-be enthusiasts, could-be ski-enthusiasts, and girls, —there will be a meeting of the Ski Club at 5 o'clock today (Thursday) in the usual significant meeting-place, the Anatomy Building. This meeting is a very important one, as the Girls' University Ski Meet is coming up on Saturday afternoon, Feb. 1st, at the University Ski Club and discussions about same will take place this afternoon. Anyone can enter this meet which is an interfaculty competition, basically, but is entered by any individuals interested in finding out which end of the ski one sits on, the hard way—that comma is vital, as you can see. Let's have a good turn-out for this meeting to really get things under way with a bang.

We take this opportunity to mention that the College and Interfaculty Swim Meets are very much in the offing, probably splashing up the end of this month and on into February, so let's get limbered up now so we'll be over the shock of seeing the state of our curls when we emerge, by the time

Vic IV and Forestry are Victors In Wide-Open Basketball Tilts

Vic Team Swamps Opponents 45-8 as Campbell and Finlay Lead Attack with 14 and 12 Points Respectively

The Vic IV cage crew went on a scoring spree to swamp Aerial Navigation B 45-8. The Scarlet and Gold squad kept up a relentless pressure under which the Fliers' defence buckled.

The Airmen failed to score in the first half while the Orphans ran up a total of 18 points. The Fliers got their first tally half way through the final chukker when Frankie Sheffield scored on a breakaway. The Vic barrage continued and netted more points.

"Soup" Campbell was the bulwark of the Vic crew, scoring 14 points. Doug Finlay, Vern Cunningham and Jack Rankin were close behind with 12, 11 and 8 respectively. Alec Young and Johnny DelGrande stood out on the Orphans' defence.

Frank Sheffield was the high scorer for the Fliers, potting three baskets. Don Hall, of hockey fame, was the playmaker and star defenceman for the Aviators.

Vic IV: Rankin (8), Young, Finlay (12), Tafel, Cunningham (11), McGrory, Campbell (14), DelGrande and Munroe.

Aerial Navigation B: Hall, Rosenberg, Schofield, Wismer, McLaurin, Reilly (2), Sheffield (6), Ackerman, Greenslade.

The real thing starts popping. More about that to-morrow,—have to spread things out, you know, 'specially when it rains.

Treemen Take an Early Lead to Remain Out of Danger; Four-Man Game in Upper Gym

Forestry hoopers ran away from Knox B to the tune of 31-19 in a ragged basketball exhibition last night. Both teams played a close-checking game which resulted in frequent personal fouls.

The Woodsmen took an early lead and were ahead 15-6 at half time. The Presbyterians turned on a power play in the final chukker but were submerged by the more consistent Treeters.

Bert Day and Al Purdy led the Foresters to victory, potting four field goals apiece. Grant Puttock with 5 points was the playmaker while Bentley and Campbell each got two baskets.

Self and Archibald each got 6 points to top the Purple and White scorers. The game was played in the Upper Gym so both teams used only four men.

Forestry: Day (8), Puttock (5), Bentley (4), Allman (1), Purdy (8), Campbell (4).

Knox B: Barr (2), Self (6), Thomson, Archibald (6), Crocker, Marsh (5).

QUEEN'S PROFESSOR TO LECTURE FRIDAY

Will Discuss the Federal Dilemma in Canada in the Second of a Series Concerning Political Matters

The political predicament of Canada will be discussed on Friday afternoon by Prof. J. A. Corry, of the Political Science department at Queen's University. This will be the second of a series of lectures on political matters under the auspices of the University Political Science Department. It will be held at the Economics Building on Friday at 5 p.m.

Prof. Corry, formerly of the University of Saskatchewan will speak on the subject of "The Federal Dilemma." Besides being a Rhodes scholar, Prof. Corry was also one of the advisors of the Sirois Commission and prepared at least one volume of the Report. He succeeded the Hon. Norman Rogers at Queen's University.

This series of lectures, which is the first attempt of its kind by the Political Science Department here, has already proven to be successful. "It illustrates the expansion of interest in Political Science, not only in the University of Toronto, but also all over the Dominion," said Dr. R. MacG. Dawson of the Department of Political Science.

PHILOSOPHICAL SOCIETY TO HEAR NEW THEORY

An ethical theory, which has never before been fully developed, will be outlined by Mr. G. Edison, M.A., Lecturer in Ethics at Trinity College, when he speaks to the University Philosophical Society at the home of their president, Mavor Moore, IV U.C., 2600 Bathurst Street, tonight at 8 o'clock.

Mr. Edison thinks that all human actions have to be judged in terms of the satisfaction of human needs, and he criticizes ethics today for wasted effort in trying to justify conduct, when the moral problem is simply to determine the best means of meeting the needs of life.

This meeting is for members of the Philosophical Society, but membership is open to all students of the university.

WE KNOW A GIRL who has an essay which has been over-due for more than two months. . . . She is minding her own business in the hall the other day when she spies the professor to whom she owes the verbiage. . . . She beats a precipitate retreat down the passage, and finds herself in a cub-de-sac. . . . Imagining his hot breath on her neck, she hurries hurriedly behind the nearest door. . . . Her efforts are of no avail. He is following her! She cowers in mortal fear. . . .

He murmurs "Excuse me," as he strides past her.

THE WAR IS OVER at Victoria College between members of the Men-Are-Only-Good-To-Dance-With-Club and the Women-Are-Only-Good-To-Dance-With-Club. . . . The notices have been torn down from their prominent places in the main hall, and outwardly at least, the hatchet is buried. . . . This is really a shame, because nothing has been decided by the dispute, and we hate to see it stop so soon. . . . It was providing us with large hunks of daily copy. . . .

CAMP DEPRESSION is a co-operative residence for men on the campus of the University of North Dakota. It consists of seven second-hand railway cabooses. . . . Thirty students live there, and they recently elected a president. . . . and 29 vice-presidents. . . .

THE PHILOSOPHY PROFESSOR told the girl to continue reading aloud from the "Republic" of Plato at the point where class discussion had interrupted the recitation. . . . "Where are we, sir?" she queried. . . . "Smarter!" barked he. "Have you been asleep?" He turned to the next girl, "Tell her where to begin, and let's get on with it," he commanded. . . . The second girl indicated the spot in question, and the first one began. . . . "Thanks," said the prof, "I had forgotten myself!"

sadistically, "Somebody's tickling the professor."

AN OUTGROWTH of the recently-mentioned Varsity Athletic Club is the surprising number of intellectual societies which are springing up among the members of the staff. . . . The Sports Editor and the News Editor, for example, have formed a group of Interference-Brokers. . . . "When the time hangs heavy on our hands," they say, "we don't need to be bored. We can just sit there, brooking interference. . . . They have another club, the Canadian Hide-Binders' Association, for ensuring the perpetuation of things hide-bound. . . . The Managing Editor is going about beating tracks for people to keep off of. . . . As for the C.U.P. Editor and the Exchange Editor, they fill in time which would otherwise be occupied in unconstructive thumb-twiddling, by Caring a Rap. . . .

A GROUP OF SCABS are sitting around the Law Reading Room studying away like anything. . . . The phone rings, and one of the boys goes to it, as the librarian seems to have disappeared for the moment. . . . "Hello?" he snaps testily. . . . "Is that the West Elmor Fish Market?" . . . Cracks the enraged lawyer, as he hangs up, "You, can't win us with flattery."

STREAMER in last night's Tory Telegram. . . . RAF Delivers Smashing Blow At Italian Capitals Near Alban.

...Well... This IS news. . . .

COMING TOMORROW . . . A Hither and Yon by Fred Hall, the Golden Boy of The Varsity Sport Staff . . . Freddie is admirably suited for this arduous task, because, as the Assistant Managing Editor helpfully remarks, the only time he stops talking is when he's eating. . . . THAT'LL BE THE DAY. . . .

ST. HILDA'S DEBATERS OUT-POINT VICTORIA

Supporters of Affirmative Uphold Motion that University of Toronto Should Adopt Oxford System of Education

St. Hilda's debaters successfully upheld the affirmative against the Vic girls, deciding that "the University of Toronto should adopt the University of Oxford system of education", in the Women's Union yesterday.

Genevieve Bronson launched the affirmative by declaring that the purpose of a university was to produce thinkers and that under the Oxford system a student did his own work stimulated and guided by his tutor and learned to formulate his own criticism rather than echoing the opinions of others.

She stated that at Oxford one concentrated on one subject and the things directly connected with it, thus getting a thorough knowledge of one field and his relations to others rather than the few disjointed facts which we cull from our lecture system.

Mary Mulcock of Vic defended our system by declaring that we do have very interesting class discussions with our professors, that our courses give a much broader outlook and that although the Oxford system was very fine it was far too expensive for Canada and would eliminate a vast number of students who were not wealthy.

Mary Skeele, St. Hilda's, said that the Oxford system only eliminates those more interested in athletic prowess than in scholastic pursuits.

"Our whole school system would have to be revised if we were to adopt the Oxford system," said Mary Winchester. She felt that we have a different attitude towards education and that our system is better suited to Canada because it tends more towards the practical.

sity rugby and hockey trainer, administered artificial respiration until Dr. A. G. Smith arrived. Together with the doctor, members of the Toronto Fire Department, equipped with respirator, worked over Morley for an hour and a half, but the youth failed to respond to treatment.

An honour student in Engineering Physics, specializing in aircraft design, Morley had taken an active part in School athletics since his freshman year. He came to Varsity after attending Lakefield Preparatory School and Owen Sound Collegiate. In 1938 he played rugby with Don Graham's last Varsity junior team and had been on two previous S.P.S. hockey teams. According to his aunt, Miss S. G. Morley, he had intended to enlist in the R.C.A.F. at the end of the term or upon graduation.

The son of Judge G. W. Morley of Owen Sound, George came to Varsity three years ago with his brother Lawrence, third year Trinity student, and resided with his aunt at 87 Howland Ave.

Morley is survived by his parents, his only brother Lawrence, and two sisters, Mary and Kathleen. The body was removed to Matthews' Funeral Home for burial.

Dr. Wilkinson does not contemplate an English speaking union which is exclusive, but that any country desiring to join should unite in spirit as well. "As far as the smaller nations of Europe are concerned, they would welcome such federation because it would free them from the night-marish oppression of Germany, and guarantee that they wouldn't be swept into the oblivion of complete minorities as soon as they would recover freedom."

Dr. Wilkinson added that if we did organize our strength it would be to maintain a balance of world peace. In conclusion, he stated that we will have to rely on strength, honesty of intention and not on the sweet reasonableness based on the groundless assumption that everyone is as reasonable as we are.

Services For Morley Held Today

Student Died Almost Instantly After Suffering a Heart Attack while Playing in Hockey Game

STUDIO ENGINEERING

Funeral services for George Morley, twenty-three year old S.P.S. hockey player who died Wednesday afternoon, will be held this afternoon in St. Alban's Anglican church, Howland avenue and Barton street.

Morley, a third year student in engineering physics, died almost instantly after suffering a heart attack while playing goal in an interfaculty hockey game at Varsity Arena on Wednesday.

According to university medical authorities, Morley had been examined only a week ago when he decided to play interfaculty hockey. On that occasion he was pronounced "quite alright" and "in sound health" by Dr. G. D. Porter, director of medical services for men. Earlier in the year he had undergone a thorough medical examination as a member of the C.O.T.C. training centre, and had been passed as physically fit. A member of his family told The Varsity yesterday that although Morley had been ill about six years ago and doctors had predicted possibility of a heart condition, they had never been able to detect any trouble. Last year he suffered a collapse, but again doctors could find no heart condition.

The funeral will take place at 2 o'clock today. Interment will be in St. James Cemetery.

Irish will Dance To George Hooley

Tonight, January 24, at nine o'clock in Hart House, is the night for St. Michael's College Annual Ball. Soft lights of a double blue hue shall illumine Hart House as the light strains of sweet music float through the hallways. Young ladies in flowing gowns and their escorts in evening attire shall move about the dance floor to the lilting airs of George Hooley and his orchestra.

One feature of this dance is the registration books that will be set about for the dancers to sign and write comments. These books will be kept and brought out at the following dances for those who wish to see what their thoughts were at this annual event away back in 1941.

All the old grads will unite and talk of "The Good Old Days" when they were undergraduates. This will be an evening of gay frivolity and the cares of the daily lecture shall be left behind for a few fleeting hours.

Four Dance Bands, Sparkling Show To Feature Annual "School Nite"

Four dance bands and a sparkling show in Hart House Theatre will be the main entertainment Feb. 7 — two weeks from tonight — when the annual Engineers' fun-fest, "School Nite," takes the spotlight of the campus entertainment world.

The ticket supply is limited; to avoid the usual rush the committee has evolved a system whereby on Monday the sale will be opened to 4th year Schoolmen only, 3rd year on Tuesday, 2nd year on Wednesday, Frosh on Thursday, and a scramble for what's left after that.

Featured will be three complete performances of Bill Brisco's Revue, a new tank show, novel lighting effects, a magician act, all topped off with dancing to the music of the Modernaires,

TYPOGRAPHICAL ERROR

Due to a misinterpretation during a telephone conversation when advertising copy was phoned to the Press on Wednesday night, a typographical error appeared in the St. Michael's College Ball advertisement on page 3 of The Varsity yesterday. The correct advertisement may be found on page 3 of today's issue. The annual Ball will take place at Hart House this evening, with dancing to the music of George Hooley and his orchestra.

Prof. Devereux Talks on Gambling

"Dame Fortune may be pretty orderly in her laws of possibility but it must always be remembered that she is also a tease," Professor Devereux stated in his lecture on a "Sociologist Looks at Gambling" at the Sociology Club tea at St. Hilda's yesterday.

"Gambling is an attempt to escape from economic discipline," Professor Devereux said. "It really arises as a reaction to the strong moral pressure in our integrated society which treats incomes as serious. A discipline is thus placed on all earned money and certain strains are put on the individual."

"This, it is that a conservative business man can vent all his irrationality in an economic sense in a five cent poker game. It is only when gambling breaks from this context and becomes a norm for the total system, that it is dangerous," he concluded.

VARSITY NIGHT TO BE HELD AT TIMOTHY EATON CHURCH

Varsity songs, pictures and entertainment will feature a "Varsity night" to be held at Timothy Eaton church this Sunday night at 8.30, at which President Cody will be the guest of Rev. McLennan.

The bi-monthly meeting of the Youth Forum of the church will be conducted by Varsity students for this one night. All the faculties are invited to attend this affair at which the San Toy singers will perform.

NEWMAN CLUB EXECUTIVE ARRANGES FOR SPEAKERS

Three or four times during the school year the executive of Newman Club arrange for speakers to visit the club on a Sunday morning and speak to the members according to faculty grouping.

President Don Morand said, "Arts members of the club are invited this time to broaden their knowledge, forget their 'cultural' field and browse around where they would like, into one or other of the professional groups' meetings. It keeps things in proportion."

Debate Promises to be Most Controversial of the Vic Debating Parliament According to President

TO TAKE PLACE MONDAY

"That this house deplores the failure of the Victoria College Union to represent student opinion" is to be the subject of what promises to be the most controversial debate in the recent history of the Victoria College Debating Parliament Monday, Morris Hay, president, said last night.

"The action of 'Dictator' Gray allowing himself to be appointed a representative of Victoria College for a debating team to tour the U.S.A. is only one example of V.C.U. tyranny," the president said.

The V.C.U. has foiled all attempts of students to introduce limited campaigning into the Vic elections, Helen Carefoot, a cabinet member, stated. "In fact," she continued, "student opinion has been utterly neglected on the point."

The representatives of V.C.U. in the debate will be Ian MacLeod and Mabel Van Camp. Gretta Riddell and John Pallett will represent the students.

RECORD SITUATION REMAINS MYSTERY

"Nothing new has been learned about the records being donated to the university by the Carnegie Corporation of New York," it was announced last night. The last word received by university officials is that they were to be shipped about the middle of December. Then some delay was announced but no reason given.

The records were first to have arrived in November but shipment has been postponed several times. They will include the works of old masters and are to be available for student use. Similar gifts have already been made to other universities.

B. K. Sandwell Gives Talk On Canadian Literature

Literature not Colonial but a Geographically Conditioned Branch of North American Literature, Says Speaker

Canadian literature is not colonial but "a geographically conditioned branch of the literature of North America," said B. K. Sandwell, editor of Saturday Night, in a lecture entitled "The Background of Canadian Literature" yesterday.

Mr. Sandwell confined his talk to Canadian literature in the English language. "The Canadian literary background is identical with the American, and if anything is becoming more so," he stated.

He said that Canada's literature would have been the same if there had been no Confederation.

Enumerating the common influences possessed by Canada and the United States, the speaker traced Canada's literary growth, which followed half a century later her neighbour's progress, through the emigrant and imitative periods to her present stage, regionalism. He mentioned that in Canada there has as yet been no "muck-raking school," a phase that is part of the development to a national literature.

He concluded by saying that these must all be incorporated in it; when we put in both good and bad, we would have "a very good and varied background."

Ferguson Lectures To W.S.T.D.

Professor Says that Military Training for Coeds is Admirable for Their Own Benefit and Good

ORGANIZATION TALK

"I think military training for co-eds is admirable for their own benefit and for the good they can do with it," Prof. W. S. Ferguson told the Varsity after his lecture on Business Organization to the W.S.T.D. last night. The professor has been associated with the university for 29 years and with Shaw's Business Schools for 30 years.

The trim, grey-clad co-eds won his admiration from the first. "I like your uniforms," were his opening words.

The speaker stressed the functions of an office as direction of activities and the coordination of these activities. The co-eds must remember that, "One of the main attributes of success is common sense." He also emphasized punctuality and the value of time.

In one office where the professor worked many years ago there was a large sign over one clock. "Anybody seen going towards or away from this clock will be dismissed at once." Stressing office etiquette he said, "I never called a secretary by her first name, that is, till I married one."

SET "UNDERGRAD" DEADLINE FOR END OF FEBRUARY

The end of February is the date set for publication of the U.C. Undergraduate magazine, according to the editor, Ken McNaught, IV U.C., and today, Jan. 24, is the deadline for contributions.

The format of the Undergraduate has been changed completely and is dominantly "pictorial journalism," touching on all sides of college life. At least one-hundred pages more have been added to the book this year.

Professor Norwood of the Classics Department is the faculty representative for the magazine.

Interview Reveals Journalist Worked on Varsity, and Missed Being Editor of Paper by Single Vote

B. K. Sandwell came to lecture yesterday in the hall where he used to write examinations. Dr. Wallace, introducing the well-known Canadian editor as a man of many activities, spoke of his work on "a campus publication" during his years spent at University College. This work, Mr. Sandwell himself had added, kept him from getting first class honours when he graduated in the course of Classics. "I was saved from being editor of the Varsity by one vote," he told a reporter from that paper.

"This war will have a tremendous effect on Canadian literature," was Mr. Sandwell's opinion, although at this stage of events he could not prophesy exactly what that effect would be. He said that in war-time people read much more, particularly "escape" books, although they might substitute the movies this time.

"Canada will emerge from this conflict with a stronger national consciousness," he stated, and what was still more important in his estimation, with "an awakened social sense from contact with Britain and the United States."

First "University Night" Will be Staged Tomorrow With Interfaculty Games

VISITORS' DAY

Sunday 26th January will be Visitors' Day at Hart House when members may introduce visitors, including ladies, into the House between the hours of 2 and 4 p.m., on presentation of their membership cards at the door. The building will be open for inspection and afternoon tea (25c) will be served in the graduate dining-room.

Elliott Addresses History Group

The pioneer history of Canada with regard to the district around Bowmanville in particular was the subject of the address given by Dr. J. H. Elliott to the Modern History Club last night.

Dr. Elliott is a professor of the history of medicine in the Faculty of Medicine, and has a keen interest in the history of the communities of Ontario. Harold Nelson, president of the History Club, explained that Dr. Elliott has collected an extensive library on the subject and has done considerable work in unearthing records revealing information on the early development of the towns of Ontario.

The speaker gave a detailed account of the work done by Dr. John Gilchrist in building up a village in the vicinity of the present town of Keene. Dr. Gilchrist, as well as having an office in Keene and Peterborough, found time to manage a sawmill, a grist mill, a distillery and a store.

In telling of the scarcity of money at the time, Dr. Elliott quoted one example of a man who tried for four months to get a twenty dollar gold-piece changed.

JR. U.C. MUSHBALLERS DEFEAT JR. SCHOOL 9-6

Jr. U.C. mushballers battered out fifteen hits yesterday afternoon to defeat School 9-6. Saul Fox's swiftballs were the feature attraction of the game, notwithstanding Cliff Ballagh's, Ken Rotenberg's and Bob Nichol's sensational drives which brought U.C. through to a starring finish.

The Artsmen started off with four runs in each of the first two innings, followed with one in the third, while the Engineers only managed to snag one in the first, none in the second, four in a third inning rally, and another in the last. Brant for School took the pitcher's box from Perks after the second inning.

Jr. U.C.: Faber, Ballagh, Fox, Rotenberg, Beatty, Kerr, Clayton, Nichol, McKinley.

Jr. School: Hamlin, Perks, Gibson, Cawly, Small, Ashton, McKenzie, Wilson, Anderson, Brant.

Joe College and Betty Co-ed To Steal Spotlight at Vic Party

At last, after a year in comparative obscurity, those well known campus figures, Joe College and Betty Co-ed, will once more steal the spotlight from that Dogpatch Deb, at the Victoria College Junior-Senior party this Saturday night, January 25. This, the last Junior-Senior party of the year, is expected to reach a new high in enthusiasm and attendance.

The committee recommend that all Juniors and Seniors who attend appear in absolutely typical costume — sweaters and visible braces for the men, saddle shoes and Sloppy Joes for the women. Pork pies and racoon coats will also be in evidence.

Charlie Zwygard's Gymnast Put On One-Ring Show in the Lower Gym Between Games

DANCING TO FOLLOW

Plans are complete for the first University Night of the season to be held in the athletic wing of Hart House tomorrow evening at 8:15.

Interfaculty highlights have been scheduled especially for the occasion. Dents will meet Trinity at 2:15 in the upper gym in a volleyball fixture. Dents are interfaculty champions while Trinity went to the semi-finals only to be eliminated by Vic. Two cage games are carded. Senior Vic will tangle with Senior U.C. at 8:30 and O.C.E.'s classed quintet of Browns, Belchamber, Prince and Wynne will encounter the Dentists. Charlie Zwygard's gymen, now occupied with the Barton Cup trials, will put on a one-ring show in the lower gym between the basketball games.

In the Pool School will take Vic in the first water polo tilt at 8:30 and Senior Meads meet the Irish an hour later. Special attraction will be a life saving demonstration at nine bells.

Every room along the Muscle Midway will be humming with activity. The boxing chamber will be reserved for the games that require physical exertion while a dozen different table games are in progress in the wrestling room. The fencing room has been set aside for movies. Warren Stevens has about 1200 feet of rugby film in stock and plans to run off about a third of it. The film (Continued on Page 4)

Vic Record Club To Meet Monday

As a special feature of their third meeting this season the Victoria College Record Club are presenting two recordings by members in Victoria College Chapel on Monday at 1:30. The full program consists of Chopin's "Nocturne in F Sharp major" and two Chopin waltzes in E Flat and C Sharp followed by "Finlandia" by Sibelius; the special records wind up the program. They are "Rigaudon" by Macdowell, recorded by Howard Brown, Jr. Music, and "Etude in E Major" by Chopin, recorded by Yvonne McQuown.

The Record Club is an informal group of students interested in hearing good recorded music. Last term they started holding meetings each Monday noon in Victoria College Chapel. Early technical difficulties were experienced, but now the club has secured excellent electrical equipment to replace the acoustical machine used last term.

All students interested in good recorded music will be welcome in Victoria Chapel on Mondays from 1:30 to 2:00.

No Spitfires Just Now

In these columns early last December the suggestion was printed that Canadian university students unite together to raise a fund for the purchase of a Spitfire fighting plane for Britain. The proposal was called forth here by the feeling in several other universities that, although Canadian students were supporting the war effort to the hilt in a variety of ways, moral and material, nevertheless it was all on a disorganized, or at any rate locally organized, scale. It was felt that some concrete contribution to the war should be made from Canadian university students as a body.

A survey of Canadian universities was made by the McGill Daily operating through the Canadian University Press, and it was eventually decided that the N.F.C.U.S., as the official student body in Canada, should appeal to Ottawa for permission, if all local campus councils expressed their willingness to support the move. Only a few days ago was Ottawa's permission received, for the Christmas holidays interfered with inter-university negotiations. As a result it has been decided, at the University of Toronto at any rate, to let the matter drop for the present year since the term is so far advanced that adequate organization of a campus drive could not be completed in time to ensure success. Other universities may go on with the idea themselves just as several have been doing all year.

While the plan must be dropped for this year due to practical difficulties here, we would like once again to express our opinion that it is one of the soundest ideas that has been proposed, and is worthy of real consideration next year. We would suggest that the S.A.C. next fall work through the N.F.C.U.S. in conjunction with all other universities to put over such a campaign. A local committee should be set up by the S.A.C. to handle the campaign on this campus and to investigate all possible methods of carrying on the drive. By starting at the first of the year and concentrating all financial war efforts into that one single channel, something truly constructive could be achieved. The idea has immense possibilities, granted time and planning.

What's the Next Move?

While the advance of the British forces in North Africa continues to move relentlessly forward, with the capture of Tobruk accomplished there seems to be a feeling of suspense and tension in the rest of the war-world. Europe appears to be waiting for something to happen, and where it will strike one can only guess.

Early this week it was reported that the Axis leader and his stooge held a secret meeting. Purpose of the meeting was in all probability the mapping out of some new strategic campaign to redress the balance in the Mediterranean, a balance which has been disturbed to the great disadvantage of the Axis by the successive defeats suffered by Italian forces. How Hitler will act it is difficult to say. It is rumoured that there will be a great offensive in the spring, but the question is—where will it be launched? There are several possibilities—Italian newspapers say there are three directions in which he could move. Of course, there is the much talked about invasion of Britain as possibility number one. Hitler, however, has been pouring troops down into the Balkans, according to all reports, and it may be that he is trying to divert attention from a surprise attack on the British Isles, or on the other hand it may well be that the Balkans form possibility number two. Turkey is viewing this possibility almost as a probability, for her leaders are linking the moving of German troops to the east with Goebbels' statement several months ago that Germany was preparing to demonstrate to the world a real offensive in which she would do everything of which she was capable. Possibility number three, it is felt by many, is a drive against Gibraltar. Should such a drive succeed, Axis control of the Mediterranean and North Africa would almost certainly be consolidated, and its military and psychological effect would be powerful.

So speculation was rife throughout the world this week as to what Hitler would do. But Londoners almost forgot to follow the course of the war in far-off places as they concentrated their attention on the debates upon President Roosevelt's lend-lease bill in Washington. The outcome of those debates may provide the weapon which will bring to naught all Hitler's present and future campaigns.

Sweden is Ready

While recent events in the world conflagration have turned all eyes to the Mediterranean and its surrounding land areas both in Europe and in Africa, periodic dispatches in the press are a reminder that the threat of war still hangs over the north. There one of the few remaining neutrals, Sweden, with her valuable mine and timber resources, is on the alert for any danger, and is carrying through a huge "building-for-defence" program on the theory that in strength lies her hope of continued freedom.

Swedish opinion realizes that the position of this Scandinavian neutral is actually far more secure than it was in the recent past when Russian armies were spreading to the west. War seemed certain in those days—if she was not to be an actual belligerent, then at least she would become the battleground for the great rival powers. Such a situation did not come to pass, much to the relief of Sweden, nor did the Nazi machine roll into Swedish territory when it made its northward drive last year.

But although the present situation is far less desperate, Swedish leaders and their people feel that the future will be fraught with many dangers. Therefore further defensive preparations are the order of the day. Early this week a new government defence loan of 500,000,000 kronor was announced. This new "loan for defence and labor" will bring the total defence expenditures for the current fiscal year to 2,400,000,000 kronor, a huge increase over the 148,000,000 kronor expenditure in 1938. Free Sweden is ready to defend her freedom with action.

ART-MUSIC Drama

Turning Back the Clock

Viols and Clavichord

Members of Hart House who were present last year at the concert played on the Hart House viols will undoubtedly come to this afternoon's recital. It is a rare opportunity to hear what string music was like in the beginning, played on the instruments of the time. Captain Goff, Aide-de-camp to the Governor General, has a hobby of building and playing clavichords. This ancient precursor of the piano has to be seen and heard to be appreciated. It has the "tiniest" tone of all keyboard instruments. Viols depended for their strength, against the string tension, on heavy flat backs (like that of string bass) rather than on the arch of the violin family. Their tone, consequently, is much less vibrant and alive than that of the modern violin. The fingerboard of the time was fretted and position work was made intensely difficult. The Viola da gamba had six strings instead of the corresponding 'cello's four. It takes long and patient practice to learn to play such

Beer is Best

This is the story of Wolfgang, the strongest man in the world.

When Wolfgang was a little boy in Vunderland, he always ate two bowls of Shredded Barley (that wonderful new breakfast food, irradiated with Vitamin B16) and a pound of limburger cheese for breakfast. After that Wolfgang would truck on down to the corner drug store and demolish forty beers.

When Wolfgang was sixteen he was so strong that the skunk in the zoo would hang his head in shame whenever Wolfgang passed.

When Wolfgang was eighteen he was so strong that people five miles away could recognize him.

"That smells like Wolfgang," they would say, "he must be the strongest man in the whole wide world."

"I'm just wasting my talents in Vunderland," said Wolfgang to himself one day. "I shall go to America to seek my fortune."

So Wolfgang ran away to America to seek his fortune. While going over on the boat he continued to have two bowls of Shredded Barley, a pound of limburger cheese and forty beers for breakfast. He was so strong that the Captain of the ship issued gas masks to everyone on the ship, and the steward used five gallons of O4-O-No in disinfecting Wolfgang's room every morning.

When Wolfgang got to America he was an overnight success. He got a job endorsing Krafty-Krunch Limburger Cheese. Wolfgang really didn't like Krafty-Krunch but he got paid two hundred dollars a week for saying he did, so he said he did. He also endorsed Babatt's Bottled Beer. Wolfgang really didn't like Babatt's Bottled Beer but he got paid two hundred dollars a week for saying he did so he said he did.

The armament manufacturers paid Wolfgang five thousand dollars a week just for travelling all over the country. Wolfgang was so strong that the sale of gas masks jumped five thousand per cent wherever he went. Millions of people had Smeller's Sweepstakes to see who could get the closest to Wolfgang without collapsing. The record was 359' 9 3/4" held by a man with hay fever.

But fame changed Wolfgang. No longer would he have Shredded Barley, limburger cheese, and beer for breakfast. Wolfgang turned highbrow and began to have lobster consommé, roquefort cheese and champagne for breakfast. Without realizing it Wolfgang was losing his strength.

One night Wolfgang was supposed to appear at the World's Championship Smeller's Sweepstakes. Smellers from all over the world were coming to try and break the record of 359' 9 3/4". Wolfgang was going to be paid $25,000 for letting them sniff at him.

But alas and alackcombrack, the lobster consommé, the roquefort cheese and the champagne were beginning to tell on him. Each and every contestant walked right up to Wolfgang and shook him by the hand. The audience yelped with delight and throwing off their gas masks rushed at Wolfgang. He wasn't as strong as they were.

Wolfgang was ruined; he was no longer the strongest man in the world. His body was discovered in the East River next morning.

Poor Wolfgang!

Powerful Third Period Molar-men Drive Upsets Junior Engineers After Scoreless First Stanza

Turning on a powerful third period drive which netted three goals Dents' hockey team upset the fast stepping Jr. School sextet 4-1 at the Arena yesterday afternoon.

The teams played through a scoreless first period and then a lad by the name of McGee went on the rampage.

This student of molar extraction set up a lovely pass in front of the Engineer goal and Douglas banged the puck into the mesh. Moments later McGee again slipped a pass to Castaldi for a second counter. Dickie then made a solo dash which ended in a third goal for the Dentists. Then McGee, by himself, dented the twine.

Jr. S.P.S.: Pennoyer, Grosskurth, Dickie, Douglas, McLaughlin, Spence, Seymour, Hamilton, Roland.
Dents: Wright, Hamilton, Sibbold, Chinnell, Crouch, Fitzgerald, Bigelow, Beigman, McKee, Castaldi.

Graham Nets Five Out of Six Presbyterian Goals to Single-Handedly Rout Royal College Boys

A Presbyterian laddie, Graham by name, set the interfaculty hockey league afire yesterday afternoon as he single-handedly downed U.C. III at the Arena. His team, Knox B, defeated the Royal College boys 6-3, and Graham scored five of those six goals.

The winners pursued home five counters in the opening period to take an insurmountable lead. U.C. scored two in the first session.

Each squad added a single in the second period to complete the scoring.

Vance picked up the sixth goal for Knox. For the Red and White Duncan, Somers and Rowat counted a goal each.

Knox B: Evans, Rogers, Graham, Hamilton, Hoop, Vance, MacSween, Gillis, Mills, Barr.

U.C. III: Skinner, Duncan, Loffmark, Stokhallo, Bailey, Kelter, Somers, Mieczko, Rowat.

ROUND THE TRACK

By Ed Nickerson

This year's Indoor Intramural Track Meet which gets under way at Hart House this afternoon promises to be even bigger and better than previously. There is no dearth of new talent — as evidenced by the large turnouts of beginners — while the stand-bys have been turning out regularly, all of which causes the usually genial track coach, Hec Phillips, to wear an even broader smile.

What especially pleases Hec is the large number of new men who have been turning out for coaching under the capable mentor's direction. "That's what we really want. I have been working on this in the hope that intercollegiate athletics may come back," he said yesterday.

The coach continued—"I hear today from Wally Brown that O.C.E. plans to place men in every event." If such a small faculty can do it, so should every other faculty.

There is one very important point which Hec would like to clarify. He wants quantity, not quality. He doesn't mind if you've never had any experience — turn out anyway — he guarantees you'll be a better runner once he gets an opportunity to teach you a few of the finer points of running.

MEDS, KNOX HOOPERS GET IN WIN COLUMN

Knox A Basketeers Stay at Top of Its Group; Doctors Win by Handy Margin in Fast Game

VIC, TRINITY LOSE

Knox A stayed at the top of its basketball group as it made an early lead last out to the final whistle in a game with Trinity A last night which ended with the Presbyterians leading 46-34.

It was a good, fast game all the way, with both squads turning on every bit of pressure. Knox had a nice passing attack, with Ormie Weir starting lots of plays which clicked for baskets. The Red and Black were playing their first game of the season and their passes often went wide of the mark. The Anglicans' best scoring bet was a system of running-passes, with the last man shooting while still travelling at top speed.

John Riley went on a scoring rampage in an effort to cut down the Presbyterian lead, scoring 20 points of his team's total. Ken Morrison and Bill Moorhead were valuable men on the Knox roster the latter showing a consistent performance with eight points in each frame.

In the second period Knox were outscored 24-20 by the pressing Anglicans, but their supremacy was not seriously threatened.

A powerful first period scoring drive gave Meds III a 38-20 win over Vic III in a thrilling cage tilt yesterday. The Victorians were unable to pierce the tight Meds defence consistently.

Baker was the only bright spot in the game for the Scarlet and Gold as he ran up a total of fifteen points.

McClure and Kahan led the scorers for the Doctors scoring 11 and 8 points.

IRISH GIRLS MAKE HISTORY BY TYING MEDS AT 1-1

History was made last evening at Trinity rink when St. Mike's girls' hockey team battled Meds to a 1-1 overtime tie. No person present could recall when St. Mike's had previously tied a game least of all won one. But the seemingly impossible happened and it left Coach Bill Quigley speechless and in an utter state of exhaustion.

For Meds Lillian Karmalska and Marg Mulvey played stand-out games while Peggy O'Brien, Florence Cooper and Rita O'Donnell starred for the Irish.

SCHOOL V. VIC, S.P.S. IV WIN BASKET GAMES

Sons of Toike Oike Continue Winning Ways; Scarlet and Gold Easy Victors in Hart House

ST. MIKE'S, MEDS LOSE

The S.P.S. V hoopsters handily doubled the score on the St. Mike's E crew in the tea-time tussle in the Upper Gym yesterday, finishing on the winning end of a 22-11 score.

The scoring chores were well divided among the Engineers, Hibbard and Hudson being the top snipers, each with two baskets and a foul shot to his credit.

The Double Blue were slow in finding the hoop, and were outscored 16-6 in the first frame. Then Jack Ronayne and O'Reilly scored three and two points respectively while their teammates were holding the Schoolmen to three baskets.

The Jr. Vic cage crew won their first game in two starts by defeating Jr. Meds 33-19 in a fast moving scramble ball tilt. The Scarlet and Gold squad showed considerably more polish under the basket than did the Doctors.

The Victorians picked up an early lead and were on top 13-6 at the half. Their attack gained momentum in the home stretch when they outscored the Medics by an even larger margin.

Rod Johnston and "Mac" MacDonald were high scorers for the victorious Victorians, getting four baskets apiece. Shugart, McClelland and Munroe Johnston each got a pair of field goals to add to the Scarlet and Gold total.

Kyle with 8 points, Winbaum with 5 and Bryans with 4 led the Medics.

The Sons of Toike Oike continued their winning ways when their Fourth basketball team downed Meds IV in a ragged cage tilt yesterday.

The Medics were unable to hold the Engineers in the opening frame and were outscored 11-4. The Doctors rallied in the final chukker but failed to whittle down the lead and were on the wrong end of a 29-17 score when the final whistle blew.

Jim Turner went on a scoring spree for the Schoolmen, netting a total of 15 points, while Patterson was close behind with 6.

Max Freedman with four field goals was high scorer for the Surgeons.

Clear the ice everybody—
At last hockey has got underway. For sheer fun and dogged fighting spirit you just can't beat this game. It takes everything you've got and leaves you breathless. Really, fans, you would appreciate it. The rain stopped the games scheduled for Wednesday night, but they're really beginning in earnest now. We appreciate the five spectators at the St. Mike's-Meds game, but really there's lots more room fellows and gals. You should have seen those battling doctors chase that puck around just to rouse the ire of the fighting Irish! They even ignored the puddles that naughtily old rain left on the rink — or was it the way it was flooded? Spills and chills daunted not a spirit on the ice, nor did the lone goals scored on either side disturb the keepers of the cages — not much, anyway. We're really looking forward to a rushing season so come on fans, look forward to it with us, eh what!

Via the Fordham Ram comes news of a recently published book, by a Fordham prof of course, which has a title along these lines—"The Effect of Occluded Hydrogen on the Rigidity of Palladium and the Possibility of the Earth's Core Being Such an Occluding Metal". . . . Well as O'Mara would say—Sure and begorra but THIS SORT OF THING MUST STOP.

*The froggie he am a queer bird.
He ain't got no tail almost hardly.
When he walk, he yump.
When he yump, he sit down
Where he ain't go no tail, almost hardly.*

Culled from Wednesday's Varsity comes this elite exasperation—"MEDS ROUT S.P.S. IN BASKET GAME—SCORE 28-27". . . . seeing that the boys from the Red Schoolhouse have been doing all right in sports lately, maybe they won't take it to heart . . . but all the same IT'S A FINE HOW D'YOU BEEN. . . .

The following is a tobacco advertisement appearing in the Ohioan—
*I could never see why
The plumber is the type
That smokes a cigarette
When he's got so much pipe.*

Then there's the tale of the member of one of the local graduate C.O.T.C. companies who sent a polite note by H.Q. asking him where he had been on those Saturday afternoons last fall when he should have been drilling. As luck would have it, it seems that his wife, using her marital privilege, picked up the letter first and read it. When the Colchian arrived home that night, the conversation went something like this. . . . "You worm, you told me you went to those drills and all the time you were. . . . LET ME SMELL YOUR BREATH." Matters eventually reached such a state that divorce was threatened. However, all is honeycombed now for the company Commander sent home with the cadet a note apologizing for the mistake in attendance.

. . . BUT THAT STILL DIDN'T UNSWELL THE BUMP ON HIS HEAD. . . .

Michael can give his dead fish of the week but I'd give a whole dead cat and two fish-hooks to the Westerner who tells this story. . . . A rookie who, on being asked by the editor, "How did you write up that incident at the ball game where the two peroxide blondes made so much fuss?" replied gaily "Oh, I just said the bleachers went wild". . . . (okay hold your nose).

CORRECTION . . . The Varsity yesterday ran an advertisement for the St. Michael's College Ball. . . . Inadvertently, the nauseous word "brawl" was employed. . . . This was a grave error. . . . It is not going to be a brawl. . . . It's not. . . . Really it isn't. . . .

FOR YOU WHO WORRY OVER EXAMS—

You have two alternatives—your prof is either easy or hard. If he is easy you have nothing to worry about. If he is hard, you have two alternatives—either you study hard or you bluff. If you study hard, you have nothing to worry about. If you bluff, you have two alternatives—either your bluff works or it doesn't. If it works, you have nothing to worry about. If it doesn't, you have two alternatives, either you are conditioned or you flunk. If you flunk, you won't have to worry any longer. . . . SO WHY WORRY?

PICTURE . . . Near the back in a Psychology lecture, a Pass Arts student is trying peacefully to read his Varsity. He's finding it pretty hard for his nose keeps taking itching spells and each time it does the Pass Arts student has to rub his sniffer in order to unitch it. Finally a co-ed sitting next to him bursts out giggling, then goes on with her knitting. Again the snazzola itches but this time the callous co-ed leans over and says "If my Angora wool is bothering you, I'll put it away." . . . FADEOUT.

Vic Parliament President Repudiates Alleged Quote

Morris Hay Denies All Connection with Statement Given Varsity by Parliament Propaganda Minister

REGRETS PUBLICATION

A denial of the statement attributed to him in The Varsity Friday morning was issued yesterday by Morris Hay, president of the Victoria College Debating Society. The statement accused Ted Gray, V.C.U. president, of "tyranny" in allowing himself to be appointed a "representative of Victoria College for a debating team to tour the U.S.A." "Accusations of Ted Gray," said Hay, "which were put into my mouth were most unjust, and while I cannot accept responsibility for them, I must regret that they were published. There may be differences within the college as to the policy of the V.C.U., but there has never been any doubt that Mr. Gray personally enjoys the confidence of his fellow students."

by h. d. h.

After a lapse of almost two months, this column of military gossip again returns to take up its rather improbable task of trying to reflect humour from the ranks of student soldiers. What became of "halt"? Perhaps it was the fall in temperature, which seemed to pull down the high spirits of the trainees with it. Maybe the drill became a little too cloying in its time-demanding routine... or possibly the liaison men decided to call a halt to "halt!" At any rate, it ceased to function, and now returns, by common consent if not by popular demand...

And we lead off with something that happened to some C.O.T.C. people... It happened at roll call, and there came a pause in the steady line of "sir!" and "present!" that whipped back out of the line as the names were called. People began calling for one individual who wasn't there and hadn't whipped out a "sir!" for a long time.

"Anybody heard of this guy?" the officer asked. Just then a superior officer peered over his shoulder.

Ancient History of University Featured at "Varsity Night"

Pictures of Varsity from the good old days when the front campus was a barley field were shown last night at "Varsity Night," sponsored by the Youth Forum of Timothy Eaton Memorial Church. The Youth Forum is a group of young men, many of them undergraduates, who meet bi-monthly to discuss essential questions of the day. There were other pictures of old Varsity, showing a picket fence at College and Yonge streets, military drill in which horses were used, and the old Hart House pond where once a class

Valentine's Day Is Vic At-Home

Cupid, Commodores, and Bob Quartet Feature Annual Dance to be Held at Arcadian Court

GRADS MEET UNDERGRADS

Dan Cupid and the V.C.U. team together this year to bring romance and sweet music to the grads and undergrads of dear old Vic as its annual at-home comes round on the fourteenth of February.

The band of the evening, the Commodores, answer to the downbeat of one of this country's outstanding saxophonists in the style of the juke box king, Glenn Miller. This band is one which is on its way to the top and has proven itself at innumerable engagements in the city and throughout the province. For a season they were favourites at the Brant Inn.

Vic's annual event-of-events is to be staged in the warm and intimate atmosphere of Simpson's Arcadian Court. The colour-scheme will naturally be the scarlet and gold of the college and will range all the way from the programs to the ice-cream and cake.

After the sit-down supper, the floor show will feature the home talent of the Bob Quartette which yearly gains more favour. As in times previously, the quartet will attempt, in its own subtle manner, to shame and embarrass the better known members of the undergraduates and alumni. Since last appearing, the Bob Quartette has undergone a few changes, and now promises to bring out something entirely different from anything it has done before.

MEDIEVAL INSTITUTE ANNOUNCES LECTURE

"At a time when there is a need for a revival of the ideals and principles of a more peaceful culture, the Medieval Institute brings Dr. E. K. Rand of the Latin department of Harvard to lecture in Toronto." Rev. G. B. Phelan, president of the Pontifical Institute of Medieval Studies, said Saturday.

Professor Rand, he said, is an eminent authority on the classics and on Dante, and he will lecture first on "Virgil and Dante" on Monday, and on "The Romantic approach to Medieval Literature."

"Is the ideal of education for everybody the correct ideal?" was a question raised by Principal Wallace of University College, who was the guest of Rev. David MacLennan, minister of Timothy Eaton Church. President Cody was to have been present, but was unable to attend because of illness.

Five performers of the recent Vic production San Toy sang a few of their songs, including The Man in the Moon, and the hit, Twentieth Century Days.

R.C.I. Speech By McIlwraith

"Man's Attitude Towards Nature," Address by Anthropology Professor to Royal Canadian Institute

INVENTIONS CITED

"It is not racial superiority, but mental control that has made us civilized while some other peoples have remained barbarian," Prof. T. F. McIlwraith of the department of Anthropology, said Saturday evening in the Royal Canadian Institute at Convocation Hall.

Speaking on the attitude of man towards nature through the ages, Prof. McIlwraith said that man in our civilization has chosen to make quicker use of the inventions of the minds that have gone before him than have such people as the Australian aborigines.

"Our attitude to nature," he said, "has been that of control, arrogant control. That of the savage is of awe. The Indian worships the spirit of the waterfall, and he believes the pine tree has a soul."

Arthur Zehnwert, I, U.C., Is Refugee from Poland

Narrowly Missed German Invasion through Attendance at University of Manchester to Perfect English

FAMILY SAFE

Having escaped the German-Russian invasion of his native land by the merest margin, Arthur Zehnwert of first year University College is now safe in Canada and able to continue his education.

Arthur had been intending to come to Varsity anyway, but had he returned to Poland a week or two before he meant to, he might never have seen this country.

After completing his high school education, young Zehnwert, son of a Polish industrialist, enrolled in the University of Manchester in order to perfect his English before coming to Canada. The basics of the language he had learned at home in Cracow along with a speaking knowledge of German and French.

At the very time when he was planning to return home for his trunk and belongings in preparation for his voyage westward, the Nazis were crossing the border into his fatherland. Up until the last minute, people at home had been believing that further troubles could be averted. In fact, on August 31 Arthur had been speaking from London to his father in Cracow, who assured him that everything would be all right.

It was the next morning that Hitler's horde swarmed over the border without warning and mercilessly bombed all of the principal towns.

Within three days they had traversed the seventy-five miles to Cracow and had occupied Arthur's native city.

Through it all, the Zehnwert family, father, mother, sister and brother, escaped to Roumania. On the way to the border they were following a carload of friends; as the Buick in front of them emerged from a forest they were passing through, a Nazi plane spotted it, and dived to deal death to its passengers.

While Arthur's family halted in the protection of the trees, three times, the Nazis swooped down on its racing target, and the last time left not even a relic of what had been an automobile and a family of nine.

Today, the family is in Egypt thanks to the kindness of an English bishop (Continued on Page 4)

Corry Speaks On Federalism

Visiting Professor Lectures in Friday Afternoon Series Sponsored by Department of Political Economy

"THE FEDERAL DILEMMA"

"The provincial leaders have the best of reasons for crashing the federal arena," stated Prof. J. A. Corry of Queen's University in his lecture on "The Federal Dilemma," second in the Friday afternoon series sponsored by the department of political economy. "Entanglement of federal and provincial politics is an unprecedented feature of recent Canadian history. Provincial and federal affairs have become so entangled that they cannot be separated."

Interdependence, according to Professor Corry, attacks independence but independent small states are weak. Centralization, in spite of its drawbacks, leads to strength.

"However if centralization is pushed too far," the speaker explained, "it is likely to break down of its own weight. (Continued on Page 4)

New Acta Better, Lacks Padding

By Michael O'Mara

The January issue of Acta Victoriana, undergraduate publication of Victoria College, appeared last week.

The magazine is thinner than its predecessors; thus it suffers much less from the fault of padding so prevalent in most campus publications. Although the individual efforts are no better than the highlights of previous issues, the lack of page-padding raises the quality of the whole.

Best things in this Acta are two serious articles, "French Canada: A Historian's Approach" by Harold Nelson presents a case for the habitant which is interesting and provocative. "War Finance in England" by Rolly Ellison is perhaps a bit on the heavy side for a college magazine, but reveals a thorough knowledge of his topic, combined with an idea or two. Both are well worth reading.

Outstanding poem is Rigmor Christopherson's "Love Your Neighbours", a short and telling bit of bitterness. Miss Christopherson is a sophomore who has now definitely arrived as one of the best young writers on the campus.

A piece of verse that will raise more discussion is "Vintages" by the coyly semi-anonymous B. It is not original, nor is it terribly funny throughout. (Continued on Page 4)

UNIVERSITY FROLIC ROCKS ATHLETIC WING

By W. B. T. Sniely

"There was a sound of revelry by night," and all the feminine beauty and masculine charm of the university was gathered there.

The time was last Saturday night, the place—Hart House, the occasion—the celebration of the return of that exceedingly popular institution, the University Night.

The evening began with a slight evidence of stiffness and formality, but this soon dissolved in the genial warmth which the very walls of the building seemed to diffuse. Co-eds and boys-friends soon forgot that they were strictly or dignified and began to act more like a bunch of college kids out to have a good time.

Whether they were looking down on the threshing, splashing water-polo players, each of whom was doing his

Former Assistant Women's Editor, Now at Columbia, Wins Scholarship of Women's Press Club of New York

VICTORIA GRAD

Lois B. Bradley, former assistant women's editor of The Varsity, has been awarded the 1941 scholarship of the Women's Press Club of New York City, according to an announcement from Columbia University.

The scholarship, which has been given annually since 1920 to a woman student of the Columbia School of Journalism who resides in the metropolitan area, is of the value of $175.00.

Born in St. Catharines, Ont., Miss Bradley lived in Toronto for some years, attending Victoria College, from which she graduated last spring. She now resides in Mount Kisco, N.Y.

She joined the staff of The Varsity in 1937 and was promoted to the office of assistant women's editor in the following year. This year she has contributed articles from New York, dealing with features of American student life.

Players' Guild Calls for Actors

"Men in large quantities are the principal ingredient required for tomorrow night's casting," stated the University College Players' Guild executive, in reference to the meeting which will be held tomorrow night in the theatre of the Women's Union.

The purpose of the meeting is the casting of three plays, one of which is to be performed at the University Drama Committee Theatre Night, in about three weeks. The play selected is "Waiting for Lefty," by Clifford Odets, to be directed by Vincent Blockley. "The leading characters in the play are two men and two women," stated the director, "and most of the other roles are masculine."

"On the other hand," they added, "women members of the Guild are also encouraged to come to the casting, both because there are parts for them, though not so many, and because they will be needed to look after makeup, sets and costumes."

BIOLOGY ASSISTANT

Vacancies for the posts of Laboratory Assistant and Senior Research Assistant (Biochemist) have been announced by the Division of Biology and Agriculture of the National Research Council. Application forms for these posts are available at the Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall, where information may also be obtained.

SUNDAY CONCERT

Margaret Parsons, pianist, will be guest artist at the Sunday Evening Concert on 2nd February next at 9 p.m. in the Great Hall, Hart House. Representatives of the various colleges and faculties are requested to call at the Warden's office between 1 and 6 p.m. today (Monday 27th January) for their allotments of tickets. Every member is urged if he and she cannot use his ticket to return it to the hall porter's desk if at all possible before 1 p.m. on Thursday 30th January.

Flowers Tabooed At Meds Dance

Mildred Morley, "Personality Girl," Mart Kenney's Orchestra, Carr Brothers Features of At-Home

PIRATE PINS

Mart Kenney's well-known orchestra and a triple-barrelled professional imported floor show will feature the Meds At-Home in the Royal York this coming Friday night.

Among the stars of the show will be Mildred Morley, "the Original Personality Girl," of "Chez Maurice" fame in Montreal. Also there are the Carr Brothers, the "Goody Gobs" formerly of the Ringling Barnum Circus, of whom the promoters say, "Their antics leave nothing to be desired." Third in the list are Billy and Kay Arnott, originators of "I wouldn't fool you for the world."

Mart Kenney's orchestra is reputed to be very good, having played last Friday for a big dance at Queen's.

Corsages are positively not to be worn. Instead skull and cross-bones pins are to be bought for the girls, the proceeds being devoted to war charities.

TRINITY CONVERSAZIONE FEATURES BLACKOUT DANCE

Trinity College turned out in force on Friday evening to make its annual "Conversa" one of the best in years. The 400 odd dancers filled but did not crowd the floor of Simpson's Arcadian Court as they whirled merrily to the strains of Stanley St. John's orchestra. During the Blackout dance which was the highlight of the evening and which, incidentally, has now become part of Trinity tradition, bombs exploded, sirens (both mechanical and otherwise) screamed, and searchlights combed the hall in a most realistic and fearsome way.

Those games requiring more skill than brawls such as ping-pong, quoits, and darts proved very popular as escorts endeavoured to show their ladies that they were not complete dubs in the field of sport. Equally popular were the movies, of special interest to skiers.

Highlight of the evening for many was the dancing which concluded festivities. To a selection of the latest records, the light was tripped fantastically, and even gracefully, in some cases. A special feature of the dancing was the presentation by the committee to Mildred Hoskin and Harold Brown, who were chosen as the "Blue Ribbon" couple. As we understand it, a "Blue Ribbon" couple will be selected by the committee each week, as that couple representing best the whole idea of University Night.

Goebbels and Dictator

We do not profess acquaintance with the internal functionings of the Victoria College Union whose so-called "failure to represent student opinion" is under debate this evening. We are, however, well acquainted with the personality, character and ability of the two elected heads of Vic student government, and we fail to see the possibility of truth in the charges—providing the students do have any opinions to represent.

We have no further comment to make on the subject of the debate. But in the course of publicizing that event, what appears to be a deliberate misrepresentation was made by the president of the Debating Parliament. The statement attributed to him was: "The action of 'Dictator' Gray allowing himself to be appointed a representative of Victoria College for a debating team to tour the U.S.A. is only one example of V.C.U. tyranny."

The president of the Debating Parliament has denied making the statement. In this he is technically correct. But it is impossible for him to say "I cannot accept responsibility for them." (The accusations against Gray.) The whole story was given a reporter for The Varsity by the Minister for Propaganda of the Debating Parliament, and according to all custom must be accepted as representing the sentiments of the president under whom the propagandist serves. All newspapers follow that procedure, for most public men have press agents or publicity men to draft their press statements. In this case, when asked to whom the statements might be attributed, the Propaganda Minister replied that they could all be written as coming from the president. Therefore Mr. Hay's denial of the statement, while technically correct, is invalid under scrutiny. Furthermore, it is a known fact that similar statements have been expressed by him previously.

If the other "examples" of V.C.U. tyranny are as weak as this one, then there can be little evidence of tyranny in that organization. The statement is false, and shows an amazing lack of factual knowledge for the members of a debating society executive. Ted Gray was a member of the debating team which last fall toured the central United States, but he represented the University of Toronto and not Victoria College. Mr. Gray was chosen by the Student's Council (through whose efforts the trip was made possible) for his debating ability and his general knowledge of and interest in university activities; not because he was president of the V.C.U. or even because he came from Victoria. Similarly if the president of the Debating Parliament had in some way been chosen, it would have been for his qualifications; he would not be the representative of the Victoria Debating Parliament nor of Victoria College.

Victoria students should be happy that they have a president with sufficient ability to be chosen to go on such a tour by the representatives of the other colleges and faculties. And a certain group of Vic debaters should learn that, although facts are needed to support a point and often have to be hunted for with diligence, at least the facts should be true and not figments of the imagination.

Let's Drop The Matter

It would be very sensible and very pleasant all round if the Board of Governors would forget about Professor Underhill who seems to be able to mind his own business very well, and has been doing so for a long time—long before he was misquoted on an excellent speech delivered last summer at a Y.M.C.A. conference.

After the whole matter, raised several weeks ago, had died down the chairman of the Board last week clinched the issue by stating in the downtown press that the Board has "no intention of dismissing Professor Frank Underhill for any statement he is alleged to have made at the Lake Couchiching conference last summer." That speech is a dead issue "as far as they are concerned." That is the correct and only attitude to take, and we are glad to see that the Board is dismissing the issue. The tone taken however sounds a bit like—we won't fire him for that, but... If the Board has any intention of seeking his dismissal over any other issue, we hope they realize they would make the University of Toronto the laughing stock of the hemisphere, and that everyone would see through the veil.

The rather chairman's press statement closed with a boarder unfair thrust. "In my opinion, and I think I speak for the board, Professor Underhill would be better advised to devote his time and thought to the teaching of history and to cease encouraging the notion that he is being made a martyr." The professor in question is devoting all his time and thought to the teaching of history as anyone who is in daily contact with the university realizes. Furthermore he is not, nor has he been, posing as a martyr. Presented with an invitation to resign since it was "felt" his association with the university must be severed (even though the board denies this) and given no opportunity to present his side, he refused to resign. That is not acting the martyr; it is using common sense when one's career is threatened. The whole university hopes that the last of the whole affair has been heard, and it is confident that President Cody shares this sentiment. May the Board join too.

Britain's Churchill

Rarely in Britain's long and storied history has one personality come to represent so completely the spirit and soul of the nation as has her present leader Winston Churchill. It is as though the spirit and soul of the race has come to life in that dogged, grim, yet ever-cheerful figure upon whom the eyes of a nation, an empire, and a world are centred.

Soldier, correspondent, statesman, author, born of a family of great men, the stormy petrel of English politics needed two wars to bring him to his present position. Crises were made for Churchill. In the first war he rose to a position of leadership through his ability for action. There were mistakes which brought him temporary discredit; but they also brought him knowledge. The progress of the new war brought him inevitably into the foreground.

England needed a strong man, a forceful leader who would lead that the people might follow. Churchill was the man for England and England found him in the hour of her greatest need. Determined and dogged above all else, he leads on with an empire rallied around him and a world watching. His words, phrased in the glowing prose that springs from the great well of English literature, catch the imagination of every reader; his voice, harsh and strong yet rich, holds every listener; his face, round, grim, with jutting chin and black cigar, attracts every eye. With Churchill at the helm, no one can doubt but that Britain and our way of life will triumph providing the effort which he inspires is constantly forthcoming from the peoples of the Empire.

ARLE MUSIC

Looking Backward

Friday Afternoon Recital

Music of several centuries ago was played and sung in Hart House last Friday afternoon. It was not dressed up in the guise of modern instrumentation, but was performed just as it would have been at the time of its composition, and in the appropriate surroundings to complete the old-world atmosphere. Three of the instruments used were the Hart House viols, played by Leo Smith, Cecil Figelski, and Harold Sunberg. A group of Honour Music students sang the vocal parts.

Enough has been said and written about these instruments, the predecessors of modern strings. Leo Smith, who arranged the program, wisely chose to complete the quartet with a solo voice. Especially in the second and third numbers the soloist's voice blended exquisitely with the strings. These were from the fourteenth century—Little Peggy Ramsay

COTC STORM TOWER IN DAWN ATTACK

Effect Landing from S.S. Bremen to Rescue Damsel Imprisoned in Hart House Memorial Tower

HOT WATER BARRAGE

Just after dawn today, under cover of a heavy mist arising from the Hart House pool, three contingents of the C.O.T.C. landed from the S.S. Bremen. The landing was carried out quietly, in fact they did not even awake any of the attendants.

Grim faced, these men took leave of the ship, and search parties were organized to find food for breakfast. Great Hall was silent. But not for long for word was flashed that supplies could be found in the ice box. Shortly after officers and men sat down to a substantial breakfast of hard tack and vodka.

News of a horrible Nasti outrage had incensed the Department of National Defence. A beautiful lady, whose name has been withheld had been imprisoned in Hart House tower. Hence the determined gathering who were pledged to rescue the fair maiden in distress at all costs.

Plans had been deeply laid to assault the tower. Toward 9000 hrs. a coy. was dispatched to storm the gateway; at 2615 B Coy. was to follow up in a second wave, to be followed every 15 mins. by additional attacks.

The first party advanced, to be scattered by hot water thrown from above. If there was anything in the world to disperse the C.O.T.C., it was hot water, with soap in it. At 2616 hrs. B Coy., equipped with raincoats successfully stormed the tower, and the leaders left up the winding stairs with bayonets poised for action. But all was silent, save for a lone charwoman who had been washing the bells, and had thrown some water out of the tower on the heads of Coy. A.

Men hurriedly searched the tower fearing the return of the Nastis who had probably been out late to the Casino. However, no trace of the lady in distress was found. This did not disturb two doughty privates who hauled forth an ancient palsied wreck for questioning. It was none other than Ebenezer, the hermit who had lived in the tower for centuries.

In halting words Ebenezer declared that the boys were late, for they had missed the lady by centuries. It appears from subsequent information that the dame's name was Shallott, and she had not been imprisoned in that tower at all, but in some pile or other near Camelot. Department of Defense attributed the false information to fifth columnists and one official stated that, this sort of thing must stop.

Correspondence

To the Editor of the Varsity.

Dear Sir:

Once again lack of knowledge has created an unfortunate impression which seems utterly ridiculous in the light of fact. Friday's issue of the Varsity contained an article concerning the forthcoming Victoria College debate. Though the topic may be of only local interest the invalid statement made reflects ignorance in a matter which is by no means sectional, but campus-wide.

"The action of 'Dictator' Gray allowing himself to be appointed a representative of Victoria College for a debating team to tour the U.S.A. is only one example of V.C.U. tyranny." Such a statement is a reflection on the intelligence of a university student who has been placed in a position of responsibility in the Debating Parliament of Victoria College.

The selection of the debating team was made by the Students' Adminis-

Will Hays must have had his eyes shut on this one. "This Thing Called Love" is a fairly bright repetition of the screwball marriage thing but with much more spice than usual. DENTISTS DOWN TEACHERS
IN BASKETBALL BATTLE

In a basketball encounter on Saturday at noon, Dent's C downed O.C.E.'s B team 26-16. The game was played in the upper gym and thus it was a five-a-side game.

Star of the game was Samuels who rattled in 14 points for the Molarmen and almost equalled the total scored by the whole Teacher team. Rudill got 8, and Channell sunk 6 points to increase the Dent's winning margin. Best man for the Teachers was Shapiro who garnered 7 points.

Dents C: Chapnick, Goldberg 1, Turek 5, Beatty 2, Samuels 14, Channell 6, Rudill 8, Milten, Lipman 4.
O.C.E. B: King 1, Settipan 5, Shapiro 7, Swanick 1, Thompson, Scantland, Molyneux, Hunt 1, Hurtubill 1.

DENTS DOWN DRUGGISTS
IN SATURDAY SATURNALIA

Dents A hoopers ran wild against Pharmacy A to sink the Druggists 51-21 in a one-sided cage tilt Friday afternoon in Hart House's Upper Gym.

The Molarmen were checked closely by the Pestle-Pounders in the first chucker but managed to take a 14-8 lead by half-time. In the final half Hambley barged through the Druggists' defence with almost mechanical regularity while Humenick, Mullett and Andrews all piled up imposing totals. Bill Hambley sank seven field goals to lead the Toothtuggers' onslaught. Humenick got ten points, Mullett and Andrews eight apiece.

Litchen and Pulham with six points apiece shared scoring honours for the Druggists while Levine was close behind with four.

ROUND

By Dave MacIntosh

Ged Clawson nipped Lloyd Delaney at the tape to take the half mile jaunt, feature event on Friday night as the Interfaculty Indoor Track Meet weighed anchor. His time was 2' 8.4". Delaney, Trinity's ace distance man, snatched the lead at the gun while Tom Barnett slipped into second position. Clawson took up third on the inside and Gord Lorimer, School freshman, stayed with the leaders in fourth spot. The first four kept those positions until well into the third lap when Barnett dropped back to fourth and Clawson perched on Delaney's heels. Ged ran a heady race, waited till the last bend before pulling ahead. But Lloyd didn't lay down and it was nip and tuck up the lineum path in the most thrilling photo finish to be witnessed on the indoor bowl in many a day. Gord Lorimer arrived third and Barnett placed fourth. Bob Delaney of Meds was forced to cancel his entry because of a bad knee.

In the novice 880 Dick Sully of Vic scampered home in front of a 17-man field in the fast time of 2' 15". He was followed by a fellow-Victorian, George Lewis. Rosie Scantland of O.C.E. placed third and McDougall of U.C. fourth.

Gerry Proderick, Vic's representative in interfaculty and intercollegiate sprint circles, galloped 50 yards in 5.9 seconds to win the other Friday afternoon event from 13 other competitors. He edged the Brown Twins, Hal and Wally, who chalked up the same time, an even six seconds. Tippetts of Trinity copped fourth honours with a 6.07 seconds effort.

The next two events on the Indoor Meet card, the 100 yards and the two-mile relay (4 men) will be run on Tuesday night at five o'clock.

DENTS WIN MORAL VICTORY AS VOLLEYBALL TILT TIES
Dents A volleyballers, interfaculty champions and holders of the Victoria Staff Cup, won a moral victory over Trinity in a thrilling net match played in the Upper Gym during the Saturday night fun fiesta at Hart House.

The game started late, and in order that the other events might continue according to schedule, was terminated when the teams were tied 7-7. The Dentists won the first game 15-10, however.

Jack Mullett and Ollie Brett continued the fine spirit they displayed in winning the intramural championship with Smythe and Schneider doing the setting up.

The Red and Black were aided and abetted by Art Hamilton from Emmanuel A who were runners-up in the play-downs for the Victoria Staff Cup. Cowan and Tseng played their usual fine game for Trinity.

U.C. WOMEN'S HOCKEY—
Game with Vic I tonight, 6-7 p.m. on Vic rink. Be ready to go on the ice at 6 p.m. sharp. Anyone interested in trying out for the team come on, and especially the following: Betty Mortimer, Ada Smith, Joan Carter, Betty Verity, Phyllis Hall, Joany Watt, Reva Brownwell, Margaret Abbott, Yvonne Day. Be sure and leave eligibility slips with Dr. Davey before the game.

EVENING BASKETBALL SEES OCE, UC WIN

O.C.E.—47, OENTS—21

O.C.E.'s A basketball team gave another demonstration of why they are favoured to win the interfaculty title, by running Dents into the floor by a score of 47-21 in an Upper Gym University Night feature.

The Teachers chalked up their third straight victory without much difficulty in the four-man contest, as they showed slight but definite superiority in every branch of play. The game was lightning fast and both teams showed themselves adept in the basket-popping art. The O.C.E. squad put on an exceptional display of skillful and even miraculous shooting as they scored remarkable baskets from seemingly impossible angles. Their speed and combination play was a revelation.

Although Dents were beaten decisively, they were far from disheartened as they fought back savagely against the fleet and polished Teachers. They gave a creditable performance in the face of great odds in size and experience.

The four starting men of the O.C.E. team led the way to victory in a very sure and convincing manner. Belchamber and Harold Brown each scored twelve points. Wally Brown and Charley Prince picked up 8 apiece. Wynne subdued very effectively and notched 7 points for himself.

Jack Mullett was the outstanding player on the Dentistry lineup, and led his team with 5 points. Hambley and Brett assisted greatly in the losing effort with 4 points apiece.

U.C.—12, VIC—11

Sr. U.C. edged out Sr. Vic 12-11 in a close, hard fought cage tussle at Hart House Saturday night. The game had been postponed from last Wednesday.

The Royal Collegians took an early lead and were on top 7-4 at the end of the opening stanza. In the final chucker the Scarlet and Gold gradually whittled down the Red and White lead but failed by one point to tie the U.C. squad.

Hugh Bailey was the high scorer of the game with two field goals. The big Victorian was banished from the game for incurring four personal fouls. Joe Dales contributed three points to the Vic cause.

Faber and Jones were high scorers for the Royal College crew, each getting 3 points.

FLYERS PLASTER OCEANS
IN BIG BASEBALL BINGE

Aerial Navigation administered a 6-1 plastering to Meds III baseballers on Saturday afternoon in the big gym as Ronnie Lake only allowed Meds three hits.

The Flyers scored four runs in the first inning, one in the second and one in the third, while holding the Meds to a lone tally in the last of the third. Tuckah with a double and a single and Wisner and VanHuyse each got two singles for the Flyers. Murray and Rotenberg were the best for Meds, each getting a single.

Meds III: Green, Goldenberg, Willinsky, Newman, Herman, Rotenberg, Virtue, Murray, Hamilton.
Aer. Navigation: Wisner, Brown, Tuckah, VanHuyse, McLaurin, Wagner, Price, Greenslade, Lake.

IRISH TIE TEACHERS IN ARENA ENCOUNTER

St. Mike's Comes from Behind to Even Score in Last Few Minutes of Close Game

MAROIS SCORES IN 4-4 TIE

St. Mike's B came from behind to tie O.C.E. 4-4 in Friday's sole intramural hockey offering at the Arena. Marois pulled out the tying counter in the last few minutes after the teams had fought on even terms for the full time.

Egan sent the Irish into an early lead but the Teachers drew even on a goal from Rosie Scantland's stick on a pass from Munro. The Gaels took over again when Mike Mancasz, a lad who hails from Prince Albert, scored on Corkery's relay and Corkery added another with Mancasz drawing the assist.

Not to be outdone the Pedagogues proceeded to knot the count and then pull ahead. Orval Wynne, better known as a basketballer, scored, followed by trackman Wendorf. Pollard handed O.C.E. the margin for the first time with the help of Joe Boddington, brother of last year's intercollegiate player, Art Boddington.

WOMEN'S BOWLING

Team lists and hours for bowling are now posted on the board outside Room 82 U.C. A captain-manager must be appointed for each team. She is responsible for filing the individual scores for her team each week and for collecting the fee from each member at the start of the season. These should be left with the Athletic Secretary as soon as possible.

For information, see Marjorie Schuch, U.C. III, Phyllis Hulse, Vic III or Ruth Puhlow, O.C. I.

U.C. III BASKETBALL

Thirde play today at 5 o'clock in the lower gym. Following note: Bitove, Hunter, Kelner, Brown, Berg, Simpson, Rotenberg, Duncan, Wood, Lichtig, White and "Blond Bomber" Hall.

Victorious Vicites white-vash vanquished Vicsters which all goes to prove what we had said. Vic von — see didn't we said it? — and Vic didn't vin. So what?

Vell, — to start at scratch, 'way back there, Vic I played Vic II in their regular practise hour last Friday night and Vic I came out on top by the decisive score of 9-0, or aren't you convinced? For the losers, Flo Allan in goal did a noble job in spite of the count piled up against her, and she is to be congratulated for not fluttering a white hanky on more than one occasion.

For the winners, Beth Springer and Joan Crawford, last year's intercollegiate basketball star, played consistently good games, ably assisted by Beth Moore, Fran Faulds, Mary Allen and Freda — just Freda. Helen Carefoot, leading light of last year's finalist team, and Doris Sargent, playing on the defense, had little opportunity to show their wares, as play rarely passed the centre-line zone.

This all sounds pretty grim for the I's, but we are reminded that this was the first game ever played by a great majority of the team, and with this experience and a little more practice under their belts, we are expecting no end of surprises in their future games.

Tonight at 6, Vic I are called to meet U.C. at the Little Vic rink and we guarantee this'll be a game to remember. Last year, Vic and U.C. were tied in second place, and had to play off to decide who would meet St. Hilda's in the finals. Vic I will have the above-mentioned players representing them, several of last year's squad, and U.C. will probably have Joan Carter, Yvonne Day, Marg. Horn and Betty Mortimer, with plenty of fresh additions among their number. Watch it gang!

Also at 6, St. Hilda's battle with Meds on the Trinity Athletic Field. Take your choice, or do half-time of each. They'll both be worth the price — Free!

Speaking OF SPORT

By Owen Prichard

It was an encouraging thing to see the crowd that turned up at the first University Night on Saturday. Although this scribe was kept busy most of the night with arrangements and announcements, we personally managed to get quite a bang out of the whole evening. The athletes put on interesting displays of the various sports, and the games in the Boxing and Wrestling Rooms seemed to have caught the fancy of a great many.

The movies in the Fencing Room did not include the reels depicting former intercollegiate football games in which Varsity teams have participated, the reason for the omission being the unfortunate absence of Warren Stevens. Steve has not been feeling his usual peppy self lately, and only recently had quite a set-to with Kid Influenza. On Saturday we learned that the doctor had "benched" the Varsity mentor until he gets rested up again. The commentary on the football movies would not be half as interestingly or intelligently done by anyone but the maestro himself, so they will have to wait for his return.

No doubt one of the most interesting things from the interfaculty players' viewpoint was the presence of a sizeable audience.

Hit of the evening in a very real way were those muscular chappies Doug Simpson and Joe Southey. Usually when you see one of those acts on the stage you take that opportunity to retrieve your dropped gloves or scarf, but the Southey-Simpson duo gave a great exhibition of strength and skill combined with more than a dash of humor.

While we are passing out the orchids, we must mention Coach Charlie Zwygand and his gymnastic crew of Ollie Brett, Normie Lane, Jack Toye and Eric Stark. The first-mentioned turned in a smooth exhibition of the tumbling and vaulting art which was bested only by the coach himself. You'd never get the modest Zwygand to admit it, but the country does not contain a better gymnastic coach than our Charlie.

Easiest job of the evening fell to the lot of that intrepid sportscooper Bill Quigley, who kept the scoreboard for the Big Gym basketball tilt. This joust between University College and Victoria ended with one of the lowest scores in the interfaculty records. Our jaded memory harks back to some similar tally hung up last year, a 10-6 affair between Wycliffe B and Trinity III.

By the way, don't forget to pass on to those in charge of these University Nights your suggestions for improving the program. It's your evening and it's meant to provide you with an interesting time. The idea behind the scheme is not a financial one. The aim of the University Nights is the provision of a cheerful and inexpensive Saturday night of games and dancing for the students of the university, and if you should hit upon an idea which will further this effort let someone know about it so that it may be put into effect. For instance, some fellow came dancing by us Saturday and moaned that he didn't like the particular number the p.a. system was turning out. Luckily, this sort of problem is one of the easiest to fix. Although the record man can't please everyone, he has a goodly stock of discs on hand, and Saturday he was filling students' requests almost as quickly as his assistant was jotting down the desired titles. This student-suggestion idea includes the whole business of the University Nights, so step right up with your ideas.

THE ADJUSTMENT BUREAU

On Friday morning last a two-man delegation from Engineers Infuriated came into the office with that I-want-to-see-the-manager look. They were burning up (and rightly so) over a jumbled report of an S.P.S. hockey game which had appeared in that morning's issue. We have not yet found out how the facts could possibly have got into such a horrible mix-up. The reporter concerned and ourself extend sincere apologies to the athletic directorate of School, and to the School pukesters who were reported as having lost the game. Also we want to thank the two men who came up to see us about the matter, and who were really very understanding about the whole thing.

FOR WOMEN ONLY

We have been waiting for years for the chance to put a nice come-on title like that on one of our paragraphs. However, all you fellows can stop reading right now, because we really want to talk to the distaff side. So, just among us gals, don't you think a few words of you could get out to these University Nights? There were quite a few members of you who could get out to these University Nights? Why not make up a party from your residence or frat house and come over to the Athletic Wing next Saturday. We think you'll enjoy it. The whole Sports Staff joins us in this invitation.

and A-dew, My Hart is Lust, the latter by William Cornish. The thirteenth century Responsory Initiator Jenu Christe and the better known Elizabethan song Under the Greenwood Tree have a charming and beautiful simplicity which is not found in the music of later periods.

Captain Goff was with us again, playing on the clavichord which he designed and constructed himself. It is a wonderfully delicate instrument, scarcely audible yet crystal clear. We were privileged to hear Captain Goff play two of the Bach preludes from The well-tempered Clavichord, two Courantes by Gibbon, and a short selection composed by King Henry the Eighth.

Undoubtedly the weather kept many away from this unique concert. It was really more than well worth braving the storm.

Almost Impromptu!

Wynmud Recital

Evelyn Kilby, contralto, successfully took the place of Eric Tredwell (unfortunately ill) in last night's Wynmud Musical. Her program was interesting for its contrast of early English with early Italian songs, a contrast rather favourable to the latter, both in the quality of the singing and in the songs themselves. Miss Kilby succeeded in showing that the freshness of the Elizabethan Ayres seemed light and insincere aside the perhaps too dramatic but the more advanced harmonically.

WOMEN'S HOCKEY

Medical eligibility certificates have not been filed for the University College or St. Michael's teams and for several members of other teams.

Managers are reminded that it is their responsibility to file these with the Athletic Secretary immediately. The use of any player whose certificate has not been filed makes her team liable to suspension from the series.

Italian songs. Nowhere in the English songs was the careful preparation of the state Invocation of Orpheus from Peri's Eridice evident.

Much of Miss Kilby's ability to hold her audience depends on her diamond-cut enunciation. It is seldom one is able to take down the words of a song as if from dictation. This next-to-perfect diction was almost unfortunate, though no fault of the singer's, in Goring Thomas' Recitative and Air from Nadeshda. I, like the poor mother, find "but grief and sorrow" in the music and the libretto was certainly culled from a choice melodrama of the sixties.

The group of Modern Songs was a typical group sung in the typical manner. Of these songs Love went A-Riding by Frank Bridge was best. It was musically better than the rest and was sung at a pace over which the singer had absolute command but which didn't sacrifice the rhythm. Lady John Scott's well-known Think on Me was beautifully done and very gripping.

Miss Kilby is to be congratulated on giving such a pleasant recital on such short notice. To this end she was helped not a little by Mr. Farmer's capable accompaniments.

DID YOU KNOW

EARLY ADS

Canada's first newspaper, The Halifax Gazette, contained three advertisements in its first issue on Monday, March 28, 1752. One was a lawyer's ad, the second advertised butter for sale, and the third was a bookseller and stationer's advertisement.

THE BOOK EXCHANGE

189 years later Canadian booksellers and stationers still use Canada's newspapers to advertise their wares. THE BOOK EXCHANGE now has the largest stock of new and used books in Canada. You can be sure of getting the book you need, at the lowest price, when you visit The Book Exchange, 370 Bloor Street West.

but it will be a big hit with the Victorians.

Court Stone's "Factory" is a Sand-burguesque thing which just fails to come off, although it is an interesting attempt.

"The Stars in their Courses" by Dorothy Hills is the typical collegiate short story, written in the ultra-modern manner that is becoming so tiresome. It is saved, however, by being particularly well-done, of its type.

The editorial invades the realms of A. M. & D. criticism to give a very thorough discussion of Dr. Pratt's "Brebeuf and his Brethren." One of these times, the students of Vic will break down and read this latest poem by their professor, who is also the finest of Canadian poets. In the meantime, we have to submit ourselves to pro-Pratt propaganda, perfectly justified, but becoming a little wearisome. The criticism is a good one, well conceived, well written. We'd have enjoyed it much more, if we had not already read so much about the epic.

The editorial also takes mild issue with this Varsity reviewer concerning comments on earlier issues of Acta. We relish a little gentle controversy, and we think we detect in the January Acta some slight evidence that our advice has been taken.

Most alarming change in the training routine is the shift to the University Avenue Armouries. In this chilly, barn-like structure the Training Centre Battalion returns to the complicated shuffling procedure observed on the campus last fall, along with a number of new and very discouraging ideas, like exercises. . . .

If you consult the map at the back of your students' handbook, you will find that it is something over two miles for the student with a three o'clock (say) the Economics Building, to walk in order to answer the roll call at the Armouries; if the student is lucky, he has 15 minutes to do it. This amounts to a casual, 6 m.p.h. stroll — a little faster, maybe, to allow for stoplights and Betty Grables. . . .

If you happen to have a Bloor street 3 o'clock yourself, you have likely already arrived at the same conclusion without the aid of the students' handbook. . . .

At the armouries, too, one finds a return to bayonet drill, that gleeful feature of modern, cultured war. . . . The niceties of getting six inches of steel into another man's body . . . and getting them out again. . . . University students are probably a little too civilized anyway. . . .

In the meantime, Poland's conquerors have again carved it in two. This time Germany has divided her apportionment in two parts. During the winter of '39, the bitterest winter Europe has seen for many years, the already starving Poles were driven out of the section incorporated into the Reich and transported to the other — the General-gouvernement.

The matter of ejection was carried out as simply as possible. A Nazi soldier merely knocked on the door and explained to the householders that they were leaving within an hour; that they would be permitted to take the equivalent of two dollars and one change of clothes. Thousands more perished of cold and hunger.

The land thus evacuated was resettled with thousands of Germans from the Baltic States. Some of them who saw the former tenants ejected refused to take the property and were immediately sent to concentration camps.

In the General-gouvernement — the Polish section — high schools and universities have been shut down, libraries and museums have been sacked and razed, books have been burned by the thousand, and churches are allowed only one service a day — the congregation always including two storm troops — with a machine gun. Smaller ration cards have been dealt to the Poles than to the Germans and curfew keeps them indoors until the Germans themselves have bought most of the available food.

Such are conditions in Poland today; Poles look to the future, and as one of them, Artur Zehnwert, is preparing himself at the University of Toronto to aid in making his fatherland again the country it once was.

Also we are not sure what nationalism thinks of federalism. The round-about procedure of federalism annoys the nation when it wants to act as a whole."

As political autonomy is in the end economic autonomy, the trend is towards federal control for a single state cannot hope to shape economic structure. The federal government must take initiative in many things. As an example of the necessity for federal economic control, Professor Corry cited the banking crisis of 1933 in the United States. This was due to the banking system being controlled by the individual states.

"There must be co-operation between federal and state authorities," said Professor Corry. "Many features of the New Deal could not have been achieved without state consent. Some deny that the New Deal is centralizing. The states have retained their independence of Washington but they are going forward together. This is the new federalism."

Vic Parliament Debate Decisively Upholds V.C.U. Governing Party Beaten

Opposition Argues that Students Are not Interested in Union; Government Charges Lack of Publicity

VOTE 31 TO 16

The Victoria College Union was decisively upheld last night by the Vic College Debating Parliament, which defeated the motion, "that this house deplores the failure of the Victoria College Union to represent student opinion" by a vote of 31 to 16.

Opening the debate for the government, John Pallatt charged that the sparse attendance at V.C.U. open meetings was due to lack of publicity, pointing out that the only well-attended meeting of the Union had been called by the students themselves. Pallatt cited several instances of students being appointed by the Union to various offices without a vote being taken, a procedure (Continued on Page 4)

S.C.M. Members To Quiz Experts

All women students are invited to attend the forthcoming S.C.M. series entitled "A Noon-Hour Quiz" which will be held each Wednesday at 1:30 p.m. under the auspices of the Women's S.C.M. at Wymilwood.

Visiting experts will be "quizzed" by well-known Varsity students on various topics of interest and then the discussion will be thrown open to the group.

At the first meeting in the series, Bill Small, President of the Students' Administrative Council, will interview Mrs. W. L. Grant on the problem of student government.

Substitute for Milady's Corsage Causing Committees' Headaches

What to wear instead of corsages? That is the question of the day troubling the beautiful co-eds of the university. Corsages at a dance have been deemed out of style by a large number of students, and the girls are willing to offer suggestions for substitutes.

One group of sophomores and juniors, experienced in the likes and dislikes of dancing co-eds, were enthusiastically for small flowers in some form or other instead of buttons. If the flowers were provided in different colours, they offered, they would not clash with the evening gowns, a difficulty which is obvious when college colours are presented in the form of ribbons. One of the girls suggested that Union Jack pins might be an interesting idea.

Jean Foster, of third year, said, "I liked the idea St. Mike's had of ribboned flowers on the wrist. You could have a necklace made of tiny flowers, even if they were artificial, in school colours. That would be both dainty and patriotic."

Betty Boyd, secretary of the V.C.U., said, "We girls really do miss our corsages, but we feel it is the least we can do to help the situation. The Vic

Nash Interviews Poll Director On C.B.C. Tonight

"Science in Action," a series of six special broadcasts is being currently prepared for C.B.C. on a coast-to-coast network by Dr. Philo Nash of the Anthropology Department of the University of Toronto.

"This series is a portrayal of scientists actually at work," explained Dr. Nash in a recent interview with the Varsity.

"The subjects will be varied, but all will deal with topics of public concern or news of the moment—things of public interest which scientists are doing," he continued. As far as possible, Dr. Nash intends to interview an expert on the subject in each week's broadcast. This specialist will interpret for the public the nature and importance of the work he is doing.

Tonight Professor Nash will have as his guest Elmer Roper, who is the director of the public opinion poll for Fortune magazine, concerning the value and features of his particular work.

These 15-minute broadcasts occur at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesdays.

Objectors Come Back To McGill

Non-Military Drill will be Given Those Whose Principles Forbid Bearing Arms, by Order-in-Council

SENATE MAKES CHANGE

Montreal, Que., Jan. 27.—(C.U.P.)—As a result of an order-in-council of December 24 changing military regulations to read that conscientious objectors of any denomination shall be given non-military training, McGill's conscientious objectors are back at their desks today. The Senate amended university regulations to provide for compulsory military training, but those who for reasons of principle object to bearing arms shall be given a regular course of physical training and drill requirements, supplemented by special work to replace bayonet and musketry drill. Both students signified their intention to return to university under these conditions.

Gordon K. Stewart, one of the objectors, said he "was glad to be back." It was authoritatively learned tonight that another student had been suspended for not complying with university military regulations. He will be reinstated when he has made up his requirements.

Moot Court Arraigns Alleged Wife-Slayer

Thaddeus Loadstone, Accused of Murdering Wife, Prudence, to be Tried by Jury of Law Students

JUDGE ROBERTS PRESIDES

Who killed Prudence? This is the question of the hour around the Law Building these days and it will be answered this evening at the murder trial being held by the Supreme Court Division of the Moot Court of the University of Toronto.

Thaddeus B. Loadstone is on trial for his life for the murder of his wife, Prudence. Chief Justice W. P. Rogers will preside and prosecution will be handled by N. Christopherson and B. Kassirer. Counsel for the defence will be R. Robinson and Chas. Scott.

In brief, the plot is this: Loadstone, a middle-aged prospector, married a young girl of nineteen and took her with him to the northern wilds where he carried on his work. Prudence, his wife, decided that this was not the sort of life for her, however, and decided to come back to the city. Her husband agreed to this and so she took an apartment in Toronto and moved to the city.

Shortly afterwards a man by the name of Jones started to take an interest in Prudence and tried to convince her that she should leave her husband and fly away with him. Then Loadstone came to the city to visit his wife and while he was there Jones dropped in on her. Something very interesting ensued.

The trial is open to the public and is to be held at 7 p.m. this evening in the Junior Common Room of U.C. It will be authentic in every detail and has been very well rehearsed by Pro- (Continued on Page 4)

I.S.S. Intends To Campaign February 5

Committee Plans to Use Funds Collected from Whole Campus to Assist Chinese, European Students

AMOS IS CHAIRMAN

Representatives from most of the colleges and faculties on the campus are to be found on an ad hoc committee which has laid down plans for a campaign for the International Student Service on Wednesday, February 5. Chairman of the committee is Jack Amos of first year Social Science.

Funds raised in the campaign are to be used to help lessen the plight of students in China and in Europe. Recently the news reached Canada that the I.S.S. Secretary had discovered 40,000 British and Canadian prisoners of war. The Secretary, Tracy Strong Jr.—a graduate of Yale—is attempting to contact the students among the 3,000,000 French, Polish, British and Czech prisoners in Germany. His task is to do all he can to make life more bearable and creative for the prisoners. If funds were available, 10 men could be em- (Continued on Page 4)

Manitoba Grad In Theatre Role

Recently graduated in Arts from the University of Manitoba, and just arrived in Toronto, is Miss Beryl Barr who plays the feminine lead in the Theatre Project's production of Sidney Kingsley's Broadway hit of last season, "The World We Make," to be presented the first time out of New York at the Margaret Eaton Hall the week of February 3.

Miss Barr is reported to be the sort of all-round girl, often heard of but seldom met. Said by many to be a dead ringer for Bette Davis, she participated and excelled in all extra-curricular college activities, tennis, speed-skating, dancing and baseball to mention a few. She was loudly acclaimed in Winnipeg for her dramatic ability, appearing in Street Scene and Maelstrom's "Intruder" under Nancy Pyper's direction.

Officers-in-Training To Hold Military Ball In Hart House Setting

The All-Varsity, as far as the military gentlemen are concerned, has not happened yet, but is coming on February 21 disguised as the C.O.T.C. Ball. Men of the Training Centre Battalion, who, with the C.O.T.C. proper, include most of the men at Varsity, will lay their rifles and note-books aside for an evening, and cavort to the rhythms of Stan St. John.

Hart House officials expect a large crowd of embryo officers and their companions, and supper will be served amid novel decorations of a military motif. To enable all to attend, the cost of the tickets is being kept as low as possible,

War Financing Is First Topic Of New Series

"Financing the War Effort" is the title of the first address in the new series arranged by the Departments of Political Economy and University Extension, to be presented next Thursday evening. The speaker will be J. Douglas Gibson, well-known financial writer and editor of the Bank of Nova Scotia Monthly Review.

Last year several courses were given on political and economic problems. In response to a demand for something of a similar nature this year, the current series on Political and Economic problems arising from the war has been arranged.

The speakers will include men of first-class importance—labour leaders, government officials, and professors. Their subjects range from agriculture in war-time to the highly involved prob- (Continued on Page 2)

Feathered Friends of Campus Enjoy Lectures, Dislike Tapioca

The University of Toronto grounds will soon qualify as a National Reserve if any more pigeons are added to the already large flock inhabiting the campus.

Almost an institution in Queen's Park, the pigeons are reported to be taking an interest in student life. One of the boldest of their number even attended a Religious Knowledge Lecture, and perched complacently on the open window, from where he interspersed an occasional "uh-coo" among the professor's remarks. He was induced to leave only by the closing of the window. The pigeon's favourite haunt is under the trees in front of Victoria, although they often migrate as far as U.C., and a few intrepid ones have been observed as far south as S.F.S.

Their most popular diet is "pigeon food", a mixture of corn, barley, and what-have-you, which may be purchased at any feed store. If this is unavailable, they are partial to rice, bread

Sponsored by Young Communist League, Leaflets Also Attack Canadian-American Friendship; Raise Underhill Issue

SECOND THIS MONTH

Mimeographed three-page leaflets, taking issue with editorial criticism in The Varsity and expressing strong opposition to closer Canadian-American relations, were distributed to many university students through the mails yesterday by the Young Communist League. This is the second leaflet circulated on the campus by the League this month.

The League uses criticism of The Varsity to open its larger attack on the war and American-Canadian friendship by stating: "The Varsity, it seems, has taken exception to our last leaflet to the student body. Although much of its criticism is frivolous, and no attempt is made to reply to our statements, The Varsity levelled some very serious charges against us. We propose to answer these charges in this issue and in future issues of the Student Beacon."

"The Varsity states: '... the excuse it uses to toss in its rank propaganda (the assertion that the Yankee financiers and monopolists are trying to capture the British Empire with the help of their Canadian friends—ed.) is a hypocritical defence of a university professor with whom its authors have not the slightest sympathy.' In other words, we had an axe to grind," continues the leaflet, "and were willing to use the plight of Prof. Underhill as our grindstone."

crumbs, shelled peanuts and small bits of chocolate, but unanimously refuse apples and raw tapioca.

The birds like to take their meals perched on the hands, shoulders or heads of co-eds, since they can thus warm their feet and, at the same time, wipe off accumulated mud and snow. This habit may or may not have cost Victoria a student when, last year, they alighted en masse on the shoulders of Margaret Hendershot, a fresher who had been inveigled into accompanying some enthusiastic friends on a pigeon-feeding expedition. She was quoted as saying "I hate pigeons!" and this year, instead of returning to college, she is at Normal School—in Hamilton.

Two second year co-eds were seen one snowy day recently sallying forth armed with pigeon food and peanuts. Ten minutes later they were feeding: 50 pigeons, five sparrows, two squirrels, one large black Newfoundland dog and three children.

Post War Plans

The important question of an after-the-war program does not come up as often these days as one would expect, in view of the fact that such a program—if it were convincing—should have a tremendous influence in every country concerned in the present conflict, including Germany. Such an influence had President Wilson's program in the last war, in spite of its ultimate failure.

It has been said of him that, although he has been called a pacifist and impractical idealist by those out of sympathy with his methods and policies, yet it was he who brought new inspiration to the war-weary masses in the allied countries, and who broke down the iron discipline of the subjects of the German emperor by his insistence on America's just aims in fighting. Just such work as this is being done by branches of the League of Nations Society all over the world today, although few people appreciate its efforts, probably because of lack of publicity regarding them.

Little has been heard of any plans that might exist for a post-war world. It is true that Hitler has promised the people of Germany many improvements and advantages "when they have won the war", but as far as we know, he has said nothing of his plans for the countries he has conquered, in the event of a German victory. Certainly he has offered them nothing that could even reconcile them to such a victory, which would seem to be more important than making promises to the German people, who now have little choice but to do their utmost to win.

Germany has so far contented herself with making promises to her own people, and among the benefits that Dr. Robert Ley, chief of the Labour Front in Germany, has promised the workers of his country after victory are "reasonable old-age pensions; generous health programs; a single free-time vacation program; just wages; training in a profession; and social residence construction of unheard-of proportions—all this will be your victory guarantee."

In a speech to the Presidential electors recently in Washington, Attorney-General Robert H. Jackson aptly pointed out that the benefits which totalitarian dictators promise their people will be theirs after victory in a long and hard war have already been vouchsafed to the world's democracies. For example, Mr. Jackson pointed out that the progressive democracy of the United States had tackled and partially solved the problems which worry the dictators long before Hitler began to destroy the peace of the world. Concerning the further extension and improvement of conditions for the masses, he offered the opinion that the processes of democracy are bringing them to American workers sooner than marching armies can bring them to German workers.

"We of the democracies of the earth," Mr. Jackson observed, "can stand forth and say that no nation by violence, by confiscation, by dictatorship, has ever yet attained such standards of living, such economic security or social justice as we have done by democratic processes, guided by free public opinion. The record on this continent is one of steady, orderly progress. The claim of the dictator propagandists that the powerful never concede anything and the humble never win anything under democracy is a falsehood by the record."

"Of course progress is slow," admitted Mr. Jackson. "Of course it is accompanied by what at times seems an unnecessary amount of strife and resistance. But the strife under our system is one of conflicting arguments, not conflicting armies; its weapons are reasons, not force. And no regime of dictators or monarchs can show so long, so consistent, or so successful a record of gains by the humble and concessions by the powerful as our democratic system has accomplished in peace and order."

That was Attorney General Jackson's answer to the dictators' promises to their people. Just why promises of benefits that the so-called "weak democracies" have long possessed should very much encourage the German people to defeat those democracies is difficult to understand. Britain has made a few proposals for post-war internal changes, but an all-inclusive program has yet to be suggested by any country.

Maybe It's Spooks!

One morning last fortnight, when inhabitants of Harvard's Lowell House entered their library, they discovered a curious act of vandalism; each of the 3,000 books on its shelves had been reversed, its back was to the wall, its title concealed. No book had been stolen.

Five men went to work turning the books around again. Carpenters put new locks on the library doors, fastened all windows. That night Yard cops were stationed outside to watch. Next morning locks and windows were found intact but the books had again been reversed, and for good measure a portrait of Harvard's ex-president Abbott Lawrence Lowell was hung upside down.

By that time, undergraduate sleuths were in full cry. Lowell House's student chairman, blond, smart Senior Joseph P. Lyford, issued a list of five suspects. The Harvard Crimson put its heels to work hunting clues. A few days later the 5,500 volumes in Winthrop House's library, a basement stronghold, were found reversed.

One morning last week the Crimson whooped: "MYSTERIOUS SNOOPER—MAN CAUGHT RED-HANDED." Supporting its headline was a photograph. Pictured at the Lowell House bookshelves, with a pair of books in his hands, was Joseph Lyford. The Crimson's story: Hidden in the Lowell library the night before, a Crimson photographic candidate had seen Lyford unlock the door precisely at 12:10 and begin reversing books, had snapped his camera.

Harvard gasped, and Joseph Lyford strode into the Crimson office with blood in his eye. He quickly established that the Crimson itself had pulled a hoax: it had faked its picture by posing someone else at the bookshelves and tacking on the body a photograph of Lyford's head.

Next day the Crimson, ignoring Joseph Lyford's threat to sue it for libel, made no mention of the hoax but reported that book-turning had broken out anew, this time in the Adams House library. Harvard was still baffled by its most mysterious pranking in many a year.

Conservative and Intelligent

George Thomson's Landscapes

George Thomson's landscape exhibition at the Mellors-Laing gallery is perfectly charming; it is even better than his last show, and that is saying a good deal. Mr. Thomson's colour work is gay and brilliant and here he maintains the standard he set for himself in his Colpoys Bay.

Since the artist is the brother of Tom Thomson it has become customary to say that his work is getting more like his brother's all the time. As far as I can see this is no more true than most clichés for each has his own individual view-point and methods. There are a few similarities, of course; both are sincere and both have a fine sense of light. But also each painted the landscape he was drawn to and this implies an entirely different philosophy. Mr. Thomson paints the land he loves which is the peaceful farm-land cultivated and subdued by man, but the subject is never quite complete. In all his work there is a suggestion of untamed Nature waiting to take control the minute Man relaxes his efforts.

In his current show there are a number of landscapes which praise the glory of the Canadian autumn and others which feature the sapphire of Georgian Bay, a favourite subject of Mr. Thomson's. One painting, labelled simply No. 1, combines these two subjects with wonderful brilliancy.

George Thomson's show is conservative and excellent.

Staff Reporter Said Mislead In Dank Tunnel

The Varsity at last reveals the amazing story of the significance of the trenches and fortifications on the corner of Hoskin and Devonshire. One of its most intrepid reporters stumbled upon important facts, but picked himself up and went on to fall into more information. This is the story.

Bravely descending through snow, waste paper and empty coke bottles into the depths of the trenches, he found that the trenches contained comfortable living quarters. But what was still more amazing, after wandering through labyrinthine passages, what should he discover at the very end but . . . barbed wire.

Brushing it aside with a flick of the wrist, your roving reporter suddenly came upon a secret tunnel. Where did it lead? To Whitney? To St. Hilda's? On and on pushed our hero deep into the set recesses till the glow of the setting sun threw but flickering shadows on its dank, dark walls. On and on till his retreating form merged into the shadows . . . ever pressing on to bring to the readers of The Varsity this startling story. Farther he pressed, in fact so far that . . .

He hasn't been heard from since.

Chamber Music

Junior Vogt Society

There was an unusually varied and satisfying program at the Junior Vogt Society's meeting last night: two groups of contralto songs, a Franck piano quintet, a Mozart quartet, some Chopin and some recent Canadian piano music all contributed to make a most enjoyable evening's listening.

Vivian Miller was the contralto soloist. Her first group, four English songs, gave us a taste of what her mellow, vibrant voice could do, especially in the faster numbers in which she could take advantage of her voice's virility without any of her small failings showing in. The four Italian songs of her second group then showed us her full powers.

The quintet, made up of Helen and Olga Shklar, Phyllis Gummer, Jacqueline Doherty and Marjorie Lea, gave us first a rendition of Cesar Franck's quintet which suffers from periodic relapses into union and octaves, a pity since Franck is capable of such wonderful contrapuntal music. The effects of the unsatisfied climaxes which are so typically endless in Franck were then smoothed over by two restful and satisfying movements of Mozart's quartet in D minor. The players' interpretations were good but their tone was not yet up to professional standards.

The pianist, Gwendolyn Duchemin, tried to put into Chopin that virile quality, which it has, but so often loses under more sentimental hands. A certain lack of technical precision, however, prevented her from realizing this laudable object quite successfully.

Two preludes by Barbara Pentland, a young Winnipeg composer, were played on the piano by Earl Moss, the president of the Society. They led my mind a-wandering, but whether I know not.

which he termed "undemocratic." Defending the V.C.U., Mabel Van Camp deplored the fact that few Vic students showed enough interest to make themselves familiar with the actual constitution of the Union. She claimed that students had no opinion on most controversial topics dealt with by the organization, and that it was therefore impossible to determine to what extent the Union represented this opinion.

Gretta Riddell, second government speaker, declared that the Union "bottled members of certain cliques" who were trained from their freshman year to take jobs in the V.C.U.

Saints, Vic, Beat Meds, U.C. In Women's Hockey Tilts

SAINTS 11-0, VIC 1-0

Last night, at six o'clock, Trinity rink was the scene of a good game of hockey played between St. Hilda's and Meds. The Saints emerged victorious by the overwhelming score of 11-0.

Pattie Lampman played an outstanding game for the victors, but Joan Griffith ran her a close second, while the whole team had a grand sporting spirit. For Meds, Sue Adams, and their goalie, who checked St. Hilda's until the end, is worthy of mention, but they were all in there fighting.

Here's the line-up for the game: St. Hilda's: Joey Wells, Pattie Lampman, Joan Griffith, Tins Annesley, Kitty Storey, Betty Hungerford, Leahla Young, Marg, Moffat.

Meds: Sue Adams, Isabelle Moon, Laurie Patton, Marg, Mullinger, Rose Farny, Shirley Fleming, Marg, Macfarlane, Jean Miners, Lillie Suggerman.

At the same hour, Vic I and U.C. battled out an interesting game on the little Vic rink. The result of it all was a victory for Vic I by the none-too-safe score of 1-0.

Helen Carefoot should receive full credit for eliminating the possibility of a shut-out game with a single goal. Flo Allen, who aptly took over the keeping of the cage when Helen Rodd received a cut lip, deserves a big hand. U.C. fought hard throughout and Betty Mortimer played a particularly good game.

Victoria I: Flo Allen, Helen Rodd, Beth Moore, Helen Carefoot, Doris Sargeant, Fran, Faulds, Freda Pickard, Jean Crawford, Beth Springer, Mary Allan.

U.C.: Yvonne Day, Betty Mortimer, Joan Carter, Ada Smith, Doris Auckerman, Reva Brownell, Sally Watt, Marg Abbot, Phil Hall.

EMMANUEL PLAYERS OVERWHELM TRINITY

Emmanuel B hoopers ran Trinity C into the floor when they swamped the Red and Black 36-6.

D. Jones and McLaughlin each got 9 points to lead the Theologues while Fee and A. Jones contributed 8 and 6 to the total respectively. Somerville was the only Anglican who could find the basket, scoring all 6 of the Red and Black's points.

Emmanuel B: Fee (8), A. Jones (6), D. Jones (9), Frid (2), Crysdale (2), McLaughlin (9), Dobson, Oliver.

Trinity C: Somerville (6), Crozier, Garrett, Hooper.

let's go places

"South of Suez" starts out as a run-of-the-mill Western which somehow or other got transplanted to the South African diamond fields, where everybody totes a six-gun and uses it almost continuously. George after the discovery of a priceless diamond. He makes his escape with the diamond to England and starts his life anew under a new name only to fall in love with Brenda Marshall, his late partner's daughter, who has sworn to avenge her father's death.

SHEA'S Brent is cast as a SOUTH OF young mining engineer who is accused of murdering his partner

His affection is reciprocated of course and all is going well until George Tobias, the real murderer, shows up and reveals Brent's true identity. At the last moment however the other woman appears and clears Brent.

The plot is neither original nor good and the picture is only saved by the fine work of two minor characters; Eric Blone as the Cockney companion of the hero and Lee Patrick as the other woman.

"Glamour for Sale", the other feature, is the tale of an illegal date bureau where inebricated millionaires are black-mailed. Anita Louise is very decorative as the smart girl who trips up the blackmailers with Roger Pryor as the detective in the case.—G.V.F.

The Sportswoman

By Betsy Gowan

Despite the icy winds that blew those little flocks of snow about, a good time was had by all at the hockey games at Trinity and Vic last evening. We regret to say that there were two casualties to our comrades. Helen Rodd and Laurie Patton are carrying about with them small souvenirs of the games in which they participated, Helen for Vic and Laurie for Meds. St. Hilda's and Meds were fast and furious at first — and always good to watch. U.C. tried ever so hard to even their score, but Vic tried even harder.

The spectators — and there really were some — were treated to some good hockey. Rousing cheers, heard for blocks around, sounded good to us as we approached the floodlit rink. We soon found out that they were not unwarranted.

It makes us feel so good to see the sportsmanship that prevails at these games, even in the face of disaster and cold weather. What we want is more spectators who can eat their dinner in a hurry and enjoy it with us. Please watch this column for further announcements.

Sport Personalities

By George Forster

JACK MULLETT

Whenever a Dents team is seen in action along the Muscle Midway, no matter whether they are winning or losing, the odds are approximately 100-1 that one of the stars of the game is a slim carrot-topped chap who answers to the name of Jack Mullett.

Jack is in Fourth Year Dentistry and when he graduates he plans to do dental work in a Foreign Mission field. He is very reticent and unassuming and prefers not to talk about his athletic achievements.

Jack began his sports career in his freshman year at Varsity when he made the intercollegiate soccer team and has played on it ever since. Last year he played on the intercollegiate tennis team.

In the field of intramural athletics, Jack has played volleyball, soccer, basketball and water polo. Last year he led the Dents A volleyball team to the Victoria Staff Cup finals, while this year as manager of the team he was largely responsible for winning the cup for the Molemen.

In the fall Jack and Ian MacCollum of S.P.S. won the Interfaculty Doubles championship in the tennis tournament, by defeating the favoured team of Bruce Hall and Johnny Whallion of Emmanuel in a gruelling five set match. So here goes a great big bouquet of orchids to the Sports Personality of the week — Jack Mullett of Dents, a sportsman and a gentleman if there ever was one.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Stan Westcott

There was a huge mob of excited, madly clapping humanity ringed around the Hart House track Saturday night watching a display of basketball. Judging from the look of apparent enthusiasm on the beaming faces of those present, the congregation was enjoying the performance.

But the games were between mere interfaculty teams, playing, as mere interfaculty teams do, with a surplus of sloppy passing and remarkably inaccurate shooting, with a rare spark of brilliance at the most unexpected moments. The contests were regularly scheduled ones just about as good, or as bad, as is having a whale of a time watching these mere interfaculty teams in action.

Now, to avoid voking such abject and defamatory remarks as blatherskite, hasten to draw conclusions from the above verbiage.

As at least 50 percent of the vast sea of faces packed closely together around the iron rail belonged to freshly-shaven males, and, assuming that most of them were college students, we must conclude that the men of the university enjoy looking at interfaculty basketball.

Carrying on a little further it is logical to theorize that the above students would like watching baseball games, hockey games, and track meets, etc.

Now that the stronger sex have been awakened to the pleasures of peeping at interfaculty contests they will no doubt flood the balconies of Hart House or of the Arena every afternoon from 4 o'clock to 6. Then again maybe it wasn't the basketball game that they were gazing on with such rapt delight on Saturday night.

By the way, the indoor track is humming with action these days, and this afternoon will see another big meet dashed off. These competitions are very fascinating and should draw large crowds. If you dash up to watch them tonight after a gruelling lab, they will prove well worth your while.

LETTERS FOR PROWESS

There are a lot of guys around here who feel horribly maligned, and rightly so, for they have had perhaps their only opportunity to capture a Varsity T with which to grace their many bosoms, and about which they could brag to their children fifteen years from now, and their grandchildren in thirty-five years (both figures are rough estimates. Accurate, scientifically tabulated data is not to hand at the moment of writing.)

But these chaps can still get something through their athletic skill. They are all eligible for their college letters. These may not be as important nor as prettily embroidered as the blue T, still they cover a wide expanse of sweater, and are better than nothing.

Now that that bitter feud between the Men-are-only-good-to-dance-with and Women-are-only-ditto factions of Victoria College has withered and lost its sting, another list has taken its place in the stately halls of erudition exhorting all who are entitled to a Scarlet V to sign their names and give their qualifications.

If they have played on a championship team in a major sport (which no Vic man has this year) they will get their letter. If not they must accumulate a grand total of 3 points, which they may do by winning a berth on a sufficient number of intramural teams. The points are worked out in a more or less intricate system depending on the importance of the sport. For instance, a major sport, like hockey or football gives 1 point.

When all the eligible men have been chosen they will get their V's in front of their Betys in a delightful ceremony at the Athletic At-Home. And the boys will have gained tangible recognition of their athletic services for Dear Old Vic.

A NEW SCOOP

With this issue your morning journal adds another to its long list of journalistic triumphs. We are speaking of a column under the head Sport Personalities which appears elsewhere on the page. This feature will present interviews with various athletic luminaries and should prove interesting for the page 3 devotees, especially for the guy about which the story is written.

INTERFACULTY SKI MEETS COMING THIS WEEK-END

Women will Compete Individually on Saturday Afternoon, Men's Intramural Teams on Sunday Morning

OFFICIALS NEEDED

The first two big interfaculty ski meets will take place this coming week-end, the women's individual meet on Saturday afternoon and the long-awaited men's intramural team meet on Sunday morning. Punctuality is made absolutely necessary by the fact that eleven teams will have to be run through four events each; those who are not on the line when their turn comes to start will not be allowed to run in that race at all.

It is necessary first, that the names and numbers of all competitors be handed in on the team's eligibility sheet by noon on Saturday; and second, that more people sign up as officials. There are lists in the Athletic Offices for volunteer officials who will be paid regular referees' fees for the job.

The two team-groups which were published in Thursday's Varsity will be racing simultaneously, one doing its Cross-country and Jumping while the other is running down-hill and slalom. See the Varsity sometime during the week or your team manager for instructions about where to go and when.

The women's meet on Saturday is entirely under "Punch" Galle's direction and the girls will have to make out their arrangements about time, etc., through her.

For those who do not read the S.O.S. we repeat here that those who ski on the University Ski Club property must

MACCOLLUM SCORES FOR S.P.S. TRIUMPH

S.P.S. III put on a power-packed offensive to whip U.C. III in a scheduled Group IV cage tilt to the tune of 39-16.

Led by Ian MacCollum the Engineers had piled up a 20-8 lead by half time, and continued to set the pace in the final chukker.

MacCollum flipped in eight field goals to pace the Schoolmen with Berrin and T. Campbell close behind. Simpson, White and Brown with two baskets apiece led the Royal Collegians, while Sammy Kelter stood out on the Red and White defense.

S.P.S. III: W. Campbell (2), T. Campbell (7), W. Johnson (2), De Marco, Thuerle, Lewarne (4), Onasick, Berrin (8), MacCollum (16). U.C. III: Wood, Kelter (2), White (4), Campbell, Lichtig, Duncan (2), Simpson (4), Hunter, Bitove, Brown (4).

Leaflets Mailed By Communists

pulsion of Prof. Underhill was an isolated instance of tyranny. . . . We cannot accept this ostrich policy."

In a separate section of its three-page leaflet, printed on cheap paper, the League states: "We regret that the fastidious editors of The Varsity find our technical work 'smudgy'. Of course if Detectives Mann and Nursey and cundry members of the R.C.M.P. were busy looking for their press and printers, they might find their columns and well-balanced pages a trifle more difficult to achieve. However, we hope to relieve them of eyecore and irritation to their professional pride as we go along."

The Communist leaflet states that although the Young Communist League does not agree with the views of Professor Underhill, whose threatened dismissal provoked the first leaflet, nevertheless it does "genuinely support academic freedom". Its members go on to claim that "the struggle for academic freedom cannot be separated from the struggles of all sections of the Canadian people for the right to decide for themselves whether Canadian youth is to be sacrificed in European and Asiatic wars." It is claimed that friendship on the part of the United States is merely a design to get control of the British Empire, and university students are called upon to set up groups "to study the questions of loss of liberty and blank-check commitments of Canada's youth to the fatal war-schemes of Britain and the U.S.A."

Zwemer to Address New Lecture Group

In Arabia and subsequent service in Cairo and through his continual study of questions relating to the Mohammedan religion, he has become one of the foremost authorities on Moslem questions and is editor of "The Moslem World." The following are titles of a few of his many publications: "The Moslem Doctrine of God"; "Islam, a Challenge to Faith"; "Origin of Religion"; "Christianity the Final Religion"; "Taking Hold of God"; "Dynamic Christianity."

Speaking under the auspices of the Varsity Christian Fellowship, Dr. Zwemer has chosen as his theme "Facing Jesus Christ To-day." "Dr. Zwemer's visit will be an important event for the university, and we are looking for a time of great blessing while he is with us," Tom Barnett, V.C.F. president told the Varsity.

ST. MIKE'S TROUNCED BY SCARLET AND GOLD

Bill Smiley's Vic Orlans ran rough-shod over St. Mike's E to win their second straight basketball game by downing the Double Blue 40-15. In the closing stages the game degenerated to a rough and tumble with fouls being handed out right and left.

Doug Finlay was the high scorer of the game as he threw in 20 points for the Scarlet and Gold. "Soup" Campbell was close behind with 14 while Rankin and Tafel were the playmakers.

Ronayne sparked the Irish with 7 points, ably assisted by Buerger with 6.

Vic IV: Campbell (14), Finlay (20), Cunningham (2), Young (4), Tafel, Rankin, DelGrande, McCrory.
St. Mike's E: Ronayne (7), O'Reilly, Shantz (2), Buerger (6), Heintz, and Sobolewski.

MEDS-VIC JR. BASEBALL ENDS IN 5-ALL TIE

Jr. Meds and Jr. Vic battled to a four-inning five-all tie last night.

Meds opened the game with four runs and Vic retaliated with a like number. In the second inning both sides scored a run and the remaining two innings were scoreless.

Lou Stereoff and Elia each got two hits for Jr. Meds, and Ron Mackenzie bashed out two solid blows for Jr. Vic. Jr. Meds: Stereoff, Elia, Clodman, Spring, Hill, Cameron, Brown, Cohen, Dixon.

Jr. Vic: Hardy, Taylor, McDonald, Carson, Johnston, Fenton, Mackenzie, Zerbugh, Sedgewick.

The Canadian Campus

By D. B. Sumner

Staff Writer, The Manitoulin

A Canadian University Press Feature

The C.U.P. is a mighty machine. We have often expressed this sentiment but never has it been proven so successfully as at the University of Toronto. It seems that one night recently the editor of the C.U.P. was aroused from a sound sleep by a telephone call. It was a plea from Queen's that he undertake a mercy mission. Queen's had made elaborate preparations for their Art Ball, even to the extent of engaging Mart Kenney and his Western Gentlemen to provide the music.

They also had a plan to sell corsages at the door for 50c and give all this money to the war effort. With everything in readiness it was suddenly discovered that corsages in Kingston couldn't be obtained for less than 75c. Would the editor "please" see if he could get them for 50c in Toronto and thus avert a catastrophe of finance.

He could and did. Two hundred and fifty corsages at 50c apiece were bought, tied with Queen's colours, and shipped to Kingston. Verily, verily, the C.U.P. has once again proven its worth.

The girls at the University of Manitoba are taking their department very seriously. The co-eds at one of the largest facilities have been attending what is known as a charm school. Manners, behaviour, poise, and grace are instilled into the young ladies to counteract any suggestion of embarrassment in public places.

The girls are walking about the campus with their books on their heads instead of under their arms. They solemnly swear that it aids them in walking gracefully and resent any suggestion that it is silly.

One girl was seen the other day with her O.A.G. in tow, explaining to him that he must change his demeanour because it didn't fit in with her new conceptions of etiquette. He was squirming impotently and getting in nothing but a long line of "buts." The men are disgustedly calling the campus "a gigolo's paradise."

All the universities across Canada are back in full swing with the military training. All the publications feature C.O.T.C. orders and instructions within their pages. The Senate of the University of Toronto has freed all 4th year Chemical Engineering students to engage in the manufacture of munitions. They will be exempted from attendance and receive their degrees if their work has been satisfactory.

This is an indication of how solidly the Canadian student is behind the war effort. There is great activity in other fields as well. A Spitfire Fund is growing at New Brunswick and McGill and is being seriously mooted at many other universities. A nation-wide drive is going to be attempted on this and it would be an excellent concrete example of the feeling of university students in regard to the war. Events are being held in aid of the Red Cross on every campus and an astonishing sum of money has already been realized.

In art and music, Saskatchewan and Manitoba are going overboard in a big way. At the U. of S., drama has hit an all-time high with the establishment of a Dramatic Directorate which, in conjunction with the Saskatoon Little Theatre Club, will take charge of dramatics this term.

Charles LeMaistre, well known in eastern circles, has been engaged as director.

At the U. of M., the Student Symphony Orchestra holds attention. It was organized last fall and is the only university symphony orchestra in Canada. It has in the neighbourhood of fifty members and what is strange for an amateur orchestra contains a full wind complement.

This has made a great hit on the Manitoba campus and the concerts are received with avid interest. Looking over these efforts it would perhaps indicate that Canadian arts and music are slowly coming to a distinctive phase.

The University of Saskatchewan retained the McGoun trophy for debating recently in competition with the other three Western camps. This series of intercollegiate debating was held simultaneously on one night at the different universities.

The topic of all four debates was, "Resolved that the recognition of a system of International Law enjoying a primacy to National Law offers the best hope for a permanent world peace." The final point standing was: Saskatchewan, 5; British Columbia, 4; Alberta, 4; and Manitoba, 3. This makes the seventh time and the third consecutive year that Saskatchewan has won the McGoun trophy.

Down south of the border the sorority gals are making their man hunts legal. In a recent picture magazine the girls were to be seen on the campus of the University of Utah checking up on any fella's shooting out of season or using illegal weapons.

It seems that some unethical gals were showing a trifle too much leg to suit the executive. After all, the president should come first! The girls who exposed their gams too freely were dealt with severely by their comrades in silk. The men were no doubt disgusted with this tyranny.

First thing they know the hobble skirt era with hoops and all will be back. Canadian university girls have so far ignored this step and are still out-legging each other for dates in the approved manner. Not that the boys mind, because they just love it . . . mm-mm!

I.S.S. Committee Plans Campaign

played in this work.

Mr. Strong reports that he is received with great enthusiasm by the prisoners and that the officers in charge are generally quite co-operative—especially when they see the effect his visits have on the prisoners as he makes them more contented with their lot and thus easier to handle.

Originally it had been planned to hold a campaign over a longer period of time, but it was finally decided to concentrate the actual effort to one day, Wednesday, February 5. On that day members of the committee, and any others interested in assisting, will place collection boxes in every college and faculty on the campus. His Excellency, the Earl of Athlone, Governor-General of Canada, has agreed to act as Honorary President of the Canadian committee of the International Student Service.

News letters telling of the actual work being done in war-stricken parts of the world by the I.S.S. have been printed, and will be presented in brief in The Varsity in the next few days.

LOADSTONE MURDER CASE UP FOR TRIAL TONIGHT

Jessie J. Finkleman of the department of law. A jury of law students has been impanelled and more law students make up a galaxy of witnesses, court officials and other participants.

It has been the custom of the Moot Court to hold a big trial every year but, for the past two, none has been held. The purpose of it is partly to give students the benefit of taking part in a trial exactly as it would be held by a recognized court of law, and partly for the general interest which a thing of this sort arouses.

Pioneer Promoter in China Of Modern Dentistry Engaged in Studies Here

Dr. Harrison Mullett, Provider of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek's New Set of Teeth, is Professor of the University Dental Clinic at Chengtu

HOME ON FURLOUGH

By Don Moore

Home on furlough and devoting his time to post-graduate studies in the Faculty of Dentistry is Dr. Harrison J. Mullett, Professor of Prosthetic Dentistry and Superintendent of the University Dental Clinic of the West China Union University at Chengtu, who, before returning to Canada, provided Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek with a new set of teeth.

Canada, through the foreign missionary enterprise of the United Church, has the distinction of being the first founder and promoter of modern dentistry in China from an educational viewpoint, and Dr. Mullett is one of the pioneers in this project. As he humorously remarked to The Varsity in an interview yesterday, he "put teeth into Chinese resistance," through the great leader of that nation.

Mrs. Mullett, a personal friend of Madame Chiang Kai-Shek, teaches English at the Chinese university. "The 'New Life' movement, sponsored by Madame Chiang Kai-Shek is making wonderful progress," stated Mrs. (Continued on Page 4)

MEDICAL PROFESSION TO BE OUTLINED

The S.C.M. Wednesday noon hour address today at 1:30 p.m. in the Music Room at Hart House will feature Dr. J. H. Couch, M.A., M.B., F.R.C.S., of the Faculty of Medicine, who will speak on the subject "Medicine as a Profession."

This is one of the S.C.M. noon hour series dealing with the problem of choosing a life's work. The speaker will stress the opportunity for service in the medical profession, and medical students are especially invited to attend.

Besides his work as a Junior Demonstrator in Surgery at the university, Dr. Couch is active as a surgeon at the Toronto General Hospital.

U.C. Will Hold Annual Debate

Competition for the Robinette Shield, emblematic of the debating championship of University College, is scheduled to get under way this week, C. L. Dubin, Literary Director of the U.C. Literary and Athletic Society told The Varsity yesterday.

The Shield was donated several years ago by a former honorary president of the Lit.

Teams representing each of the four years in the college will compete for the shield. Year presidents are now accepting entries for the tournament. Those wishing to enter should drop a slip of paper bearing their names in the Lit. office letter-box in the U.C. Junior Common Room.

Preliminary competition to decide the year champions will begin later in the week. Semi-finals will come early next month, and the final debate for the college championship will take place at the Lit. nomination meeting in February.

HART HOUSE CONCERT

MACKIE EMPHASIZES NEED TO ASSIST REFUGEE STUDENTS

Especially Important is the Group in the Universities of Unoccupied France Says the World Secretary of the Student Christian Federation

TO SPEAK HERE

"The most important group of students with which the International Student Service is concerned is the one now finding refuge in the universities of unoccupied France," Robert Mackie, World Secretary of the Student Christian Federation and Vice-Chairman of the European Student Relief Fund told the Varsity yesterday. There are concentrated here German Jewish students, Poles, Czechs, Dutch and a large number of students from Spain who have been unable to return since the victory of the Fascist forces in the civil war. Rev. Mackie will speak to students here concerning their position in the war at the Women's Union on Thursday, January 30 at 8 p.m. The meeting is the regular January gathering of the University College S.C.M.

"Their situation is particularly grave," Mr. Mackie went on, "since they must have money on which to live or the Vichy government must put them in concentration camps where conditions are particularly bad." He went on to explain that the government is very anxious that the students should continue in their studies, but the strained situation in which France finds herself economically makes it necessary to intern indigents for the good of the country. Money is urgently needed to keep these democratic students at their books so that they may carry the light of democracy back to their oppressed (Continued on Page 4)

Accused Acquitted In Law Club Mock Trial

Thaddeus B. "Flash" Loadstone, alias Walter Williston, was acquitted on the charge of murder in last night's session of the Supreme Moot Court of the University of Toronto in the University College Junior Common Room.

Strict legal procedure was observed as the Law Club staged a mock trial involving a woman found lying in a pool of blood, a jealous husband, and "another man."

Out for less than ten minutes, the jury returned to deliver the dramatic verdict of "Not Guilty." The courtroom rang with applause at the popular decision, as public sympathy had swung towards the accused during the course of his grueling trial.

Counsel for the defence were Bob Robinson and Charles Scott; crown counsel were Norman Christopherson and Bryant Kassirer.

First witness called before Chief Justice W. B. Rogers was Police Constable Higgins, alias G. J. Hill, who testified that he had been summoned to the home of the deceased on the night of December 24 last by Mrs. Loadstone's maid, Yvette La Douceur. The girl told him that her mistress had been murdered, he testified, and when he arrived at the scene of the crime he found the woman lying in a pool of blood in the living-room, shot through the head by a .25-calibre revolver. The weapon was on a table where it had been placed by the startled girl when she discovered the body.

Dr. Blood, medico-legal expert, impersonated by Bob Campbell, testified that the weapon found in the room was the one employed in the killing. He stated that he had been summoned immediately by P. C. Higgins and had found the dead woman's husband upstairs in a state of coma resulting from excessive use of alcohol.

Testimony of the maid, Yvette, as enacted by Shirley Hill, and the butler portrayed by Sandy World, was to the effect that during Mr. Loadstone's long absence from home while prospecting for gold in Quebec his wife had been carrying on an affair with her hair dresser, Montmorency Jones, played by Irwin Blackstone. On his return home, Loadstone had become extremely jealous of Jones, had forcibly ejected him from the Loadstone house, and had told his wife that "there would be hell to pay" if she saw him again.

Jones admitted the affair, but denied that he knew that Mrs. Loadstone was a married woman. After being threatened by her husband, he fled together.

He claimed that he had come to her home on the evening of the murder in answer to a telephone call from her, and had found her dead when he arrived. He had fled from the scene, fearing that he would be implicated in the crime.

Called to the stand in his own defence, Loadstone denied that he killed his wife, stressing the fact that he loved her dearly. The plea of the defence, delivered by Mr. Robinson, rested mainly upon the counter-charge that not Loadstone but Jones was guilty of the murder. Mr. Christopherson charged for the prosecution that none but the accused had had sufficient opportunity for the crime, and his motive was the strongest.

Instructed by Chief Justice Rogers as to the fine legal points involved in their decision, the jury left the room, to return shortly with the acquittal verdict. The prisoner was discharged.

Burton Will Instruct Naval Recruits In Technical Physics

NAVAL RECRUITS

In the rapid expansion that the navy has had to meet there has been a distinct lack of recruits with technical knowledge. This technical knowledge is required before the personnel can receive further training in the complicated instruments in use by all branches of the Navy. The training establishments at Halifax and Esquimaux are strained to the limit, and the Navy is adopting the policy of utilizing the various educational facilities in the country to give men preliminary training. The University of Toronto is one of the first institutions called upon and others will follow in due course.

The first class of 50 recruits will begin in the Department of Physics, University of Toronto on Monday, Feb. 3. There are still a few vacancies in this first group. Applicants can obtain information from Professor Grayson Smith of the Department of Physics or from the Headquarters of the R.C.N.V.R., 165 Lakeshore Boulevard, Sunnyside.

S.C.M. 'Quiz' Harvard Man To Discuss Press Control Virgil, Dante

Mrs. Grant to Answer Questions Concerning Problems and Aspects of Student Government

BILL SMALL TO PRESIDE

Bill Small, president of the Students' Administrative Council, will interview Mrs. W. C. Grant on Wednesday at 1:30 p.m. at Wymilwood in the first meeting of the Women's S.C.M. "Noon-hour Quiz" series.

All women undergraduates are urged to attend and to participate in the "quiz." Mr. Small, who as president of the S.A.C. and as ex-president of the Victoria College Union, is considered highly qualified to undertake the task and will discuss with Mrs. Grant various problems and aspects of student government. Mrs. Grant is keenly aware of all phases of college life, having spent several years at McGill as the Dean of Women, and will answer such questions as "Should student government control the university press?"

JOINT MEETING OF FRENCH CLUBS TO BE HELD TONIGHT

The annual joint meeting of Victoria, University College and Trinity French Clubs is scheduled for tonight at 8 o'clock in Cartwright Hall, St. Hilda's.

"The program," Gretta Riddell, president of the Vic club, said, "will feature three French plays, U.C.'s Rosolie, Vic's Edgar et sa Bonne and Trinity's La Force du Cuvier. Then there will be songs, refreshments and dancing," she added.

Miss Riddell explained the annual outing, now becomes a tradition, provides an opportunity for students of all colleges who are interested in the French language to meet and spend an interesting and enjoyable evening together.

"Anyone will be welcomed," Miss Riddell said, "but please bring your membership card or ten cents."

Dr. Rand, Professor of Latin and Recognized for His Research on Classical Studies, Stresses the Broadening Value of Literature

WIDOW REPUTE

Professor E. K. Rand yesterday delivered the first of two addresses which are being sponsored by the Pontifical Institute of Medieval Studies. His subject was: "Virgil and Dante; Dante and Virgil." Tomorrow the second address, will be on "The Romantic Approach to the Middle Ages."

Dr. Rand has been Professor of Latin at Harvard since 1909 and formerly was at the University of Chicago and the University of Southern California. He is recognized both in America and in Europe for his research on classical subjects.

"All literature," Professor Rand said, "should widen the reader's horizons. For me the two greatest books in this respect are Plato's Republic and Dante's 'Divine Comedy.'" He stressed the similarities between Dante and Virgil, and said that it was possible, in spite of the difference in time, to treat them as (Continued on Page 4)

Varsity Students Comment On Their Ideal College Co-ed

Are you a Betty Co-ed? Or a Joe College? The ideal of a college student held by the Varsity student has many different aspects. Said Dot Hoyle, a Vic fresher, "Betty Co-ed should have glamorous hair, saddle shoes, skirts and sweaters, lots of pep, a string of men and a come-hither look; as for Joe College, he should have a brush cut, finger tip coat, pipe with nothing in it, and a string of girls."

Yvonne Finlay, Pass II, and styled an expert on American men, says the typical ed wears bolt neck sweaters, loud large bow ties, hats with brims turned up, short trousers, loud socks and three-quarter length coats. The co-eds have long hair, no rouge, lots of lipstick, hair ribbons, flat-heeled shoes and look sloppy in the day time but definitely glamorous at night."

In contrast to this Isobel Eastman says European college students are much more dressy than American, wear less eccentric adornments, and are more in-

Men Over Eighteen Who Have Attained Middle School Mathematics Are Eligible for the Three Months' Training

SPECIALIZED WORK

In answer to an appeal "of the great urgency," Professor E. F. Burton, head of the Department of Physics at the University of Toronto, will be chief instructor of a prescribed three month's course along technical lines in physics to be given to new recruits to the Canadian navy, it was learned yesterday.

The Canadian navy has advertised during the last fortnight for men over eighteen years of age to join over ranks to do specialized work. There was no definite announcement regarding what the specialized work or training would be.

"The minimum educational requirement," said Professor Burton, "is mathematics of the middle school. Recruits will be on pay at once," he added, "and will be sent to the Department of Physics for three months' training in the fundamental physics required."

Professor Burton said that these special students would be the first group of navy boys to appear on the campus during this war wearing the uniform of the Canadian navy.

"The need is so great that it is of the utmost importance that this class be filled to the full number of fifty according to the arrangements that have been made," he concluded.

Those who wish to apply should get in touch with the Commanding Officer, Naval Barracks, 165 Lakeshore Blvd., or phone Ke. 9425 to make an appointment for an interview. Applicants must bring birth certificates and school certificates or a letter from the principal.

MacGILLIVRAY TO SPEAK IN SECOND U.C. LECTURE

The second in the series of University College lectures on "Canadian Literature Today" will be given this Thursday at 5 p.m. in Room 8 of U.C. J. R. MacGillivray, Assistant Professor in English, will speak on "Recent Canadian Fiction."

The series comprises four lectures which cover the whole field of Canadian literature, its background, its fiction and its poetry. There is no admission charge and the public is invited.

For Student Relief

One week from today, Wednesday, February 5, is the date which has been set for the concentrated campaign for funds to carry on the work of International Student Service among students in all parts of the world. On that day—International Student Relief Day—undergraduates and staff members of the university will be asked to support with financial contributions the work being carried on.

What are we being called upon to do? What purposes will our financial support help achieve? I.S.S. has a three-point purpose:

- 1) To salvage the intellectual life of Europe and China by relieving the physical misery and intellectual isolation of students suffering as a result of the war.
- 2) To produce leadership essential for post-war cooperation between the nations.
- 3) To create good-will among the students of the world.

The Needs Are Great and Varied

Present needs fall into several categories. In Europe there are problems to be met in Germany, in France, and in Switzerland. There is also much work to be done in China. Prisoners of war are the biggest single problem facing relief organizations whose purposes are to protect the moral and intellectual welfare of war victims. Estimates vary, but there are said to be two million prisoners in Germany proper, including 400,000 Poles, while there are about a million in occupied France who may soon be transferred to Germany. Tracy Strong, Jr., a recent graduate of Yale University, has been engaged as a neutral secretary to work on behalf of the European Student Relief Federation, and has been active in visiting German prison camps. He reports that the crying need is for books and intellectual material to prevent mental and moral stagnation and disintegration. He has been in contact with many British and Canadian prisoners.

France, long the haven for refugees, finds herself burdened today with even greater numbers. Among them are many students who will escape being placed in concentration camps only through financial support to allow them to continue with their studies. A considerable number of these students, all their resources gone, have been returned to normal life by aid from the International Student Service.

Internee Universities Set Up

Likewise in Switzerland, where thousands of men fled after the fall of France, there is much work to be done among the interned refugees from the Nazi war machine. Four "internee universities" have been inaugurated with the financial backing of the I.S.S., but continued effort is necessary if the project is to run smoothly. Books are supplied the interned students, and exceptional students are given opportunities to organize courses for the others.

In China the need has been present for a long time, and it is still great. Nearly 100 of China's original 108 universities have been occupied or destroyed, and the rest have been forced to move into the interior. Books and materials have been swept away; they must be replaced.

A Large Scale Campaign

This campaign for student relief is on a large scale. In the United States students are in the process of raising $100,000 for a World Student Service Fund. The Roman Catholic student organization, Pax Romana, with headquarters in Washington has organized a Catholic student relief fund in the U.S.A. However, this is not being carried on in English-speaking Canada, and the secretary of Pax Romana has expressed the hope that Catholic students will support the I.S.S. in Canada. It all goes to the same cause.

The Record Tells the Tale

Here is the record of I.S.S. activities during the past year as quoted from the bulletin prepared by the Canadian committee. "A. In China—Money contributed provided "Work Scholarships" and loans to cover minimum expenses for food, lodging, clothing and other essentials; travel aid, a recurring need with the forced moving of universities to new locations of relative safety; student hostels for refugee students who are in financial difficulties; student centres—one serves five universities—in rented rooms or temporary buildings as a unique and necessary supplement to classroom education; medical aid and supplies; student cooperatives where a grant or loan of initial capital made possible work for self-support.

B. In Europe—The money sent to Geneva, Switzerland, in 1939-40, with the exception of a small balance kept on hand for work in the months preceding Christmas, has been spent in the following ways:

1. Food, parcels, soap, books, and financial subsidies for study to Polish students or refugees interned in Lithuania, Hungary, Roumania, and France.
2. Migration expenses to South America for several Spanish students who had found jobs there. (If they had no job, there was no point in sending them.)
3. Small grants to meet immediate distress amongst Finnish students at the end of their war.
4. Emigration expenses and scholarship grants to political and religious refugees from territories now held by Germany.
5. Initial expenses of the first neutral secretary to work among student prisoners of war in Germany, with allowance for their educational needs.
6. Books, language course, etc., for students among the Polish and French soldiers interned in Switzerland.

The past record and the present challenge have been presented by International Student Relief, and the success or failure of their program depends upon the financial support of the students of Canada and the United States. To us, still enjoying all the benefits of higher education in a free land, surrounded by material comforts, falls the grave responsibility of coming to the aid of less fortunate fellow students in other less happy lands. It is a responsibility not only to the present but to the future. You can accept that responsibility by acting on Wednesday, February 5.

Formula for Violinists

Erica Morini at Massey Hall

If it is possible to imagine a violin recital without one rough note, without one fault in intonation, (in short, technically perfect) that is what is still ringing in my ears as I write this review. Erica Morini has achieved technical perfection and she certainly extracted the musical optimum out of every selection she played.

The first two selections on the program were the best. The Tartini Sonata in G Minor was written by a technician who was also a musician; Kreisler's arrangement of the same composer's Variations on a Theme by Corelli showed the same musicianly interest. In both, the violinist showed her real musical sense and unbelievable ability to negotiate any pitfalls which fell her way.

If you like the Wieniawski Concerto in D Minor, perfection fell your way last night. My personal reaction was intense thrill at Erica Morini's playing and equally intense boredom with the music upon which she wasted it. The Wieniawski Concerto (like everything else the man wrote) is a technical masterpiece, well-beloved by sundry violinists. The tone which surrounded me during the Romance was, I think without exception, as beautiful as a violin can ever be meant to be. What might have been mere sugar or saccharine turned out (in spite of Wieniawski) to be interesting music.

After intermission the going for musicians got worse; those who came to be charmed enjoyed them-

CULTURED CROWD OF COEDS CRY 'DOWN WITH LIFE'

Horde of Scholarship Students Shouting "Stinkeroo" and Worse Protest Recent Life Magazine Article

LEFT STARK

Last Saturday representatives of the Women's Undergraduate Society, the Annesley Student Government Association, the Women's Auxiliary and the Pan-Hellenic Association stormed the Varsity Women's office with protests over a fancied slight to be found in the pages of the current issue of Life magazine. In an article entitled "Subdebase" the magazine, they claim, sought to discredit their argot by attributing its use to a definitely inferior class (but definitely).

"The idea that we are subdebs! I just can't cope with it!" gasped Helena Flagwaver of Hutton House. "Some icky has been shooting Life the wrong way about those adolescent J-Bugs," gurgled a zealous Alpha Phi Chry Omama pledge through her giant mallet.

"It is inconceivable that anyone should confuse the cultured phrases of the college woman with the prattle of vociferous adolescent morons," said the president of ASGA, "and I don't twofin' neither." The executive chorused, "I hear you talkin'; that's no dream" and gleefully fondled their fuzzy rabbit dolls.

All over this campus co-eds are returning to their comic books and fashion magazines as they settle down to the work of the new term. "Life can no longer be called a culture medium," is the consensus of opinion. "It's a stinkeroo," proclaim the WSTD.

"I won't even send my copies to the Army," proclaims Wilhelmina Swizzlestick in an advanced state of loathing. "I left my Life with father."

"I curdles me," mourned a martyred matriculant as we spoiled her outer cocoon over her divine memory book. So we left her stark. "I'm simply a bundle," jittered one co-ed from her corner by the juke box. The article berseks me.

At this point your reporter realized that a lynch mob of co-eds suspecting him of being a Life-er was following him. He quietly joined.

selves. A Rondino by Beethoven, the Brahms Waltz in A Flat Major, a Minuet and Rondo by Mozart, the Ravel Habanera, all appeared; the whole evening culminated in the Foxt-Waltz by that King of Technique, Sarasate. It was all the same, but it might have been worse. One cannot be angry at Erica Morini even when she plays such stuff: she does it too well.

When it comes to the Londouderry Air (colloq. "Daddy Boy") played as an encore (Allah is still merciful), I cannot follow. I hate the thing, even though it is "the finest folk-melody in existence". Let the folk sing it. Toronto violinists will be interested to know that I have discovered, alchemically, the secret of such a on-the-whole-marvellous concert. Take one Stradivarius violin (with bow), one good accompanist such as Max Lanner, and submerge the whole in Erica Morini. First catch Morini!

Wycliffe Scores Victory In Four-Man Relay

Indoor Track Events for Inter-faculty Championship Held Yesterday; Sprinters Led by Jerry Proderick of Victoria

SECOND MEET

Hec Phillips' charges went pounding around the lincolnum oval in Hart House yesterday in the second meet in the year's series of indoor track events for the interfaculty championship.

The sprinters were led by Jerry Proderick of Victoria III, who took the 100-yard dash in the time of 11.2 seconds.

Harold Brown of O.C.E. hung up the same time in the second position as Art Tippetts, a fleet freshman from Trinity, with a mark of 11.4. Fourth place went to Wallace Brown of O.C.E. who was clocked at 11.5.

The Wycliffe team scored a notable victory in the four-man two-mile relay, coming from behind to take the event by a good margin over the second place Victoria quartet. The time for the race, which was really about 2 1/4 miles—six laps to a man—was 8 minutes and 56 seconds.

Sully of Victoria pulled ahead of Arthur Thomson in the initial contest, but Maunsell Hunt brought the Theobalds back into the race when he steamed home in a tie with Herlick of the Scarlet and Gold. A great attempt was made by Proderick of Victoria to regain the lead, but his running mate Geoff Parke-Taylor, who was in fresher condition due to Proderick having run in the previous sprints, and was able to forge ahead to give Wycliffe a margin.

Tom Barnett clinched it for the Anglicans with a dazzling burst of speed which defeated Rutherford of the Vic squad. Barnett started out with the lead given him by Parke-Taylor and extended it until he breezed home more than half a lap ahead of the nearest man.

WITH SCORE 6-1 TRINITY TROUNCES ST. MIKE'S PLAYERS

Paced on the attack by young Bud Leake while "Beef" MacMillan and Don Boxer threw up a stout defense, Trinity A hockey sextet swept to a convincing 6-1 victory over St. Mike's A yesterday afternoon at the Bloor St. arena.

Trinity gave the best all-round display of puckchasing seen thus far in the interfaculty loop while the Irish, constantly disorganized, muffed the breaks which did come their way.

Leake, aided by centre Johnny Henderson, broke through a wobbly Double Blue defense to count three times, once in the initial period and twice in the final session. McClelland, Frewer and MacMillan completed the Anglican total while Frank Bennett sank St. Mike's lone tally.

Trinity A: Jarvis, Boxer, MacMillan, Wittingham, Andrews, Leake, Henderson, McClelland, Frewer, Phillips. St. Mike's A: O'Brien, Callahan, Fyfe, Bennett, Hector, Morrison, Hughes, Lavery, O'Sullivan.

SPORT SPLASHES

By Stan Westcott

Jr. School outsmarted, outsped and outplayed Vic II's in the first game of a Waterloo twin bill yesterday afternoon. Consequently they administered a severe thrashing to the Scarlet and Gold, trouncing them by the whitewash score of 7-0.

The Engineers invariably got the ball from the centre face-off, and kept it in the Vic zone almost without a break. Their passing and celerity was vastly superior. They were never seriously threatened.

Byrnes led the parade with three goals, while Northwood slammed home two. Moffat and Gottlieb completed the score with one counter apiece.

Sr. S.P.S. went their more youthful conferees one better by routing Wycliffe with an extraordinary and very convincing score of 9-0 in the second game. All in all it was a day for great rejoicing among the aquatic frolicers of the Toile Oike.

School scored almost at will in this game. They tossed many hard, fast and accurate shots at the big Wycliffe net. Frank De Marco, playing centre, was a grand playmaker, setting up numerous plays for his wing-mates, especially Pete Rogers.

It was anything but a two-man team, however, as every lad on the squad took his turn at bombarding the opposing citadel. And everybody scored a goal. Rogers blurred the twice twice with dynamic drives from close in.

Jr. S.P.S.: Moffat 1, Northwood 2, Bruce, Bell, Rimmer, Hill, Gottlieb 1, Byrnes 3.

Vic II: Shortt, Ridley, M. Johnston, R. Johnston, Conn, Cross, Taylor. Sr. S.P.S.: Allan 1, DeMarco 1, Staples 1, Rogers 2, Turner 1, Reeves 1, Idenden 1.

Wycliffe: Conebeare, Elliot, Coleman, Hill, Noel, Thomson, Hunt, McDonald.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Owen Prichard

WEATHER COLD—TRACK CROWDED

The times which were turned in by the runners in yesterday's edition of the indoor interfaculty track meet were not sensational, but the races were very interesting and provided some spirited competition. Coach Hec Phillips remarked after the race that the lads were not so fast on the turns, and could have done with a bit of brushing up on the technique of taking the curves in high. This corner suggests that the presence of spectators cluttering up the track while they watched the basketball games did not help the runners much either.

Jerry Proderick deserves a lot of bouquets for his performance in the 200 yard dash, which he covered in 11.2. Proderick came home in front of both the Brown Twins of O.C.E., and when you run past that pair you aren't shuffling. Incidentally, real track material among the new men is seen in Art Tippetts of Trinity's freshman class, who tied Harold Brown for the second slot.

Hec must have beamed when he saw that Wycliffe quartet come home with one of the faculty's few athletic wins of this season. We don't suggest that the track mentor was favouring the Anglican squad; what we mean is that every one of these boys started his training under the guidance of the Varsity coach. Tom Barnett has spent a lot of his summer time during the last long holidays working out under Hec's tutelage. Geoff Parke-Taylor is another who has benefited greatly from his advice and encouragement. But Maunsell Hunt and Arthur Thomson are who lads who started with very little outward signs of running promise, and the indefatigable Phillips has worked with them until they are valuable men to have on any interfaculty team.

There are few coaches who are willing to work as hard as Hec has laboured with many a raw recruit to track and field activity. His immense store of vitality and boundless encouragement for any fellow who is really trying to learn the sport have brought out of many students athletic talents of whose very existence they themselves have often been unaware.

When you think of coaches in most sports, you recall them as you have seen them during the course of games—sitting on the bench, master-minding a rugby or basketball squad; crouching in the corner of some boxer; but we personally always think of Hec as busy digging starting holes for practising runners at Varsity Stadium, or showing some ambitious sprinter how to start his arms pumping and get the most drive out of his legs, or (as we watched him one day a few years ago) spending ungrudging time and interest with a fellow who wanted to perfect his hurdling stride—a fellow named Larry O'Connor.

Varsity students are fortunate in having such a competent coach, and the best word comes from his own charges, who turn in their best performances in appreciation of the help and interest Hec has given them.

THE NEXT UNIVERSITY NIGHT

As announced last Saturday night, University College will act as hosts at the University Night of this week. The Royal College boys are getting hep on the matter, and are determined to set a high standard for the evening. There will be only one basketball tussle—a probable killer-diller between Senior U.C. and Senior S.P.S. The other hour between eight and ten in the Big Gym will be taken up with a presentation of skits or such which are now being dreamed up by the U.C. lads. We understand that the charter members of the University College Rotunda Conversation Put-them-all-together-they-sell-WOMEN group will be on deck with all the renowned U.C. glamour to act as hostesses. (Carried unanimously.)

"Mac" McCutcheon informs us that the number of games will be increased, and asks us to remind the students of all faculties that any suggestions for new activities will be welcome.

The Upper Gym on Saturday will be the scene of the annual Interfaculty Novice Assault. This assault is open to any who have not yet won in a bout in interfaculty competition. Get your entries in NOW.

This next University Night looks like a good thing. Remember, it is open to all students, not merely those of the college acting as hosts. We want the whole university on hand Saturday night at eight—for fun and games, dancing, sports, boxing, wrestling, and forty gorgeous hostesses forty!

By Marg. Foulds

If only the cold weather be with us for one more week, just one more week, just—well, we have big things today, Friday and Saturday. Today at 6, Vic II play St. Mike's on the Little Vic rink, and at 7, O.T. & P. meet U.C. on the Trinity Athletic Field. The two games on Monday night were both worthwhile efforts from the point of view of all concerned but due to the fact that both took place at the same time and at places a bit far apart, not so many rail-birds were around as we've seen in our day. However, tonight the two games are at different times, nice convenient times too unless you're the piggy type, so let's have good turn-outs at both these features. Come on, eh?

On Friday night we'll have some more hockey to boast about, but we'll save that to fill up another column.

Knox and S.P.S. Basketeers Ride to Rosy Victory

Druggists Defeated in Hard-Fought Battle with Steele and Titcher Scoring High

SCORE 18-14

A second half rally by the Pharmacy B basketeers was not quite good enough to wipe out an early lead of the Knox B team yesterday as the Presbyterians came out on the bright side of an 18-14 score.

Led by the consistent sniping of Len Self, the Purple and White gained what proved to be a sufficient margin in the first period, which ended with Knox leading 10-3.

The second frame saw the Pestle Pounders begin to hit the mark, and eleven points rolled through the hoop. But the Knoxmen held off the Druggists' onslaught long enough to add another win to their credit.

Steele and Titcher scored four tallies apiece for the Pill Rollers, while Len Self and Fergie Barr scored most of the Presbyterians' points.

Knox: Archibald (2), Self (8), Barr (6), Vance, Evans, Granger (2). Pharmacy B: Russell (3), Walther, Steele (4), Boyd, Kestenberg, Pelkovitz, Titcher (4), Newman (3), Brown.

MEDSMEN STAGE THIRD-INNING RALLY

The Senior Medsmen staged a third-inning rally in yesterday's baseball game with Senior Victoria, and walked off the Big Gym floor victors by a 3-1 score.

The Scarlet and Gold counted a run in the first half of the opening inning. Then hurlers Ian McLeod of Vic and Cowan of the Doctors settled down to a pitchers' duel. The single tally by the Artsmen looked pretty big for the next two innings, until the Men in White started landing on MacLeod's offerings for three runs.

Although MacLeod struck out six to five fanned by Cowan, and Vic got five hits to three by the Medsmen, the Meds team bunched its hits nicely, and was able to hold Victoria scoreless in the fourth inning to take the game.

Patterson Achieves 6 Baskets for Winners, while Schneider Adds up 13 Points for Losers; Wide-open Contest

SCORE 45-36

A wide-open basketball contest in Hart House yesterday ended in a 45-36 victory for S.P.S. IV over Dents B squad.

The Molarmen improved as the game went on, but could not sink enough baskets to catch the triumphant Engineers. Leading 32-13 at the interval, the Schoolmen had a comfortable margin to their credit when the Tooth-Tuggers started their onslaught, and were nine points ahead at the final whistle.

Tom Patterson added considerably in the Engineers' win, notching six baskets of his own for 12 counters. Brant of School, with five buckets and a pair of foul shots, shared the scoring honours with Patterson. Schneider was the big gun for the losers, capitalizing on foul shots for five singles, which added to his four field goals gave him thirteen points for the day.

Dents B: Scott (2), Spivak, Witchel (7), Schneider (13), Smyth (8), Cle (6).

S.P.S. IV: Van Wyck (4), Turner (8), Patterson (12), Guy (4), Mason (3), Brant (12), Chepkin (2).

countries after the war. Since it is no longer possible to help the Czech, Polish and other students of Europe at home, Free France remains virtually the only connecting link with them.

Two other groups are the concern of the I.S.S. in their coming financial appeal. They are the Chinese students and the students imprisoned or interned as a result of the war.

The Chinese students have been forced back from the coast and all that remains of the Chinese universities are the students and the professors. Their buildings have been left behind and texts are scarce. Their needs, however, are basic—food and clothing must be their chief concern. Mr. Mackie pointed out that China is a particularly fruitful field for student relief work since money is worth much more in China and consequently much more work can be done there with a given amount than elsewhere.

As a result of this war there are 3,700,000 prisoners and internees. Among these there are many students and a large number of them are in Germany. The I.S.S. are in touch with British students in Germany and are seeking books which they may send to them to help them continue their studies.

Many German and Italian students of the refugee class interned in Canada are about to be released, but they have some months of waiting ahead of them and meanwhile are in urgent need of books, especially language texts and elementary science.

"Among the prisoners of war here there must be some German and Italian students," Mackie said, "and we are seeking to get in touch with them. Our work among them is in tacit consideration for the co-operation of the German government's letting us work with the British students interned and imprisoned in Germany. This is at least materially the most important reason for helping German and Italian students among the prisoners of war."

In connection with the coming International Student Relief Day, February 5, the I.S.S. will be collecting books as well as money for distribution among those who need texts rather than financial assistance. Voluntary help in the collection of books will be welcomed by the University of Toronto Student Christian Movement. Volunteers should see Mr. John Coleman at the S.C.M. office in Hart House.

Mr. Mackie expressed the belief that among European refugees now in Canada there may be some university students who are financially unable to continue their studies. The I.S.S. is eager to get in touch with these and intends to help them when the coming financial campaign is completed.

WIDE-EYED IN GOTHAM

By Reuven Frank

To the Barricades

NEW YORK: At the World's Fair (may it rest in peace) freedom of speech was represented by a huge marble statue of a tall, handsome young man with nudist inclinations, with the pedestal teeming with relief figures of similar nudist proclivities — and all of them jabbering away so that you would wonder how they could hear each other. In Manhattan proper the same situation holds: freedom of speech has reduced his Grecian proportions (he looks rather seedy, in fact) and put on some very old clothes, but the orators still jabber away so that no one of them can hear the others. Nor are they interested. Anybody can buy an American flag for two-bits, pick a spot where he won't disrupt traffic, and talk. All up and down Broadway, long-haired fanatics drool at each corner of the mouth and try to save your soul or convince you that you haven't got one. The thousands of little parks and boulevards that dot the city have each their handful of messiahs, mountebanks and medicine men. Down on the lower east side, Sunday afternoons would be enlivened for many years by a little, meek man who transformed himself into a ranting apostle of godlessness as soon as he mounted the soap-box.

"If there is a God," he would shout at the sky, "let him strike me down here and now! Let him kill me!" But if there was a God, he probably didn't think it worth the bother, and the atheist orator died a few months ago at the age of eighty, of purely natural causes.

The real centres of Lever Bros. oratory are Union Square and Columbus Circle. Union Square, strangely enough, was not named after any labour organization, although none of the speakers or the loungers feel anything but contempt for the employing class, but for the preservation of the Union. A statue of the late Mr. Lincoln, generally credited with saving the Union, dominates the scene, looking very sad and homelier than Raymond Massey.

Lately the most popular holder-forth has been an Indian who wears his hair in braids, and flaunts a faded blue shirt in the coldest weather. His people have been unjustly treated, and he feels very sad. Everyone else feels very sad, too. They know what it is to be unjustly treated, and a bond of sympathy flourishes and grows and everyone looks woebegone. Well, as soon as the redskin has the doggy men of toll sniffing, he bends down. No, he is not going to bite the dust — merely to open a worn satchel and extract a bottle.

"I have here," he says, "a medicine perfected by my people which is guaranteed to cure..."

There is a little fellow with a paunch and glasses and a bald head and a loose bridge. Whenever he mentions a revered revolutionary, he removes his hat and reveals the bald head. And whenever he says "proletariat" the loose bridge comes in view as a handful of assorted incisors and bicusps fly into the front row of his audience.

He can go on for hours. One of his audience slips away for a moment and strolls nonchalantly towards the good humour man. He peaks furtively around, test a friend see him indulging in capitalist delicacies, and extracts a nickel from a worn change-purse. This he waves towards the g.h.m. with a hoarse croak of, "Butter pecan."

The g.h.m. says, "Ten cents."

Thereupon the prospective investor releases the nickel in the worn purse, and measures the good humour man from head to foot with a baleful glare. "Enemy of the working-classes!"

From 14th St. and Fourth Avenue, which is Union Square, Broadway cuts its diagonal course to 34th St. and Sixth Avenue, which is Herald Square (Macy's, Gimbel's and Saks'), to 42nd St. and Seventh Avenue, which is Times Square, to 59th St. and Eighth Avenue, which is Columbus Circle. After getting past Columbus Circle, Broadway is worn out, and thenceforth is just another wide street.

As has been indicated, Columbus Circle is formed by the confluence of three thoroughfares, the south-west corner of Central Park, a crowd of people and two cops. Not to mention the statue of Columbus, which is only recognized on Columbus Day, when ward-leaders assemble, and try to angle for Italian votes by speaking mightily of the grandeur that was Rome. This is usually an unsuccessful manoeuvre, since the Italian population doesn't go to Columbus Circle on Columbus Day, but spends the day at Coney Island.

On the other 364 days of the year (365 for leap year) the talkfest is purely amateur, or, at best, semi-professional. One of the oldest habits is an Ethiopian with a kinky beard who claims that he is the ten lost tribes, although he doesn't look it. He sells nothing, he buys nothing, and he has no use for money. I know what you are going to say, but he has no use for Ripley, either.

The Circle also has assorted hate-inciters. The followers of Father Coughlin, Joe McWilliams, W. D. Pelley and other totalitarians of the right gather round and talk. If there is anything really interesting going on, the crowd ignores them. But if it is a pretty slow night, the crowd gathers round the little propaganda ministers, and before you know it, there's a riot. Whenever anyone bothers to listen to these guys there's a riot, so the cops run in the orators and the crowd goes home feeling cheated.

The revivalists and assorted religious emissaries are better represented here than down on 14th St. Usually they have an audience of one, some poor imbecile sobbing quietly to himself as the accordion plays the old hymns. If there is an audience of two, he brought his brother.

Then there is Pork-Chops.

"I didn't come here to save you. I come here for you to save me..."

Pork-chops is a bum. "Not a hobo: a bum, and I'm proud of it." He is chubby and short like LaGuardia, so he is running for mayor.

"When I'm mayor, that park over there will have steam-heated benches, and beer in all the taps. Why, no self-respecting bum would drink that water stuff they serve..."

"There's too much talk about work these days. Who wants to work? When I'm mayor nobody is going to work!" The crowd cheers, but Pork-chops holds up his hand in an imperious gesture for silence. "—except the cops..."

Yeah, you, you overgrown flatfoot... When I'll be mayor, we're going to sit by the fireside and tell the President what to do..."

And with that note of triumph he descends, and passes the hat around. Pork-chops for mayor, I say. What do you say?

brother artists. Dante chose Virgil rather than Aristotle as his guide, because the philosophy in the "Divine Comedy" was intended to be incidental rather than integral and thus a poet was a fitter model than a philosopher.

"Love was the animating force of Dante's poetry, dream of empire," Virgil's," said Dr. Rand. In conclusion, he predicted that the study of the classics would again increase in popularity, for there is a definite need for a re-examination of them with a more critical estimate of the medieval imagination, Mullett. The leaders of the movement are Christians who are chosen for this reason and because they display more fortitude and can be trusted.

Son of Dr. Mullett, Jack "Red" Mullett, 4th year Dentistry, is well known in university athletic circles for his prominence in soccer, basketball, and for being an interfacety tennis champ. "After graduation I would like nothing better than to return to Chengtu where I was born and to help promote modern dentistry there," declared Jack. It is interesting to note that his parents are tennis champions in West China. Jack speaks excellent Chinese as do his parents.

Dr. and Mrs. Mullett hope to return to China next summer. They will have to fly from Shanghai to Chengtu, 2,000 miles inland, in order to reach their home. The only other means is to return by way of India and the Burma road, which would mean another month of travel, stated Dr. Mullett.

senior, Dr. Willan opened the program with Handel's Overture to "Semele." After a stately beginning the work proceeds to a spirited Fugato and a graceful Gavotte, movements in which both composer and organist were able to exhibit their considerable charm. The Josef-Reinberger Sonata No. 4 in A minor was well chosen and carefully done. The first movement, a Moderato, is notable for its clear-cut and distinctive themes, themes which appear again in the serene Intermezzo and the Fuga Cromatica.

Particularly well done was the last movement where Willan showed a great capacity for reserve together with his ability to avoid that jerkiness of tone development so prevalent among men of lesser ability. He was careful not to make the Karg-Elert Chorale-pretudes more than they are—simply melodies fitted with varied accompaniments. The well-known Bach Toccata and Fugue in D minor was given a thoroughly adequate performance and, as might be expected, it overshadowed the preceding works. The timeless impersonality of Bach has never been surpassed. Willan gave him his due.

Meds At-Home Orchestra Not Hindered by Fire

SUNDAY CONCERT

Eighty single tickets which will admit men students only to the Sunday Evening Concert to be held in the Great Hall of Hart House on Sunday next 2nd February at 9 p.m. will be issued from the hall porter's desk after 1 p.m. today.

Mackie to Discuss Students and War in Women's Union

Rev. Robert Mackie, present secretary of the World's Student Christian Federation, will speak to students concerning their position in the war, at the Women's Union on Thursday, January 30, at 8 p.m.

Due to his wide experiences in Europe, Rev. Mackie is able to give a first-hand account of the conflicting forces unleashed there. Because of his position he was in the closest touch with students and with student movements throughout Europe and the world in the years preceding the war. He was in Switzerland at the time of the collapse of France, leaving Geneva for London the day before Paris fell. Mr. Mackie was caught in the German advance and stranded with his wife and son in a small French village for a month.

The meeting is the regular January gathering of the University College S.C.M. Following the talk will be discussion and refreshments.

Public Lectures To be Held At Victoria

The Victoria College Council is presenting its annual series of public lectures to be held in Alumni Hall every Wednesday at 5 o'clock during February.

Professor S. H. Gould, the first speaker, will speak on "The Nature of Epigram." Prof. Gould has just completed a survey of epigram forms from the eighteenth century to the present.

W. H. Threlweth, Professor of French at Vic, will deliver an address on February 12 on "The Legend of King Arthur." He will discuss the real story of King Arthur, and students of English may get a good many sidelights on the works of Tennyson.

The third speaker will be Dr. Pratt. He has chosen as his subject "Source of Material for Contemporary Verse." He will refer to "Brecht" and also to the labour and method of amassing material for this and other historical (Continued on Page 4)

Survey Finds What Goes On Inside the Purses of Girls on Campus

To say that Varsity co-eds carry everything from "soup to nuts" in their purses would be a slight exaggeration, but not a great one. A campus survey reveals that the girls' purses often perform the function of miniature suitcases.

All the handbags examined contained those little utensils so essential to maintaining the illusion of feminine glamour (comb, powder and lipstick, in case you hadn't guessed). One fastidious co-ed determined never to be caught in "deshabille" even carries an eyelash brush. Another finds a small bottle of perfume useful for acquiring all on short notice. The weather decides what a purse should contain, to a certain extent, and right now many of them are

Damage from Fire at Brant Inn will not Affect Mart Kenney's Playing at Royal York This Friday

MUSIC WILL BE RECOPIED

The disastrous fire which destroyed the Brant Inn on Sunday night, along with some of Mart Kenney's orchestra's instruments and music, will have no effect whatsoever on the orchestra's playing this Friday night for the Meds At-Home, it was learned.

Mart Kenney has already played two engagements since the fire, no music having been lost which could not be recopied from the scores, and only his xylophone and some drums being damaged.

With Mart Kenney supplying the music, the entertainment at the forthcoming At-Home will be further completed by a specially imported floor show featuring Mildred Morey, the "Original Personality Girl," of Chez Maurice fame in Montreal; the Carr brothers known as the "Goofy Gobs," formerly of the Ringling Barnum Circus; "their antics leave nothing to be desired," say the promoters; third in the list are Billy and Kay Arnot, the originators of "I wouldn't fool you for the world."

Corsages are positively banned. Instead, the girls are supposed to disport little skull and cross-bones pins which will be sold for 50 cents, the profits going to war charities.

Annual Dance to Unite Students From Four Other Provinces

Graduates will gather from the four universities of Western Canada at their annual Toronto dance on Saturday, February 1. Former students from Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba and British Columbia have arranged this affair to take place at the Roof Garden of the Royal York.

INCORRECT STATEMENT

A quotation in last Friday's Varsity attributed to Morris Hay, president of the Vic Debating Parliament, was erroneously credited to him. The publicity was issued by the Propaganda Minister, without the president's knowledge it is claimed, but through misinterpretation an incorrect statement was printed in The Varsity. Neither Mr. Hay nor Miss Carefoot, Propaganda Minister, authorized publication of the statement as it appeared. The following statement was later issued by Mr. Hay: "Accusations of Ted Gray which were put into my mouth were most unjust, and while I cannot accept responsibility for them I much regret that they were published. . . . There has never been any doubt that Mr. Gray personally enjoys the confidence of his fellow students."

Blood Donors Are to Sign At Hart House

Students Have Opportunity to Save Lives and Thus "Do Their Bit" in Beating Hitler

1500 STUDENTS NEEDED

Men of the university who wish to donate blood to the Toronto Red Cross Blood Donors' Clinic are now being asked to sign at the Hall Porter's desk in Hart House. "This voluntary service affords the boys a wonderful opportunity to serve their country and save lives," stated Mr. G. R. Sproat, chairman of the clinic, to the Varsity yesterday.

After it has been grouped, tested, and processed, it is sent to military centres in Canada and overseas. Last year about 500 students contributed their blood. Mr. Sproat, remarking that it was usually more convenient for students to do this than men with families, said that this year he hoped for as many as 1500 donors from the university. From the city of Toronto, 6000 are needed.

The actual process of donation takes only 15 minutes and each person gives (Continued on Page 4)

Further Study Made Possible For Women

Bulletin boards about the campus, and particularly in the Registrar's Office, are literally laden down with notices announcing the numerous scholarships and fellowships available for the women of this university. The total sum runs into many thousands of dollars.

Some of the universities offering these scholarships are Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania, University of Southern California, and Washington. One scholarship of special interest is the "Travelling Scholarship." It has a value of $1500 and enables a graduate to do research for one year.

Candidates for scholarships must be graduates of a university of good standing and candidates for fellowships must have done at least a year of post graduate work.

Dining Hall of New Trinity Will Rival Hart House

ART EXHIBIT

Here is an opportunity to show your work. The annual exhibition of water-colours, oils and drawings done by undergraduate members of Hart House in their leisure time will be on view in the art gallery from 15th February to 1st March. Members are urged to bring their pictures to the Warden's office not later than Wednesday, 12th February. If they are unframed, arrangements may be made in that office for framing.

Robinette Debates Coming; Year Presidents Take Names

Entries for participation in the Robinette Debates are now being received by the year presidents. As these debates are to begin immediately those who have not yet given notice of their intention of participating should drop a slip of paper bearing their names in the Lit. office letter-box in the U.C. Common Room. The finals will take place at the Lit. nomination meeting in February.

S.C.M. Topic Is Medicine As a Career

Dr. J. H. Couch Emphasizes Necessity of Public Service Attitude Toward Medical Profession

A LIFE OF SERVICE

"Medicine as a Christian Career" was the subject under discussion yesterday at the S.C.M. continued its series of noon-hour addresses on choosing a life's work. Speaker of the day was Dr. J. H. Couch, M.A., M.B., F.R.C.S., of the Faculty of Medicine.

Dr. Couch led off with the comment that the doctor is far more than a professional man who carries a black bag and has a brass plate on his door. The doctor chooses his career because of a subconscious urge to be of service. Since only 2 per cent of the community has the chance to attend a university, Dr. Couch emphasized the great debt which every graduate owes to his neighbors, whose taxes pay the major part of his fees. Of all graduates, it is the doctor who has the best opportunity of repaying the debt. He quoted the verse "Unto whom much hath been given, from him much shall be required."

S.P.S. TUSSLE U.C. FOR 11-8 BASEBALL WIN

School IV managed to squeeze out an 11-8 win over U.C. III in a big game baseball game yesterday afternoon. Although the Schoolboys only got 8 hits as to the Artsmen's 10, U.C. loomed up in the last inning with many errors to give School the all-important lead. Duncan, Claver and Waisglass got some good hits for U.C. while Allen and Brooks bagged a few for School.

S.P.S. IV: Christlaw, Allen, McGowan, Brookes, Campbell, Parchello, Workman, Mitchell, Boyle, Bell.

U.C. III: Duncan, Hunter, Claver, Lofman, Waisglass, Hurst, White, Nicholls, Zierler.

"Work is proceeding according to schedule," the Bursar of Trinity College told The Varsity yesterday in reference to the new residence now under construction.

"Except for the slating, the outside work is completed. Work is going on at a steady pace in the interior of the building," he continued.

On a tour through part of the half-completed residence, the Bursar pointed out several improvements. "The arches are up, and the wall panels will soon be in place. The ceiling of the dining hall will be covered with painted cork panels, which will be sound-absorbing. This should be a distinct advantage over the Great Hall in Hart House."

Incidentally, the new Trinity dining hall, to be known as Strachan Hall, is approximately the same size as the Great Hall, and will have about the same seating capacity.

"The Common Room, or Rhodes Room will also be furnished in many ultra-modern ways. We hope to have it completed soon," the Bursar concluded with a smile, "so that the smokers will make use of it, instead of the side halls, as is the practice now."

Vic Debates at Queen's On Russo-German Pact

FRIDAY RECITAL

Jean Lennie, who will give the recital on Friday afternoon at 5 p.m. in the Music Room, Hart House is a very talented young artist. Born in New Westminster, British Columbia, Miss Lennie is also well known in Ottawa and Toronto. She is a student of Margaret Brown and came first in the A.T.C.M. examinations at the Toronto Conservatory of Music in 1939. Last year she won the Heintzman and Company Scholarship. Not only is Miss Lennie proficient on the piano but she is also an accomplished violinist and has worked with Kathleen Parlow.

Former M'Gill Dean Approves Freedom For Student Paper

"A free and unattached undergraduate newspaper, in my opinion, will be much more amusing and likely to be read by the students than one which is under the control of the students' governing body," said Mrs. W. C. Grant, former Dean of Women at McGill University, yesterday, when questioned by Bill Small, president of the S.A.C., in the first meeting of the Women's S.C.M. "Noon-Hour Quiz" series. Mrs. Grant pointed out that the most undesirable condition would be that of having a publication presumably free, but actually tied to the council. She emphasized the importance, however, of having a correspondence column, in which anyone, including the members of the governing body, has the opportunity of objecting to any views expressed in the publication.

On Bill Small's query as to the best system of representing student opinion in elections, Mrs. Grant pointed out the similarity of the University of Toronto and Canada in that they both have a federal rather than a unitary government. She advocated as much free representation as possible, in order that the person might express his own opinions rather than being hampered by the necessity of expressing those of the body which he is representing.

With regard to permanent employment service, however, Mrs. Grant expressed her conviction that such confidential business as the placing of first class people in first class positions should be in the hands of older people. Mrs. Grant added that the feeling of apathy of the average citizen and (Continued on Page 4)

Usually Reliable Sources Conceal All Of Modern History Club Happenings

Tonight is the night the Modern History Club goes off the deep end and lifts the veil of secrecy from its big mystery night.

Theirs not to reason why, is the attitude of the History Club executive who will divulge no hint of the object of their famous activity. All the social director will say is that no club has ever tried it before, perhaps none will try it again, but it will be an evening that no one present will ever forget. This, the first outside venture of the club in the new year, is a departure from ordinary social activities. It's not educational, the executive claims, but you'll learn a lot of interesting things. It's not to be wild, but hardly as sober

Parliament and Union Teams Meet Saturday at Kingston in Initial Match of Current Affairs Series

SUBJECT PROVES POPULAR

Next Saturday, February 1, Morris Hay and Jack Coleman will travel to Kingston to represent the Victoria College Debating Parliament in a debate with the Queen's University Debating Union.

"Resolved that the Russo-German pact of August-September 1939 constitutes an armed alliance for joint aggression," will be the subject of the debate. The Toronto team will support the affirmative.

In February it has been arranged that representatives will come from Queen's to Toronto for a return debate at Victoria College. These debates were arranged last year but circumstances forced their postponement until the present time.

The same topic of the Russo-German pact was debated at the Victoria College Debating Parliament in November, which proved to be the most successful debate of the season. At that time, the negative side won their case.

Both members of the Toronto team are experienced debaters. Morris Hay is president of the Victoria College Debating Parliament and Jack Coleman is one of the year representatives in the same organization.

First Ski Meets To be on Weekend

The long-awaited series of Intramural Ski Meets will open at 1:30 this coming Sunday afternoon, at which time half of the first round of races will be run off simultaneously at both ends of the University Ski Club property. What's more, the women of the university will be having a meet of their own at the club on Saturday afternoon.

Since the top-notch skiers of last year are not eligible for the faculty and college teams, a new and promising crop of stars will grace the snows this week-end: John Ellis and Bill Kingsmill of S.P.S. are capable of great things, not to mention Gord Black of Vic and Ted Wilvers from Trinity.

The set-up for this year's teams is divided into two groups as indicated below. Group I will run downhill and slalom first, at Edwards' farm, on the big hill there. While that is going on there will be jumping for Group II at Newton's, and then Group II's cross-country. At the next meet these situations will be reversed and the results of these two meets will determine the four teams which will go into the finals. Three from Group I and one from group II.

Gallup and "Lease-Lend"

In any emergency, or even in any case where there is subject for debate, Dr. George Gallup of the Gallup polls is always right on the scene to tell you what the country as a whole thinks. Naturally the Lease-Lend Bill being debated in Washington drew him like a magnet, and he has already issued a set of statistics of American public opinion on the subject.

After a nation-wide survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion, Dr. Gallup reports that a majority of American voters favor the lease-lend bill. The majority stands at fifty-four per cent, with many sections of the country still to be heard from. The returns are only from the large urban centres, New York, Philadelphia and Chicago. The vote from the farm areas and small towns, which previous studies have found to be more isolationist, Dr. Gallup says may greatly alter the percentages.

Those interviewed were first asked if they were familiar with the bill and the issues involved, to which 80 per cent replied in the affirmative. Those who said they had been following the discussion were asked the following question: "Do you think Congress should pass the bill?" Returns to date show the following: Yes—54 per cent. No—34 per cent. Undecided—12 per cent.

Dr. Gallup explained that "Many of those voters who favour the bill attach important qualifications to their answers; in fact about one person in every six approving the bill wants some sort of amendment made to it. The chief qualifications are that a time limit should be set on the bill, and that the measure should specifically forbid the President from sending American troops abroad, or any part of the Navy abroad."

Data from Chicago interviewers indicates a much higher degree of scepticism over the bill in that area than in the New York and Philadelphia areas, explained the Institute's director. This, he says, squares with earlier evidence which has shown that Chicago is in the "capital" of isolationist sentiment.

"Chicago voters reached in the study indicate much more concern than those in other sections over the possibility of a Roosevelt dictatorship if the lease-lend bill passes, and the possibility that it will help push the country into war. Roosevelt's alleged 'secrecy' and his way of 'keeping things from the people' came in for much criticism by Chicagoans reached in the study. In Philadelphia and New York the temper of opinion on the bill is very different from that of Chicago."

Of those who favoured the bill, Dr. Gallup said, "The majority advance the argument that 'the British are fighting our battle', that passage of the lease-lend bill will actually help to keep us out of the war 'by sending machines and not men.'"

At complete set of statistics on nation-wide opinion, it was reported, would be ready in about a week.

So Easy to Remember!

The one trouble with an examination system, wherein the student can cram strenuously over a short period of time and get his year, is that the student rapidly forgets much of what he has "learned." There is a real advantage in having comprehensive examinations at the end of the final year, for the student not only sees his whole course in its true perspective, but it also shows just how much one can forget in four years.

The Carnegie Foundation did some worrying recently about how much the average college graduate forgets. The worrying moved them to carry out actual tests. Several years ago the researchers had tested college students, first as sophomores and then as seniors. To make the new test they rounded up these same students, five years after their graduation, and gave them the same test all over again. The report is most interesting, and most gratifying. Surprisingly enough the five-year graduates had forgotten very little. One group of seventy men and women achieved an average score of 53 points when they were sophomores, 59 when they were dignified seniors, and 57.5 five years after their graduation. Another group improved its score.

The tests revealed that the subjects in which the graduates forgot most were mathematics, foreign literature and history, while those subjects best retained were fine arts and general sciences. Greatest improvement in any subject was shown in the realm of vocabulary.

The Foundation's chief researcher does not lay stress on the significance of these scores for he observed that post-college forgetting and learning varied widely with respect to the individual and his occupation. Logically enough, teachers and professors held their own in academic learning while business men lost ground. A farm labourer could not remember half the words he had learned in college, while a store clerk gained in almost every subject because he had carried on extensive studying in foreign literature after college.

The figures are interesting but they are not greatly significant due to variations in the individual, his occupation and his self-education after college. Tests such as these would be very interesting if conducted on a large scale throughout the university. Frankly it would be most revealing if fourth year students in certain arts courses were suddenly given an examination on several of the subjects taken in first year. For that matter the results shown by examinations of second and even third year material would be similarly revealing—and perhaps shocking. The institution of a system of comprehensive examinations covering four years of work is one which would be of great value.

American Contribution

The University of Toronto and other Canadian universities are doing fine work in their financial contributions to the war effort by such means as selling war savings stamps at their dances, and contributing the usual corgage-money to war relief funds, etc. However such efforts are not confined to Canadian universities.

The latest American college to make their contribution to England is Russell Sage College in Troy, N.Y. They have announced the purchase of an ambulance that will be in service "somewhere in England" within a month and a half.

The purchase of the ambulance, first to be sent from Troy, represents the cooperation of faculty, students and staff as well as alumnae and local friends of the college.

Lesson in History

While debates have been raging in Washington the last week or so over the Lease-Lend Bill, one of the senators came out with a remark that brought a quick answer from history professors who were unwilling to let him get away with such an obvious misstatement.

The senator said that "most historians and students agree that the Treaty of Versailles provoked the present war." President Baxter of Williams College and eight history teachers retorted that "such an oversimplification is a distortion of history which is grossly misleading."

Probably the history professors will have the support of the majority, since it is definitely an oversimplification to assert that any one thing caused the present war.

JACKIE THE SNARK HANDS LAST CON

"DIS IS THE END"

Some of the local sneeze mob were cutting up small town jackpots down at Louie's. Louie's, in case some of you gents don't mess with the hoi polloi, is strictly the spot. No cover charge, no obligation to bet, all you gotta do is bring an up to date scratch sheet to Louie's.

Chief sharp and man about town down at Louie's was Jackie the Snark who had won the everlasting plaudits of the boys by picking eight straight ponies in a parley wager many years ago. Jackie always had an unlit cigar in his mouth and never could get up enough courage to give it that hot connection because he never knew where the next one was coming from.

Jackie's bosom pal and comrade at crap games was nine and one half finger Dave who was a right guy if there ever was one but there never was one. Dave was the guy who warned up the galloping dominoes before the boys started to toss the bones around in earnest.

But the story is a short and sad one. There was a mull, see, who Dave and Jackie went for in a big way. This Jane went to hang around Louie's too and finally the time came when she had to give one of the boys the brush-off. "Dis is a tough decision to make," said Jackie as she peeled a California grape, "because both guys is fair suckers."

Meanwhile Jeanie got a line on another snark and figured she might as well give both dukes the finger. When Dave and Jackie were shooting a stick down at Louie's, heard the sad news there was talk to pay.

"Dis is the end," they both said as one man, "dat skirt can't do this to us." So Dave and Jackie blew the joint off and stuck it out in the alley. It was a sad day for the con men when the news of their death reached Louie's. It is rumoured that the boys never laid a parley bet since.

Kelly the Cut-up.

Correspondence

The Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

For many years, now, the calibre of the university's health and medical service has been the never-failing cause of humour in conversations about the campus; it has been the butt of much satire by those who have duly paid over their five dollars, twice, to receive in return a medical examination that was patently a sham.

It is known that Dr. Ryerson of the Faculty of Medicine has already investigated the health and medical facilities here. His report is now almost a year old. It judges the situation critically, thoroughly, and finds serious flaws. Why has that report not been even partially implemented?

Therefore, we, the undersigned students, convinced that our thoughts on this problem reflect, as they are worded above, the alarm (and that the minimum alarm) felt by the undergraduate body—not just today, but for many months past, and even years, we do, then, request you as Editor of The Varsity to make public the convictions of the students on this vital matter.

Attention

Amateur Photographers

This year in Torontonensis we wish to have a comprehensive Campus Life Section. To do this we need the co-operation of amateur photographers from all the colleges and faculties, particularly those numerically small.

The Editorial Board of Torontonensis will consider any photographs which are submitted for insertion in the 1941 Torontonensis. We would prefer human interest shots, typical of the activities of the various colleges and faculties in the university. Other subjects such as pictures of university buildings, candid snaps of professors, sporting activities, etc., will be welcomed, but we would particularly like representative pictures of activities typical of the college or faculty to which the photographer belongs.

When a selection has been made the pictures will be placed in separate categories. The person who, in the opinion of the judges, submits the best shot in each group will receive recognition to that effect in Torontonensis, and the one who submits the best of all will receive in addition a copy of Torontonensis.

The deadline is February 1st, by which time all pictures submitted must be in the S.A.C. office in Hart House. Each picture should be properly captioned—in choosing the best, the most original captions will be considered. Name and college of photographer must accompany each picture.

The decision of the Editorial Board of Torontonensis shall be final.

VIC ICEMEN SWAMP U.C.

Vic pucksters chalked up their first win of the season yesterday afternoon by blanking U.C. 24-0 in a swift-paced, action-packed contest.

There was no score after twenty minutes of play, but in the second period Johnny Hogg finally came through with what proved to be the winning goal. Taking a relay from Bill Young he split the Red and White defence and beat McCulloch cleanly. The Victorians were hard-pressed throughout the game, but net-minder Paul Deacon had to be extra good after that goal and his shut-out was well-earned. Jack Brown topped off the scoring near the bell on a pass from Gerry Stone. Young, Wright, Young, McLeod, Stone, Vic I: Deacon, Hogg, MacKenzie, Brown, Purvis, Kirkland. U.C. ## SPORT SPLASHES

By Stan Westcott

Only two contestants turned up yesterday for the 440 free event as the Durman Trophy Trials took up where they left off last week. Stew Robinson of Meds edged U.C.'s Ged Clawson by less than two seconds. Meds' foremost waterpoloist racked up the fair time of 5' 50.7" while Clawson raced the distance in 5' 52.3".

Robinson has the best time to date in the 200 breast. His 3' 14.3", which he set a week ago, still stands at the head of the list, 1.8 seconds better than Bill Moffat of School.

Moffat is the class of the 50 yard sprinters thus far, with a time of 25.3 seconds.

Attention all skiers! Potential skiers! and non-skiers! in other words, hello everybody. Have you signed the list in your college rotunda for the University Women's Ski Meet? Here's the necessary dope—Saturday afternoon, 2 p.m. sharp, at the University Ski Club. There's be both slalom and downhill races; each entrant will compete individually, scoring points for her college, so you see you can't lose, you win for Ole Alma Mater as well as help to boost ye old ego. I was informed from reliable sources you don't have to be a whiz-bang skier, or in fact much of one at all, so just make a note of it, sign the list in your college before Saturday. By the way, it's a red that's holding you up just get in touch with "Punch" Gallie and I'll be seeing you Saturday wrapped around a tree in a reet knot. So loog.

Second University Night To be Held on Saturday

Speaking OF SPORT

We take this opportunity of warning our unsuspecting readers, who are accustomed to the unsullied, classical style of the Speaking of Sport column—that something HORRIBLE is going to happen to the S.O.S. tomorrow. The Exchange Editor is exchanging places with us for the day. YOU HAVE BEEN WARNED.

Sincerely,

The Sported.

AND IN THIS CORNER...

The novice fight program which has been lined up for the Second University Night looks interesting and should provide good punchy entertainment.

Mel Gliona has at hand a bunch of lads who are literally rarin' to go. They have never participated in a major fight and sparring for a few minutes each night has certainly not assuaged their desire to be really up and at 'em. You can bet your bottom shoe that Mel's proteges will be putting everything they've got into these bouts.

And they'll have a lot more than the pugs we used to watch at home. Down there in the hinterland, or anywhere as far as that goes, "promoters" offer five bucks to Farmer Brown's Boy to come in and demonstrate the powers and strength he has acquired after long hours on the swinging end of an axe. To watch a pair of roundhouseers go at it hammer and tongs has its points, but we prefer a ringside locality at a bout in which the fighters know something about the game.

And after three months Mel has instilled in "his boys" a fund of fight knowledge, taken from his vast store of ring-lore acquired over a period of fifteen years in the professional roped rounda. Naturally the program cannot hope to compare with the senior assault, to be held in a few weeks. But the novices are willing to learn and willing to fight.

School, Vic and U.C. have the only entries of consequence, that is, as far as actual numbers are concerned. Now in their corners are waiting about 20 boxers, 16 wrestlers and five fencers.

At 165 pounds, the impending Zierler-Pawson punching set-to looks good. There are any number of 145 pounders, including classy George Lewis of Vic, Tommy Jarvis of U.C., Krawchuk, McLachlin, Kallio and Forster, to mention a few. Lloyd Delaney, Trinity's premier trackman is shaping up well in the 135 pound class. Mens and Burden will fight at 130, Jackson and Cowan at 118.

Tiny Hurst of Vic and Bill Ramore of School, intercollegiate boxers, have turned wrestlers for the novice meet. Lads like Birkenshaw, Armstrong, Allen and Wilkinson will also grunt and groan.

Three Schoolmen, a man from U.C., and one from Aerial Navigation will parry with foil only for the novice fencing title. They are Cumberland, Jannaway and Ruckle of School, Rennolds of the Red and White and Constant is the Flyer delegate.

The novice assault entry list is still open. Saturday night in the upper gym. Prelims tomorrow. Look for the draw on this page.

AERIAL NAVIGATION WINS AGAINST SCHOOL FOURTHS

Aerial Navigation nipped S.P.S. Fourths 3-2 in an evenly-contested hockey tilt yesterday afternoon to rack up their second win in as many starts.

School drew first blood when Kelly scored on a rink-wide pass from Allen. Geer tied the count on a corner relay from Rosenberg, and before the first period had ended the Flyers had taken a commanding lead on solo efforts by Mike Tuckah and Hall. Quittenput on the Engineers back in the running with the aid of McDonough, but their scoring punch stopped there.

Emmanuel-Forestry—44-26

The Emmanuel A cage squad had enough class to pile up a 44-26 score against Forestry last night in Hart House. The Woodcutters' attack, led by Grant Puttock, was sufficiently effective, but when it came to checking the passing attack of the Theologs, Forestry fell down rather badly.

Johnny Whallon sank long overhead shots and the way Art Hamilton handled setups was beautiful to behold. Hall and Green also played good ball for the Emmanuel lads.

WATER POLO

The schedule for this week will now be as originally scheduled. Thur. 30th, 5:00, Vic I vs St. M., Robinson; 5:30, Jr. S.P.S. vs Emmanuel, Robinson. Fri. 31st, 5:00, Wye vs Dent, Northwood; 5:30, Sr. Med vs U.C., Northwood.

RUGBY CLUB

There will be a meeting of the Rugby Club, Thursday, Jan. 29th in the Athletic Office at 5 p.m. Representatives from each faculty who had a team in the league are requested to be present.

U.C. Lads and Lassies to be Hosts to Whole University in Hart House at Second University Night

ALL-STAR WATER-POLO

This week's University Night, the gigantic muscular extravaganza set for 8:15 Saturday evening in Hart House will be staged with University College acting as hosts.

Not only the athletes of the Royal College, but also the famed U.C. "Millions-of-Beautiful-Girls" will be on hand to present the university with an opportunity for fun and friendly frolic, as intramural contests and exhibition tilts vie with more social activities to highlight what should be an extra-special evening.

U.C. cagemen will play hosts to School in an interfaculty basketball clash, starting in the Lower Gym at 8 o'clock. The finals of the Novice (Continued on Page 4)

TWO SCHOOLS OF THOUGHT

HERE DEPT. . . . Last fall the Royal Alexandra Theatre proudly blazoned the fact that "There Shall Be No Night" was coming to town. . . . That was all right, in its way, but now we hear that next week the management will present "Night Must Fall." . . . Here is direct contravention of the dramatic unities, and we, as a staunch Aristotelian beg the impresarios to get their story straight, and inform them that THIS SORT OF THING MUST STOP.

WE THOUGHT that the battle between the sexes which flared briefly last week over at Vic might lead to a few further contretemps. . . . As usual, we were right. . . . The latest cause for bickering seems to be girls who knit during lectures. . . . Up at the Economics Building, last Friday, a babe was purloining away so vigorously with her Angora wool that the poor men were quite unable to read their Varsity for sneezing. . . . And on Monday a guy in a U.C. lecture was also greatly annoyed by another gal, whose persistent clickety-clicks got on his nerves something frightful. . . . He glared most ferociously all through the hour, then approached balefully at its close. . . . "You," he snarled nastily, "remind me of Madame Defarge. . . . Taking notes by dropping stitches." Having delivered himself of this bon mot, he strode away in High Dudgeon.

ATHLETICISM ON NEWS-

PAPER ROW is rearing its ugly head South of the Border now. . . . The men of the staff of the Minnesota Journal have a basketball team in the Independent League of the Minneapolis fact foundry. . . . In their last, they were edged out 54-46 by the Stooges, but that's not the point.

THE PSYCHIATRY LECTURE is dealing with the grim topic of Suicide. . . . The lecturer cites the case history of one unfortunate who took ten grains of morphine and shuffled off this mortal coil. . . .

University Night

B. W. & F. Tournament will be run off, and possibly the outstanding athletic event of the evening will be the water-polo tussle between last year's Varsity squad, intercollegiate champs, and a team of Intercollegiate All-Stars.

After the water-polo classic, the Mermaids will give a display of ornamental swimming in the Pool.

Meanwhile, in the Upper Gym, a square dance will be staged for the betterment of social relations. "A fiddler has been imported for the occasion," Wilkie Davey, member of the U.C. Athletic Board, told The Varsity. "And we will try to have a number of dancers who are up to the rural life around, so that the dance will get under way smoothly."

The more usual type of dancing will take place in the Lower Gym, with special tag dances and spot dances, with prizes being offered to the mellow of the rug-cutters.

Admission will be 25 cents, Davey said. Half the proceeds will go to the Telegram War Victims' Fund and the other half to the University Settlement.

WAY BACK IN NOVEMBER we had occasion to rap the editorial knuckles of The Manitoban, for calling the University of Manitoba Symphony Orchestra "Canada's only University Symphony." . . . Unchastened by our censure, D. B. Summer, in Tuesday's Canadian Campus, persists in claiming that the Manitoba ickies are unique in Canadiana. . . . This we staunchly deny, and reiterate that we, too, have a University Symphony Orchestra, established long before the Westerners got around to the idea. . . . So nyah!

But a treacherous lump of congealed winter causes her to slip and fall with a solid thwack. . . . Slowly she sits up, recovers her lady-like dignity, and then fills the lonely darkness with a well-chosen torrent of singularly unlady-like monosyllables. . . . From a window high in the grim grey pile of Trinity House protrudes a head, remarking: "It is slippery out there, isn't it?" . . . FADEOUT.

integrity and impartiality."

Dr. Couch criticized the current view that doctors must be hard-boiled and injured to suffering. "More than any other man he must be compassionate, for the patient comes to him with the barriers down, in complete faith." Only the ministry has a similar opportunity for service.

To be a doctor, you must be a philosopher. The good doctor can be of most service in the face of a hopeless situation. "We can cure occasionally, relieve suffering often, but give comfort always," concluded Dr. Couch. "The medical student who grasps this fact will find greater happiness and satisfaction in his work."

ART, MUSIC &amp; DRAMA

bartenders, Assyrian loafers, Irish strikers, German cops, Negro piano-players and Polish streetwalkers. These gather in their saloon to enjoy life in their various ways—playing the pin-ball machine, trying to make people laugh, telling tall stories, playing the piano, philosophizing or just drinking. Taking the evils of the world as they are, they ask nothing more than to be left alone.

All the plot there is to the play is the struggle of the nice guys to defend themselves against the inevitable heel who tries to assert his authority. The play concludes with the redemption of Kitty Duval, despite the efforts of the heel to keep her in her degraded position.

"The people in the play," says Saroyan in his preface, "are people you are likely to see any day in almost any part of America."

In some ways this is true. Scattered about the country are the counterparts of the amazing collection of characters who frequent Nick's honky-tonk. Conceivably they could be plucked from their surrounding layer of "normal" companions and gathered under one roof. But even then it is doubtful that their personality, their aims and their ideas would be as beautifully transparent—even under the benevolent influence of the tenth and greatest muse—liquor.

Although the play seems to break every dramatic law, it contains evidence that Saroyan is a master dramatist. The pace of the play is shrewdly judged, (and perfectly executed in the Dowling production,) in order to place emphasis exactly where it is needed. This is particularly evident in the harmonica-playing scene—as gripping emotionally as anything appearing in Toronto in some time.

The humour, apparently tossed in haphazardly, almost always serves a definite purpose. Even the purest slapstick episodes must be closely watched; either they or the passages immediately following them contain something of significance. Even while we laugh at a funny old man or a dumb cop, he is talking sense. Perhaps this may be termed sugar-coated moralizing, but the flavour of the moralizing is just as appetizing as the sugar.

It has been suggested that Saroyan is offering nothing that is new and different, and that his moral stand is not quite in accordance with Marquis of Queensbury rules. As philosophy, his ideas have probably been repeated since time immemorial, but as drama they are new and thrilling enough to mystify quite a few of the critics. And as for the morals, honi soit. . . —E.S.

5/7 of a pint of blood. At the Connaught Laboratories, the perishable red cells are taken out and the serum is dried—preparatory for shipping. The donor can offer his services again in two months.

On December 22nd last year, the Dominion government granted the laboratories $25,000 for equipment and a further $10,000 a month for processing. The Ontario government is now taking over the work of testing the blood to see if it is free from disease. The part of the Red Cross in sponsoring the clinic is to contact donors.

Thus far, five men have applied to contribute their blood. At the present time, the clinic is not able to accept women applicants, but hopes to obtain the facilities to do so in the future.

VIC GIRLS BEATEN IN EVEN GAME

At seven o'clock last night when the mercury frozen at four below Little Vic rink was the scene of a struggle between St. Mike's and Vic II which ended in a victory of 1-0 for the Saints.

The teams really opened wide the throttle in the second period and the play speeded up and shifted from one end of the rink to 't'other. Florence Cooper, unchecked, picked up a beautiful shot square in front of goal and neatly slipping it in, scored. Along with her Rita O'Donnell and Gerry Wilson starred for the Saints, while Pat Parker and Marg. Dillon were outstanding for the Scarlet and Gold.

Saints: Rita O'Donnell, Theresa Roy, Florence Cooper (1), Eleanor Andreoli, Anita McGrath, Peggy O'Brien, Anabel Macklin, Gerry Wilson, Aileen McNally.

Vic II: Gert Wagar, Flo Joy, Billy Steele, Pat Parker, Marj McLaren, Pat Quinn, Beryl Pollock, Marg Dillon, Marg Eagleson, Gwen Neale.

St. Mike's Beats Wycliffe 32-17

The classy St. Mike's B basketball team squelched Wycliffe A in the upper gym last night, but erratic shooting on the part of the Irish kept the score down to 32-17.

For St. Mike's Porn went well at guard at the same time rolling up a total of 11 points, while Crane sank four baskets and was definitely the smoothest passer on the Gael team.

The small Fry brothers nabbed all but two of the Wycliffe points, Harry getting nine and Herschell six. Cardy also played well.

St. Mike's B: Crane 6, Barrett 5, Porn 11, Doyle 10, Flaherty, Waldron, Agro.

Wycliffe A: Harry Fry 9, Herschell 6, Cardy, Doolan, Kerr 1, Abbott 1.

THERAPISTS SWAMPED BY U.C. GIRLS

U.C. and frozen feet came out on top last night when O.T. & P. were bowled off the ice at the Trinity Athletic Field to the tune of 7-1.

In spite of the score, the game was hotly contested. Freshie Betty Verity, a sharpshooter for U.C., tucked two away under her own steam, and Betty Mortimer and Joan Carter repeated later in the game. Jean Allen is our pick for O.T. & P. with her A1 backchecking.

O.T. & P.: Marg Atkinson (1), Peggy Clement, Jean Allen, Effie Saunders, Doris Glover, Marcia Heffernan, Elizabeth Manning, Thelma Dinsdale, Muriel Jamieson, Pat La Forest.

U.C.: Betty Mortimer (2), Betty Verity (2), Joan Carter (2), Doris Ankenman (1), Marg Abbot, Ada Smith, Reva Brownlee, Yvonne Day, Sally Watt, Phyl Hall.

the attitude that a single vote doesn't count, will ruin democracy, if it isn't checked. She advised more open and informal debating as a possible remedy for the feeling of diffidence on the part of the majority of people.

KNOX-WYCLIFFE SCORE 10-0

Wycliffe's goalie Robinson got a sunburn yesterday. Not from old Sol, but from a red light up in Varsity Arena, as his team absorbed a 10-0 walloping at the hands of Knox.

Not that Robinson muffed his job. He played a brilliant game, but his team-mates (there were only six in the net) might as well have worn snowshoes. Things didn't look too bad at the end of the first canto when the score stood at 3-0, but in the second period the Knox boys administered a thorough rubber coating on the Wycliffe net.

Jack McKay scored thrice and Graham, who punched in five counters in his last hockey effort, did likewise. Vance, Jack, Self and Redford each potted one.

Knox: Anderson, Henderson, Vance, McSweeney, McKay, Jack, Self, Graham, Redford.

Wycliffe: Robinson, Hazel, Coburn, Bradley, Wells, Ballard, Cardy.

JUNIOR BASEBALL

Jr. S.P.S. defeated Jr. Vic 5-3 last night in a tight game. Cawley and Mackenzie were School's heavy hitters. Vic made many errors on the field which cost them the game for they displayed some fast pitching and got some fairly good hits. Tom Paton played an outstanding game for Vic. The Schoolboys played a game that was nearly errorless.

VARSITY PUBLICATION

There will only be three issues of The Varsity next week. The paper will be published on Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings. There will be no publication on Tuesday and Thursday.

Dr. R. Brimhall will illustrate Talk to Royal Canadian Institute Tomorrow Night with Slides and Film

RESEARCH DIRECTOR

The Saturday evening lecture of the Royal Canadian Institute on "Experiments in the Selection and Training of Civilian Pilots in the United States" will be given at 8.15 by Dr. Dean R. Brimhall, Ph.D., Director of Research, Civil Aeronautics Administration, Washington, D.C.

Born in Provo, Utah, in 1886, Dr. Brimhall was educated in the same state—obtaining his A.B. from the Brigham Young College. After further work at Columbia where he was awarded his A.M. and Ph.D., he returned to the Psychology staff of his alma mater. Since then, Dr. Brimhall has had a varied career.

He was the first Secretary Treasurer of the Psychology Corporation, the American counterpart to the National Institute of Industrial Psychology. Thrown by accident in 1926 into the aviation business, he did research for the Utah Pacific Airways, with which firm he remained associated until his activities as Director of the Utah State Planning Board and as Adviser on Labour Relations for the Federal Works Progress Administration, required his full attention.

From Assistant Chairman, C.A.A. in 1938 he became Director of Research, C.A.A., last year. Dr. Brimhall is also a Fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science and a member of the American Psychological Association.

The lecture will be illustrated by a small number of slides and a short film. Descriptions of some of the technique and experimental work of more than twenty-five university and college laboratories working under the C.A.A. upon the problems of training pilots will be included. Of particular interest to the future drivers of "flier planes" will be Dr. Brimhall's report on the time required to learn to fly a non-spinning aeroplane.

"Behold We Live" Stars Elizabeth Blair

Elizabeth Blair, formerly with St. Hilda's College, will play the lead in the Toronto Theatre Club's production of "Behold We Live", by Van Druen, in Hart House Theatre tomorrow.

The play has been directed by Gordon Alderson and the cast is composed of Beatrice Cole, Eva Drysdale, Agnes Muldrew Stone, W. A. Atkinson, Lloyd Brooks, Graham Garton and Russell Waller.

Vic At-Home To be Held On Feb. 14

Victorians' Valentine Dance to Feature Bob Quartette with Swing Arrangement of Traditional Ballad

WILL LAMPOON STUDENTS

Comes Valentine's day, and comes the Vic At-Home; comes the Vic At-Home, and the Scarlet and Gold takes on an even gayer aspect, for then the worries of the moment are thrust aside to be replaced by merry-making.

As in the last few years, the more popular members of the college will experience "that tense moment" when the Bob Quartette puts in its appearance on the floor show. Again the low-down will come to light, and the many will laugh at the plights of the few.

At present the quartette is working on its part of the show, and Ted Gray says he'll really welcome any suggestion for ditties anyone may wish to give.

The quartette is offering something new this year. Norm Abbott, a grad of last year who has had considerable experience with such matters, has come out with a brand new swing arrangement of the traditional quartette ballad. Personnel of the quartette remains unchanged since the Bob last fall.

Vic Society Sponsors Contest For Playwrights

Following their custom of some years standing the Victoria College Dramatic Society are again sponsoring a play-writing contest this year. Betty McRae, Secretary of the Society announced yesterday. Plays are to be of one act and entries must be made before March 20, 1941.

Mr. Hare and Dr. Robins of the Victoria College staff will act as judges in this contest which is open to all Vic undergraduates. Although a cash prize is provided it will not be awarded unless a play of genuine worth is found among the entries.

Past Tom Sawyer Stage Students' Pockets Still Crowded

A survey yesterday of what men carry in the 13 pockets of their suits showed the average Varsity student far removed from the small boys of ten years ago who carried string, a jew's harp, a live mouse, chewed gum and broken door-handles.

Aside from the inevitable keys, registration cards, cigarettes, matches or lighters, combs, nail files, handkerchiefs and car tickets, a few unusual things were found, however.

One Pass Arts man carries eighteen snapshots (which he refused to show the Varsity reporter lest she become prejudiced).

One man was caught burying a picture of himself at the age of three, but he proudly displayed two rowing club medals and a rabbit's left hind foot. From the depth of a hip pocket another Pass student produced a blank identification card and a registration card bearing Joan Bennett's signature. When he had emptied the whole baker's dozen, a Modern History student said: "And you can quote me, men just don't carry letters."

S.P.S. men, the Varsity was told, carry a slide rule, a set of compasses, a handkerchief, a match, and a "shingle-nail-and-a-cent."

University College Sponsors Second in "Varsity Night" Series

University College is host to the University tomorrow night in Hart House, at the second University Night of the season.

Highlighting the athletic attractions will be the water-polo game between last year's Varsity squad, intercollegiate monarchs of all they survey, and a team of Intercollegiate All-Stars.

S.P.S. basketballers and U.C. will meet in a cage clash in the Big Gym. At the same time final events in the novice B. W. & F. tournament will be on display.

There will be dancing in both gymnasias later in the evening, and a display of ornamental swimming is planned for the Pool.

Last Saturday there were 671 in attendance at the first University Night. Athletic Directorate officials believe that close to 1200 students will turn out tomorrow night. The Varsity learned.

Cost of admission will be 25 cents per person, and one of the party must have a University registration card. Proceeds will go to charity.

U. of T. Skiers To Hold Meet On Sunday

Eleven teams of campus skiing talent will spend next Sunday afternoon speedily over fast snow up at the University Ski Club if weather conditions stay as at present. Russ Smart, chairman of the intramural ski committee, has spent a great deal of time and effort working out the details of the new interfaculty team setup, even though he himself is one of the higher group of skiers who are not eligible to compete in it. (Incidentally he has just won the Toronto Ski Club Downhill Championship, breaking the former record for that course.)

The meets will begin at 1:30, Group I running downhill and slalom at Edwards (the Youth Hostel) while Group II jumps and races cross-country at Newton's farm.

At a later meet the two groups will change places, and the final results of both meets determining the four teams which will enter the finals, three from Group I which is supposed to be good, and one from Group II.

Floor Shows But No Corpses At Meds Dance

A last-minute flash on the Meds At-Home denies the malignant rumour that cadavers will be introduced into the festivities. But equally exciting entertainment will be provided by the triple feature floor show. The professional acts will include Mildred Morey, "The Original Personality Girl", late of Montreal's Chez Maurice, Ringling Barnum Circus' Gypsy Gobs—the Carr Brothers, whose promoter claims: "their antics leave nothing to be desired", and Billy and Kay (I wouldn't fool you for the world) Annot.

Mart Kenney and his Western Gentlemen—or should they be called the "Smoke-Eaters" after their near escape last Sunday at the Brant Inn—will be right in the groove, despite the loss of a xylophone, and a few drums and music scores.

The International Student Service will benefit by the sale of skull and crossbones, which will leer forth from the shoulder pins worn by each damsel in lieu of a corsage.

Simcoe Switchboard Hums Behind Closed Doors

But Official Reveals Details of System which Keeps Three Operators Busy with 3,500 Calls Daily

The main switchboard at Simcoe Hall is no place for sight-seers—definitely. Let the crowds pass through Hart House if they will, but all interlopers begging entrance to the upstairs haunt of the girls with the ear-phones are firmly turned away at the Superintendent's office.

However, for the benefit of those students whose only knowledge of the establishment consists of the number Mt. 6611, an official of the Superintendent's office, Mr. Maxwell, agreed to reveal a few selected facts.

Not one, but three operators face the barrage of calls, which number as high as 3,500 per day during the registration season. From freshmen seeking information, to grads seeking reimbursements, thousands of calls pour in and are connected with the various departments throughout the university. Nor let it be said that the campus world slumbers each day until noon, for our informant produced a report made in September, 1940, which assures us that the hour between 10 and 11 in the morning practically bulges with an average of about five hundred calls. And still the trigger-fingered trio, or those who relieve them, meet the onslaught.

Between one and two o'clock in the afternoon, the whole populace is apparently encircling the food trough, for a mere 360 calls trickle through. Are these considered idle moments for the girls? Perhaps they phone their friends for relaxation.

board. One hundred and twenty-eight locals connect the various departments. Thus, when you dial Mt. 6611, your call passes to the Bell Company, from there to the Simcoe Hall board, and finally to the required department.

Two other switchboards serve the university. The one is located at the Banting Institute and the other in the Royal Ontario Museum. Each of these centres requires one operator and necessary relief.

As we left Mr. Maxwell we pleaded for some anecdote. "Surely something embarrassing happens now and then amid this complicated system!" We were whisked away for even suggesting such a thing.

"We tell no tales outside of school," he asserted.

Bland Will Discuss Civil Service Placement

The third in the series of Friday lectures on "Problems of Modern Government", arranged under the auspices of the Dept. of Political Economy, is being held today at 5 p.m. in the Big Hall of the Economics Building on Bloor St.

The speaker this time will be Mr. Charles H. Bland, and his subject, "Dominion Public Service". Mr. Bland is a graduate of Queen's University and has been chairman of the Civil Service Commission of Canada since 1935.

It is understood he will say something of the place of the university student in the civil service, said Prof. McG. Dawson of the Dept. of Political Economy. The series comprises 6 lectures; admission is free, and the public is cordially invited.

"Barbed Wire Just Disappears" When Prisoners Organize Educational Facilities, Says Psychology Professor

LAUOS I.S.S. DRIVE

A glimpse of what will happen to the money collected from Varsity students in the International Student Service drive for funds next Wednesday was given in an interview yesterday by Prof. J. D. Ketchum, Assistant Psychology Professor, who spent several years during the last war as a prisoner at the "University of Ruhlben"—German prison camp where war captives became scientists.

Gratified to learn that the I.S.S. is attempting to get study materials to the many student war prisoners, French, Polish and British soldiers, and internees in prison camps in Germany, Switzerland and unoccupied France, Prof. Ketchum recalled from personal experience that "prisoners who filled their days with some purposeful occupation came through safely; those who could not do this in some manner often broke or went to pieces."

Prof. Ketchum described the school organized by the prisoners in Ruhlben, which at its height had an enrolment of about 2,000 students, taught by over 200 interned professors and teachers. He emphasized that the first requisite of the University of Ruhlben was the 6,000 volume library of educational books sent by the British Prisoners of War Book Scheme.

The purpose of this organization is put forth in its latin motto which translated reads: "My books give freedom to the captive's mind." The I.S.S. which today is relieving student war sufferers in this and many other ways was not (Continued on Page 4)

Next Edition Of Trinity Review Appears Monday

Another edition of the Trinity Review will make its appearance this Monday and according to its publishers "will burst upon the campus with its proverbial cataclysmic effect."

In its pages may be found a guest contribution by Mr. Heighington on "The Intellectual in Wartime", a comment on the Canadian educational system by Sonia Moravity, who has recently arrived from Czechoslovakia, and a review of the best seller "White Cliff".

Besides cartoons, the Humour Section tells the story of "Bridget the Mental Midget" who thinks that a sub lieutenant is the commander of a U-Boat.

Modern History Club Meeting Delves Into Supernatural

Blazing a new trail to find out about its flames (past present, and especially future), the secrets of its professors, and the text of the 1941 examination papers, the Modern History Club presented itself en masse at a neighbourhood scene.

Substituting the mystery of a spiritualist meeting for the mysteries of Baldwin House, the alleged historians discovered that the men in their midst are all destined to marry wealthy women (widows, preferably) and most of them will transfer in the near future to S.P.S. and True Science.

Delving into the future of the women who delve into the past, several facts come to light. They will all, he promised, have brilliantly eventful careers in which the year 1942 will figure prominently. The general trend seems to be toward marriage, happy and uneventful with an incredible amount of security for life and property.

When the question of the fate of the crew of a certain British destroyer was brought up, the seer revealed his limitations:

"Half of the crew are in a German internment camp," he said. "Censorship restrictions make it impossible for me to tell about the other half."

The Navy Comes to School

On Monday morning a new phase of the university's effort to win the war will begin when some fifty naval recruits take their first classes in a special three month course in technical physics. These recruits, eighteen years of age and over, have been enlisted recently in response to urgent appeals for men to do undescribed specialist work. The course will be conducted by the Department of Physics.

In a myriad of ways the world is finding out that this war depends on technical skill and manpower to a very great degree. The almost complete mechanization of fighting forces, the development of planes capable of terrific speeds, and the increasing dependence on instruments which are the outcome of highly scientific research, have combined to place a premium on technical training. The demands upon the universities are being made with greater frequency with the passage of time.

The University of Toronto needs no justification in these columns of its existence during the present struggle. Since it opened under the shadow of World War II in September, 1939, it has met the needs of the country by first anticipating the services it could render and rapidly merging them into its normal sphere of activity. It has shouldered its share at least of the heavy burden of social and charitable activity brought to the new world by the influx of distressed peoples from other countries. It has shown itself eager to give its fullest assistance to the Government's war effort in nearly all of its scientific departments. On its own initiative, because it realized the dire need for trained technical workers, it has revised routine to allow Engineering students to leave early for special war industry work. Many students who specialized in certain types of technical and scientific work are already overseas and in industries. The air force has made appeals for trained men. Now the navy, faced with a shortage of trained recruits to meet rapid expansion of technique, has carried on a campaign to obtain specialists and is using the universities as instruction centres to ease the strain placed on already-established centres.

Silently the work of a great university goes on. Slowly, with many disheartening setbacks, new achievements are made in technical and scientific fields. And when the time of testing comes, the university is ready with supplies of trained men who can perform the necessary work themselves or serve as instructors to keep an ever-flowing stream of technicians available to carry on the highly scientific thing that is war.

Feet Off the Gas And Win the War

Several weeks ago great flurry was caused when, in the course of the abortive proceedings of the Dominion-provincial conference at Ottawa, Finance Minister Ilsey brought up the subject of gasoline rationing. The mere suggestion started many people worrying and talking vociferously, but now the excitement has died down and sane minds have been investigating the problem. The result of an investigation made by Canadian Oil and Gas magazine indicates that although Canadians may be urged to conserve gasoline voluntarily, there is little likelihood of any government action in rationing gas supplies.

The government had been investigating the gas rationing problem as a means of saving foreign exchange. Figures show that a maximum saving of ten million could be made, not quite a fifth of Canada's foreign petroleum products expenditure. Their studies disclosed that there is far less pleasure motoring than popularly thought, the bulk of it being done by motorists whose gas consumption was never intended to be touched. Furthermore, from actual experience in England, gas rationing has proved difficult to work effectively. The result will probably be that the government will proclaim occasional gasoline-less Sundays, for instance, with certain groups of people being excluded from the ruling. Such gas holidays may in fact be put on a purely voluntary basis.

Although the maximum saving from strict government-controlled gas rationing would be ten millions roughly, the foreign exchange control wizards at Ottawa feel that the saving would not balance the loss in American tourist trade. For although American tourists would not be placed on ration, nevertheless the very fact that rationing exists might keep many summer tourists away.

Adverse propaganda carried on by determined groups throughout the United States has in the last year and a half done much to frighten American tourists away from Canadian highways and vacation lands. Vicious rumours were circulated with respect to passports when the latter were not needed at all. Others whispered and printed "confidential reports" were that money would be taken away once inside the border, motor cars would be confiscated, and innocent visitors might get tangled up in war regulations. Unfortunately, in states remote from the border, some of this propaganda took effect with disastrous results on tourist trade. This winter government officials, federal and provincial, have been carrying on persistent publicity campaigns in the States to present the true picture. Numbers of skiers have been lured across the border to the northern ski lands. Their efforts show promise of bearing real fruit in the shape of a bumper tourist season, and there will be much hard thought before actual gasoline rationing is introduced.

Wedding Bells

We extend our congratulations and very best wishes to Mr. Al Forrest, former editor of The Varsity, who is to be married this afternoon.

Mr. Forrest, editor-in-chief of The Varsity two years ago, is well-known on the campus. He graduated last year from Emmanuel College and has been in charge of a church at Creighton Mine for the past six months.

If a university with fifty million dollars' worth of buildings turns out men and women who make poor citizens, that university is a failure. If a college which holds its classes in a series of makeshift frame shacks turns out students who can make a contribution to our civilization, it is a success.—The Gateway.

Wieniawski

They'll do it every time.

When I wrote that review of Erica Morini's recital at Massey Hall, I carefully tried to keep from injecting into it too much of a strong prejudice against pyrotechnical violin music. Now, however, when I am no longer criticizing one violinist in particular, I feel that it is the right moment for a few general remarks.

I have attended enough amateur violin recitals to have at least a speaking acquaintance with Wieniawski in all his moods. As an opportunity to allow a teacher to display the technique which he has injected into sundry of his pupils, Wieniawski is admirable. He says what he says in such simple musical terms that he does not need a mature nature to interpret him: little Johnny, if he can play the notes, can, under Mr. Teacher's guidance, make a pretty fair approximation of the idea Wieniawski was turning over in his mind.

Wieniawski and his ilk have their place on any violinist's program, but any finished musician giving a polished recital who neglects serious violin music is worse than sadly mistaken.

Violinists of Erica Morini's calibre are wasting talents which the gods have given them. They start off with the assumption that their audiences' mental age is juvenile and leave one with the inevitable conclusion that their own cannot be much higher. Miss Morini could play anything, at least as far as technique is concerned—and what interpretation she could do was excellent.

Will no one ever play me a Brahms Sonata? N.M.

STAFF NEWSHOUND HAS WHEE OF TIME

A Varsity Sleuth smuggled into a cosy conversation in a recess during the plenary session of the Supreme Arcadian Court early Saturday morning, and overheard two sealed communiques avidly discussing their respective plans for a bombing raid. With the aid of his ultra-violet eyes (obtainable only through the Women's Editor) he fought his way through the blackout to the Wurlitzer which was furiously grinding an axe on the inside of several camouflage torpedoes.

Upon the dispersal of the blackout the Supreme Court caught the Sleuth tampering with the percussion section of the Wurlitzer, and thereupon bounced him for contempt of Conversation. The court bouncers, however, had not taken very careful aim, and as a result the Sleuth landed on the roof of St. Hildred's Collegiate Institute, where he lay unconscious, face down on the skylight, until blasted into consciousness by a ravishing blonde torpedo which exploded in a palm of his hand. Clutching desperately onto one of the torpedo's saddle shoes he soared through the air with the greatest of ease until stopped rather suddenly by the golden facade of the Bark Blase Hotel.

Somewhat dazed, he went down and had a triple malted in the Queen Mole Room, mulling the while over the cuneiform on the soul of saddle shoe which had stuck resolutely by him through all his tribulations and trials. With the aid of a Professor of Accidental Literature, Rooster by name, who was also mulling over a malted, he managed to decipher the handwriting on the soul. While breakfasting in the Great Hall Prof. Rooster had discovered a similar saddle shoe inscribed with Albanian characters, and a comparison of the two inscriptions had revealed a daring expose of a plan to promote better relations between Binnity and St. Hildred's.

Once again the Varsity has saved the day.

Heppy.

Mackie Hails I.S.S. Drive For Funds

"We must fight and build; unless we can build as we fight there is no use fighting," declared the Rev. Robert Mackie last night in his address at the January meeting of the University College S.C.M.

John Gray, president of the S.C.M., introduced the speaker and commented on his wide experience with students in Europe which fitted him particularly well to speak on "Students and the War". Mr. Mackie is the secretary of the World's Student Christian Federation and spent an exciting month getting out of Europe just in front of the advancing Germans.

"The ordinary philosophy of Canadians, as of most people on our side of the war, is to blame the Nazis and then to decide that right will triumph. The trouble with this theory is that it is completely false and leads nowhere," said Mr. Mackie.

"If we feel that the main point of this war is to give us another chance," Mr. Mackie stated, "we must start now. Those engaged in fighting the war are often impatient with those who have this idea, but what matters is what is being done with the children of this generation."

The speaker praised the object of the International Student Relief Day next Wednesday when the International Student Service will campaign for funds with the cooperation of the Red Cross. The money will be used to help students in Europe and China.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Michael O'Mara

SO THE SPORTSED SAYS—

"Say listen, chum, the time is high that you beat out your annual sport column."

Countering with a yawn, we tried to slip away into the night, but tripped over a waiting assistant sports editor who had rallied to his chief's assistance. The head boy of Wycliffe, eyeing us imperturbably, continued in his flawless Bronx brogue: "And while you're at it, I and Hodgson might as well write the Hither Friday, eh?"

Thus the matter was settled to the satisfaction of all but the readers.

OODLES OF FUN FOR EVERY ONE

The big event of this week-end is unquestionably and indubitably and without a doubt the University Night, a little thing dreamed up by the combined weighty brains of the Athletic Directorate and the University College sports enthusiasts. The Royal College are acting as hosts in this second of the series of big doings at Hart House, and Lit. Athletic Board, in conjunction with the sports-minded girls of U.C. are burning gallons and gallons of midnight erl figuring out bigger and better ways of Having Fun.

Because, as Mac MacCutcheon points out, the sole interest involved in these evenings is not spectator-interest. The idea is to join in the games yourself, break down the old inhibitions, and have a wheeze of a time. All sorts of schemes are being concocted to enable the world-weary students of the University to get a little mental relaxation, by dancing, watching athletic contests, and playing silly games. And if you don't like playing silly games, it's time you did, you old stuffed shirt.

LOOK MAW, MUSCLES!

However, don't run away with the idea that all you do at these things is pin tails on donkeys. The card of athletic events to take place on Saturday night is well crammed. First of all, the finals in the Novice B. W. & F. tournament will be run off, and you can have a charming time watching the boys belt each other about, twist each other's arms off, and run each other through in the approved Errol Flynn style.

Another sight that should not be missed will be the water-polo classic between last year's Varsity outfit, winners of the Intercollegiate title and splashes de luxe, and a team of Interfaculty All-Stars. Some of the interfaculty boys feel they are every bit as good as the champs, and seem viddy anxious to prove it. Which adds up to a what our cliché-conscious sportsed would term "a grudge match—there ain't no love lost between them two teams." U.C. and the Engineers will fly at each other's throats in a basketball brawl in the Big Gym. More things happening all night than at Nick's place on Pacific Street in Frisco.

NOW LISTEN, GALS AND GUYS

Here is the set-up of these affairs. You can date up your current heart-throb, or your old pal the lady janitor, and take her to Hart House this Saturday. Or you men can come stag. Or you girls can come stag also. There really isn't any good reason (short of studying, and that's not a good reason) to hang around your residence or sorority when you can jam the old hat on the old head and roll over to Hart House for Fun and Friendly Frolic. Please bear in mind, co-eds, that there is always a preponderance of men at these affairs. There has to be. The competitors, and there are usually over a hundred of them, are all men. That helps make the difference between being a wall-flower and the Belle of the Brawl. So don't hesitate to come on in.

WEARING A ROSETTE YET

The boys and girls of U.C. will be there wearing rosettes indicating that they are the hosts and hostesses. Which means that they will hustle about, seeing that everybody enjoys himself, herself and itself. There will be dancing in both gyms, and that's not all. Square dancing will break out in the Little Gym, and all the off-beat alligators in the hob-nail boots will have opportunity to cut a rural rug.

Oh, yass. One more thing. It costs a paltry two bits to get in. The cabbage which accrues therefrom goes to war charities. So now none of you have the slightest excuse to stay away.

And that's that for another year.

Who says there is no intercollegiate this year? From Western comes the idea of a Telegraphic Swimming Meet. It will be telegraphic in name only, —the results are being sent by mail to Miss Barker, to save expense. Western, Queen's, McMaster and Varsity have always competed, but this year McGill are also entering the meet. In other years, they have not entered a team because of the distance it would have to travel. It is to be hoped that this will not be their last.

All the meets are to be held the same week in February. By an apparently complicated process of working out the

SCHOOL HOOPSTERS DOWN FLIERS 42-21

A concerted second-half scoring drive which netted twenty-eight points, enabled S.P.S. V's to humble Aerial Navigation by a score of 42-21 in an interfaculty basketball game played in the upper gym at Hart House yesterday.

The initial half, which saw the lead change hands several times, featured close play with the Engineers holding a slim 14-13 margin as the half-time whistle blew.

Highlight of the affair came in the second half when the Engineers rang up 22 points in succession without a reply from the Aviators.

Sheffield, Hall and Rosenberg showed up well for Aerial Navigation while Frost, Misener, Hibbard, Darling and Bell played well for School.

Clichés Incorporated

Estbl. 1941

H. Dent Hodgson & Owen P. Pritchard, Props.

Head Office: 73 Easy St., Hope Springs Eternal . . .

Realizing the crying need current among frequenters of the learned halls of the University of Toronto, this highly reputable firm wishes to place the following list of services before students in the hope that it can be of some help in lifting the load of those who, in these trying times, find it hard skidding to put their shoulders to the wheel, their noses to the grindstone, their eyes to future and their ears to the ground.

(1) Brooking interference: Oldest and best established of our departments, this supplies a regular service of interference-brooking. Our representatives will brook interference nightly, with matinees Wednesday and Saturday afternoons. If you are one of those handy men who like to putter around the house, don't brook your own interference without one of our home-sized brooks, approved by Good Housekeeping Institute. Special premium offers are available to subscribers to our Brook-of-the-Month Club.

(2) OLD CONSERVATIVES!! Are you as hidebound as ever, or are you coming loose at the seams? We have on hand a complete supply of hides—tanned, untanned, or dyed-in-the-wool—with which you can become as hide-bound as a Wymulwood Muscicle. Try our Tropical Tan hide for retired Colonels from the Punjab. This is guaranteed to withstand the most severe blusterings and the bitterest blasts of radical opinion. For aged maiden ladies the hides are tastefully got up in warm vellum, trimmed with old lace, lavender-scented if you prefer.

(3) Our Engineering Department is now working at maximum production, turning out extension bridges for people who want to cross their bridges before they come to them. These prematurely-crossed bridges have a liberal turn-in value, provided that they have not been burned behind one, and will be supplied to people with gaps which need bridging. Or, if you prefer to hang onto your bridgework, telephone us for a handy carton of gaps, mailed to you confidentially and enclosed in a plain wrapper.

(4) For these cold winter days, we recommend our angora wool gloves with open knuckles, for those who never give a rap.

(5) Don't go up the river without one of our Super-Putter Outboard Motors. Satisfied customer writes: "Since purchasing one of your outboard motors, I have been up the river so often my friends call me 'showboat'."

(6) Try one of our special, two-way stretch ropes (only 3s. 6d.). You'll never reach the end of your tether.

(7) We are pleased to announce our new tunnelling service—for underground men, borers-from-within, and groppers-in-the-dark. Low rates on double trench digging for those who desire to retrench.

(8) For one week only! Capers! Specially reduced to 7s. per gross. (Scissors extra.)

(9) Tired of riding around in that little Austin? You'll find plenty of head room in one of our high dudgeons. Lower dudgeons and huffs gladly supplied for shorter people.

(10) Try a pair of our padded trousers, specially constructed to ease the life of people riding on the horns of a dilemma.

(11) As a brand-new and unique service to help fill the little-known needs of our satisfied clientele, we are proud to announce that we have on hand a good supply of missing drawers. These come in all missing sizes and will fit any persons' bureaus. Missing knobs supplied at no extra charge.

S.P.S. MUSHBALLERS ROUTE WYCLIFFE

S.P.S. Thirds steam-rolled over Wycliffe as they humbled the Theologs 18-2 in an intercollegiate baseball fixture played in the lower gym yesterday.

The Engineers started off with a 4-0 lead in the first inning and the final outcome was never in doubt. They added six more in the second, three in the third, and added five in the last just for good measure. The Wycliffe crew scored their only counters in the second inning.

Morris led the School attack with four runs, with Marshall, Livingstone and Leitch scoring three apiece.

Olson pitched good ball for the Engineers and was afforded excellent support throughout.

Wycliffe: Coleman, Nickle, Abbott, Bradley, Fry, Kerr, Knight, Hurst, Bradbury.

S.P.S. III: Livingstone, Leitch, Glynn, Marshall, Morris, Olson, Robinson, Timms, Bland.

SPORT SPLASHES

By George Forster

Emmanuel's powerful water polo squad downed Jr. School in a gruelling tussle in Hart House pool yesterday by a score of 3-1. Ben Morewood, Doug Green and Bill Fennel all scored for the Theologs while Johnny Northwood got the only tally for the Engineers.

In the second game Vic 1 and St. Mike's battled to a 1-1 tie. Nixon netted for the Scarlet and Gold while Remmer reached pay dirt for the Double Blue.

Jr. S.P.S.: Moffat, Northwood (1), Brace, Rimmer, Bell, Gottlieb, Byrnes.

Emmanuel: McRae, Morewood (1), Kalleger, Jackson, Eagle, Hamilton, Jones, Green (1), Fennel (1).

Vic 1: Bryce, Nixon (1), MacDonald, Quentin, Landell, Birkenshaw, W. Taylor, C. Taylor, Shortt.

St. Mike's: Remmer (1), Kieffer, Slotwinski, Brady, Flaherty, Crane, Dunn, Gianfranchesi.

VIC II PUCKSTERS DEFEAT U.C. II 3-2

Vic Seconds racked up their second straight puck win yesterday afternoon as they stepped over U.C. Seconds 4-2. Two weeks ago the Scarlet and Gold initiated their season with a 3-2 victory over Senior Meds.

Viemen took a commanding lead in the first period. Bothwell counted twice and assisted Cam MacKenzie in the third. Wolfraim and Paton collected helping points on Bothwell's goals. Ron Tisdale secured the Red and White's tally on a pass from Cliff Ballagh.

Joe Gibson gave U.C. their sole second canto goal and Barney Boville, who can be counted on for a score per game, bagged the final goal on a pass from Livingstone.

KETCHUM DESCRIBES LIFE IN PRISON

in existence at that time.

"When you become absorbed in a subject, the barbed wire just disappears," said Dr. Ketchum, and added, "Study not only defends a man from a breakdown, but may be a benefit to him." He cited the case of a fellow-prisoner who started to learn Italian from scratch and is now a full professor of Italian in an English university.

Chadwick and Ellis, well-known scientists in the field of atomic analysis, went straight from the improvised Physics lab at Rublehen to the laboratory in London which later succeeded in breaking the atom. Sir Ernest MacMillan was another student at the Rublehen camp.

It was pointed out that this was not a haphazard affair but a well organized school. To demonstrate this Dr. Ketchum produced the 12-page prospectus or calendar of Rublehen Camp School for the summer term of 1917. It was made possible for prisoners to write their matriculation examinations and for the successful completion of university courses a diploma was awarded by the Royal Society of Arts. A wide variety of subjects was offered in the prospectus including many languages, several of the social sciences, mathematics, engineering and natural sciences. For the considerable proportion of navy men in the camp there were nautical courses leading to various merchant naval papers.

Engineers Victors In Ski Contest --Trinity Second

In the combined Downhill and Slalom races at the University Ski Club yesterday afternoon S.P.S. II came out on top closely followed by Trinity I. Trinity actually won the downhill with Bev Robinson whooshing down in 26.4 seconds for 1st place, School's Netter and Fox following in 2nd and 3rd. School II, however, steered through into first and second place in the slalom with Netter and Clark, while Firstbrook from Meds and Connor of S.P.S. I tied as thirds, and the total percentages added up in favour of School.

Here are the percentages:
Group I—
Downhill: Trinity I, 86; S.P.S. II, 83.3; Meds, 71.5; S.P.S. I, 53.7; Vic I, 46.6; U.C. I, 9.1.
Slalom: S.P.S. II, 95.8; Trinity I, 83; Meds, 61.8; S.P.S. I, 53.7; Vic I, 50.4; U.C. I, 33.8.
Group II—
Jumping: S.P.S. III, 72.5; Trinity II, 39.2; Dents, 26.9.

VARSITY PUBLICATION

by h. d. h.

The days of the gentleman cadet, it seems, are still very much alive. Down at the armories last week, a rising young officer reports, he called his platoon to a halt and was waiting patiently to proceed while a file of men from another platoon deposited their rifles and trooped past. Not knowing what sort of military compliments they should pay under the circumstances the entire row resorted to civil civilities and man by man nodded his head politely to the rising young officer and murmured a gentle, "excuse me!"

"Atten . . . shunt! . . . right . . . dress! . . . eyes . . . front! . . . and noddanove!" screamed an officer at his unit on meeting them after the month-long Xmas reprieve. . . .
"And don't LOOK at me!" he roared on. . . . "If you guys start that again this year, I'LL SCREAM!"

This one is very deep and to get anywhere with you have to know that it is a bad, bad thing for a C.A.S.F. member to be seen around and about after a certain hour at night without a pass excusing him from barracks. . . .

And so it comes about (before the U. of T. men get their C.O.T.C. badges) that a young officer from Osgoode Hall is walking along, minding his own business, when a Military Policeman looms around the corner. "Haveyuh gotta pass?" the M.P. says sinisterly. . . . "Lemme see yuh pass. . . ."

And the young lawyer doesn't have a pass, so the M.P., refusing to take "no pass" for an answer at all at all, whisks him off the city streets and away to a nice, cool place, where it takes, so our informant relates, a helluva lot of explaining.

Collections from One-day Campaign will be Used for Students in War-Torn Countries

RED CROSS BOXES

Preparations are nearing completion for the university drive for International Student Service funds on Wednesday, J. Amos, Chairman of the I.S.S. Committee, told The Varsity last night. Collections of the one-day campaign will be used to help buy books, meals and clothing for students and prisoners in war-torn countries from Germany to China.

"The little boxes into which Varsity students will be dropping their greenbacks on Wednesday have been loaned for student relief by The Red Cross," the chairman revealed.

He stressed the importance of co-operation of the Red Cross with the I.S.S., pointing out that it is under the wing of the Red Cross that the I.S.S. operates in many countries—as, for example, among the British prisoners in Germany.

"The support of the I.S.S. is the most practical and intelligent step we can take to ensure that some world order will result from the present conflict. Students in every country are the leaders, and nothing could be more effective in giving them courage in the future than material relief of their present intolerable suffering."

Approval of the campaign was voiced by Prof. H. H. Madill, "The maintenance of educational life and constructive relationships between peoples is surely one of the main aims of the Allies in the present war. I should like to wish the appeal every success."

Eve Curie Says France Awaiting British Victory

Spirit of Resistance is Topic of Talk by Daughter of Noted Scientist: "France will Live Again"

"England is invulnerable to invasion or bombing but to win the final victory she must have the help of all parts of the British Commonwealth and of the U.S.A.; she must have planes, tanks, guns and the organization of this whole continent behind her as soon as possible," said Mademoiselle Eve Curie, speaking in Eaton Auditorium. The subject of her address was The Spirit of Resistance.

Miss Curie was on this continent last spring but returned to Europe in time to witness the tragedy of France. She escaped to England by means of a cargo ship and has spent the ensuing months in that country.

"France will live again," said Miss Curie, "I do not really worry if once she is set free for she will rebuild herself as she always has after being devastated. Nobody can ever really take freedom away from the country in which it was invented."

Miss Curie quoted letters received from the French people showing their courage and their belief in an ultimate British victory. The speaker expressed a repetition of this idea when she said "I never for one hour believed in complete German victory, nor will as long as the British Navy exists."

Charles Bland, Dr. Brimhall Civil Service Gives Lecture

Speaker Emphasizes that the Dominion Civil Servants Are Servants of the Canadian People

TWO CLASSIFICATIONS

Charles H. Bland, Chairman, Civil Service Commission of Canada, delivered the third lecture in the "Problems of Modern Government" series to a large audience at the Economics Building on Friday afternoon, his topic being "The Dominion Public Service."

Mr. Bland began by emphasizing that "the Civil Service is your public service." "The 80,000 Dominion civil servants are your public servants. They work for you, and you pay them." He added that over 20,000 of this grand total have been taken on since the beginning of the present war.

"The whole Civil Service may be divided into two classifications; the give and take services," explained the Chairman, as he sketched the different administrative departments and their duties.

Mr. Bland spoke of the misunderstanding which exists between private business and public business. "It is not to be wondered at, for there are two essential differences between private business and public business," he said.

Mr. Bland then went on to explain the part that the public can play in the Dominion Public Service, and the vacancies and opportunities in it that are open to college students.

ST. MIKE'S C TIE O.C.E. IN BASKETBALL FIXTURE

What appeared on the form sheet to be strictly a breeze nearly turned out to be an upset in Friday's basketball fixture, as St. Mike's C had to come from behind to tie a lowly-rated O.C.E. B quintet at 14-all.

Is Interested in Students but Hears Little of Those in France; Riots at Sorbonne Rumoured

By Helen Bannerman

On Saturday evening, after her lecture in Eaton Auditorium, Mlle. Eve Curie broke away from the throngs of delighted people waiting to congratulate her and gave me an enthusiastic interview—doubly so when she learned that The Varsity is a student paper, for students have a strong appeal for Mlle. Curie.

"But I really hear so little of what the students in my country have been doing since the surrender," she said rather sadly. "There are rumours of riots at the Sorbonne and we know that French students will never submit to Nazi rule. I do not know more than that."

Perhaps the best way to describe Mlle. Curie is to say that she has French charm. She is a witty and beautiful black-haired woman noted for her chic, her tireless work on behalf of the Allies, but best of all for her best-selling biography of her famous mother. "The great fashion industry is going ahead in spite of everything. In England especially the women are taking a renewed interest in their clothes. Especially they like the frilly things," she smiled and sketched the frills in the air.

Dr. Brimhall Details Tests For Pilots

Taken without Candidates' Knowledge to Show Up Reaction. Different Tests for Civil and Military Pilots

MOTION PICTURES USED

In his talk on Saturday evening on "Experiments in the Selection and Training of Civilian Pilots in the United States," Dr. Dean R. Brimhall, Ph.D., Director of Research, Civil Aeronautics Administration, Washington, D.C., made public facts pertaining to the research program being carried on in United States for the first time.

Dr. Brimhall revealed that 17 flight training centres in U.S. are now using motion pictures to test prospective pilots during flight and thus find out before too much expense has been needlessly incurred by the government, the aptness of the individual for flying. The behaviour of the eyes of the pilot while in flight is now being recorded for the first time and Saturday night was the first public showing of any such pictures.

The research department in U.S. is also working on a standardized flight test for all U.S. which the student will know beforehand—this would make research and inspection easier. Dr. Brimhall pointed out. The motion pictures mentioned above will help in developing such criteria, he added. "The difficulty is," stated Dr. Brimhall, "that the flying ability needed in peace and that needed in war are quite different. In fact different criteria are needed for transport pilots, instructors, fighting pilots, etc.," he said.

S.P.S. IV MUSHBALLERS DOWN AERIAL NAVIGATION

"Punch" Parchello hurled two perfect innings out of four in the Big Gym on Friday, as the S.P.S. IV mushball team took a 7-3 decision from a hard-fighting Aerial Navigation squad.

Scoring in every frame, the Engineers had nice breaks in addition to their steady playing, since the weak end of the Pilots' batting order came up on both occasions when hitting power was needed. First baseman Mike Tuchak was the sparkplug of the Aerial Navigators, and the imperturbable Ron Lake pitched good ball for the losers, but was handicapped by some crazy infield errors.

Christian had a big day with three hits and two runs. Mitchell was another powerful batsman for the Engineers.

S.A.C. STARTS DRIVE TO SELL WAR STAMPS BY PLEDGE METHOD

University Stampometer

Council Has Been Selling War Savings Stamps Since Early Last Fall by Government Authorization

OUTSTANDING SUCCESS

Coincident with the nation-wide drive to sell War Savings Stamps and Certificates launched last Saturday, a university campaign has been initiated by the Students' Administrative Council, it was learned yesterday.

While the S.A.C. has been selling War Savings Stamps with "outstanding success," since early last fall when government authorization was obtained, according to an S.A.C. spokesman, the current drive is planned to speed up and encourage the sale.

Each student is asked by the Council to come into the office and pledge himself to buy one War Savings Stamp every week. The number of pledges will be tabulated and indicated from time to time in The Varsity in the university "Stampometer," shown elsewhere on this page.

Ann Trow of U.C. Wins Ski Crown

Individual Ladies' Ski championship honours went to freshe Ann Trow, U.C., on Saturday afternoon, when Varsity fens skidded to victory and snow-baths at the annual meet at the University Ski Club.

Ann topped the slalom entries and trailed Barbara Bott and Marion Gallie by 1-2 second in the downhill to place third. Marion "Punch" Gallie placed second on the total, ranking second in the slalom and tying with Barbara Bott for first in the downhill. Barbara Bott came third, placing third in the slalom and first in the downhill.

Over twenty co-eds made the trip to the club, with favourable weather prevailing and whether a winner or no, everyone enjoyed the jaunt.

Results—

Slalom: 1. A. Trow, 29 1-2 secs.; 2. M. Gallie, 31 sec.; 3. B. Bott, 33 1-4 sec.; 4. M. McKenzie; 5. J. Walker; 6. J. Carter; 7. G. Riddell; 8. F. McLennan; 9. S. Morowitz; 10. M. Ham; 11. L. Eastman; 12. M. Magrath; 13. M. Laing; 14. M. Cook; 15. R. Stevens; 16. M. M. Blair.

Downhill: 1. B. Bott and M. Gallie, 24 1-2 sec.; 3. A. Trow, 25 sec.; 4. B. Conway; 5. M. Ham; 6. I. Eastman; 7. B. Hungerford; 8. M. Laing; 9. F. McLennan; 10. M. M. Blair; 11. J. Walker; 12. S. Morowitz; 13. M. Cook; 14. J. Stevens.

Last Vic Dance This Saturday At Wymilwood

The social season in Victoria College is rapidly coming to a climax. The last of the Scarlet and Gold dances for the year is scheduled for Saturday the eighth of February, and that night some eighty couples will disport themselves to the dulcet rhythms of Stan S. John in Wymilwood.

Already the list posted on the bulletin board of the college hall is almost full, and tickets are to be on sale from Monday to Wednesday.

As this is the last Scarlet and Gold of the year Social Director Don Ferguson of the V.C.U. is anticipating one of the most successful dances to be held at Vic this year. Because of the popularity of the previous dances a large turnout is expected.

Dancing is scheduled to begin at 8.30 and will continue until 11.30.

DEAN SPEAKS ON QUINTS' DENTAL CARE

Dean of the university's Faculty of Dentistry, Dr. Arnold Mason, dentist to the Dionne Quintuplets, delivered a broadcast address yesterday on the care of the Quints' teeth from the Cleveland Health Museum, where an exhibit on the subject has been on display all week at the Cleveland Museum, only one of its kind on the continent.

The Quints, six years old last May, have very good teeth, Dr. Mason told The Varsity in an interview before his departure last week. "They are not allowed candy, though their sisters and brothers smuggle in the odd morsel, to their great delight. The little girls' teeth have no decay and their secondary sets are erupting without defects."

Dr. Mason has been in charge of their oral health since the famous five were two and a half years old. He has written a 24-page bulletin representing five years of study on the dental condition of the Quints, which has proved both popular and informative for dentist and layman alike.

The children have identical sets of teeth. Diet and proper medical care has had a great deal to do with their having good teeth, Dr. Mason said. Dental care for the girls began in their infancy when their mouths were washed with a solution of boric acid. At two years of age the children's teeth were brushed, and by the time they were three they were able to do this themselves. Each girl has her own small basin with running water.

Quicker about the kind of patients "they are splendid," Dr. Mason replied that they are very well and they are just as lovely as Dr. Dufce says they are.

Children from three years of age on should be taken to the dentist even if their teeth are good, and sooner if there is any indication of trouble. The introduction of the child to the dental office is very important. By allaying their fear and establishing their confidence in the dentist children do not become afraid. Unfortunately, fear of the dentist is often falsely instilled in the children by their parents," Dr. Mason said.

Save---And Give

Students on the Varsity campus will be called upon to make two separate yet allied contributions to the war this week. On Wednesday the I.S.S. will hold an International Student Relief Day—one day of concentrated campaigning for funds for the relief of interned, imprisoned and war-distressed students the world over. Commencing this morning and continuing all week, the S.A.C. will conduct a "pledging" drive to sell War Savings stamps in conjunction with the nation-wide campaign being launched today.

To some it may look a lot. On second thought, however, it seems a small sacrifice to make in the interests of the cause to which our lives are now devoted. The stamp drive consists of a pledge to buy one War Savings stamp a week, which means putting aside twenty-five cents a week as a slight contribution to Canada's war effort. Actually twenty-five cents, and even more, will not be noticed by the average student who fritters away nickels and dimes and quarters every day of the week in any number of ways. Cutting down on cigarettes, one less coke a day, attendance at Athletic Night rather than a three-dollar dance—these are only a few of the ways students could and should cut down their expenditures. Perhaps there are some who cannot possibly give, but there are many others who could give far more and not feel the loss at all. We enjoy a fortunate position, even though we do have military training and numerous exams to pass, and we should be willing to make the small sacrifice asked.

The I.S.S. appeal is of a different nature, but it too is vitally important. It will not win the war, but it is helping to lay the foundations for the world which will be set up after the war is won. The two efforts are allied—"We must fight and build." By our purchase of War Savings stamps we can help fight; by our support of International Student Relief we can build.

Fulfilling an Obligation

Not a few people think that when a university provides lectures and a library for the undergraduates enrolled therein, its work is done. For a small privately-endowed college that function would perhaps suffice. If however that were the only service performed by a provincial university, there would be only partial justification for continued public support. True, the education of young people is the major function of any university, but a provincial university has further obligations to fulfill to its "constituency" as it were.

As the late Lord Tweedsmuir once said, a university has two plain duties, the transmission and the advancement of knowledge. These two duties the University of Toronto performs far better than people realize, especially when they are unacquainted with the volume of research which is being carried on constantly. Dismissing the advancement of knowledge for the moment, we might venture to say the transmission of knowledge is divided into two parts at Varsity. First, through undergraduate lectures learning and equipment for life are transmitted to some seven thousand young people. Secondly, through a system of University Extension work, knowledge is imparted to many thousands outside the bounds of the campus, and it is in this way that the University of Toronto fulfills its obligations as far as its constituency, the province, is concerned, and thereby creates complete justification for un stinting public support.

The work carried on by University Extension is unfamiliar to most people, yet it is a phase of university service which has expanded beyond measure in the last two decades. It has been estimated that close to twenty thousand people are reached in one way or another by extension work. When the present director, W. J. Dunlop, took charge of the work in 1920 there were about fifty people enrolled in extension, thirty of whom were in the Pass Course for teachers. The remaining twenty were taking the first evening tutorial class offered at Varsity. Today over five thousand are actually enrolled in extension courses, while other thousands attend lectures university-sponsored here and in provincial centres. For instance, last year 136 lectures in 23 different Ontario towns and cities were given by staff lecturers.

The bulk of extension work, numerically speaking, is done through the evening tutorial classes held on the campus almost every weekday evening. There are forty different courses offered, covering a wide range which has been developed to meet the changing needs of the age. There are many business subjects offered, along with courses in lip-reading, journalism, short story and radio writing, art of the theatre, air conditioning, interior decorating, and advertising, to mention only a few. The Pass Course for Teachers, taken during the year or in summer sessions, is of inestimable value to the province, for not only are teachers given a chance to improve their educational equipment and status, but the course also produces increased efficiency in the instruction given the school children of Ontario.

Apart from these there are many other types of educational activity carried on by the Extension Department which space forbids describing. Taken altogether, they prove that the University of Toronto is a valuable asset to the province, over and above its primary purpose, the education of undergraduates. It is filling the needs and requests of the people of Ontario, and proof of this is the stream of men and women, young and old, which flows to the university for these various extension courses.

Athletic Night Spirit

University spirit, or the lack of it, has always been with us as a topic of discussion. Speakers and editors constantly deplore the flagging university spirit and stress the need for further intermingling of the many colleges and faculties which make up this federated university. There is the ever-present danger here, just as in a federal structure such as our nation, of sectional feeling submerging the common spirit and ultimately the common interests.

Happily that danger seems fairly remote on this campus, despite the absence of unifying factors such as intercollegiate athletics. In place of those activities, minds have been busy substituting others which have the same unifying effect. It is in this connection that we should like to offer hearty congratulations to the members of the Athletic Directorate, and all others concerned, for carrying out so successfully this year the already-conceived "University Nights" in Hart House.

Activities like these can do more than most others to create a university spirit by bringing students from various faculties together for an evening of athletics and entertainment. Faculty boundaries are forgotten and hundreds mingle as students of the University of Toronto. The added advantage is that those who attend don't just watch; they have an opportunity to participate, and participation is the creator of co-operative understanding. We hope that "University Nights" will become a permanent feature of campus life.

Margaret Parson's Sunday Evening Concert

One of Toronto's singularly fine pianists, Margaret Parsons, gave the Sunday Evening Concert at Hart House last night. The program was a conventional classic-romantic-modern one arranged in the best taste.

Fine feeling and balance was exhibited in the Bach-Walton Choral Prelude Lord, Hear My Deep-est Longing. Typical vivaciousness predominated in the Mozart Gigue and delicacy was the keynote of the Andante con variazioni by Haydn.

An excellent Chopin group opened with a virtuoso performance of the A flat Waltz. The Nocturne in C sharp Minor and the Trois Ecossaises possessed

INFANTRY ISOLATED BY SLOWLY SURGING MASS OF SNOW

HEROES HUNTED

Communications in the north-east corner of the campus were hampered over the week-end by an unexplained glacial manifestation which threatens eventually to cut off all the main arteries of traffic between Victoria and the rest of the university. Already the path from Hart House to Victoria has been engulfed and Vice members of the Training Centre Battalion are marooned in Hart House. It is doubtful whether they will be able to attend classes at Victoria for some days.

The exact nature of the meandering road-block is a matter of debate. When interviewed in their warm studies members of the geology staff were divided. Some claim it is an avalanche, but will not tell where it avalanched from, others say it is a recurrence of the Ice Age. The North Smogoreborleford Gazette stoutly asserts that it is a multiple giant puff-ball.

The manifestation was first noticed about a week ago, and while not then considered dangerous by university authorities, it was noticed that men and trucks of the T.S.S.D.W.S.S.W.T.H. T.T.D.I. (Toronto Snow-shovelling Department Who Shovel Snow When They Happen to Think of It) were working to prevent the near disaster which now threatens the campus. Their efforts were to no avail. The more they worked the more the glacier(?) spread.

On hearing that several Vice members of the Training Centre Battalion were marooned in Hart House, a search party sent out on his failure to return found the empty flask on the rim of a yawning crevasse, but a sudden shift of the ice-mass gave warning of further spread of the engulfing tide and the party retreated. As they fled a feeble off-key "hoot" revealed the last resting-place of a beloved campus figure.

As the Varsity went to press it was advised that a party of four year Engineers are preparing to blast. University officials consider the measure drastic but the department of archaeology encourage the move in the hope of finding a well preserved carcass of one of Grovlez's well known Donkeys.

the proper contrasting spirit. Finally in this group Miss Parsons played the superb Fantasy in F Minor, that which the great critic James Huneker called Chopin's largest canvas, and about which he wrote: "I do not fear to maintain that this Fantasia is one of the greatest among piano pieces." Why so few pianists choose to play the One 49 in recital remains a problem to music lovers. That six pages of the music were deleted in this rendition was a disappointment for it marred the magnificent architectural design of the work. The soloist was at ease in her final group, giving her best to Debussy and Dohnanyi and injecting unusual humor into the appropriately stupid Grovlez joke called The Donkeys. Judging by Miss Parsons' own standards, inaccuracies were more frequent than usual, but that is mere cavilling.

SCANNING THE WAR

By V. C. Jackson

Staff Writer, The Manitoban

(A Canadian University Press Feature)

Winnipeg, Man., Jan. 28.—The U.S.S. Tuscaloosa has often appeared in the newspapers lately because of its use as a sort of federal ferryboat for the President and Admiral Leahy. A heavy cruiser (cruisers are judged light or heavy by their gun caliber and not by their weight; anything over 61 inches makes a cruiser heavy), the Tuscaloosa is considered one of the most modern and powerful in the U.S. Navy.

Yet a glance at the pictures of it reveal that its secondary battery of dual-purpose 5-inch guns is completely unshielded. This is not an isolated case of neglect, but seems to have been a general practice. An examination of the pictures of the American Navy in Life, which magazine refers to this Navy as the "greatest concentration of mechanical marvels and human skills ever assembled," will show that even on the battleships the shielding of the secondary and the anti-aircraft batteries has been neglected. This defect of construction exposes the gun crews to shell splinters and machine-gun fire from aircraft.

In the Battle of the Plate, the first naval battle in which an airplane was launched from a cruiser, the British aircraft repeatedly machine-gunned the secondary batteries and anti-aircraft guns on the Graf Spee as well as carrying out their regular duties of spotting the fire. This action reduced the effectiveness of the pocket-battleship and caused it to rely on its primary batteries, grouped in two turrets, one fore and one aft. As three British cruisers took part, we can suppose that at least one of them was free from heavy fire and enabled to close in by dodging through smoke screens to repeatedly hit the Graf Spee, although only armed with guns that corresponded to the secondary batteries of the pocket-battleship.

The Americans freely admit this fault and are rapidly equipping their ships with gun-shields, but it has been estimated that this will not be complete till 1943. The Royal Navy suffers from this defect only in some of the over-age light cruisers and destroyers, especially on the flush-deck type acquired from the U.S. The latest type of British destroyer of the Lightning class even has armored shields on the torpedo-tubes, while the guns are encased in gas-proof armored shields.

The U.S. Navy is now divided into the Atlantic, the Pacific and the Asiatic fleets, which for an admittedly one-ocean navy must have required some fancy juggling of ships and sectional sentiment. The new Atlantic fleet is led by three old battleships: the New York, the Arkansas and the Texas. It is interesting to note that two of these are now in the process of having the elevation of their 12-inch batteries increased. It was admitted that the former elevation so limited their range that the modern 8-inch guns of the German heavy Admiral Hipper class cruiser could pound away unmolested. Let us hope that no more faults such as these will be added to the disadvantages of the American Navy. It is enough to consider the lack of bases, auxiliary ships, and trained reserves which characterize the navy on which so much reliance has been placed by our southern neighbour.

There has been much controversy in the American periodicals over the merits of the American-made planes that the R.A.F. has been using. Charges were made that the British had found them unsatisfactory and were using them only for training and coastal patrol. These charges probably arose from an observation of the relatively greater numbers of this type of plane in use. The American shipments so far have been mainly training planes and bombers. These have been very satisfactory in their respective fields. The main bomber type is the Lockheed Hudson, a converted commercial plane, strong in construction and of great endurance, admirably suited for the work of the Coastal Command. British praise for this plane has been unstinted and there have been a great many pictures released showing planes of this type that have returned to their bases after severe punishment. The American fighters in use so far have been of two types; the Brewster, designed for use on aircraft carriers and somewhat outmoded, and the Curtiss Tomahawk. The Tomahawk is an improved version of the Curtiss Mohawk. These Mohawk fighters were ordered in considerable quantities by the French and acquired by the British when the French orders were taken over. The fighters are undoubtedly lacking in fire-power and speed. The warplane is merely a flying gun-platform and while manoeuvrability and speed are vital factors, the armament should not be overlooked. The importance of the decision to concentrate on an eight-gun fighter for the R.A.F. has amply been pointed out of late and the recent remarks of captured Italian pilots, handicapped by two-gun fighters, have strengthened the conviction that fire-power for warplanes is as vital a factor in success as the fire-power of an army. The American planes have neglected this factor and so far there is no American-built fighter that compares in this respect with either the Hurricane or the Spitfire and certainly not with the improved models that carry twelve machine-guns, and in some cases a lesser number of machine-guns and an aircraft cannon.

On the question of protection against night-bombing not much can be said, except to notice the improvement of late and the vague descriptions of new devices based on radio and reception of heat waves. The night-fighters used so far have been the two-motored Blenheims and the Defiants. The Defiant was deadly when first introduced over Dunkirk but proved vulnerable from below; it has since been improved and is coming back into use. The Blenheim is a converted medium bomber and has a four-gun, power-operated turret, the same as the Defiant but mounted in the nose of the plane.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Stan Westcott

"The best novice show we ever had," cried Chesty Martin after Saturday night's B. W. & F. festivities at Hart House, and who are to argue with this oracle. As our memory is exceptionally poor (especially around exam time) and won't stretch back into the distant recesses of infinity, we can't say with absolute assurance that it was "the best ever", but it certainly took the pastry for the past few years.

Before the performance Saturday evenings the boxing and wrestling coaches were a little troubled, and openly wished that more rugged, stout hearted males would turn out and train for the novice meet. But the boys that did enter the clashes made up in quality for any deficiency in numbers. They put on a grand and crowd pleasing display. Even after the MUSIC started in the big gym a huge throng stayed packed around the ropes to see the end of the boxing bouts.

"It was a tough fight ma, but after great tribulation, incessant endeavour, constant striving, numerous trials, worries and setbacks, we finally triumphed," the lads from the Little Red School House said as they banged the front door after their early Sunday morning, or at lunch on the same day. They didn't get up for breakfast. Who did?

The bout that really got the crowd was the marvellous, bloody battle between Trinity's Lloyd Delaney and Pete Rankin of U.C. The latter was given the decision but both boys earned it. They came out slugging at the first bell and kept pounding at each other gamely right to the finish.

Delaney opened a cut on Rankin's cheek early in the second round. The Royal College lad retaliated by carving a hole (almost anyway) on the right side of Delaney's features. They slapped and cuffed and pummelled each other until their faces resembled spot lights. The Red Cross ought to have had two or three gallon jars around to gather up the surplus claret from this bout.

Pawson of Vic put on a superb display of boxing to take a squabble from a hard fighting O'Donnell of School. This decision was roundly booed by the fans. It was a very close fight. However, Pawson bobbed and weaved skilfully, ducking many of O'Donnell's Sunday (or Saturday night) punches and making him look quite foolish upon occasions. He turned in a very aggressive last round assault.

This Pawson fellow, with a little coaching should develop into quite a boxer, at times his inexperience made him bob right into a left rather than away from it. This procedure frequently causes undue embarrassment. But in the main Pawson ducked the right way. Training would eliminate his bad guesses.

School's Ramore, an intercollegiate boxing champ and a well-conditioned athlete, dunked Willie Armstrong of Vic with two late falls in a wrassling wrangle. As a card, or wit, described the bout later in the evening: The fight drew to a close, Ramore was scarcely breathing hard, Armstrong was scarcely breathing. That gives one an accurate picture of what went on.

Willie the Kid exclaimed later that he had been wounded in the fray (whatever portion of the anatomy that is). So he apparently was badly handicapped, and not responsible for his loss. Condolences.

Don Grosskurth of S.P.S. knew too much of the science of wrestling for Vic Wilkinson, a Scarlet and Gold battler. Vic was the stronger of the two, but when he got Grosskurth tied up he couldn't figure out anything to do with the guy. Don took advantage of an opportunity to roll Wilkinson for a winning fall early in the second round. A wrestling tutor could do a great deal with the broad-shouldered, strongly-muscled, lusty-lunged son of Victoria.

Another intercollegiate boxer was tied up in the wrestling racket in the person of Bob Hurst of Vic. Cuthbert Lambie decisioned Rugged Robert as he clamped a hold on Hurst and held it for over two minutes in the first round. A kind citizen has since advised Bob of the correct method of escaping from that particular hold. Bob was the aggressor for the rest of the match but couldn't pick up the last ground.

THROUGH THE HOOP

O.C.E.'s high-flying basketball outfit dropped St. Mike's A 52-32 in a Friday match. The Teaching Tornados have now larruped every team in their group and methinks it wouldst not be out of place to predict a title for these gentlemen.

A little guy who once ran 80 odd yards through an opposing rugby team as he quarterbacked U.C.'s football entry last autumn, scored 11 of his team's 13 points on the basketball floor Saturday night. Cuddy Faber is usually a steady player and good playmaker, but rarely does he go on a scoring spree himself. However, his eye was unerring in front of the Hart House audience on Saturday, and he picked up all but two of his team's points in their losing tilt with St. School.

By Mary Foulds

Last year's interfaculty hockey champs looked all right in their win over Vic I on Friday. St. Hilda's have Joan Griffith, Tibs Annesley and Patty Lampman, stars of last year's squad, back with them, and have found two promising young 'uns in the persons of freshies Betty Hungerford and Betty Pemberton. Seen in action this year, we're saying, watch out—

Tonight, from 5-6 on the Trinity Rink, we find U.C. called to meet St. Mike's, and at 6-7 on the Vic Rink, Vic II facing Meds. Now, for goodness sake make one of these games, eh? They're worth the effort as you will plainly see.

See the results of the Ski Meet elsewhere. Ann Trow, Marion Gallie and Barbara Bott placed first, second and third in that order.

St. Hilda's hockey team continued their winning streak last Friday night by defeating Vic I by the score of 5-2 on the Trinity Athletic Field.

Joan Griffiths blazed home three counters for the winners, followed by Kitty Storey, who scored the other two. For Vic, Jean Crawford and Beth Moore scored, and Helen Carefoot played well defensively.

Engineers Play Beautiful Brand of Ball to Leave the Artsmen Way Behind; Lead 13-5 at Half-Time

FABER DYNAMIC

University College was host to other faculties at Saturday night's athletic show but S.P.S. copped the Big Gym spotlight when School's high-flying senior basketball team squelched the Red and White seniors 35-13.

The Scientists went to work early in the first half, and led by Don Finlayson piled up a 13-5 lead by the whistle. The Engineers played a beautiful brand of ball that left the Artsmen way behind.

The Royal Collegians headed by Cuddy Faber tried a comeback in the dying moments of the game but Allen put it on ice with three quick baskets.

Faber played a standout game for U.C., scoring 11 of their 13 points. Finlayson with 15 and Allen with 12 led the School snipers.

Schoolmen Gain Victory In Novice Tournament

Particularly Gratifying to See Fine Display Put On by All Contestants, Say Athletic Wing Men

By Bill Quigley

"The best novice tournament we've ever had. It was particularly gratifying to see the fine displays put on by all contestants, who were greeted by such a large, enthusiastic gathering of students."

Such was the comment of those energetic personalities of the "Athletic Wing" who were mainly responsible for the success of the Novice Assault which drew to a close at Hart House on Saturday night.

From Cuthbert Lamb's decision over "Tiny" Hurst in the paperweight wrestling final to the "Waltz-me-around-again-Willie" display instigated by room-mates Tom Higgins and Harry Wood of St. Mike's in the 155 lb. boxing final, the card possessed plenty of punch and colour. The fact that S.P.S. were the victors of the assault by the length of an old maid's sigh, didn't detract from the interest shown by those less fortunate faculties.

Tired Tommy Jarvis, participating in his second bout of the evening, lost a close decision to Sandy World in a clever 145-lb. mitt final.

The Chopin group was reached Miss Lennie was more at home and this section was most successful. Especially well done was the Etude in C sharp minor where her interpretative powers were at their highest. Grodz's The Donkeys was very delightful.

In concert work it is essential, more for the nervous conditioning of the embryo performer than from the point of view of the audience, that the beginner have absolute command of the works to be presented. This responsibility lies with the teacher or coach rather than with the performer. That Jean Lennie stood up so well under this obviously harrowing experience leads one to prophesy a successful future. oon mox

The Canadian Campus

By Hilda McCurrau

Staff Writer, The Sheaf

A Canadian University Press Feature

The University of Alberta celebrated New Year's Eve with a Faculty Dance where the lofty attitude of the learned was forsaken in deference to the possible feeling of inferiority among the twelve students present. Without thought of the dignified manner befitting a professor of English or Maths, the frolicsome lads gaily tripped the light fantastic. Why some daring prof even whistled to his stumping of the Heel Toe Polka. "What is this intelligentia coming to?" sighed the babes of intellect.

The Manitobans enjoyed a big A.B.C. Varsity Jamboree lately. From all reports it lived up to its name. Included in the evening's program were: roller skating, professional entertainment, band reville, the snake dance and ball-room dancing. How students from coast to coast envied them their snake dance! In fact, so great was this noble section that some enthusiasts on campus tried to round up a charming co-ed to perform the mystic contortions of the dance. When it came to roller skating, was there, perchance, a little booms-a-daisy with the hard wood floor?

Sacred is the cause involving aid to the Red Cross. Thus runs the unconscious motto of the Canadian Varsityes. An example of this is the Blankets for Britain campaign launched by Saskatchewan co-eds with the fruits of their labour adding to that of the Red Cross. Not to be outdone is that enterprising U. of B.C. So great is their fervour that they are holding a Dutch Treat Ball in aid of the Red Cross. For once, pert co-eds will flutter the eyelash in vain. They pay out this time and they can't fasten the blame on Sadie Hawkins either.

Full of New Year's resolutions are the students of the University of Toronto returning for the second term. A few examples will, I hope, give you an idea of the high character of the Canadian student. Here they are folks: Whitney Hall girls have given up chocolates—I wonder why?—one poor girl has resolved not to get married until she finishes her year—another question mark arises—route to the card room stated they were not going to play so much bridge this year, and yet another, "I'm going to cut out cutting-up in the anatomy class." The majority favoured the dispensing of resolutions during war time but one supporter of the old custom voiced a bitter protest. "I've resolved not to phone Falconer House any more. Either the line's busy or she is."

The Manitobans forecast the opening of their opera, The Mikado, on February 12. The Varsity Glee Club expects to present it as one of their best shows in years. With its opening goes a sincere wish for success from other varsities.

Ticked will be the fancy of the imaginative with the following account. At the annual New Year's frolic of the U. of B.C. co-eds, half-crazed females heaved coke bottles and rocks, sprayed water, and smeared grease on the faces of intrepid males who crashed the Hinx. Defying the traditional taboo against males attending these paganistic rites, a group of freshmen gained access to the proceedings. From a vantage point they took in the scenery. This consisted of girls in evening clothes, girls in pajamas, towels, etc. The idea was that they should impersonate the fairer sex caught at 2.30 a.m. by the air-raised siren. When the photo-flash bulbs began popping, things began to happen. However the girls were unable to inflict any real damage on the masculine heroes. Yet one lone Ubbysay reporter was almost hung by his necktie in the cause of journalism. He managed to escape the claws of the clutching hordes of females.

Foster Hewitt in all his glorified eloquence would find stiff competition were he to come in contact with the Saskatchewan Varsity students. Once more they have won in a branch of the McGown Cup Debate, defeating the Alberta team at Saskatoon.

Great was the rejoicing of the Saskatchewan Dramatic Directorate when they secured the services of Chester Le Maistre. Under his direction they are presenting the play "Bus to Nowhere" over CFQC.

Safe from shattering bombs and free from the fear of air-raids the Canadian student still comes under the atmosphere of war. This is due to such as the following: the use of the Queen's varsity library has been offered to soldiers stationed in or near Kingston. Officers commanding different units stationed near Kingston will take the names of men who are interested in borrowing books in the library. These officers will act as guarantors in assuring the library that the books will be returned undamaged. Thus common will be the sight of Voltaire under the khaki-clad arm of the soldier.

Simpson's

MILITARY SHOP

Senior students now being commissioned in His Majesty's Service will be interested to know that Simpson's Military Shop has on hand a full range of materials for Navy, Army and Airforce officers' uniforms and greatcoats. These are fine quality imported woolsens from high grade mills that customarily supply London's better class tailoring houses. Tailoring is done to rigid specifications, with careful attention to official regulation.

NAVY

Greatcoats are cut from a thirty-two-ounce, treble-milled indigo-dyed pilot cloth, woven to the exacting standards of the Royal Navy. Finished with satin lining and interlined to waist. With buttons, $60. Jacket and Slacks, cut from fine quality 24-oz. English Doeskin, $60.

ARMY

Greatcoats are of fine quality 32 to 35-ounce Scotch and English meltons. One-third satin lining and all-wool interlining to vent. Inside of shoulders protected by generous-sized leathers. With buttons and rank insignia, $60, $65, and $75. Army tunics and slacks are made of fine English barathe or whipcord. With buttons and rank badges, $55 and $75.50.

AIR FORCE

R.C.A.F. Officers' greatcoats are tailored from English meltons of a quality excellent in both appearance and serviceability. Satin lining to waist, hand-felled collars, bound edges and screw-buttons on shoulder epaulettes. Complete with buttons and rank insignia, $60, and $75. R.C.A.F. tunic and slack, $55 and $75.50.

let's go places

A great deal more paper has been filled with critical commentaries on "Gone with the Wind", that melodrama to end melodramas, than that over which the book sprawls its ungainly length.

The most important thing LOEW'S that you may not know is G.W.T.W. that you can see it (again?) at "popular prices".

Yo' all have heard how perfect the whole thing is: how Vivien Leigh really never lets anyone down (except her poor husbands); how Clark Gable manages to have her fall in love with him without her knowing it (he is a natural for his part!); and how Hattie McDaniel, the "mammy" walks away with a great deal of the show and an Academy Award.

Scarlett O'Hara is a marvellous characterization. Staying to see the beginning of things for the second time, I was shocked to think that so many subtle points of character development had crept up on me unnoticed. Vivien Leigh with marvellous subtlety surrounds the very quirks of her eyebrows with a depth of meaning. I have nothing but admiration both for her and the woman she portrays.—N.M.

"Dollar From Every Student" Is I.S.S. Objective

OFFICIALS IN DARK REGARDING EFFECT OF FOUR-MONTH PLAN

No Light Is Thrown on Local Results of Newly-announced Extension of Training Period to Four Months

EXPECT INFORMATION

The extension of the military training period to four months announced yesterday has raised a wave of conjecture in the university as to where university men stand in relation to the new order. "I don't know any more about it than you do," said Lieutenant-Colonel Wilson, Officer Commanding the Training Centre Battalion, when asked if he had any additional word on the subject.

He went on to remark that anything he could say would be pure conjecture, but he thought it unlikely that the group at present undergoing training would be affected.

The situation regarding the C.O.T.C. is equally obscure. When interviewed by The Varsity, Lieut.-Col. Madill, O.C. of the unit, was unable to give any information. "We hope to have full information in a few days, but as yet we have heard nothing official," he said.

Gould to Give Talk on Epigram

Professor will Trace History of Epigram since Seventh Century B.C. in First Lecture of "February" Series

SPONSORED BY VIC

Professor S. H. Gould will deliver an address on "The Nature of the Epigram" today, the first in a series of February lectures sponsored by Victoria College, at Alumni Hall.

Professor Gould will deal with the history of the epigram from the seventh century B.C. until the present time. Wishing to make his speech understood by the laymen on the campus, the speaker has taken great pains with the organization of his talk.

He will discuss a century's development of English literature and will illustrate his point with an epigram. The professor says that his lecture will not contain any original startling theories or begin new schools of thought.

VARSITY STAFF

There will be a meeting of The Varsity staff on Friday afternoon, 4:30 p.m., at the Women's Union. Full attendance is important. Tea will be served.

U.C. JUNIOR DIAMOND-MEN HAND DOCTORS WHITEWASH

Junior U.C. continued undefeated in the Group II baseball loop as they blanked Junior Meds 2-0 yesterday afternoon in the lower gym.

Opposed by the sensational hurling of Sam Fox, who struck out nine men in four innings, the Meds were helpless. Both scores came in the first inning when Caddy Faber and Fox both crossed the plate.

Jr. U.C.: Faber, Fox, Rotenberg, Beatty, Ballagh, Nichol, McKinley, and Clayton.

Jr. Meds: Elia, Sterioff, Ludwig, Dixon, Charney, Moss, Cohen, Gentles, Hill.

Costumed Co-eds Canvass Campus

Dressed in the dainty costume of northern Sweden, Dorothea Wedd fixed the collar of Nancy Lang's colorful Czechoslovakian peasant dress as the two prepare to join a group of St. Hilda's girls who will canvass the campus today in aid of the I.S.S. fund for international student relief. Forty girls, some of them dressed in the native costumes of various European nations, have volunteered to campaign on the campus in the one-day drive.

Engineers Set The Stage For "School Nite" Funfest

Cares and Drudgery to be Forgotten as Schoolmen Gather Friday for Annual Night of Music and Fun

VARIETY OF FEATURES

Engineers will forget the drudgery of life at "School Nite", their annual informal party which will be held at Hart House this Friday night. According to a School spokesman this affair competes with the U.C. Follies as the best of its kind on the campus.

Four dance bands will be slugging the cymbals for the slide rulers. Sophisticated swingsters will jive to the hot licks of the Modernaires while Haragan's Mountaineers will be coming in for those who hark back to the days of square dancing.

A gym display, wrestling bouts and a novel tank show are carded as a variety feature of the gala event.

Although lacking in feminine pulchritude, the revue itself will display something new in the way of masculine humanity.

Tickets for the dance only are still available and may be obtained at the office of the Engineering Society.

DATE CORRECTION

The Pharmacy dance on Feb. 28 will be held in Simpson's Arcade Court, not in the Eaton Auditorium as stated in the Students' Handbook.

UNIVERSITY SWINGSTERS REVIVE OLD SWING CLUB WITH DANCE TONIGHT

Many will remember the Swing Club and the famous libel suit they brought against The Varsity two years ago. This libel action and its succeeding trial in the Moot Court provided the second best story of the year 38-39 by the actual vote of the editorial staff.

During that season, the Swing Club brought to the campus such well-known figures as Duke Ellington, Bert Niosi, Dick McDougall of the "Sweet and Hot" radio program, Bert Pearl, and a host of others.

By popular demand, the Swing Club has agreed to resume activities once more. Their initial meeting will take the form of a dance to be held tonight at the Oddfellows' Temple, 229 College St.

George Carthy and his Campus Cats, well-known dance band in university circles, will be the feature presentation of the evening. Tickets may be purchased at the door for a nominal sum.

TORONTO EDITOR PICKS JOURNALISM AS NOON-HOUR TOPIC

B. K. Sandwell, Managing Editor of Saturday Night, will Speak on "Journalism" in Vocational Series

VARSITY GRAD

Mr. B. K. Sandwell, Managing Editor of the Saturday Night, will be the guest speaker in today's S.C.M. address at 1:30 p.m. in the Music Room of Hart House. His talk on "Journalism" is one in the Wednesday noon hour series dealing with problems of choosing a life's work.

Since his graduation from the University of Toronto in 1897, Mr. Sandwell has had a notable career as both a journalist and a professor. After nine years on the editorial staff of the Toronto News, he became in turn Associate Editor of the Montreal Herald, and the Editor of the Montreal Financier. (Continued on Page 4)

Butter Consumption Drops on Campus

University Dining-halls Respond to Government Appeal by Requesting Students to "Go Easy on Butter"

HART HOUSE SAVES DAILY

The university is doing its bit in the nation-wide campaign for the saving of butter, directed by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board at Ottawa. Canadians eat about 5 times as much as the British butter ration of 2 oz. a week.

The government has appealed to housewives, restaurant-owners and hotel proprietors to avoid any unnecessary waste so that a threatened shortage next April may be prevented.

In accordance with this policy, Hart House and the various other university dining-halls have put out notices instructing students as to the situation and urging all to "go easy on butter." Burwash Hall students were handed out notices to this effect, pointing out that butter costs the residence $390 more this year than last. Miss Falconbridge, dietitian, said the appeal had already borne fruit and that not only is less butter used for cooking, but that the amount consumed by students has definitely decreased.

Miss Ransom, superintendent of Hart House dining hall, also said that students are co-operating and that several pounds of butter are being saved daily.

Authorities in other residences reported that the plan for saving butter is working out successfully.

VIC DRAMATIC CLUB HOLDS ANNUAL AT-HOME IN WYMLWOOD FRIDAY

Members of the Victoria College Dramatic Club will be tripping the light fantastic this Friday night at Wymilwood, at their annual at-home.

In keeping with the precedent set by other formal on the campus, this year the dance will be coarsely, but it is expected that the absence of flowers will make little difference. Music will be supplied by Pee-wee Norton's nine-piece orchestra.

A black and white motif is to be carried throughout for the programs, tickets and refreshments, although the latter are being kept a deep dark secret.

Concentrated Campaign To Be Staged Today For Student Relief Fund

WYMLWOOD MUSICALS

The guest artist at this Sunday's Wymilwood Musicals will be Adolph Wantruff, Russian baritone. His program will include selections by Handel, Schubert, Verdi, Roger Quilter, and representatives of French and Russian schools.

U.S. Coeds' Garb Differs, Gray Says

Emphasis on Fads in Clothing is Chief Difference Between Canadian and American Girls, Debater Claims

SLACKS AT DEBATE

"Like all other men who are willing to admit the truth, I am a connoisseur of neither dogs nor women," said Ted Gray of Victoria College, on being interviewed yesterday as to his opinion of American co-eds whom he met on his debating tour in the U.S.

"The most prominent difference between American and Canadian college girls is their clothes," said Gray. "One of the things that seemed most strange to us was the fact that apart from Northwestern University the girls at the other colleges wore no stockings. The second time we debated at the University of Kansas two girls walked into the middle of the debate with slacks on. My colleague was so upset by this in the middle of his speech that he had to stop and take a drink of water."

Saddle shoes, plaid men's shirts allowed to hang out, purple lipstick, long drooping hair, tortoise shell glasses painted with every colour of nail polish were some of the fads that made the two Canadian debaters look twice.

"American girls, unlike Canadian girls take you to their heart at first acquaintance," he continued. "Their extreme friendliness went so far as to include us in their jolly dates, which are 4 to 6 o'clock toast and jelly rendezvous at the college hangouts called (Continued on Page 4)

Polish Refugees Outstep Bombs To Enroll in Vic via South America

Refugees from war-torn Poland, Jeanena and Stefan Szyksgold arrived in Toronto last week and are now enrolled as students at Victoria College. They escaped from their native land two weeks after the bombing began and have been forced to travel from country to country ever since.

They narrowly escaped death in Poland and actually saw bombs fall in the garden of the American Embassy despite the fact that the United States was not at war.

Motoring through Rumania in their trip to France the Szyksgold family had to pack all their possessions in a small suitcase because of lack of space. Despite incessant bombardments, they managed to reach French territory not occupied by the Germans and lived at Toulouse for a year.

Jeanena was a nurse in a military hospital there until the country collapsed.

Once more the Szyksgolds had to pack their bag and this time they fled to Spain, escaping the Germans by only

Money will be Used to Provide Clothing, Shelter, Books for Needy and Interned Students in Europe and China

COLLECTION BOXES USED

"A dollar from every student" is the objective of the International Student Service drive for funds today.

The money will provide books, clothing, shelter, medical supplies and food for needy students in Europe, China and America. Hundreds of Chinese students living in caves, subsisting at starvation level, depend entirely on the I.S.S. for support.

Forty girls are working to make the campaign a success. Some are wearing national costumes. Sonja Morawetz, who came here from Czechoslovakia only two years ago, has unearthed a complete Czech costume. The Danish consul has loaned Dorothea Wedd her Swedish costume. The girls will tour the campus.

The aim of the I.S.S. is "to salvage the intellectual life of Europe and China by relieving physical misery and intellectual isolation caused by war, and to produce leadership essential for post-war co-operation between the nations." (Continued on Page 4)

U.C. Debaters Vie for Shield

"The Robinette shield for debating will be at stake both this week and next in the debating contest in University College," said Chas. Dubin, Literary Director. The shield was presented to the college by J. Robinette, a graduate of University College, and a past Honorary President of the Literary and Athletic Association.

Each year the Robinette shield and medals are given to encourage debating in University College. Last year the champions were E. Hardy and J. Clarry; in '39 I. Sussman and W. Wood; in '38 H. Tattersall and G. Stoddard. Debates are in progress this week. The finals are scheduled for the nomination meeting of the Literary and Athletic Association next week.

a few minutes. But after a month's stay in Portugal they travelled to Brazil on board the "Serra Pinto" with a passenger list of 600, which took them from Lisbon to Rio de Janeiro in two weeks.

During the sea voyage the ship rescued 22 men who had been run adrift from a torpedoed Greek steamer and were wandering aimlessly on the Atlantic waters. Adrift for 28 days, these men had very little to eat or drink for the entire period.

Jeanena found the Brazilian people primitive but kind and hospitable. She said that the weather was unpleasant. And it was not long before the family travelled to New York on board the ship "Argentina".

Jeanena and Stefan hope to become better acquainted with the English language but intend to return to Europe at the end of the war. Jeanena speaks French, Polish, Portuguese and English. She learned English from American and English friends in a Switzerland school.

Today's the Day

Through a little unselfish thought, and through numerous contributions, small and large Varsity students can do a great work TODAY. For TODAY is International Student Relief Day. In various spots through the campus little collection boxes have been placed, and volunteers will also be canvassing in person.

The campaign is brief—one day only. The need is urgent—thousands can be helped. But to ensure success YOU must act, and act TODAY. There can be no putting it off. There must be no shirking of responsibility by those who have so much towards those who have so little. There must be ACTION and there must be action TODAY.

The purposes, the past records, the present needs, the plans and organization of International Student Service have been made familiar to the whole university during the past few weeks. You know what the cause is. You know how to aid the cause. You must act. Every day you are helping in one way or another to fight the war and bring victory. You must also make your contribution toward the building of the future by supporting I.S.S. with your money—TODAY.

Break the Stampometer

The sale of War Savings stamps has been given a considerable impetus this week due to the local campaign being conducted by the S.A.C. which has, of course, been selling stamps to students all year. In the past two days the volume of sale has risen greatly. Apart from pledges, many interested students are volunteering to sell stamps throughout the university, and two Trinity men yesterday sold well over fifty dollars worth of stamps themselves.

Hearty congratulations are due these volunteer workers, but it is to be hoped that their customers will become steady purchasers of War Savings stamps. The best-devised scheme to date is that promoted by the S.A.C. whereby students are asked to sign their names to a "pledge" to buy at least one War Savings stamp a week—and more if possible. The aim is to convert sporadic purchasers into regular weekly buyers of stamps, thus ensuring a steady volume of sale increasing with time and effort. There is no reason why ninety-nine percent of the undergraduate population cannot buy one stamp a week, preferably through one central organization which could record the sale. If volunteer sellers purchase their stamps from the Students' Council, the result will be the same in the end, and the students may feel that they are making a real, and vitally necessary, contribution to the promotion of the war effort.

Sign the pledge and buy your stamps once a week in the S.A.C. office, if possible, or else buy from volunteer sellers on the campus. But regardless of the method—BUY WAR SAVINGS STAMPS NOW AND OFTEN.

Struggle for Decision

In a letter to the editor of the Christian Science

Monitor, an American discusses the pros and cons of declaring war upon Germany. He sums up by saying that it would merely be recognizing an existing situation. Portions of his letter are worth printing here.

"To me the advantages all seem to be on the side of declaring war, some of which are:

"1. It would help us all to realize the emergency.
"2. It would greatly help in putting production on an emergency basis.

"3. It would aid in freeing this country of Nazi agents.

"4. It would put us in a position to do whatever needed to be done at the right time.

"5. It would protect the country from the precedent of putting such great power in the Presidency in peace time, and would make that authority an emergency force only.

"Of course, I realize that war cannot be declared until public opinion is ready for it. But we have seen American public opinion go through several phases. At first it was everything to keep out of war; next to give aid short of war; now to give aid even if it results in war, but still keep out of war. During these changes of public opinion there has been no basic change in the international situation. The steps we are now taking could have been taken six months ago if the country had more fully understood the situation."

We offer no comment whatsoever, and merely print this as illustrative of the variations in public opinion in the United States.

Sir Ernest MacMillan, Organist

On Monday night, Sir Ernest MacMillan gave one of his all too rare organ recitals and officially broke in the Frederick Wilkins Memorial Organ at Trinity United Church. Something should be done to let us hear this great musician more often as a performer, for it would be difficult to imagine any organist who could do better.

The highlight of the concert was the Bach Fantasia and Fugue in G Minor (the one you know as the Great G Minor Fugue). In it, and all through the evening, Sir Ernest used no music. This was one reason for his perfection: it is much easier to concentrate if the mere mechanics of reading such a complicated score may be forgotten. In an almost flawless evening of a dozen selections (there was a split second memory loss in the Fugue) the other great work was the Finale in B Flat by Cesar Franck.

The new instrument (Casavant, three manual) is superb. For a medium sized organ, the range of stops and combinations is surprising. Surprising too are the beauty of the echo organ and the real tonal delicacy of the whole (achieved by the modern trend of lower wind-chest pressure).

If this review is lopsided, leaning to organ exclusively, I plead the condition of the A. M. & D. columns. Jeanne Pengelly put through a marvellous performance, but it would take a soprano of the calibre of Kirsten Flagstad to divert my attention from Sir Ernest when he is playing his own instrument.

Better It Should Be Disney!

Toronto Symphony Orchestra

The transition from the Sibelius Violin Concerto to the Wilhelm Tell Overture is abrupt enough to require some sort of shock-absorber between them. That Leo Smith's Elegy had to be the shock-absorber was unfortunate, as the intrinsic value of the composition was somewhat obscured by the broader sweep of the composition which preceded it and by the mellow corn which followed.

Earlier in the evening the orchestra gave a workmanlike performance of the Vaughan Williams London Symphony. This work is an effective musical documentary of London in all its moods and aspects. An intelligent motion picture producer could achieve something remarkably by synchronizing a photographic study of the city with the music.

Leo Smith's Elegy showed richness of harmony and sound orchestration. The 'cello passage which

English 1c: Four original essays must be submitted during the academic year (The Calendar)

February Assignment. — Write an original essay on one of the following:

- (1) My First Day at School.
  - (2) Buying a Hat.
  - (3) Adventures of a Penny.
  - (4) A Visit to the Photographers.
- Ed. Note.—(Never having had a Dog, or a Hat, or a Penny, and never having been to a School, the Boys in the Back Room have decided to choose as their essay topic "A Visit to the Photographers").

Rising early on Tuesday so as to be on time for our appointment at one-fifteen in the afternoon, my chums and I hiked merrily up to Bloor Street and thence to the studio where our photographer awaited us.

The photographer was a jolly fellow who greeted us with a merry quip about us being late. This gave Hank Rooster, who is the sharp-witted member of the Boys in the Back Room, a chance to say his favourite comeback, "Better late than never!" But the jolly old photographer proved as sharp as any, for without a moment's hesitation he exclaimed, "But better never late!" Whereupon we all howled with glee.

We had all put on our new sweaters for the occasion. These sweaters are decorated with a banner reading "The Varsity A.C.", and the Boys in the Back Room wanted to appear athletic in our school year book, which is called Torontonensis. It was then that the photographer, amid many jokes and funny sayings such as "Don't break the camera when you smile", stopped rolling on the floor in mirth long enough to suggest the merriest joke of all. "Since you boys of The Varsity Masthead are so fond of athletics such as bean-bag and snooker, why don't you vary the style of picture this year?" This was a capital idea, we thought, so after much discussion we decided to be photographed as a gymnastic pyramid, inverted to form a "V".

We had great larks trying to make this difficult formation, but we were determined to do anything to please our jolly friend the photographer.

Late last night, we were still trying to form an inverted pyramid,—and that is why this essay will be late, which is nothing new from those pranksters THE BOYS IN THE BACK ROOM.

opens the work is particularly effective. It was unfortunate that its position on the program dulled its reception.

The Sibelius Concerto is typical of the composer's best work. It has the broad sweep that we have come to recognize as typically Finnish; it contains the composer's own peculiar tricks of harmony and bursts of powerful melody; the rhythmic intensity of the final movement is more exciting than anything by Sibelius that I have ever heard—including Finlandia.

Kathleen Parlow's performance of the concerto contained a remarkable degree of brilliance and tonal quality. Her technique was not quite sufficient to cope with the considerable pitfalls of the work, but only the greatest violinists could carry off the piece flawlessly. She is also the unfortunate possessor of a set of the most annoying mannerisms known to concert performers, the worst of which is a tendency to check the pitch of her strings audibly during the concerto.

As for the Wilhelm Tell, the best comment on it was the Disney cartoon starring Donald Duck. It will probably prove just as immortal.

Annual Squash Tourney Commences Tomorrow With Thirty-Six Entries

Draw is Announced as Thirty-six Men Enter Hunt for Inter-faculty Squash Crown Held by Hussey

S.P.S. PRESENT CHAMPS

The annual intramural squash tournament gets under way tomorrow in the Hart House courts. The draw for the tournament was released yesterday by "Mac" McCutcheon, intramural sports director.

Squash entered the intramural set-up for the first time last year when S.P.S. copped the team championship and Henry Hussey of Trinity ran away with individual honours. The success of last year's tournament prompted its repetition this year.

This year there are thirty-six entries with every faculty but Aerial Navigation, Knox and Wycliffe represented. S.P.S., Vic, St. Mike's, U.C. and Trinity lead the parade with four entries apiece.

In last year's playdowns S.P.S., Trinity and Dents wound up on top in the race for team honours. The Engineers eked out a win, leaving the Red and Black and the Molarmen tied for second place.

SQUASH DRAW

Take off your ear-muffs gals and fellows because—we have an announcement to make. This Saturday night the medical men, who are sponsoring University Night in Hart House, have kindly consented to feature us women on their program! An inter-fraternity girls' basketball match is scheduled for 8 o'clock sharp (Sat. nights aren't Tuesday nights, you know). It will conclude at 9 to enable the participants to enjoy the rest of University Night escorted, or, anyway, so they can be escorted somewhere.

This game will present the complete final U.C. Jr. team broken up, plus some members of last year's U.C. Sr. champ team, and some players that are just good basketballers. The tussle will be played under girls' ruling with the

ALTITUDE, 2845

"D'ya think you can catch S.P.S.?" "I dunno, but we're going to try."

That was the answer Myros "Mike" Tuckah gave us when we asked him what he thought of Aerial Navigation's chances of overtaking School in the T. A. Reed dash.

The latest standing shows that S.P.S. now have 2845 points. Next with 2029 comes Aerial Navigation.

Greatest credit for the phenomenal success of the Flyers goes to stocky, well-built Mike himself, an untiring organizer, who manages and plays on nearly every Navigation team. Out of a registration of 49, smallest in the university (by his own calculation) to turn out. His boys are constantly in touch with one another, they work together, and when they compete, they turn in a sporting brand of play seldom equalled anywhere on the campus. Pick up any interfaculty score-sheet, and one will notice the same names for the Flyer teams—Tuckah, Lake, Scott, Price, VanHuyse. This clique forms the winning nucleus that has rocketed them to second place.

Mike was a freshman last year and we remember very little about him except that he was to be seen often in the athletic wing of Hart House. But this year, his intense interest in sports was recognized immediately and he was unanimously elected Aerial Navigation's representative to the Intramural Committee. We have never known him to miss a meeting of that body. Last fall Mike figured prominently in the intramural field events, and since that time he has played outstanding roles on most of his faculty's teams, entered in almost every sport.

Aerial Navigation being a two-year course, Mike graduates this spring. It goes without saying that he will be sorely missed not only in Aerial Navigation's sport circle, but in the university's. Ron Lake, now in his first year, and a rugby, basketball and baseball player of no mean ability, will probably take over Mike's position. It will take a good man to fill Mike's shoes. In the meantime, our thanks to Mike Chartak for a real contribution to university sport.

A SUGGESTION OR TWO

Plans for future University Nights have not yet been definitely formed. We have had in mind a couple of ideas which should provide a couple of spectacular shows, and now is as good a time as any to unload.

A couple of the lacrosse veterans over at St. Mike's have suggested a lacrosse game to help fill the bill, and this might be arranged when it is St. Mike's turn to play host. The Irish boxla team won the Dafeo Cup last year, and most of that team is still around. Why not an exhibition game against Senior School, this year's holders, or a School-All-Star game? There are the difficulties, of course. Condition ranks first, but you can bet on it that if the Irish were afforded the chance to peddle the wares that carried them to the top last year, it would take them about no seconds flat to whip themselves into shape. Steve brought to our attention the fact that only a few spectators could find room to look on, as lacrosse takes up the entire lower gym floor. True, but it still sounds good, considering the few who have ever witnessed a boxla wrangle.

Another good feature should be a basketball game between O.C.E., far and away the best team in interfaculty competition, and a hand-picked (Warren Stevens' hand) squad of All-Stars. Who would we have for All-Stars? None other than the boys who, would have been playing intercollegiate this year—Jack Lavarney, Bill Roberts, Hal Axon, Bill Fountain, Red Heinbuck, Fran Matthews, to mention a few. Incidentally, put those six mentioned together with O.C.E.'s two Charlies, Prince and Belchamber, and Ivor Wynne, and one gets some idea of the great game squad Varsity would have produced this year.

And while we're on the subject, congrats to the St. Mike's City League team for their 40-35 victory over Simpson Grads the other night.

SPORT SPLASHES

By Owen Prichard

exception of one quarter which will be played for the first time for the participants under the regular boys' ruling. This means that, during that quarter, there will be but five on the team, anyone can shoot, and the co-eds will make attempts at the dribble, unknown to the girls' game.

Now, on to hockey. Last night from six until seven, little Vic rink was the scene of a pretty even game of hockey, judging by the score, 1-1, with five minutes' overtime and all. If anyone had the edge on the play, we'd say Vic II did, since the puck pushed on by improved Vicites pestered the Meds goalie all it could, even if only one effort did count. Meds lost none of their fighting spirit and gave Flo Allen no little trouble and an opportunity to make some good stops.

Vic's defence deserves a good hand, especially Marg. Dillon and Pat Parker, who stood out in the play. For Meds, too, it was the defence players' night, with Shirley Fleming the star we picked.

Since the U.C.-St. Mike's game was cancelled we have nothing from that quarter; but there is a game scheduled for tonight at 6 on the little Vic rink between Vic I. who have only lost one game, and O. T. & P., who are expected to give Vic quite a bit of trouble. So, come on out, fans, and let's give the gals some support—and don't forget Saturday night at Hart House!

In the first water polo tussle yesterday in Hart House pool Junior Meds ploughed through Vic Seconds 5-1. Behariell, Scarlet and Gold splasher, swam the length of the pool to score the first goal of the game and Vic's only point. The Medicos got down to work after this set-back and before the half ended Robinson and Best had each scored once. After the short rest Wilford drilled two more and Best added another to make the final count 5-1.

Jr. Meds: Barnett, Robinson, Best, Wilford, McCarthy, Murray, Titcombe.

Vic II: Boville, Shortt, Behariell, Butts, M. Johnston, R. Johnston, and Moorthy.

***

In the second game Sr. School had a close shave when Dents held them to a 1-0 score. De Marco scored the only goal early in the first half and although the Dentists tried hard they just couldn't score. McGowan, who stopped all sorts of shots fired from the hands of the Engineers, played an exceptionally brilliant game.

S.P.S.: De Marco, Rogers, Idenden, Mees, Staples, Turner.

Flyers Hold Top By Decisive Win

Aerial Navigation's cage representatives tightened their grip on the Group VIII top-spot as they rang up their third straight victory, vanquishing O.C.E. B by a monumental 79-20 score yesterday.

Take a look at the score, and that's all that need be said. Not one of the five Flyers accounted for less than ten points, while Scotty Scott ran up the biggest average of the season, fourteen baskets and one free toss for a total of 29 points.

Senior Meds stickmen blanked U.C. 11-4-0 in a hot contest played at the Varsity Ice House yesterday.

The Doctors netted once in the first period and banged in three more in the closing stanza. Gillespie led the parade with a goal and two assists followed by Fulton with a goal and an assist. Spence and Cardwell got the other goals while Dennis assisted on two of the counters.

MEDETTES AND VIC II STRUGGLE TO 1-1 TIE

Last Monday Meds and Vic II battled to a one-all tie at Little Vic. Pat Parker banged in Vic's goal early in the first period, while Flo Allan pulled off many spectacular saves in goal. Shirley Fleming was good on the defence for Meds. Vic had hard luck around the Meds net, but carried most of the play.

Some Talk of Aleksandr

NEW YORK. It was only a few Saturdays ago that the afternoon audience at Carnegie Hall was applauding a young pianist for his performance of Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 2 with the National Orchestral Association. They applauded and shouted their "bravos" while the young man returned for repeated bows. The house lights went up, and they were still applauding, and when I left he was taking his unaptness bow, with no sign of let-up. I imagine the applause finally stopped, however, because they had to clear the Hall in time for a Philharmonic concert the next afternoon.

The young pianist was Aleksandr Helmann.

Helmann here was and is a teacher of piano of some importance in this city, and he brought up young Aleksandr with the finest of musical educations. As a boy, he was not quite a prodigy, but received training and a natural aptitude gave him a mastery of the piano that is rare. Today he probably would be giving Town Hall recitals at the ages of four, six and eight, but fifteen years ago you had to be a master before giving a concert. Then as now, the critics had no patience with children, but then the audience didn't either, which makes quite a difference.

At this point, two renowned musicians enter our story. The first is that famous artist and master-pianist, the pupil of Liszt and the possessor of the finest handlike moustaches in the world of music, Moritz Rosenthal. Mr. Rosenthal heard Aleksandr play, and was sufficiently impressed to recommend the boy for a scholarship at the venerable Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia. It should be mentioned here that Mr. Rosenthal never ceased to be impressed, and subsequent events were beyond his control.

The second famous musician to enter the story is the principal of the Curtis Institute, also a renowned pianist, Josef Hofmann. Young Helmann, a boy of twelve (or was it thirteen?) was studying and getting along, when Mr. Hofmann decided he didn't have what it took. Since the Institute is sparing with its scholarships, and those who do not have what it takes are hardly even welcome as paying students, it was scarcely a few months before Mr. H. told our young friend that he had better pack and return home. And so young Aleksandr ended his period of study at the Curtis Institute of Music.

But, as we have said, Mr. Helmann, senior, was a teacher of piano of no mean reputation in these parts. He received his son with a kiss on either cheek, and forthwith sat down to pen a letter to Mr. Hofmann, restraining himself as best he could under the circumstances, and in no uncertain terms demanded why and wherefor.

He received an answer from the pen of the maestro himself. It was quite true, said one musician to his fellow musician, that the boy has definite ability. But he has not, went on the gist of the letter, that artistry, that indefinable something that makes a truly great performer. Whereas he, Mr. H., the principal, would not advise him, Mr. H., the teacher, to discontinue his son's study of music, it would be well to dispel any illusions regarding the young man's future.

Papa Helmann still has that letter, and chuckles every time he mentions it. One of these days, he says, he will publish that letter.

At the age of eighteen, he made his debut in Town Hall. The critics were kind, but far from ecstatic. He studied some more and gave one or two recitals here and there, and then four years later, in 1934, he sailed for Europe.

I daresay no one was more surprised than the artist himself when everybody started hailing him, and lionizing him, and praising him in the newspapers with such rarely used words (the critic's vocabulary is notoriously limited) as "master", "artist", and "Genius". These Europeans sure were volatile.

And they sure were. He got bids from every city worth mentioning for concerts with orchestras and solo appearances. In six years he toured England more thoroughly than a Scotland Yard detective looking for Jack the Ripper. Paris, Stockholm, Oslo, Copenhagen, the Hague—his trunk looks like a geography book. Everywhere people cheered, shouted and asked for more. London was especially enthusiastic. Whenever he gave one concert, he had to give a repeat; his appearance with the London Philharmonic had the old hall quivering; and he was the only one ever to appear with the London Symphony twice in the same season.

The war broke out and Aleksandr Helmann had to cancel an extensive tour in Great Britain, France, Scandinavia, Australia and New Zealand. He came home to New York with a fateful press notice.

Listen:
"His technic is superlative; his touch unique . . . a great pianist." The Hague Nederlander.

"A truly phenomenal pianist." Atterberg in Tidningen, Stockholm. . . and many, many more, topped by this paragon from the London News Chronicle: "Helmann is well on the way to becoming the greatest pianist of his generation—if, indeed, he is not already."

Now those aren't brickbats, and beside Josef Hofmann's letter they looked like the end of the rainbow. But Helmann had made his reputation in Europe to a great extent by his performances of the Rachmaninoff concertos, so he decided to see Rachmaninoff and play for him. This ordeal was not made any lighter by the knowledge that the outstanding interpreter of Rachmaninoff concertos, besides old Sergei himself, is Vladimir Horowitz, quite a pianist in his own right.

So he played them for the composer. The stony-faced Russian was cordial but not much more. He refused to commit himself on the playing, and Aleksandr went home feeling the way he did that day, more than fifteen years ago, when he was sent home from the Curtis Institute. In Oslo they had compared him to Horowitz, but here at home?

A few days later, Helmann had occasion to visit the showrooms of Steinway & Co. on a matter regarding pianos, obviously. He had been there before, and there had been no great excitement. But this time they greeted him like some returning Caesar. Mr. Rachmaninoff had been in only yesterday, and it seems he had whispered in strictest confidence that Aleksandr was the greatest thing that had happened to the piano since the invention of the clavichord.

He looked around amazed; they were fawning over him at Steinway's. Aleksandr Helmann had arrived.

tions, and to create good-will between the students of the world."

In Free France support is provided for needy students to prevent their interruption and to give them an opportunity to continue their studies. Books have been provided for British and Canadian students in German prison camps and for certain anti-Nazi students interned in Canada.

Passage to America has been paid for some students who had jobs here. No other organization is helping these students. George Popper left Czechoslovakia on a student's visa to come to America to study chemistry. He now faces deportation because he has no money to continue his studies.

A letter from China says "On the 7th, Japanese planes raided Kunning. I was there with the Tientsin students. . . . Two hundred and fifty students became homeless and pukal-less. . . . Tientsin is trying to do its best under very pitiful conditions. Maybe there will be a change when this letter is on the way."

In France "250 students of a dozen nationalities stranded in 4 university centres of unoccupied France have been saved from internment in refugee camps and returned to university life by the Relief Fund initiated in November."

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

Eaton Hall, is worth dropping over to see.

Theatre Project, an off-shoot of the old Theatre of Action, has a distinctly Russian approach to drama. The direction of Sidney Banks has produced a tremendously realistic effect, which, however, occasionally overleaps itself and falls on the other—to wit, the players sometimes are so realistic that they are inaudible.

Beryl Barr, playing the feminine lead, sustains a really terrific part flawlessly through the long play. Her role of the girl who escapes from the hospital for the insane and wanders into an alliance with a practically penniless laundry worker is an arduous one, requiring great technique and magnetism to avoid becoming mawkish. She succeeds admirably.

Director Sydney Banks handles the laundry worker capably, and forms a nice contrast in his assurance to the hesitancy of Miss Barr.

All this sounds pretty grim. It really isn't. The play is lightened by some excellent characterizations by Ben Lenick, Lou Jacob and a moppet by the name of Gerry Paige, who reminds one of Virginia Weider. Some of the other supporting players were also worthy of mention, but space is short.

As well as for its capable acting, The World We Make is a piece that should be seen for its own sake. To a certain extent, it displays a philosophy similar to that of The Time of Your Life, over which The Varsity's A. M. & D. staff is still collectively raging. The universal wackiness is absent, but there is something of the "No Foundation" theme present.

Notable were the sets designed by Sydney Newman. The one employed in the prologue is particularly fine. Another notable feature of the evening was a scene of several minutes' duration, in which not a line was spoken.

If you're not already familiar with Toronto's most serious amateur company, now is a good time to go and have a look at them at work.

"But these unsophisticated young things of the jelly darts seem to possess some mysterious faculty to turn on the glamour at night," added Gray. "Their attitude towards studying doesn't seem to be particularly serious but by some unknown feat they usually manage to graduate."

"Perhaps all these things may seem superficial but the fact that 85 per cent of the girls of Stevens College, Columbus, Missouri, are married within five years after they graduate shows that they must have something—and I still contend that the other 15 per cent are married before they leave college!" Gray concluded.

Irish Cagers Rally To Trim Emmanuel

A sharp-shooting St. Mike's D cage squad, down 10-4 at half-time, came back the hard way to trim Emmanuel 37-19 on the lower gym boards yesterday afternoon. The victory lodges the Irish in top-spot of Group IX alongside the Theologs.

St. Mike's D: Brady, Sullivan, 7, Kelly, 6. Killea, 4, Springer, 2, Moynihan, O'Connor.

Emmanuel B: O. Jones, 2, McLaughlin, 6, Fee, 2, D. Jones, 3, Crysdale, 2, Jord, Oliver, 2, Frid, 2, Dobson.

badly about that nothing.

One of the few effective scenes of the evening was the second last of the play, in which Sarah (Elizabeth Blair) sings her dying love (W. A. Atkinson) to sleep with an exquisitely haunting German lullaby as the shadows of dusk deepen about them. On that note the drama should have ended. But not for Van Druen. The play peters out on a job-scene announcing that the lover has actually died as he has been threatening to do for an act and a half.

I enjoyed watching them unpack the books, blowing bubbles, Eva Drysdale's heartily empathic Mrs. Gibbard, Agnes M. Stone's sympathetic Dame Frances, and Lloyd Brooks as Hector, whose unexpected little scene in the last act was carried very well. Beatrice Cole as Jewel Stribling (Hector's wife) provided most of the evening's comedy, which almost sparkled—but not quite (the lines, not Miss Cole!). Miss Blair was much more comfortable when she got out of that awful first act, but curiously enough Mr. Atkinson was at his best in that act. He was much more acceptable as Sarah's discerning, sympathetic and quite unexpected friend than as her lover.

The audience was no help here. In fact, it should be collectively lambasted for its lack of common courtesy. Of course, people have varied ideas on the manner of getting their money's worth. There is no space here to go into detail or to complain of the inadequacy of direction, sets, and lighting, but I should be delighted to expound for the private benefit of those who surely are saying, "Well, why didn't you mention this, that, or the other thing?"

Students Record Pledges To Buy Savings Stamps On Varsity Stampometer

Volunteers in Each Faculty Required to Accelerate War Savings Stamp Drive by Enlisting Supporters

BUY THROUGH S.A.C.

The Stampometer, a new device in the S.A.C. office in Hart House for recording the number of pledges in the latest drive to sell War Savings stamps in the university, is making slow progress. Twenty-eight students, the majority from U.C., have already signed up, one of these, an anonymous (by request) co-ed will walk four miles each week to save her contribution for a stamp, while a U.C. man will smoke a pipe from now on instead of the more costly cigarettes.

A volunteer in each faculty is needed to enlist supporters, and every student should pledge to buy at least one stamp each week, so that the university would receive some recognition for the sales.

Women may purchase stamps in Room 82, U.C., men at the S.A.C. office in Hart House. Help to send the stampometer up and up.

C.O.T.C. NOTICE

All members of B Company desirous of receiving appointments in Active or Reserve formations of the Canadian Army will report to Major G. P. Davies at 119 St. George Street at 1930 hours 7 Feb. 41.

'Extemporaneous' Declares Pedro

Pedro, the Bell Telephone Laboratories' talking "voder" who became famous at the New York world's fair, will be guest artist at tomorrow night's Royal Canadian Institute Lecture at Convocation Hall. Dr. J. O. Perrine, assistant vice-president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, will discuss the mechanical wonder.

Resembling grandma's parlour organ with its piano keys and pedals, Pedro is almost human. He can laugh, recite nursery rhymes, and say big words like "extemporaneous," according to R.C.I. officials. Dr. Perrine, who arrived in Toronto today, will demonstrate the talented piece of mechanism and explain it in a non-technical manner, so that all may understand the way in which speech may be artificially produced.

Dr. Perrine will also give an estimate of what Pedro may be able to contribute to telephony. A graduate of Iowa, Michigan and Cornell Universities, he has been active in telephonic research for many years, and gave a lecture before the R.C.I. last year on "Waves, Words and Wires."

The lecture will begin at 8.15 p.m.

NEWMAN CLUB MEMBERS PLAN REHEARSAL FOR BALL

Tonight at their club-house the members of Newman Club will stage a prep dance to "warm up" for the gala Newman Ball. The ball is scheduled for the Royal York Hotel less than two weeks away. A great gathering of Newmanites past and present is expected; probably over 600 will dance to the music of Frank Bogart. President Don Morand commented: "At our dance this evening we'll all try to develop a technique of getting the most rhythm out of a smaller number of square feet of waxed flooring."

W.S.T.D. Lecture Deals with Use Of Gas Masks

The second of a series of lectures in Air Raid Precautions was given to the W.S.T.D. last night by Mr. F. W. Fleming. The talk was concerned with War Gases—Methods of Precaution, and was a continuation of last week's lecture.

The speaker, Mr. Fleming, is connected with the Department of Health, and has taken instruction in A.R.P. work. Mr. Fleming said that he was giving instruction in the use of gas masks and other equipment previous to public issue. The date of issue is still a matter of conjecture but it is expected to be some time in the near future.

The members of the detachment had a chance to experiment with gas masks as part of the time was given to a practical demonstration on how to adjust and remove a mask.

Courses are now being conducted in A.R.P. under government supervision, but the work is entirely voluntary as yet. However a great interest is being taken in it especially throughout the Niagara Peninsula where several groups have been started, said Mr. Fleming.

GEORGE CARTY PLAYS AT VIC FROSH PARTY

The frosh and freshies of Vic will once again rub shoulders on Saturday evening in Burwash Hall at the last class party of the year. George Carty and his orchestra will supply the music and the party will take on a patriotic war theme. There will be a sale of small emblems to raise money for the Evening Telegram War Relief Fund. Skits will be presented which take off some of the individual members of the class.

R. C. N. V. R.

I have received an official letter from the Department of National Defence, Naval Service, Ottawa, stating that they intend to recruit at once 30 officers in the Special Branch of the R.C.N.V.R. for loan to the Admiralty on the same general lines by which a number from Canadian universities were chosen and sent to England in April and August, 1940.

Students of the Fourth Year in the following courses have the necessary fundamental training and academic qualifications required:

Mathematics and Physics, all divisions, Arts
Electrical Engineering, Applied Science
Engineering Physics, Applied Science
Physics and Chemistry, Arts
Physics and Geology, Arts.

Graduates of these courses and those who are about to complete the Third Year may be interested.

If those who are interested will come to Room 43 of the Physics Building at 3 p.m. on Friday, February 7, full details will be available.

The following statement is given by the Naval Service: "It should be pointed out that these additional officers are urgently required in England and all reports received of their predecessors have indicated that they are being employed on very important and interesting work."

Gould Speaks On Epigram Discuss Ideals Of Journalism

Professor Traces History of Epigram as Literary Form from Early Latins to Charlie McCarthy

FIRST OF SERIES

A capacity audience filled Alumni Hall Wednesday afternoon to hear Professor S. H. Gould deliver an address on "The Nature of the Epigram," first in a series of February lectures sponsored by Victoria College.

Professor Gould traced the history of the epigram not in the conventional historical manner but by starting with its use at the present time and going back to the seventh century B.C. Epigram, he observed, began as verse because prose had not yet been written, and was intended to express terse reserve and balance of thought. Its modern form is found in the wisecracks of Charlie McCarthy, and in such statements as "as soon as she left she was the life of the party."

Epigram began to rise in English literature in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries. In the seventeenth it came into its own and flourished until 1800 as one of the most important things in poetry, being found in the works of Herrick, Johnson, Dryden, Burns and many others.

Epigram has now ceased to be a serious form in English poetry and no poet would now pay a tribute or compliment in this form. However, epigram has not been entirely suppressed and many epigrams come to us today in the form of limericks, in which Edward Lear was an outstanding artist.

Varsity's Weissmullers Vie For Intramural Crown

This Saturday night at eight o'clock U.C.'s natators will defend the senior interfaculty swimming championship which they won last year from S.P.S. This will be the star event of this week's gala University Night. The full list of entries is not complete as yet but there will be teams from U.C., S.P.S., Meds, Trinity, and Vic.

The present champs will not go down easily as they number among their ranks such as: Ged Clawson, former Olympic breast-stroke swimmer, George Meen, former intercollegiate sprint man, and Roger Beames, intercollegiate back-stroke and middle distance swimmer. Besides these three they have mighty good men like Crawford Biggs, Wimpy Rutenberg, Bill Patchett, who ought to grab off one of those important three's and one's for second and third places.

School's splashers should not be underestimated though and might repeat their effort of last fall when they upset this dream team from U.C. in the regular swimming schedule. They number among their ranks Johnny Northwood, who hasn't tasted defeat since he's been here, in the back stroke, and Bill Moffat, who upset George Meen in the 50 free last fall and thereby added another cup to the overcrowded School shelf. Rogers from the Engineers, if he can keep up a 440 at the same rate as he did the 300 in the recent junior interfaculty should score Stu Robinson of Meds, last year's intercollegiate quarter miler to death (maybe).

Maurice Clarkson, a future doctor, is considered to be one of the best divers in Canada and will be one of the fastest 50 yd. men in the meet if he can tear up and down the pool like he did last year.

Mackay Traces Recent Trends In Canada's Poetry

"During recent years, Canadian poetry has been of a predominantly serious, deliberate, 'rather restrained nature,'" said L. A. MacKay, Professor of Latin in U.C., speaking on "Recent Canadian Poetry." This was the third in the series of public lectures on literature, held in University College. Prof. MacKay suggested a connection between Canadian music and poetry, in that one doesn't get the impression from the singing of the average Canadian that he is thinking about what he is singing of.

Prof. MacKay, in an endeavour to point out the trend of modern Canadian poetry, used a number of charts which he had prepared after examining some 510 selections appearing in 17 recent numbers of the Canadian Poetry Magazine. Statistics revealed a proportion of one poet to every two Poetesses. British Columbia has been the most productive, and throughout Canada, the literary productivity has been in proportion to the degree of urbanization in the district.

The writing of poetry dealing with personal emotions has been practically confined to Ontario and British Columbia. The speaker pointed out that since the outbreak of war, the number of poems dealing with national contemporary life has steadily increased. It was shown that women are far ahead of men in the number of poems written on nature and personal emotions.

With regard to the quality, Prof. MacKay classified the poetry as emotional, imaginative, descriptive, reflective, or satirical. The graphs indicated that a time of crisis is marked by a decrease in the number of imaginative poems and an increase in those of a reflective nature.

From these statistics, the speaker deduced that in general, Canadian poetry tends to be of a concrete, serious tone, with a speaking rather than a singing voice and in his opinion, it is likely that it will continue to develop along these lines.

Author-Traveller to Speak on "Facing Jesus Christ Today"; Termed Authority on Mission Work by Dr. Cody

IN UNIVERSITY COLLEGE

The Reverend Dr. S. M. Zwemer, Professor Emeritus of the History of Religion and Christian Missions at Princeton Theological Seminary, is to conduct a series of talks every day next week in University College. The series is sponsored by the Varsity Christian Fellowship, and will deal with the topic "Facing Jesus Christ Today."

In commenting on Dr. Zwemer's visit to the campus, Dr. H. J. Cody, President of the University of Toronto, said: "His presence in Toronto gives students an opportunity to hear an outstanding missionary speaker."

"He is an authority in mission work among Mohammedans," continued Dr. Cody, recalling that he had met Dr. Zwemer at many international conferences. "He is a forceful and logical speaker."

Dr. Zwemer has written extensively on Islam, and on Christian doctrine. He has spent much of his life in the mission fields of Arabia, and has travelled extensively through the lesser-known portions of Africa and Asia Minor.

A reception will be held tomorrow in honour of Dr. Zwemer in the Women's Union, which members of the university staff will attend.

"Dr. Zwemer is coming here to present to the students of the university his views on the meaning of Christianity to the thinking man," Tom Barnett, president of the V.C.F., told The Varsity yesterday.

First lecture in the series will be given in Room 8, U.C., on Monday, February 10 at 5 o'clock. Subsequent lectures will be given every day next week, at 1 o'clock and 5 o'clock in the same room. Subjects of each talk will be announced in The Varsity.

V.C.F. RECEPTION

The Varsity Christian Fellowship wishes to apologize for a very regrettable omission in the invitation to the members of the faculty for Dr. Zwemer's reception. The wives of the faculty members are most cordially invited.

Corsages Out At Trinity Dance

Recently a poster appeared in Trinity College advising St. Hildians to "Bring The Male Animal" to the Soph-Junior-Senior on Friday, February the fourteenth.

The dance this year is being arranged by a committee of Trinity co-eds who are working to make this one of the best campus affairs this year.

Satisfying a penchant for St. Valentine's Day, a heart-shaped frame will be erected at the entrance to Cartwright Hall through which guests will pass to the dance floor.

The Saints will conform to university practice and forego the customary corsage; large trays of red rose-buds will be sold by two freshies, and the proceeds will be donated for war work.

Miss Margaret Newlands, who is in charge of decorations, paused briefly to remark, "Our other plans are tentative but we intend to achieve something very special."

Education on the Stand

The report that Queen's University has been forced to appeal to ten thousand alumni for solution of its financial problems is a disturbing one, not only in its relation to that particular university but, more important, in the implications it holds for the whole educational system of Canada, primary, secondary and higher. Education, one of the soundest investments a nation can make, is being compelled in many places to fight for its existence in the face of decreasing revenue from fees, capital investments, and government aid.

Lower Education Neglected

According to the Sirois report, "education has been terribly neglected in many of the poorer parts of Canada." On the basis of per-pupil expenditure on elementary and secondary education, only two provinces can place in the upper-half bracket of American states, and only then on the lower edge. Four provinces take rank in the lowest quarter. In 1938 over 32 percent of Canadian teachers were paid less than $600 a year, and a survey revealed that by ordinary Canadian standards, 7000 Canadian men teachers cannot afford to get married due to inadequate salaries. In its brief to the Sirois Commission, the Canadian Teachers' Federation said: "The essential evil, however, of existing conditions is that tens of thousands of children are half-educated in mean surroundings with less than minimum equipment by discouraged or disillusioned instructors hired for less than laborers' wages."

The Sirois proposals aimed at placing provinces in a sound financial condition whereby they could discharge on a national average level various social services, education included "if it (the province) chooses to do so." The report continues: "Once this position is established it seems best to us that education, like every other form of welfare service in a democratic community, should have to fight for its life." Therefore, education should remain a responsibility of the provinces, municipalities and rural boards, and the federal government should make no contribution, except for possible university scholarships.

Education a National Responsibility

There are a lot of people, thinking people too, who feel that education should not have to fight for its life; that it is not just another welfare service. Education, and equal educational opportunity for all children, are national responsibilities and should be treated as such. Education is the first item to be slashed in any time of financial crisis, and such slashing becomes an easy matter when education is a local concern supported by local taxation. As for "fighting for its life" for provincial financial support, the odds would be great against education in a fight against groups wanting, for instance, highway expenditure; groups which would include wealthy, powerful oil and motor industries. Under the Sirois plan, should a province fall below a national average of services, adjustment grants might be increased, and emergency grants might be made. It is doubtful whether education would gain much from the aid for it would already have been slashed and the other services would derive the direct benefit. If and when dominion provincial discussion on the Sirois plan is resumed, some more adequate provision for improvement and maintenance of educational services should be sought.

Must not Starve Education

As for the universities, the crisis has also been approaching. Queen's estimates that income from student fees is down about $39,000. Government grants have been greatly reduced, and the income from investments has dropped sharply. Two years ago, as at Toronto, fees were boosted $25 out of sheer necessity, but any further increase is viewed with alarm, for it would mean a limiting of educational opportunity.

At Toronto conditions are not as serious, although government aid was reduced two years ago, leading to a fee increase. However, revenue from fees, this year, will compare favourably with last according to information from the bursar. Registration dropped slightly this year but the loss of fees was made up in other extension courses. Nevertheless, economy has had to be practised up to a point, but economy beyond that point impairs the efficiency of the university. A survey two years ago revealed that the teaching load was heavy, in some cases "unduly heavy." After a conference with North American university heads, President Cody wrote regarding the university situation on this continent in general. "Diminished income is threatening the quality of university work, is limiting research and retarding necessary library growth; and is affecting the morale of staffs by suspending normal promotions and salary increases . . . if reductions due to emergencies become chronic there is real danger that the efficiency of the institution will suffer."

Since the turn of the century the trend towards higher education has been phenomenal, and that trend has brought the university into a position of value and importance in the national life. Universities serve the nation and the community constantly, providing a steady stream of teachers to train the young; of scientists and engineers to develop the natural resources of the nation; of doctors, lawyers, ministers to serve the community through the professions; of researchers to bring a variety of benefits to humanity; and above all, of young men and women possessed of intelligence, understanding, ability, tolerance, all of which they will devote to the development of their country. In time of war university service to the nation is even greater.

The universities and lower educational systems are as vital an asset to the life of a nation as are her natural resources. The immediate material results of the former are not as apparent, but they are there. If education is starved, the other resources will decline in value. The nation must realize that education is vitally necessary, and must be willing to place it on a high standard and maintain it in all security.

Ersatz

Claudio Arrau, Pianist

Were it not for an exceptionally fine last group I would have doubt as to Claudio Arrau's ability to understand for Rudolph Serkin. But his last group was an event. Imagine Jeux d'eau with life in it (the fountain really sparkled), Voiles that saw the sea, and such fireworks! The Faux d'artifice was done as I am sure Debussy would have wished it. Being endowed with a real South American imagination, having acquired a splendid technique, and possessing ability for Debussy interpretation, Arrau combined them all in this one selection to make a really unforgettable performance.

Claudio Arrau possesses a virtuoso technique. But he uses it in such a pugilistic manner that one sometimes fears for the safety of the piano. This aggressive attitude and the harsh touch that goes with it hid much of the delicacy in the Beethoven and Bach. In the slow movements of both the Italian Concerto and the Sonata, however, there was evidenced a fineness of feeling that at first had seemed lacking. Though many may take exception to the brutality of his Beethoven (I certainly do), none can deny that the last movement was technically brilliant. And he was careful to choose the sonata

WHEREAS—The Toronto and District Young Communist League (hereinafter referred to as dirty TDYCL) has seen fit to disinclude us out of their mailing list, to the detriment of our academic and moral well-being; We, the undersigned, hereby swear — (censored).

INASMUCH AS we are irked by the hereinbeforementioned dirty TDYCLites (one of us is a sportswriter) We in addition, too, also, besides refuse to and will not attend any more of their open meetings or parties of the first second third and fourth parts, secretly held under table six in a certain well known Salon de Pool.

Unless this our—PRAYER and PETITION be forthwith, summarily and PQQ granted, i.e. in a word to be put immediately on dirty TDYCL's mailing list.

ON OUR OWN BEHALF we offer the following reasons for the granting of our petition.

FIRSTLY—That, being deprived of all proper political and moral guidance we may become Liberals or even Conservatives! Behute Gott!

SECONDLY—We might be tempted to take advantage of nasty old economic opportunities to make a profit.

THIRDLY—We might become the president of a bank or—FOURTHLY—Even die! (Which is a bad bad capitalistic trick, which leads to bequests (to other people) and such nauseating injustices.

And furthermore, if you don't grant this we ain't gonna steal no more Varsity copypaper for dirty TDYCL—SO THERE! nyah!

where Beethoven is most brutal.

This peculiar pugilism was put to good use in the Schumann Carnival. From the gala opening of that glorious circus to the grand march, Arrau painted each animal, each scene with the utmost faithfulness. In the Schumann he made curious use of his otherwise faultless pedalling to diffuse each scene between the petits aimants behind the tent. The finale was exceptionally brilliant and he had abandoned some of his stiff arm methods with a correspondingly better tone.

Serkin's absence may be regretted and he will visit Toronto early in the spring but meanwhile Arrau has given us a complete refresher in Debussy.

"Night Must Fall" at the Royal Alec

Shivers and suspense were the order of the evening Monday night at the Royal Alexandra. Night Must Fall with its imposing record of two years in London, and one on Broadway hit the local boards, and made them shiver and groan on several occasions.

Frank McCoy who takes all the credit for bringing summer stock back to Toronto, also receives a few laurels wreaths for this production. McCoy intends taking the play on the road throughout Canada and the States, and it should prove exciting entertainment. At the present time, the production is but fair. Emlyn Williams' powerful

IN TWO ICE BATTLES

Thirds Trounced by O.C.E.,
Juniors Edge Vic I to Remain
Undeaten in Jennings' Cup
Hunt

The Blue and Gold of S.P.S. earned an even break in yesterday's interfaculty hockey battles at the Bloor St. Arena. O.C.E. had too much power for S.P.S. III and consequently trounced the hapless Schoolmen 8-1, driving home six markers in the final session. Wendorf and Scantland with a half-dozen goals between them made life miserable for the engineers.

Jr. S.P.S. retained their undefeated record in the Jennings' Cup race by coming from behind to whip Vic I 3-1. After Brown had taken MacLeod's pass to give Vic a first period lead, the Blue and Gold came through with a trio of counters in the second session to breeze home easy winners. Douglas, Spence and Dickie paced the School onslaught with a goal apiece.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Owen Prichard

WHO'S THIS GUY BILLY ROSE?

Come prepared for a busy time at tomorrow's University Night. The Meds-men (in lab coats) are the hosts for the evening's fiesta, and the Doctors are lining up an attractive list of events. Take a gander at some of these attractions:

Three basketball games—O.C.E. A versus Meds III, Senior Meds versus Senior School, and Aerial Navigation versus St. Mike's C.

A girls' basketball game—between two star-studded aggregations of fraternity guy hoopers. During this tilt the frails will have a go at playing under boys' rules. We can't spill it here, but watch for a neat surprise at some stage in this game. It's too bad some of the champion Vic girls are not in on this, because a few of them are quite expert in playing the boys' rules.

Square dancing—in the Upper Gym. This week the Men in White are making a solid attempt to put over the rural jive, and have enlisted the aid of a number of couples who are hep to the barnyard boogie-woogie.

Aerobatics—by those men of muscle, Joe Soutille and Doug Simpson, who wowed us all at the first University Night with their sensational balancing acts. Fun and games for all—by which we mean all the stuff which was previously on deck in Muscle Midway, with the addition of more table tennis and kick-it games, and a new form of table-hockey game.

A Sing-Song and Piano Duo—to be held in the Big Gym at the interval stage in the festivities.

A Championship Swimming Meet—the Senior Interfaculty competition for the Fitzgerald Trophy which gets under way in the Pool promptly at eight. This meet is the prime swimming attraction of the whole season, with not only competition from high ranking swimmers, but with a clown act diving performance added.

Blood tests—will be a new feature to be conducted by the Meds-men. They'll group your blood cell—free.

AND AS A REMINDER

Last week there were over a thousand in the throng which attended the University Night, and if you want to get the most of the best out of these evenings, contract a bit of early foot and hustle down to the Athletic Wing. The program starts at EIGHT, which in view of the crowded card of events, means EIGHT.

SKIERS TO COMPLETE
INTRAMURAL PRELIMS

The remainder of the preliminary round of the intramural ski meet will come off on Sunday afternoon. Group I will jump and race cross-country over at Newtons, while Group II will run their slalom and downhill races at Edwards', before repeating the cross-country that was so badly messed up last week.

So far School II team is out in front closely followed by Trinity I, that is in Group I from which three teams will graduate to the finals. Group II has only run its jumping as yet, and School III were the only ones to make a worth while showing.

Since too many people got lost on last week's cross-country the officials are going to mark it a bit better this weekend and run off both of the groups, as Group II will have enough time after their downhill and slalom to ski the four and a half miles before dark.

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

script helped put the play across Monday night, but all the performers except one should not be too pleased with the results.

Florence Reed, an accomplished actress of the old-school played the sour Mrs. Bramson with a lack of sureness. Violet Henning, another experienced actress, played the niece who is fascinated by the charming assassin at times with conviction and at other times, completely mechanically. Most of the other members of the cast moped about quite unsure of themselves pointing out one thing . . . lack of rehearsal.

However, Douglas Montgomery, as the charming assassin who has murdered one woman and succeeds in another crime, was superb. Montgomery gave a beautiful psychological study of young Dan the bell-hop who wanted to be important in the world and found murder a means of release. His was a solid characterization throughout, and the only member of the company who sustained his role organically and with complete concentration.

The thrills in the piece are many, and the play with a bit more rehearsal should reach an excellent peak. Monday night, all the play lacked was the vigour and surety that comes with rehearsal. The first act was decidedly bad, but the last two acts built slowly but powerfully, and succeeded in jarring plenty of nerves of the rather hysterical audience.

Third University Night of Season to Feature Senior Interfaculty Swimming Meet for Fitzgerald Trophy

WOMEN'S CAGE GAMES

Meds play host tomorrow evening at the third in the series of University Nights. Over 1,000 students attended last week and a crowd as large or larger is expected again this week. The time has been advanced to 8 o'clock.

Premier attraction on the sport card will be the Senior Interfaculty Swimming Meet in competition for the Fitzgerald Trophy. U.C. are present holders but expect some of the kind of competition from School which won for the Engineers the series of swim meets last fall. Maurice Clarkson will give a diving exhibition.

Four basketball games will be offered, one by the girls. O.C.E.'s classy squad of cagers will take on Meds III, Aerial Navigation's high scoring combination of Tuchak, Lake, VanHuyse, Scott and Price meet St. Mike's C and Senior Meds will go against Senior School.

Extra games will be installed in the boxing, wrestling and fencing rooms for the occasion. There will be a singing led by a two-piano team in the big gym. Joe Southey and Doug Simpson will give a repeat performance of their gymnastic act and if plans mature F. Shimidzu and his class will put on a Judo exhibition. Meds have been working up a square dance.

Last week $100 of the proceeds were given to the Telegram British War Victims' Fund, and $50 to the University Settlement.

Dr. Gibson Appointed Vice-Chairman of Board ... Graduate of U.C., 1900

New Vice-Chairman of Board of Governors was Given Honorary Degree of Doctor of Laws in 1938

LONG VARSITY CONNECTION

President H. J. Cody announced Saturday that Dr. John J. Gibson has been appointed Vice-Chairman of the Board of Governors of the University of Toronto. Dr. Gibson was born in Wroeter, Ont., and received his secondary education in Harrison High School and in Harbord Collegiate Institute. He graduated from the University of Toronto through University College in 1900. The university conferred on him in 1938 the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. Dr. Gibson is Vice-President and General Manager of the Chartered Trust and Executor Company. He has served the University of Toronto in many capacities. For many years he has been Chairman of the Property Committee of the Board of Governors. He is Honorary Treasurer of the University of Toronto War Memorial Fund and is Chairman of the Advisory Committee on Loans of the Alumni Federation as well as of the Students' Administrative Council. Dr. Gibson has been a member of the Board of Governors since 1925.

Zwemer Lectures Begin Today

This afternoon marks the opening of the series of talks by the Rev. Dr. Samuel M. Zwemer, M.A., F.R.G.S., M.R.A.S., LL.D., Hon. Phi Beta Kappa, Professor Emeritus of the Christian Religion and the History of Religion at Princeton Theological Seminary, who has come to the university under the auspices of the Varsity Christian Fellowship.

Speaking at five o'clock in Room 8, University College, Dr. Zwemer will deal with the general topic "Facing Jesus Christ Today." In his initial talk this afternoon, Dr. Zwemer has chosen the subject "His Revealing Personality."

Members of the faculty of the university attended a reception in honour of Dr. Zwemer on Saturday afternoon in the Women's Union. They were received by President H. J. Cody and Mrs. Cody, Dr. and Mrs. Zwemer, Mr. Donald Fleming, Chairman of the Board of the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship, and Mr. Tom Barnett, V.C.F. president.

Latin, French, or Spanish: Pedro Can Speak Them All

By Jean Boggs

"Oh Oh," said Pedro, when asked to say incomprehensible, but he complied in a slightly French accent. Pedro is the talking machine which appeared at Convocation Hall on Saturday night under the auspices of the Royal Canadian Institute and the Toronto Branch of the American Society of Electrical Engineers. Dr. J. O. Perrine explained the intricacies of this mechanical voice, which gained fame at the New York World's Fair.

Pedro's voice is produced by a switchboard, an amplifier, loud speakers, and other electrical equipment. The keyboard was played by Mrs. Harper, who reproduced through the apparatus an almost human voice.

Pedro's accomplishments are many. One minute he is Popeye the Sailor Man, the next an old man of ninety, and then breaks forth into the strains of "Sweet Adeline" or "Alouette." Not only can he speak French but also Spanish, and rudimentary Latin. His

Prof. MacKay Stresses Need For Defense Dents Dance To Feature Frank Bogart

Dalhousie Professor Emphasizes Necessity of Permanent Defense Policy for Canada after War

CHANGING U.S. POLICY

"America faces a changing world and this accounts for her changing policy," said Professor R. A. MacKay of Dalhousie University, speaking Friday. "Eighteen months ago her position was one of stark neutrality but within that time she has made a complete about face."

The subject of Professor MacKay's talk was "Canada, and the Balance of Power." The speaker was introduced by Professor Innis of the Department of Political Economy.

Speaking of Canada's commitments in this war, the speaker said "we have extended our defences far beyond Canada's shores but we must be sure that we pull our own weight in the defence of this continent."

"Whatever the outcome, we cannot in Canada in future allow our defences to fall into disrepair as we did after the last war," continued Professor MacKay.

In commenting upon Anglo-American relations the professor said: "Canada forms one corner of a three-cornered agreement. She is in a better position to act as interpreter between the two countries than ever before."

Household Ec. Experiment Requires Aid of Six Coeds

Six Weigh Everything They Eat to Determine Relation of Body Build to Amount of Food Eaten

LASTS ONE WEEK

By Elizabeth Serson

"Pass me six grams of butter, please. May I have 180 grams of milk?" Imagine six co-eds seated at a table apart from the rest of the dining room solemnly weighing with a pair of scales, then noting down carefully, every piece of bread, slice of meat, serving of vegetables—every particle of food that they eat. No, they are not reducing, or trying to gain either. They are co-operating with Carol Macklin and Mary White, fourth year Household Economics students, in an experiment to determine the relation of a person's body build to the amount and kind of food she eats. Mary and Carol, who are both conducting and taking part in the project, are doing it as their required House Ec. "problem" of the year.

The experiment began last Tuesday and continues for one week. Nine girls altogether, all of different physical

Armstrong Writes Even from Hospital

From his hospital cot, Bill Armstrong, Assistant News Editor of The Varsity sent in a story last night.

Incapacitated when injuries sustained in a recent wrestling bout became infected, Bill pencilled out his story faintly but authoritatively and sent it down to the press.

Bill was in the news last year when he was sent out on a story on blood donations to the Red Cross and returned with his story but minus five-sevenths of a pint.

He sends word that he'll be back on the job in a few days.

Faculty Flowers to Take Place of Corsages at Dance. Proceeds go to Aid of War Effort

MAYOR TO BE PRESENT

The Roof Gardens of the Royal York Hotel will be the scene of the Dental At-Home which is being held this coming Valentine's Day, February 14th. Mayor and Mrs. Fred Conboy and Dean Arnold Mason and wife will be amongst the guests of honour.

It was definitely decided last December that corsages would not be worn. "At that time," stated Doug Macdougall, president of the Students' Parliament, "we intended to raise funds for the University Spliffire Fund by the sale of 'War Corsages.' Unfortunately this fund didn't materialize. It is gratifying to see that all the other colleges have banned corsages in order to raise funds for various worthy causes."

At a "midnight meeting" of the dance committee last night, it was decided that a small bunch of flowers tied with ribbons in the faculty's colours, garnet and blue, would be sold at the door for a nominal sum. "As yet no decision has been made as to who will receive the profits," declared Ab. Fyfe, chairman of the dance committee and producer of last year's "Dentantic"

'BEVIN ABLE LEADER' TRINITY INFORMED BY EDINBURGH GRAD

Donald Grant, graduate of Edinburgh University and former secretary of the S.C.M. in New Zealand, gave an informal talk on international affairs last Friday afternoon in Trinity College.

Mr. Grant spent most of the post-Great War period organizing European student relief, working in France, Germany, Central Europe and the Balkans.

Asked how English students felt about the war, Mr. Grant said: "The English student is British and there is a war on." Pacifist and Communist groups continue unhindered in the English universities although recently 2 of their papers were suppressed for going to extreme lengths.

Talking of the Labour Party he said that under the leadership of Greenwood and Ernest Bevin, whom he qualified as "a strong and able administrator, a moderate and cautious man" and whom he considered a likely future Prime Minister, British airfield production had reached parity with that of Germany last September, and is maintaining that level.

Having just returned from a visit to the U.S. Mr. Grant was able to say that although students there are anxious to help Britain, the general public is even more so, and is less afraid of actual U.S. entry into the war.

As for French students, Mr. Grant thought that in the main they are sympathetic to General De Gaulle's cause. Finally he said he did not believe in a total occupation of Germany after the war, but that rather there must be an "open door" for her, though of course certain control should be exercised.

Recent Drive Nets $400. For Internees

Trinity Canvassers Cover Medical Building and University College; Latter Tops List of Contributors

NO FURTHER DRIVES

Into the International Student Service contribution boxes about the campus last Wednesday Varsity students deposited $400 to aid student war sufferers. This sum will soon be swelled by at least an additional $200 in direct contributions from various student societies it was revealed by Jack Amos, chairman of the I.S.S. Committee, Saturday.

"It was fairly successful—better than last year, but the students haven't given the way we hoped they would," said Mr. Amos, summarizing the response to the appeal. Last year's student relief day together with the appeal for funds from campus societies netted $500.

Mr. Amos drew attention to the good work done by the Trinity canvassers who, besides covering their own buildings, worked in the Medical Building and University College. Of the colleges and faculties U.C. gave the most, which he credited to the generosity of the Women's Undergraduate Association.

The I.S.S. circular letter campaign for funds among graduates and senior members of the university has just begun. Although there will be no further drives similar to last Wednesday's the Committee will continue to collect funds from the students through dances and other means. Last year these two sources added $700 to the student relief fund, and a larger sum is expected this year.

New Trinity Blue Book Appears, Completely Lacking in Fiction

By Edgar Simon

The latest issue of the Trinity University Review, which rolled off the presses late last week, is a sad, sad thing. Opening with an editorial which reflects what a hell of a place is a university in wartime, and closing with a section in sombre black type headed "Recent Accessions to the Library," the issue also contains a three-page spread on the I.S.S. which pours out the troubles of students in Europe and Asia. Even its colour is blue.

But the saddest thing about the Review is its complete lack of fiction. Not just good fiction, which is rare enough anywhere, but any kind of fiction. There isn't even a tenth-rate Hemingway imitation. In a college which has produced some excellent literary efforts, even in very recent issues, this lack is particularly depressing.

Among the items, besides the aforementioned I.S.S. write-up, are a brochure on T.E.C. H., a pro-and-con article on the role of Britain in French politics, a short article on the W.S.T.D.

The best prose contribution is a streamlined art review by Jean Boggs on the recent Art Gallery Red Cross

SECOND IN SERIES

Tonight the Queen's team of Ross Preston and McD Roberts, will meet the Vic team of Mary Dillon and Bob Millen in Alumni Hall to debate the question: Resolved that Canada should not join the Pan-American Union.

"It is a question that should be of interest to students of Canadian campuses," Mary Booth, Clerk of Victoria Debating Parliament, said last night. The Women's Intercollegiate Debating Union discussed this resolution in December and aroused a good deal of interest, she said.

Professor Wilkinson of the History Department will be the guest speaker, and Miss Booth says he is especially competent to speak on the subject of Canada's joining the Pan-American Union, since he has spoken on "Union Now" quite recently and is an observer of international affairs.

This debate is the second in the Queen's-Varsity series, the first of which was won by Queen's on home grounds on Feb. 1.

Dance Tickets On Sale at Vic

Ticket sales begin today for the Vic At-Home, which is appropriately slated for Feb. 14th.

V.C.U. officials guarantee Cupid's contemporaries a hen-ep time as they swing on down at Simpson's Arcadian Court on this Valentine's Night feature.

The Bob Quartette (Gray, Stone, Macleod, Kirkland, to you) are all set to give the Commodores, late of the Brant Inn, a run for their money as hit of the evening. The quartette, so 'tis related, have some choice lyrics to hand about in their own inimitable fashion. Don Ferguson, Social Director of the V.C.U., announces that novelty pins sold at the dance will take the place of corsages—the proceeds going to further the war effort.

Tickets will be sold from ten till two o'clock, it was announced.

benefit exhibition. The review shows a refreshing literary style as well as a sound knowledge of the subject and originality of criticism.

There are two guest contributions. One is a well-thought-out treatise on "The Intellectual in Time of War" by Geoffrey Heighington. The other, a short historical sketch of Bermuda, of all places, is printed with the sole justification that its author happens to be a Trinity graduate of '96. It is well written, and interesting in its own line, but its place is in the National Geographic and not in a student publication.

The most encouraging feature of the Review is the profusion of verse. I particularly liked Hello To All That, by Betty Gairdner, for its easy, flowing language and freshness of presentation, and Delusion by Arthur Gibson, a short commentary on human nature.

And another melancholy section is the review of the University Drama Festival. The section opens with a page-and-a-half review of the Trinity production, pointing out that the play was

Victory in The Sands

With the onrushing drive of British forces in Africa which culminated several days ago in the capture of the strategic base of Bengazi, it is beginning to appear that the Italians might have been wise in paying some heed to Prime Minister Churchill's message to them a month and a half ago.

Churchill appealed to the Italian people to oust Mussolini who was leading them on to certain disaster, and he promised them that defeat was their only destiny if they continued on their present path. Their African empire, he vowed, would be "torn to shreds and tatters."

But Italy scorned the advice, and continued to offer fleeing resistance in Africa. The result has been a striking British success, over a prolonged period of time, in which army, navy and airforce have combined to turn the Italian "advance" into a retreat and that retreat into a veritable rout. Bardia, the only well-fortified position, fell after a brief campaign, and now Wavell's mechanized forces have captured one of the most strategic positions on the North African coast. Supply lines have been cut, forces have been isolated, homesteaders in Italy's colonization area east of Bengazi have fled, huge quantities of supplies have been taken, and a general rout is in progress.

The possibility that this retreat was merely a ruse to draw British forces away from supply bases was voiced not long ago, but the certainty that this is a major disintegration has now been definitely established. The New York Times calls it "more like a withdrawal from the war than a military retreat." The spirit of Italy is dead and the leaders as well as the people are beginning to realize it. "There is no appeal to Italian patriotism in this war. There is only a sense of defeat, a bleak recognition that for Hitler's aims and in Hitler's war, they are losing all they gained in 1918 and all they have slaved and sacrificed for ever since."

These Examinations

The question of examinations is an old one and has always been the subject of controversy.

Today at the University of British Columbia, the question arises as to whether examinations are becoming an end in themselves instead of the means to an end.

In the older universities in England, examinations were only introduced as necessary evils after the system had become so lax that there was no means of checking up on the work that the students had done.

Since that time, examinations seem to have become more and more important, especially on this continent. They have reached a point in many universities where they dominate the whole college year. There has been a reaction in a few colleges, however, and nearer home, in the schools of this province. Instead of all-important examinations, tests are set at fairly regular intervals during the year to keep the students up to the mark. This method is supposed to do away with cramming and the other evils of final examinations. It remains to be seen how successful this system will be.

At this university, examinations are coming to the point where they dominate the year's work for many students. The problem seems to be not so much getting an education as getting a pass in April. When courses are studied from this viewpoint, the student cannot do his best work, but more important, he cannot develop the qualities of an inquiring nature and of a free play of mind.

If a student wants to pass his examinations, he must spend all his time on certain definite books. As he has not time to examine any of his own ideas or suggestions that come to him, he falls naturally into a rut of thought that is very difficult to get out of in the final year of university or in post-graduate work. He can enjoy very few of his courses, when he has the thought of examinations continually in his mind, often brought into further relief by remarks of the professors. Without enjoyment, it is very hard to bring enough interest into a course to bring good results.

If the present trend continues, the university will be getting away entirely from the sound fundamentals of education. A university is not a fact market: it is an institution where men and women learn how to use their minds and the ability that nature have given them.—The Ulyssey.

This Man Played Brahms

Bronislaw Huberman at Massey Hall

It has recently come to my notice that the incumbent of this space deplores the present marked tendency of fiddlers to play Wieniawski instead of Brahms. As if in answer to this piteous cry in the wilderness a man called Bronislaw Huberman turned up at Massey Hall last Friday, amid a curious jumble of Polish flags and tropical flora, and made the Brahms G major Sonata the core of a program that was, for the most part, eminently tasteful and satisfying.

Though Mr. Huberman is not young, and has presumably been playing his fiddle for some little time, he is quite new to me, a circumstance which the boys around here seemed rather shocked to discover. Having heard him I am shocked too, for in addition to being a skilled violinist, who can scorch up and down the fingerboard with the best of them, he is also a musician of no slight artistry and what for want of a better term I must call literary insight. His style is difficult to classify; the opening number, a Handel sonata, was just good, rather casual fiddling with a harshness of tone that suggested Enesco; the breath-taking double-stopped glissandi of Szymanowski's La Fontaine d'Archeuse were negotiated with a suave elegance that Heifetz could not have bettered; and to some ill-advised Chopin transcriptions of his own he applied a distinctly Kreislerish schmalz. Just what all this goes to show about Mr. Huberman I don't quite know, but it's very interesting.

The Brahms of course was the high spot of the evening, but since it was a case of Huberman playing Brahms and not more than necessarily Brahms being interpreted by Huberman, I haven't much to say about it. Boris Roubakine, the pianist, might have been a shade more assertive in a show that was just as much his as the violinist's; otherwise, no complaints. To over-sentimentalize the now slightly punch-drunk old Mendelssohn Concerto after the spacious beauties of the Brahms would have been a more than usually ghastly error, and consciously or not Huberman did not fall into it. Instead he treated the whole thing as much as possible as a magnificent technical exercise, and the result was a performance of stimulating precision and brilliance, gratifyingly faithful throughout to the composer's directions. But then Huberman hadn't a huge orchestra to contend with, only the unobtrusive Mr. Roubakine, who might almost be supposed never to have heard the orchestral score.

All musicians are strange people, fiddlers possibly the strangest. One would imagine it to be obvious to a man of Huberman's demonstrated musical erudition that transcribing Chopin for the violin is an utterly, barren, futile proceeding, to be indulged, if

About the Tuck Shop . . .

- 2464 doughnuts are consumed every day at the Tuck Shop.
- 1232 students die of blood poisoning daily. (Two to a customer, you saps.)
- The Tuck Shop in a vain effort to gain customers has taken to using salmon in their salmon sandwiches.
- Also eggs in their egg sandwiches.
- They still use wood shavings in their minced ham sandwiches.
- Admiral Byrd once landed in the Blue Room of the Tuck Shop by mistake and planted a flag for Antarctica.
- Polar bears roam about the Green Room in the month of February.
- Eskimos living in a corner of the Tuck Shop take ten percent on every Eskimo pie the Tuck Shop sells.
- They've got to make a living too.
- The Tuck Shop is very patriotic in that they are cutting down on the butter they use in sandwiches.
- They've been doing it for years. Patriotism they call it yet.
- The Tuck Shop does not have an orchestra. It has no floor show with twenty beautiful girls. It hasn't even got special tables for the flies.
- But, there's never a cover charge.

at all, only as a secret vice. Everyone knows that the resources of violin literature are painfully meagre, but the situation isn't really so desperate that we need vainly plunder Chopin. There are always Sarasate, Viennetemps, even Wieniawski. If somebody has to be transcribed let's make it Debussy.

Pop Baritone

Wynilwood Recital

Adolf Waintruff presented a typical baritone pop concert last night in Wynilwood. The program was most diversified, containing two Handel arias, a Mozart recitative and aria, three Russian songs, one German Lied, and several English selections.

Best of all was the Recitative and Aria from Act Three of Le Nozze di Figaro by Mozart, which was surprisingly well sung. It brought forth the desire to hear the soloist in the more familiar arias from the opera, Se vuol ballare and Nou più andrai.

The Handel arias provided an auspicious beginning. Where E'er You Walk found Mr. Waintruff not at ease vocally, and since it is so overdone it must be sung well to satisfy. As a matter of fact it took the best part of half the recital for the soloist to completely warm up.

The Russian songs were excellent and were further enhanced by the renditions in Russian instead of in translation. The Volga Boatmen was particularly effective. Not the least interesting of the English songs was A Little Wink, by the Toronto vocalist Hubert Eisdell. Its verbal content may well have struck home.

Mr. Waintruff's voice is too big for Wynilwood and on that account was scarcely heard to best advantage. Nevertheless he and his accompanist (who played two piano selections) provided a pleasant hour.

SCHOOL IV WHIP MEOS IV 72-20 IN FAST HOOP GAME

S.P.S. IV basketball team steamrollered its way to victory over the unfortunate Meds IV team by a score of 72-20 last Saturday noon in the upper gym.

School and the Doctors each doubled their half time score by the time the last whistle sounded. The Engineers showed lovely passing plays and capitalized to the fullest extent on rebounds. As a result Meds were constantly bewildered and tried to find their bearings by many substitutions which actually only added to their troubles.

Bus Guy was the best player on the floor and he notched a total of 22 points. Chepkin with 12, Brant with 11 and Jim Turner with 10 also stood out for the Engineers. Paul Moses aided by Tiny Reingold's passes, succeeded in sinking 8 points for Meds while Freedman got 6.

S.P.S. IV: Brant 11, Turner 10, Patterson 8, Guy 22, Mason 1, Chepkin 12, Van Wyck 6, Martin 2.

Meds IV: Bohnen 3, Myers 2, Fireman 1, Peikes, Feinberg, Herman, Reingold, Moses 8, Freedman 6.

VIC JRS. EDGED OUT 33-24 BY JR. U.C. HOOPSTERS

U.C. Jrs. put on a last half scoring display to edge Vic Jrs. 33-24 in an interfaculty basketball game played in the upper gym last Friday noon.

The Scarlet and Gold hoopsters grabbed an early lead in the opening minutes of the game and still held it by a score of 16-13 at half time despite the constant attacks of the Red and White machine. However at half time, Coach Hal Axon pointed out the mistakes the Royal Collegians were making, with the result that at the resumption of play U.C. succeeded in tying the score. Then each team kept raising the score in succession with neither one surging ahead. Finally, with about three minutes of play remaining, the U.C. Juniors turned it on and emerged victorious by a score of 33-24. The contest was a very pleasing one from the spectators' point of view as the game was well contested.

Outstanding man on the floor was Bill Dewar of U.C. who not only scored sixteen points but also prevented many a Vic player from capitalizing on rebounds as he leapt high to snare them first. Also outstanding for the winners was Butch Clayton who played a heady game while notching 6 points. Paslawski was high man for the Vicites with 7 points, followed by M. Johnston with 6 points. Harv Rutledge also aided the Victorians by sinking 4 foul shots.

U.C. Jrs.: Dewar 16, McKinley 4, Clayton 6, Ballagh 4, Zierler, Beattie 3, Nicol, McNulty, Simpson.

Vic Jrs.: Rutledge 4, Paslawski 7, M. Johnston 6, R. Johnston 3, Shigart 1, McDonald, McClelland 2, Stanos 1.

FLYERS CONTINUE FLYING RACE TO HOOP WIN: 66-19

Aerial Navigation continued their winning basketball ways Saturday night as they swamped a helpless St. Mike's C quartet (you see, they played in the upper gym) 66-19. Bill Scott racked up an imposing total of 22 points as every Flyer took a hand in the scoring. Bill Guernot worked hard for the Irish, but they understood how it was.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Sam Kelson

Dear Emma:

University Nights are SUCH fun! Last Saturday night I didn't have a date as usual but I decided to go to this shindig anyway (it's not very good to go stag but I miss you so much).

I came a little late and everything was in full swing. As I walked in the first thing to attract my attention was the large number of beautiful girls who strolled along the carefree halls wandering from one room to the other. But I checked my coat and any desires to meet these glamolettes (I miss you so much, Emma).

I ambled into the main gym and O.C.E. was playing Meds III in a very exciting basketball game. Twins by the name of Brown seemed to be doing most of the work for the teachers as well as a fellow by the name of Charley Belchamber. Murray was the best man for the doctors.

Oh yes! I knew I forgot something. The Faculty of Medicine was playing host to the rest of the university.

Some of the boys in medicine were wearing white lab coats and a friend of mine told me that they were testing students' blood. I heard one girl say that they couldn't test her blood because she didn't have any. These city girls are so strange, Emma!

The next place I went to was the pool. When I came in there was a breast stroke race in progress and some boy by the name of Ged Clawson was having a whee of a time as he swam length after length far out ahead of the other natators. He was on the U.C. swimming team that won the Fitzgerald Trophy given to the winners of the senior interfaculty competition. George Meen swam very well too for the Royal College outfit and won the 100 yard free style race. Stew Robinson of S.P.S. broke the 440 yard free style record.

There were games in the wrestling room and I played chinese checkers with some girl I didn't even know. Her name was Jean (I miss you so much, Emma). It was very crowded in here and I had to wait around to play. I do wish they would get more games!

At half time of one of the basketball games two gymnasts by the name of Joe Southee and Doug Simpson put on a marvellous display of balancing and strong man stuff. They got a great hand and deserved every bit of it.

Upstairs in the upper gym U.C. seniors were having a difficult time keeping the effervescent medsmen in check. Especially two hoopsters called Sachs and Culiner. They must have had their girl friends watching them. Dynamic Kuddy Faber (he says he hates to be called "dynamic", Emma) was the spark plug of the U.C. quartet. His team mate Sol Feigman was very good too.

Dancing began later in the evening and everybody was very friendly. It is cozy when they announce that all the dances are tag. That makes it even more friendly, Emma. They had a sing song after a while and everybody joined in. We all had song sheets too, yet two potential doctors were rapping it out on the piano and did a beautiful duet job on "In the Mood". One of the players was evidently a purveyor of boogie woogie and he wore a long jacket and a look of utter scorn for the piano. But he was good. Hilda Bolley was master of ceremonies.

Later on they had a typical Med contest. They picked out the healthiest couple on the floor and Gwen Taylor and Jim Murray were chosen as the best representative sample of the more full blooded students. And Emma, you should have seen some of the people that thought they were healthy!

But get I wish you were there when they started to square dance in the upper gym! We could have shown them something corny or two!

Henry.

P.S.—University Nights are SUCH fun!

ROUND THE TRACK

Gerry Proderick, habitual first in the indoor sprints, copped the third in the series of short races Friday afternoon as he dashed off the 220 in 25 seconds flat. During the past two weeks he has also won the 50 and 100 dashes in the Interfaculty Indoor Meet.

Bob Delaney, Meds' middle-distance standby, won the second event of the night, the mile, in 4 minutes, 51.1 seconds, breasting the tape two jumps ahead of Gord Lorimer of School. Two Wycliffe representatives finished in the last two places. Geoff Parke-Taylor took third and Thompson fourth. Lorimer held the lead for 10 laps around the lineoleum bowl only to have Delaney catch and pass him on the last bend. Delaney ran a heady race, stayed back in third spot until the eleventh and final lap when he sailed by a string Parke-Taylor and passed Lorimer.

Harold Brown and Keenan of Meds tied for second place in the 220 at 25.5 seconds. Lloyd Delaney of Trinity arrived fourth in 26.1. Brown and Keenan will race off for second spot tomorrow when the trackmen gather once more, this time for the 440 yards, low hurdles and shot-put events.

SQUASH PLAYERS

Winners of squash tournaments are requested to post results of their games on the board in the locker room.

VIC III TAKE SCHOOL III 37-27 IN HARO CAGE GAME

Vic III's scored a surprise win over the strong S.P.S. III basketball team Friday afternoon by downing the Toity-Oikers 37-27.

The game up to half time was a tight battle and when half time was tooted the Scarlet and Gold led by the slim margin of two points, 15-13. However, in the last half of the game, the Artsmen gradually pulled ahead until at the final whistle they had the decisive margin of ten points.

High man in the game was Grant Baker who plunked in 15 points for the winners. Ron MacKenzie also played well for Vic as he notched 10 points. As usual, Ian MacCallum led School Thirds by hooping 10 points and the rest of the School points were fairly evenly spread out amongst the team.

Vic III: R. Sully 6, K. Sully 2, MacKenzie 10, Phillips, Nixon 2, Bryce 2. S.P.S. III: MacCallum 10, Onasick, Berrin 2, T. Campbell 3, B. Campbell 5, Johnston 4, Thuerle, Lewarne 3, DeMarco.

New Interfaculty Swimming Mark Set in 440 Free Style by Ged Clawson, U.C., in 5:40.8

35 POINTS TO 26

By Bill Quigley

At Saturday's "Athletic Nite," before a thronged gallery of aquatic fans, University College's swimmers edged out S.P.S. to retain possession of the Fitzgerald Trophy, emblematic of the Senior Interfaculty Swim Championship.

Although victories in the eight events were very evenly distributed—U.C. and School with three apiece and Meds with two—the Royal College placed most men in the money to chalk up thirty-five points to the twenty-six and eleven gained by the Engineers and Doctors respectively.

One interfaculty mark went by the boards when Stu Robinson of the "Men in White" whipped U.C.'s Ged Clawson in the 440 yards free style by covering the distance in 5 min. 40.8 sec. The previous record was 5:42.

Two events, the 50 yd. and 100 yd. free styles, provided the spectators with their major thrills. Moffatt of S.P.S. churned through the 50 yds. in 25.7 secs. to nip George Meen of U.C. at the wire. However, the big blond came back strongly in the hundred to nose out Gottlieb of School in 61 sec. flat.

Mainly due to the great performance of Ged Clawson the Red and White captured the medley relay, but the Engineers brought the crowd to its feet with a sensational victory in the 200 yd. relay.

Maurice Clarkson breezed to an easy win in the diving event. Executing his every effort with a singular grace and ease, Clarkson won rounds of applause for his brilliant exhibition.

Results—

Medley Relay (3:38.2): 1. U.C. I (Balmer, Clawson, McKinley); 2. U.C. II; 3. S.P.S.

Diving: 1. Clarkson, Meds; 2. Beames, U.C.; 3. Rogers, S.P.S.

Emmanuel College icemen continued their losing streak by dropping another game, this time to St. Mike's B by a score of 9-3.

The Theologs made it a close fight in the first period as Sam Henderson and Harry Stevenson rapped in three goals between them. The Goals however outplayed them and led 5-3 at the half. The Purple and Gold were held scoreless in the final stanza while the Double Blue scored four more.

DOCTORS WHIP SENIOR U.C. IN SATURDAY'S CAGE TILT

Senior Med cagers pinned a 45-24 setback on Senior U.C.'s tail in one of Saturday's eve's three basketball games. It was a slap-happy affair that saw Mort Sacks hit the jackpot and stuff eight baskets in the hoop and sixteen points into his waistcoat pocket. U.C. turned in a loose performance, were outscored 21-10 in the first period. Play was far better in the second stanza but Meds still scored in an equal ratio (approximately 2 to 1).

O.C.E. SWAMP MEOS III 35-19 IN EXHIBITION HOOP GAME

Wally Brown and Charlie Belchamber led O.C.E.'s high-riding basketball team to a 35-19 victory over Meds Thirds in an exhibition tilt Saturday night. Taken together, they accounted for 31 of their team's points with Wally getting the odd tally. Charlie Prince rolled in the remaining two baskets. Bob Murray played high, wide and handsome for Meds, well-earned his nine points. McClure and Marchant scored six and four respectively.

TRINITY PUCKSTERS BEST WYCLIFFE 2-0

Trinity's B pucksters blanked Wycliffe 2-0 in a hotly-contested hockey set-to in the university Arena Friday afternoon. The Red and Black got a counter in each period with Rusted and Hull getting them in that order.

Trinity B: Turner, Ried, Rusted, Garrat, Hull, Laidlaw, Jackson, Livingston, Mercer, Knight.

Wycliffe: Coleman, Cardy, Suseth, Ballard, Hazel, Coburn, Bradbury, MacDonald.

unquestionably the best choice of the festival and a fine job generally, but reflecting sadly that the limitations of the cast prevented the play from winning the prize. Then follows half a page on the Vic play which won the award, graciously admitting that they deserved it. Another half-page deals with the U.C. entry, again lavish with praise. All three reviews are well written, but the editors might have allotted their spacing differently.

There are several wry attempts at humour.

VARSAITY SYMPHONISTS PREPARE BIG NIGHT

The date of the seventh annual University Symphony Orchestra concert, slated for February 27 in Convocation Hall, is fast approaching. Gwen Du-chemin, well-known young Toronto pianist, is to appear as soloist with the orchestra in this year's interesting program.

Because of duties with the R.C.N.
 V.R., Don Ryerson, who has been with the orchestra for the past few years, has had to resign his position as conductor. Godfrey Ridout, young Toronto composer, whose works have been gaining recognition in both Canada and the United States, is to take his place.

The orchestra usually has about 50 members. There are plenty of openings still available for campus instrumentalists, so dust off the fiddle and turn up at one of the regular rehearsals—7:30 at the Women's Union on Monday nights.

RESEARCH COUNCIL OFFER SCHOLARSHIPS

Acting on a consideration of "the views expressed by eminent educational and research authorities that more adequate provision" should be made in Canada to assist promising new science graduates to proceed with post-graduate research training, the National Research Council is now offering a number of bursaries, studentships, fellowships and special scholarships, according to word received by university authorities.

The Council will provide assistance to such students on condition that the university in question "shall waive or otherwise provide tuition fees" the announcement said. In the past, owing to keen competition, bursaries have usually been awarded to persons with one or more year's post-graduate experience in research.

The awards offered range from bursaries worth $250 to post-doctorate scholarships valued at $1,000. Application forms, which must be mailed by March 1, are obtainable, along with further information concerning the awards, at the Registrar's office, Simcoe Hall.

CO-EDS DO THE MOST PECULIAR THINGS DEPT.

In the summer time there used to be a Pedestrian Safety Zone marked out in lovely yellow paint on Bloor Street at the corner of Avenue Road, in order that life be made less precarious for those desirous of patronizing the TTC.
 ... The yellow paint is gone now, but there is still an ultra-conservative co-ed who makes it her practice to stand in the midst of the swirling traffic while she awaits the tardy tram. ... They tell us it is a truly thrilling sight to see, as she neatly ducks and dodges the hurtling vehicles which all but engulf her on every side. ...

JITTERBUGGING, in the eyes of the Independent Men's Association of the University of Tulsa, is now a fully-fledged college sport. ... At least it was included on the program of a sports carnival, recently sponsored by that august group. ... All of which proves exactly nothing, except that it's probably nice to be an Independent Man. ...

SPEAKING OF SPORT The Varsity
 A.C. has a new game. ... Baseball with buns filched from the kitchen next door to the office. ... The boys belt at the old spheroid with a piece of board we have lying around for just such emergencies, and it really is ever so exciting. ... And we liked the sports notice in last Monday's Varsity which announced "Practice for III team at 4 p.m. New-comers welcome.
 Trinity cushion." ... This IS haspitality. ...

LOTS OF FUNNY THINGS in
 The Varsity last week. ... Did you catch the Torontonensis advertisement in Wednesday's issue, which mentioned that Dean's Messages were now due?

 ... And that nifty proofing error also in Wednesday's issue, that marred the beauty of Wide-Eyed in Gotham? ...
 "A truly phenomenal pianist! Atter-berg in Tidningen, Stockholm. ...
 berg in Tidningen, Stockholm. ...
 and many, many more!" ... REUVEN
 WILL BE RAVIN'. ...

FROM THE SPARKLING PEN of the Sports comes this juicy gem:
 A certain retired Army Colonel
 Goes 'round in a temper colonel;
 His favourite champagne
 Has been stolen ogagne
 By his dastardly batman infolonel.

PICTURE ... The poor little freshe is sitting there looking so gaunand sad, not her usual hare-brained self at all. ... "Cheer up," chirp her bosom buddies, thinking that she probably just has a run in her stocking, or has fallen in love again, or something trivial like that. ... But she refuses to be consoled. ... "I just know I'm going to catch measles," she laments. "I have been Exposed to them. The guy I went to the movies with the other night has got them now." ... "But that doesn't mean that you'll get them," remonstrates her pals cheerily. ... "Oh, yes, it does," she sobs back. ... "I was chewing his gum." ... FADEOUT.

COMING TOMORROW ... A types, are included in it—six in one of the Whitney Hall houses and three from the city. They call it fun, even if they are usually just starting dessert when other people are rising from the table.

 But by this time they know in advance the weight of many commonly-used foods. The weighing is being done on Dietetic scales specially made for such a purpose.

The real work of the project will be in compiling its results since the different elements in the food eaten, such as proteins, fats, or minerals, must be ascertained. For this reason the sugar and cream that went into a cup of tea had to be weighed separately.
 When all has been tabulated, the two researchers will be able to advise their friends who helped them to go easy on the carbohydrates or stock up in Vitamin B for their health's sake. The amount of sleep each girl gets will also be taken into account.

Because absolutely everything having food value that the "guinea pigs" eat or drink must be weighed, some amusing things have happened. If a residence girl wants a bite between meals she must trek off with her apple or piece of fudge to the dining room where the scales are. One fetched her scales to the drug store to weigh a coke. When the residence had a formal dinner last week the experimenters were banished to the library where they ate in exclusive state. Saturday night the scales were formally unveiled at a dance given by one of the men's residences.

is an historical review of the development of Eastern Canada, and as such is a distinctly interesting innovation at the Art Gallery.

The show presents the development of Upper and Lower Canada and of the Maritime Provinces from their discovery as a vast unexplored region, to the time of Confederation. The exhibition is in four sections: discovery and exploration, immigration, settlement and co-ordination.

With a great variety of maps, prints, photographs, Indian utensils and art, jewelry, furs, and even tea-pots, and a few paintings, the exhibition gives a very comprehensive picture of the building of Eastern Canada. The Gallery visitor is shown the tradition and background which the settlers brought with them, their building of a new tradition in the country, the development of life in the different sections and finally their union.

In spite of its rather ponderous subject the show is very lively. You can get a great deal of amusement out of the early pictures of Canadian subjects by European painters, which are far-fetched to say the least, and are probably all imaginary. Among them the pictures of Quebec at the end of the long gallery are charming.

Dr. Cody's Yearly Report Reveals Forestry Plan, School Survey Results

Forest Area Containing Over 3,000 Acres may be Purchased for Practical Forestry Work; Lectures Advised

CHINESE CHAIR ADVOCATED

A forest area suitable for practical work by students in the Department of Forestry may soon be purchased by the University of Toronto, according to the President's annual report, released this weekend.

"We shall probably be able to acquire within reasonable distance from Toronto," the report said, "a tract of forest land containing over 3,000 acres."

Dean Howe has recommended, the President said, that for undergraduates there should be a course of lectures on the character, extent, and conservation of the national resources of Canada. "Young Canadians certainly should have definite knowledge of our material wealth and some inspiration to use and develop that wealth wisely and for worthy ends," the report continued.

Report of School Survey

More time for "study, reflection and experiment" in the lives of schoolmen was the recommendation of Dr. Dugald C. Jackson, professor emeritus of electrical engineering in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, who made a survey last year of the entire faculty of Applied Science and Engineering. An outstanding American consulting engineer, Dr. Jackson regarded the Science curriculum as overcrowded, and "involving so much lecturing and labo-

INTERNATIONAL SPEAKER TO ADDRESS NEWMAN CLUB

Members of Newman Hall will hold a meeting and welcome Rev. Dr. Stephen Leven, Ph.D., of Oklahoma City, tomorrow night.

A great figure in his work on the continent, and U.S. Father Leven has been asked to speak at Newman by Archbishop McGuigan on the field of the Catholic Evidence work. Father Leven knows this subject very intimately, having taken active part in that apostolate right to the point of mounting a "soap box" in Hyde Park.

And those listening really had a fine character speaking to them: he has held high office as National Director of the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine, and Vice-Rectorship of the American College at Louvain.

Father McHenry, Chaplain of Newman Club, spoke of the Rev. Dr. Leven as "one of the most brilliant men — and doing vital work for us."

University Buildings Guarded By Night-Shift Mousing Team

This is a story about cats. About two cats who are called Ginger and Chummy. Ginger is the official mouse catcher at the Women's Union and Chummy reigns supreme at the Chemistry building.

Ginger is a beautiful tawny hided animal with yellow eyes and it was only two weeks ago that she was brought by Miss Murphy, dietitian at the Women's Union from the Humane Society. She was formally recognized as a fellow member of the Union and was presented with a green leather collar with a silver buckle.

Highlight of her career was the first night she spent in a heating tunnel while friends searched high and low for her in vain. She emerged at dawn as black as midnight. Although Ginger has never been seen with a mouse it is to her credit that a mouse has never been seen since her arrival.

Chummy is a beautiful white Persian cat with emerald eyes. Her forbears were famous in England and had been on exhibit in Kensington at several cat shows. Her registered name is "Silver Slipper of Koshara." Chummy loves to play around in water and will sit in the bathtub for hours on end. One thing about Chummy though — she doesn't catch mice.

'BREBEUF' PAGEANT TO OPEN FORT REBUILT IN HURONIA

Pageant Based on Poem "Brebeuf and his Brethren" by Dr. E. J. Pratt; Music by Dr. Healey Willan

OPENS IN 1942

The pageant of "Brebeuf," adapted from the poem "Brebeuf and his Brethren" by Dr. E. J. Pratt, will be the feature presentation at the opening of the reconstructed Fort St. Marie in the summer of 1942. Dr. Healey Willan will compose the music for the presentation and Herman Vaden will direct it. Sir Ellsworth Flavelle is chairman of the board in charge of the pageant.

"The relation between the courage, sacrifice and devotion of the priests of the Huron Mission and the same qualities expressed today in the fight by the democratic countries will be stressed," Dr. Pratt told The Varsity.

"The pageant will follow the poem very carefully with the addition of some historical scenes in pantomime."

"Fort St. Marie near Midland is one of the oldest historical ruins in Canada. It was destroyed almost three hundred years ago. It will be reconstructed exactly as it existed then with its houses, hospital, long house, and church. It is expected that it will be finished by Aug. 1942."

"Fort St. Marie was the centre of the whole Huronia district; there the priests used to unite after their missions. The restoration of this fort is of international interest since the Americans are very interested in the Canadian martyrs."

"At present, over 100,000 pilgrims in all visit the fort annually. After the reconstruction it is expected three times as many will go."

WARDEN BICKERSTETH AIDS M'NAUGHTON IN TRAINING SCHEME

Hart House Warden, Granted Leave of Absence from U. of T., Works in English Army Education

C.P. DISPATCH

J. B. Bickersteth, Warden of Hart House, University of Toronto, is helping the scheme of army education in the Canadian Corps in England as personal adviser and assistant to Lieut. Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, corps commander, according to a Canadian Press dispatch.

Warden Bickersteth was recently granted leave of absence for the Easter term by the Senate of the University of Toronto.

This plan, under the aegis of the Canadian Legion Educational Services, is carried on mainly by the correspondence method and is finding response among the officers and men. The subjects in the course cover high school and public school fields of study. After the soldier does his "homework" he sends his answers to educational headquarters and they are corrected by the various Departments of Education in the provinces and Newfoundland.

Special Sunday classes are held for subjects of a technical nature to supplement the knowledge of the soldiers gained by the correspondence courses. These workshop classes have about 250 men enrolled in them.

Academic subjects are taught in the evenings at ordinary schools and more than 1,000 men are interested in linguistic and mathematical fields of endeavour. When a person wishes to study some special topic he gets in touch with an English tutor and corresponds with him.

SCANNING THE WAR

77th Congress

The 76th Congress of the United States, having completed a record session of 366 continuous days. This record sitting coupled with the beginning, January 20th, of Franklin Roosevelt's third term, forms an event so unprecedented that even our voluble southern neighbour cannot find adjectives adequate to describe it. The unprecedented nature of the event is due, unfortunately, not merely to the American love of the unusual. The third term president and his Congress are faced with the great necessity of immediately implementing the American defence program — ironing out wrinkles removing or alleviating "bottle necks" and finding the necessary revenue.

At the present juncture, however, the main point of interest in the American scene centres on the progress of the Lend-Lease Bill. This measure is now in the House and promises to pass unaltered in principle. It confers on Mr. Roosevelt powers such as no peace-time president has before wielded. He is to be the sole judge of the extent of American aid to Great Britain, Greece and China, and of what form that aid shall take. Under its provisions the chief executive may turn over American armaments on a lease or loan basis to those powers opposing the Axis, the amount and nature of such transfers to be governed solely by the speed with which arms may be produced. Such a measure naturally gives rise to much public comment. The chief opposition has not been one of principle, since all-out aid to England is a policy many times stated and endorsed. The most intelligent criticism is directed at the power this bill places in the hands of the executive. When liberal democracy is fighting for existence it may be necessary, but none the less unpleasant, to sacrifice temporarily some of its privileges in the interest of their permanent preservation. The Congress is jealous of its power, but is for the most part composed of sensible men, who can see it is wise to place their trust in Roosevelt and keep their powder dry.

U.S. Gives Aid

Isolationism died hard, as witness the impassioned pleas of such diehards as Senator Wheeler and Col. "Eugene" Lindbergh. They have stuck to their guns, but the greater voice of the American people has overwhelmed them. Secretaries Hull, Knox and Stimson have pointed out the danger to America and the desperate need of Great Britain; in the present crisis Defence Commissioner Knudsen stressed the need of increased arms production and of increasing aid, whether or not payment is received. Secretary Morgenthau indicated that British assets in the United States are being rapidly depleted, and that monetary aid of some sort will be necessary by the end of 1941. With a wary eye on Japan in the Pacific and the goal of a strong two-ocean navy still in the dim future, even the most idealistic of isolationists cannot help but accept the Lend-Lease Bill, if only as a form of insurance.

With the passage of this bill the last remaining monuments to the lost cause of neutrality are expected to totter: the Johnson Act, prohibiting borrowing by belligerents, and the remnant of the Neutrality Act, preventing the transport of war materials to warring powers in American ships. In the advent of these statutes going by the board, American aid to Great Britain will become a reality. To the present, American assistance — though decisive — has been on a strictly "cash and carry" basis. Realizing that this is their struggle

New V.C.F. Talks
Feature Zwemer

"His Revealing Personality"
Subject of Initial Address; Special Theme of Talk is "Secret Sin"

BIBLE ENCYCLOPAEDIA

"If we can truly say we are against sin, we have won the battle," declared Rev. Dr. Samuel M. Zwemer yesterday in the first of his V.C.F. lectures on "Facing Jesus Christ Today."

This initial talk was on the subject "His Revealing Personality," and the theme chosen was "My secret sins in the light of thy countenance."

Dr. Zwemer explained that "secret sins" are not superficial habits such as smoking or drinking, but are rather what Luther calls "unrecognized sins" or sins we know nothing about.

Many of the great writers such as Tolstoy, Shakespeare, Dante and Victor Hugo deal with sin, but the Bible remains the best encyclopedia of all on this subject.

The speaker went on to say that the central point in the life of Christ was the cross and from it radiates a dazzling light that is the X-ray of the spectrum of the Old Testament. "The searchlight of this light does three things," he added. "It destroys the superficial teaching of perfectionism; it humbles us and pours contempt on all our pride and righteousness; and it gives us more compassion for the ignorant ones."

ORGAN RECITAL

Prof. Healey Willan, university organist, will give another of the Twilight Organ Recitals in Convocation Hall today at 5 p.m.

Roberts and Preston of Queen's Uphold Affirmative Against Marg. Dillon and Bob Miller of Varsity

MAJORITY OF 8

That Canada should enter a Pan-American Union was the decision rendered by the house of the Victoria College Debating Parliament by a vote of 31 to 23, as opposed to the view held by the party in power.

The affirmative was upheld by Edward Roberts and Ross Preston of Queen's University, was successfully opposed by Margaret Dillon and Ross Preston of Varsity.

Edward Roberts, introducing the subject, stated that in the event of Canada's joining such a union she would tend to sever her relationship with the British Commonwealth in favour of that with the U.S. and that she could be much more effective in furthering friendly relations between Great Britain and Canada by staying out of the Union.

He stated that Canada on joining the union would not reap the rewards which she does today but would tend to oppose U.S. and so would be more likely to embarrass Washington and sever the relationship between U.S. and England.

Mr. Roberts stressed the incomparable position of Canada and South American countries with regard to membership in the union in that the latter are more backward culturally, are of Spanish rather than British blood, and in an

Vic Composer To Give Concert

A composer of some years' experience if not immediate success, pianist, organist, broadcaster and vocalist, Court Stone, II Vic, will play a program of his own compositions in the east common room of Hart House at 1.30 today.

Stone admitted to The Varsity that he started to study piano at the age of five under his mother, a noted pianist who has now turned to teaching. At six he started composing, although he confesses that examples of his early work are not included in today's program. He will play five pieces:

Prelude in A Minor Mist
Etude in D Major
Scas Poem
Fantasia in C.

Stone studied with his mother until he was ready to qualify for his A.T. C.M. and has since studied piano and composition under G. D. Adkinson and composition under T. J. Crawford, director of Victoria College Music Club's recent production of San Toy. At present

Scribes to Recapture Youth At Second Varsity Party

Tired, careworn and prematurely aged after almost a full season of campus newsgathering, The Varsity's scribes will seek to recapture their lost youth at the second Varsity party of the 1940-41 season tomorrow night.

Leaving hot scoops to the downtown press and turning over complete charge of the Night Office to the Champus Cat and the Pixie that lives in the side-pocket, members of the staff will migrate en masse to the distant dance floor of the Old Mill, where the thunder of the linotype cannot reach them.

Gawdy posters calling upon reporters to sign party lists make the air hideous in both men's and women's offices, and recruiting officers are speedily whipping recalcitrant revellers into line.

The floor show will feature the Varsity A.C., who will demonstrate the finer points of ping-pong and galloping dominoes to the uninitiated. A special ceremony will be the formal awakening of three night editors who were observed to fall into an enchanted sleep immediately after their issues rolled off the press. The ceremony will be conducted by the Managing Editor with a special pearl-handled bull-whip.

Fun and games will be the order of the evening as the Boys in the Back Room provide their remarkable attempts at harmony for the enjoyment of all present. It's wacky, it's amazing, but it's fun—it's The Varsity party!

Youth Congress

The American Youth Congress has shown itself to be both behind the times and out of step with the President and the rest of the country before, but at its session just concluded in Washington it has outdone itself both for inconsistency and blindness to possible future events.

Most of the strong isolationists of a year and a half ago who insisted that the war was no concern of the United States have changed their minds long before this. Many of them, like Walter Winchell, have even become the strongest supporters of all-aid-to-Britain, as the best means of protecting their own country. But the American Youth Congress is still describing the war in antiquated terms which, apart from the question of whether they are right or wrong, are beside the point and settle nothing. Statements of "imperialistic wars in which, whatever their declared aims, the masses of people suffer much and gain nothing in the end," are examples of the Congress line of thought.

As an example of its inconsistency, the Youth Congress insists that the United States should have no part in the European war, and opposes the lease-lend bill, but at the same time terms isolationism as unrealistic and selfish. While most of the representatives agreed that they had more to lose by a German victory than by a British victory, they agreed that for neither of them were they inclined to fight in any war at any time.

A message was approved for sending to the young people of all countries in which the Congress went on record as pledging its support in their struggle for freedom. It said, "We cannot long be forced to fight each other. The people shall have peace when they use the rights of the majority to prevent a few from profiting at the disastrous expense of this and all other lands."

We assume that they are extending their moral support. It seems to be the only support they are willing to give. But perhaps their views on the subject will alter as the war goes on. They would not be the first who have realized their mistake on that score.

Religion in Germany

Newspaper reports last week concerning a German church leader who was imprisoned three and a half years ago as one of the leaders in the state-church conflict have brought up the question of this old disagreement once again.

Since the outbreak of the war the rift between the church and the state which was in full swing in Germany has received little publicity. No doubt the country is expending all its efforts on behalf of the war, and is dismissing the matter until peace has been declared. Neither side would be likely to risk disrupting the country by attempting to settle the question at such a precarious time.

The state claims that the rift between it and the church is closing and that the churches have capitulated to "the moral law of the national community," seeking to contribute their share to the furtherance of social and humanitarian war duties. As proof of this, it points out that the Roman Catholic Church contributed a large sum for the benefit of soldiers at Christmas, and that it is actively engaged in relief work for children whose fathers have fallen in battle. The leading Catholic newspaper of the Czechs in the Protectorate has also affirmed European Catholics' support of Hitler and Mussolini.

As further proof, the state points out that thirty-two German Catholic field chaplains have been decorated with the iron cross, first class, for distinguished war service, and seventy-one have received the iron cross, second class.

However, commenting upon this apparent closing of the long-standing rift between church and state, one American correspondent in Germany states, "It is safe to say that no definite settlement of the issues still outstanding between the representatives of religion and of the German state has yet been achieved. The exigencies of war have bridged these differences temporarily, but when peace has been effected they will undoubtedly occupy leaders and authorities on both sides and a definite settlement will have to be made."

Food for Spain

The food shortage which Spain, along with other European nations has been appealing to the United States to relieve, is about to come to an end in Spain if its present agreement with Argentina can be successfully carried out. Under this plan, Spain expects to acquire large quantities of wheat, meat and other Argentine products, thus realizing the double purpose of disposing of the huge surpluses that have been created in Argentina by the war and relieving the famine in Spain, to the satisfaction of both governments.

However the question of transporting such supplies to Spain is a major one. Argentina has said that it cannot deliver the products. So far no ships have been obtained from other countries, but the entire available Spanish merchant marine has been ordered to Argentina to start delivery.

It has been reported from Spain for some months now that the food situation has been growing steadily worse, and that practically no wheat is to be had. Spanish newspapers have even gone so far as to attempt to reconcile the people to the situation by claiming that "the nation cannot develop its true soul if it gets too much to eat." Spanish editors should be awarded some sort of journalistic medal if they succeed in convincing the hunger-stricken country of that. Thus the present plan is of major importance to Spain.

Great Britain has as yet offered no opinion on the subject, but it does not seem likely that she will object in view of her former agreement to let the United States send a certain amount of wheat to Spain if it wished to do so. At that time plans were discussed for the United States to aid Spain with Britain's approval, but evidently no satisfactory conclusion was reached because the proposal was not carried out.

Canadian Documentary

National Film Society

The showing for February of the Toronto branch of the National Film Society gave a preview to the members of the second of Canada's new documentary attempts at recording her own history. "People of Canada" produced by the National Film Board in 1940 is designed to tell of the peopling of the prairies with families from foreign shores.

Much of the colour that director George Sparling injected into "Heritage" when he told the story of wheat and the granary of Canada was used over again in this second film of the life of the peasant stock in the prairie provinces. The nationalities that form the colorful elements in the farm communities of the west were shown in all cases as the energetic backbone of the prairie developments. The life and institutions they brought with them and planted in the Mennonite and Doukhobor colonies receive for the first time the same type of publicity as that generally meted out on scenic tourist attractions.

The picture as a whole did not escape the standard

W.S.T.D. MEMBERS TO SEE ACTION IN BATTLE ZONE

Toronto, Feb. 11.—(CUP)—85 members of the Women's Service Training Detachment have been drafted by the government for immediate service overseas, it was disclosed by President Cody last night in a surprise speech from Hart House Tower.

Platoons 1, 2, and 3 will leave from an unnamed eastern Canadian port to take up positions somewhere on the battlefield. Platoons 4, 5 and 6 will drill in the O.C.E. gym until further notice.

In what capacity the W.S.T.D. units are to be used has not been revealed by the General Staff, the President told The Varsity yesterday, but it is expected that they will engage in mopping-up operations on the Crenaican front. Attendance will be taken at all parades.

Platoons 4, 5 and 6 are being trained for duty as Mine-Sweepers, Submarine Chasers and other auxiliary craft and will be sent overseas as the need arises. Cap badges are being distributed at 1900 hours to those members who have not already obtained them.

Uniforms are to be worn at all times.

The Raven and the Vulture.

treatment accorded to films designed to attract tourists. The people chosen were all of the colorful and more dashing groups. Swedish, German and Asiatic groups who stayed in the cities and did not push out to form the farming population of Canada received little mention.

The prairie farm town and its line of elevators still is a dominant part of all films telling of Canada's western growth. The cosmopolitan atmosphere in "Peoples of Canada" made it a human as well as an historical document. A heightened note in effect could have been struck if much of the native music of these foreign peoples had found its way into the film, along with the visual effect. The music did no more than supplement the rather excellent commentary. "Peoples of Canada" however paves the way for further efforts in which the individual groups will receive more exhaustive treatment.

As a feature film to the program the National Film Society gave the first Toronto showing of "Tundra", a 1937 production of the United States Associated Cinema dedicated to the mercy flyers of the Alaskan wilderness. Possessing as it did a complete narrative crowded with the thrills of a man's solitary adventure, the picture could not help be entertaining. It showed the resourcefulness of the director and producer George Slant in adding all the wild animal effects and native terrors of which Alaska is capable.

The solitary doctor who crashed on the tundra on his way to relieve the influenza epidemic of a coastal village was forced to struggle through ice, water and snow before the final rescue. Two small bears adopted on the route provided comic relief and animated interest with their antics. The beaver was met with by the grounded flyer, and otters, rabbits and foxes trapped by him in his struggle for existence.

The opening sequence of dipping plane wings in a wilderness of iceberg and ice floats furnished a setting that the rest of the narrative could not rival. Particularly effective were the close up shots of mammoth icebergs splitting from their glaciers and beginning their long road to the warm Pacific currents.

"Tundra" is not the stuff of which a box office attraction is made, although the same material was used in earlier years in Hubbard's "Alaska's Silver Millions". It is only under gifted direction that a nature film of this type can hope to rival the pattern set by "Men of Aran" as an account of wilderness struggles.

ST. MIKE'S HOOPSTERS
DENTS A EGG OUT

Dents A hoopsters edged out St. Mike's A 28-26 in a close scramble ball tussle yesterday. The Toothtuggers led 16-12 at half-time but a last half rush by the Double Blue cut the lead in half.

Jack Mullett was high scorer for the Molarmen, sinking three field goals and a foul shot. McColl added five more to the Dentists' total while Saltzman, Hambley, Humenick and Brett all got a pair of baskets.

Tom Murphy stood out for the Irish with 12 points with Podcasy close behind with 7.
Dents A: Saltzman (4), McColl (5), Mullett (7), Humenick (4), Brett (4), Andrews.

St. Mike's A: Kittle (2), Murphy (12), Podcasy (7), Barrett, Dunn (3), Callom, Curry (2).

TRACK TIPS

For the last couple of years summer and winter the brilliant Scarlet and Gold of Victoria has been pounding down the track in front of all opposition in the hurdle races. In fact the speedsters have formed the habit of finishing in a particular sequence, namely, and to wit, one—two—three.

This customary procedure has become so invariable that one would be a numbskull, not to say a paranoiac to predict anything but a 1-2-3 triumph for the pretty colours mentioned above. It has become an old track tradition. Therefore, to prove to all who doubt it that we are possessed of a high degree of sanity, we shall predict without further ado that Victoria will come trucking down the track in the hurdles this afternoon taking positions one, two and three, debating win over the government at Vic Parliament, and later imbibing nerverumming coffee, he will be in no fit condition to win a race today, or even come second. Consequently we are forced to conclude that he will finish third.

It will be left to Red Heinbock and Ron Cass to battle for the first two slots. The only figure who seems to have a chance of slaying the Vic stranglehold is a chap by the name of Wendorf from O.C.E. But surely he wouldn't upset tradition or violate reason for the mere and secular purpose of winning a race. The fleet-footed gentry will also chase around the boards in the 440, but inherent protest forbids us from picking the winners of this event for you. After all what are you at college for? What good is education to you if you can't even predict the result of a quarter mile race?

NEXT ATTRACTION

Full-throated groans, raspy gasps and heart-rending shrieks are emanating in an ever-increasing crescendo from the Athletic Wing of the vast stone structure known to the initiate as Hart House, these afternoons, as the brawny men of Varsity prepare for their supreme test on Saturday eve.

The main feature of this next University Night is to be the Interfaculty Assault, and for this the men are earnestly training.

All the fellows of last year's intercollegiate wrestling team, with one or two exceptions, are back this year, and there should be some grand old tussles in the muscle arena.

Four of the intercollegiate boxing lunarians of a year ago are still around. That rough and tough two-fisted houndie Ruggard Robert Hurst will be in there swinging vicious jabs in the 118 pound class. Ralph Stanley is back to battle for supremacy at 135 lbs. Frank Patterson will be in the ring slugging to defend his 145 pound crown.

And, perhaps the classiest fighter of the lot, Bill Ramore, the cool-headed, steady-eyed middleweight king, the master-boxer, will demonstrate his cool and crafty skill in another bout.

It should be a grand evening for the blood-thirsty and for the more tender hearted all kinds of other entertainment will be arranged.

The Fighting Irish from St. Mike's are to play host this week, and they can be counted on to provide a fascinating evening.

TRIUMPHS AND TANNINGS

You have probably noticed the consistency with which O.C.E.'s great basketball team has been running up top heavy scores against their various opponents. But they aren't the only bunch of hoopsters who have been gaining prolific results.

Aerial Navigation too has done a little tall shooting. The Fliers trounced the O.C.E. B team 79-20 the other day. And last Saturday night they bombarded St. Mike's C 66 to 19.

School of Science also must be mentioned. Their fourth team manhandled Meds' fourth outfit on Saturday by a count of 72-20. Jr. School dunked the Junior Medics 63-35 a few days previous. Looks as if the Engineers are getting the best of their life and death feud with the Doctors.

Taking a squint at the other side of the ledger the first thing that smites our tired eye is the Emmanuel hockey team. We have no doubt that this outfit is composed of great and noble souls. We hold no quarrel with their theology nor their sincerity. But to call their team great seems to be a masterpiece of overstatement. This team has been edged in its last two games by scores of 9-3 and 15-1. All the same Emmanuel had a fine volleyball team, whatever that proves.

gle, the United States is more and more ready to provide the cash and help with the carrying. Potentially the greatest military power in the world, they still have no desire to fight alone.

Brotherly Love

In the field of hemisphere defence it is interesting to note the great efforts being made by the United States, and more recently by the Dominion of Canada, to secure the greater goodwill of Latin America. We have long tended to treat our dusky brethren of South and Central America with a sort of genial contempt, regarding them as more or less savage, especially in regard to their rather abrupt methods of disposing of an unpopular regime. The United States in particular have long been inclined to the use of their marines to safeguard their markets and property rights—supporting even the most bloody tyrants such as Machado in Cuba and Gomez in Venezuela.

The fruits of this policy have been a steady infiltration of German, Japanese, and Italian ideas. These worthies have taken over valuable markets and have made the Latin American very dissatisfied with its big brother of the north. They have pictured the United States as a sort of ogre, oppressing the poor peon and robbing him of his sustenance.

The Music You Want

A Sunday Evening Record Group

Assembling weekly in the homes of friends, the Association for Appreciation of Music hears concert-length programs of good recorded music. Played on High Fidelity sound equipment, the records are the newest and best available, loaned from a co-operating music store.

Programs include familiar music together with some works less frequently heard. Sunday evening programs are orchestral, while Friday evening concerts provide special programs consisting of chamber music, opera, piano selections or other types of music.

The Association is organized on a non-profit basis, its sole purpose being the offer of an opportunity to those interested in hearing the world's great music at the lowest possible cost—a nominal sum which covers operating expenses.

Notices of the weekly programs are posted on the bulletin boards in the U.C. rotunda and the Music Library on College Street.

For liberal and satisfying doses of The Music You Want, drop around at a few of the association's meetings. —E.S.

Trinity A and Pharmacists Hit Hockey Jackpot

Bud Leake is High Scorer for Trinity in the Tussle which Holds Junior Doctors to a Single

SCORE 4-1

Trinity A pucksters downed Jr. Meds 4-1 in a hard-fought ice contest yesterday.

Bud Leake opened the scoring for the Red and Black early in the game on a pass from Phil Frewer. Leake again bulged the twine a few minutes later on a single handed rush. Frewer and Leake each got one before the whistle.

Gord Beattie got the Surgeons' only tally of the game in the closing frame.

Befly MacMillan and Don Boxer, of rugby fame, starred on the Anglians' defence, and were one of the reasons why the Medmen failed to score more than one goal. Freshman Johnny Jarvis, late of the famed U.C.C. puck squad, turned in a sterling performance between the pipes for the Red and Black.

Trinity A: Jarvis, MacMillan, Boxer, Andrews, Leake, Frewer, Whittingham, Phillips.

Jr. Meds: Baird, Arthur, Smythe, Parrott, Smith, Willinsky, Crossweller, St. John, Beattie, Gentels, Rotenberg, Stercoff, Wallace.

entirely different geographical position from that of Canada.

He pointed out that the Pan-American Union is based on the policies of the Monroe Doctrine, the Declaration of Panama and the Agreement of Havana, but Canada is already in the war and so would not be affected by such a policy.

Margaret Dillon, speaking for the negative, pointed out that it is impossible to prove that such a union would never take place, but stated that she agreed to meet the affirmative on their own grounds. She maintained that Canada would at least have nothing to lose by joining the union on the basis that it is merely a consulting body.

"We are closely bound to the Pan-American Union whether we like it or not and membership in it would enable us to express our opinions on matters in which we are automatically concerned," said the speaker.

Ross Preston, the second speaker for the Queen's team, pointed out the danger of Canada becoming assimilated in the United States to the detriment of her connection with the British Commonwealth, if she joined the Pan-American Union.

His opinion concerning the entrance into the war of the South American countries was that their support to Great Britain would be too weak to be of any use and that, due to the infiltration of Nazi propaganda they might be more inclined to support the enemy.

Bob Miller, the second speaker for the negative, stressed Canada's need for a diversified trade which is forthcoming only from the south.

Prof. B. Wilkinson, guest speaker of the evening, referred to the Pan-American Union as visionary and unreal and that Canada should consider the matter seriously before deciding to enter.

In conclusion the professor explained that it is really a question of whether or not we can prevent the U.S. from joining the union. He strongly advised a union of English-speaking nations rather than one with the countries of Latin America.

So many opinions were heard from the floor of the house that the speaker granted a time extension of ten minutes.

Prof. Riddell, of the History Dept., on being asked to speak, said that the average Canadian tends to oppose membership in the union because he dislikes to commit himself and because he is aware that the present set-up is not one which excludes the possibility.

Pharmacists Down U.C. II; Gibson Opens the Scoring for U.C. but Pharmacy Ahead at End of First Period

SCORE 8-2

Pharmacy stickmen hit the jackpot when they ran wild to swamp U.C. II 8-2 in a free scoring contest at the university ice-box.

The Royal College opened the scoring when Joe Gibson countered on a solo effort, but the Druggists came back with a rush and Al Elliot banged in the puck on a pass from Ralph Dunning. Goals by Russell and Binning kept the Pestle Pounders ahead 3-1 at the end of the first period.

The Druggists continued to set the pace in the final stanza when they rolled in five more goals. Gibson got the Red and White's other counter late in the period.

Bob Binning, Art Walther and Jim Jardine all with two goals and an assist led the Druggists. Bill Russell got a goal and an assist while Ralph Dunning got two assists. Joe Gibson got both goals for the Red and White on solo efforts.

U.C. II: Mackintosh, Paukert, Gibson, Duncan, Ballagh, Park, Norman, Tisdale.

Pharmacy: Casselman, Boyes, Murray, Jeffers, Stevenson, Binning, Jardine, Russell, Walther, Dunning, Elliot.

Wycliffe B Wins Hoop Roustabout

Hart House Upper Gym was the scene of a 25-8 shellacking sustained by Trinity C basketballers at the hands of the Wycliffe B team yesterday. From the start the ministers showed a superiority in speed and finesse over throughout the game coupled with fast the gang from Trinity.

Wycliffe put up a tight defence breaks and accurate shooting. For the boys from Wycliffe, Abbott turned in a stellar performance and topped the scorers with eleven points. Coleman and Prichard counted six and four points respectively for the same squad. Barrett was top scorer for Trinity with four points.

Wycliffe: Coleman (6), Abbott (11), Ball, Kerr (2), Prichard (4), Latimer (2).

Trinity: Cartwright (2), Grover, Barrett (4), Crozier (2).

let's go places

Priscilla, Rosemary and Lola Lane and Gale Page of the "Four Daughters" have become the "Four Mothers" of the second Kemp family of FOUR.

SHEA'S hit now playing at FOUR. The adventures of this family have proved to be very entertaining material for a movie series, and will probably inspire more pictures to come.

The feature stars Priscilla and Rosemary Lane are the centre of attraction, but Claude Rains as father of the family turns in a first-rate bit of acting. Eddie Albert's novel and refreshing personality is turned to the more serious and intelligent characterization of a doctor.

When the story opens the four Kemp daughters have brought home four husbands and have become mothers.

This happy family scene is disturbed by many difficulties, and the plot begins to have wheels within wheels. The story moves quickly from one situation to another, but finally the troubles clear away and everything works out perfectly for everybody.

The second feature on the bill "The Case of the Black Parrot" is a second rate mystery story, and takes the place of some "shorts" which might have been good.—R.B.

Excuse me, I was enjoying the sight of my name up there in small letters and didn't see you turn to the back page. Well, up to a little while ago it looked as though I was going to have to fill half this column with diatribes against m.o.m for leaving me with two moth-eaten leftovers to build a column around. But I just came back from a brief constitutional around Vic where the Silly Season seems to have broken out early this year, so here's my contribution.

The first strange thing that met my eye was one of the younger Dons at Burwash making snowballs with dollar bills in them. But I COULDN'T MAKE HIM MAD AT ME!

My next meeting was with a regular contributor to Mike's CO-EDS DO THE MOST PECULIAR THINGS DEPARTMENT who asked me how to get into Burwash Hall on account of she'd left a sock in the . . . And a Freshie friend of hers was recently very embarrassed. She was in a restaurant and, says she, "When I got up to leave my menu fell right out on the floor!" But, just as cool as you please she picked it up and walked out with it. "And nobody so much as said 'Boo' to me." Which is a rather pointless thing to say anyway.

IN THE MASTHEAD OF OUR SPARKLING CONTEMPORARY, Louisiana State University's Daily Reveille appears this brief notice: "First printed in October, 1872. Publication resumed January 14, 1897." That first issue must have been a LULU!

And he reads a hoary hoarded hither, if you'll pardon me for reaching way back. In December a noted picture mag must have given the L.S.U. Raised Eyebrows Department a workout when, in the course of giving Bundles for Britain some well deserved publicity they captioned a picture thus: "SORORITY GIRLS at Louisiana State University bundle for Britain."

I THINK THAT I SHALL NEVER SEE a co-ed as confused as she. One English prof described her style of writing as "gnarled," another said it needed pruning. "Oh, dear," she moaned, "I feel just like a neglected orchard!" . . . A NEST OF ROBINS IN HER HAIR.

WHAT THEY WON'T THINK OF NEXT DEPT.—Headline from Toronto's other morning paper:

INDIAN CLUBS HELP DEVELOP BUST CONTOUR

Are you run-down, underweight? Join an Indian Club!

Back about at the time of the Drama Festival a well known Vic Burbage proved that his father's object in sending him to Victoria had been achieved. In the midst of a gripping scene in "The Valiant" he suddenly realized that the desk he was sitting on had been overpowered by some saboteur with a mixture that was very viscous indeed. In short, he was stuck fast! Without faltering in his lines, however, he cautiously separated himself from the desk while the audience's attention was directed elsewhere, saved the scene, saved the play and won the day (or night) for dear old Scarlet and Gold.

Thank you for your indulgence the while. In case you turned back here by habit, unimpaired of yesterday's warning. On your way out there's a laughable old Cat on page 2. Meanwhile this is your cub reporter who wishes to say that if he was paid half what he was worth by this paper—he'd be using a pencil and wouldn't get ink on his fingers.

RECITAL TODAY

Court Stone, II Victoria, will play in the east common room, Hart House, from 1.30 to 2 p.m. today. The program will consist of Mr. Stone's own compositions as follows: Prelude in A Minor, Minst. Etude in D, Sea Poem, Fantasia in C.

VICTORIA COMPOSER TO GIVE PERFORMANCE

Stone has turned to voice study and his progress was recently seen in his success as Sir Bingo Preston in the recent production of San Toy.

His work, he says, consists more of songs than of piano pieces and he believes in modern forms because, he says, "they require more emotion than hard work."

A member of a musical family, Stone comes honestly by his gifts. His brother Jack, II Vic, is a violinist in the University Symphony Orchestra and his younger brother is a power with the bagpipes at Lawrence Park Collegiate Institute.

BASEBALL CHANGE

Thurs. Feb. 13th: 4.00, Med III vs S.P.S. IV, Remmer, Dewar; 5.00, St. M. B vs S.P.S. III, Ferguson, Ronayne; 8.00, Emman vs Pharm, Ronayne, Ferguson.

Civilian Defence Group Established in Canada Similar to British A.R.P.

Canadian Committee Has Been Organizing Municipalities Against Air Attack Since Outbreak of War

BASES SET UP

A great deal of information regarding the Civilian Defence Committee was elicited by The Varsity in an interview with a member of the university staff who refused to be quoted. This organization corresponds to the Air Raid Precautions machine operating at the present time in British cities.

The C.D.C. was established, under federal supervision, upon the outbreak of war and has quietly but effectively gone about the business of drawing up plans, organizing personnel and establishing bases. The coastal provinces, particularly those on the east coast, were the first to organize and they now have a swift-moving, competent force, which is extremely capable and well-trained in the duties that would be required of it, in the event of a civilian disaster, or an invasion by air.

Each municipality is responsible for its own preparations, but it receives its supplies and instructions from, and works with, the provincial body of the C.D.C. Many municipalities, especially the larger ones, are now organizing in Ontario. This work has been in progress for many months, as a lesson in the necessity for preparedness has been learned from the tragic example of England and France.

Doctors, registered nurses, trained fire-fighters, police and first-aid assistants compose this non-combatant army known as the C.D.C. All the above-mentioned have volunteered their services and are registered and subject to immediate mobilization.

In Ontario the C.D.C. is headed by the attorney-general of the province as chairman. The organization is composed of police, fire, medical, public ratory work" that there is not enough time for other subjects.

The report, which is being considered by a special committee of the U. of T. staff, along with information gathered by other staff members on visits to the continent's best engineering schools, stressed the need for further training in English and Economics.

Other points mentioned in the survey, the report said, were the need for further accommodation, particularly in chemical and mechanical engineering, and closer contacts with outside industry and with alumni by a system of advisory councils. Enrolment in the faculty continues a steady rise, the President reported, with Chemical Engineering leading the increase.

Advocates Chinese Chair

In view of the "magnificent collection" of Chinese Objets D'Art dating from 1700 B.C. and the famous Mu Library of 50,000 volumes, President Cody urged that a special department of Chinese studies be set up.

"In the person of Bishop W. C. White, Keeper of the East Asiatic Collection and associate professor of Chinese archaeology, we have one of the most distinguished authorities on the art and archaeology of China."

Referring to the number of Chinese students now studying here, he continued: "These local conditions and facilities make it timely to consider the advisability of a further advance by the creation of a separate department and Professor of Chinese in the university. I believe that such a gesture would be appreciated by 'the gallant Republic of China' and would bring about closer relations between the two countries."

During last year the Vatican recognized the work of the Institute of Mediaeval Studies, in past years organized and conducted by St. Michael's College, by granting it the rank of a Pontifical Institute, empowered to confer degrees in theology.

Buildings Postponed

Although the director of medical services, and transportation committees, each of which has a director, experienced in his special field. There is a similar assembly of forces in each municipality, headed by the police chief, the fire chief, the medical health officer and the town council.

The province is divided into districts, each of which is under the supervision of a Regional Officer who acts as envoy between the provincial and municipal bodies and who, in time of emergency, wields great power. Regional Officer for Toronto district is Inspector Crawford, loaned by the provincial police for this purpose. The inspector has taken a special course of training in order to perfect his ability in this capacity.

Each district is divided and subdivided and in each there are to be first-aid patrols, first-aid posts and a hospital, doctors and nurses.

The care of the injured, however, is only one of the many problems which confront the C.D.C. Added to this are the duties of devising anti-gas methods, providing and over-seeing good sanitation, policing the districts, fighting fires, exposing sabotage, establishing food kitchens, and providing shelter for people who have been rendered homeless by bombing. All this sounds very grim, but so it should, for though the danger of attack by air is not imminent, there is every chance that we shall have to face these issues in the future, and it is well to be prepared.

There has been a suggestion that a "blackout" be held in Toronto in the near future, but this is vigorously opposed by the C.D.C. The committee reasons that, by actual statistics, there were more casualties as a result of "blackouts" in the first few months of England's bombardment than resulted from the explosion of bombs. It is felt that this situation should be avoided in Toronto until the "man in the street" has become more thoroughly educated regarding his duties in such an event.

For women has pointed out the great need for proper facilities for health education, the report said, the building of additions to the residence of the late Sir Joseph Flavelle—gymnasium and swimming pool, have had to be postponed because of the war.

Similarly, the erection of a new men's residence for University College, must await "the victorious conclusion of the war," the President said. He congratulated Trinity College on being able to proceed with the erection of its residences and dining-hall, which has been made possible by private benefaction.

Owing to the war, and the demand for insulin, the Connaught laboratories have provided an addition to the Hygiene Building to assure absolutely necessary accommodation for the manufacture of this product. Also, because of the medical register to be prepared in connection with war service, additional space has been provided for the Canadian Medical Association in its College Street building.

Facts and Figures

Benefactions to the university during the fiscal year totalled $445,581.57, the report revealed, the amount being distributed widely among the various faculties and departments. Total student enrolment was 7,811, of whom 2,763 were women. Of these, 3,786 students came from Toronto, 3,161 from other parts of Ontario, while others from every other province in the dominion, and every country in the world attended. (This year the total enrolment at the University of Toronto is 7,022 students.)

Total staff of the university and University College numbered 958, of whom 127 were professors, 82 associate professors, 90 assistant professors and 219 lecturers. Total number in the entire staff was 1,037.

The Canadian Campus

By a staff writer of The McMaster Silhouette

A Canadian University Press Feature

Following the policy of previous papers who have handled this column, the writer has no intention of ignoring his own campus. . . . So it's with a free conscience that we tell you that the McMaster Board of Publications (which, incidentally, handles four other periodicals besides the weekly Silhouette) has issued a challenge to the world at large to engage in a game of hockey. "The time has come," says the official utterance, "for us to assert our athletic superiority as well as our undoubted mental superiority." One of the conditions of acceptance of the challenge is that all applicants must, in good faith, make a deposit of cash or a reasonably accurate facsimile with the Board. Another is that the time and place of the game are subject to change without notice by the Board for strategic reasons. And if any other organization dares accept the challenge, the Board has ready a pile of attractive contracts with which to sign up the opposition's best men as employees of the Board. If the Board gets licked, of course, not a word of it will appear in the Silhouette. . . . but if it wins!

Out at U.B.C. a professor has ejected all co-eds from his class in English on the grounds that he finds feminine pulchritude too much of a distraction while he is lecturing. "Young women will vacate the room at once," he ordered, and as they blushingly struggled out, the men hissed and booed—solely, says the Ubyesee, to hide their heart-break. The young women are too enraged to make a coherent statement to the press at present, reports the same mighty organ. The Queen's Journal, handling the same story, says that they were women women who were requested to leave. In that case, perhaps the prof did the right thing. And perhaps he didn't. Who wants to take lectures in English from a prof that talks like that anyway?

At the other end of the country, the Dalhousie Gazette struck a new high in journalistic versatility in a recent issue. On page 2 appeared a scholarly editorial on the arts, side by side with an article entitled "Beethoven and Idealism". . . . and directly opposite, on page 3, a headline screams "Lunatic Lobby", another orders "Say 99", a third murmurs "40 Beers"—and way down in the corner appears a column entitled "The Pig Sty". Frank beggars, these eastern dwellers.

Back to McMaster, the editor of The Silhouette, badly stuck for a little filler, sat down and wrote the following gem. "Silhouettes are sent by the Exchange Department all over the country, and over an ocean, even they go as far as Africa. It is said that many dark members of the Uganda tribe cannot pursue their ordinary hunting and fishing if by some mischance the mails are delayed. . . . at such a time, the disappointed tribesmen wade a little into the South Atlantic and wail restrainedly in the general direction of North America." Which proves that filling a paper each week must be quite a mental strain.

The Universities of Mount Allison and McMaster have been brooding a great deal lately over the eligibility of certain undergraduates to participate in athletics. In both cases, the trouble appears to be an echo of the "no intercollegiate games" rule passed by college heads last summer. At Mt. A., the sports editor of The Argosy Weekly got as far as having it made clear to him that athletes who are poor students can play home games with non-intercollegiate teams. McMaster had less luck, for it was decreed that such games cannot be played in by Mac undergrads unless they have a high second class academic standing . . . which means that most McMaster athletes are studying quietly at home this season. Mt. A. too, for that matter.

Mystery of the week comes from The McGill Daily. Reporting a speech given by a lady from the Montreal Star to the Women's Union on the subject "When Mother Was a Girl" the Daily says "Although times have definitely changed. . . . Miss ——— believes that some of mother's ideas had to be recommended them. 'After all,' she said, 'I did succeed in getting my man — or none of you would be here.' . . . What, none of us? A little earlier the same story says, 'such modern practices as attending unchaperoned parties, smoking, drinking and using cosmetics were unheard of in the life of the respectable young lady.' The general opinion around here is that any young lady caught drinking cosmetics deserves to lose her reputation.

The Saskatchewan Sheaf prints what is purportedly a bona fide letter written by the mother of a trainee to his Major General. The lady requests that her son not be called Ginger — a name she abhors — but Archibald; that he be allowed to sleep until eleven on Sundays, as is his wont; that he be allowed a motorcycle on route marches because he doesn't like walking; that he have a batman to look after wet feet, etc. . . . and she enclosed a list of menus for 21 meals, just for Ginger. She also hoped the C.O. wouldn't mind if Archibald brought his St. Bernard, his radio, saxophone, fishing tackle, and golf clubs to camp with him. And she was glad there was to be no beer in camp, for, although 22 and weighing 216, Archibald was really merely a child. One guess whose fault that last was. Personally, we don't believe a word of it.

Everywhere people are doing Gilbert and Sullivan. Manitoba and Alberta are doing the Mikado. McMaster has the Gondoliers slated for early March. Saskatchewan has chosen Pinafore — and headlines its publicity story for the week with the cryptic statement, "Announce prices for Pinafore; 65c Adults. 25c Students." We've been suspecting that there was a difference for some time now. . . . but surely not a forty cent difference. . . . It makes us feel so cheap, somehow.

One of the best stories any paper has run for a long time is the article College Journalism, by Stephen Leacock which the Queen's Journal ran recently. It can be overdone, this college journalism, opines Prof. Leacock, and points out undergrads of his day as examples of good careers gone wrong, warped by dabbling in newspapers. Howard Ferguson, erstwhile Premier of Ontario, General Mitchell, once head of McGill's School of Applied Science, Dr. McLay, dean of arts at McMaster, Judge Stuart, once judge of the Supreme Court of Alberta. . . . are all held up as examples of chaps who had real ability until led astray by the lure of the pen. But Leacock concludes "All I want to say is that every time you start a literary journal in a college, all the brightest and best students will flock to its service — in fact, just like my friends and myself." Remember that "Brightest and best" the next time you think the old school paper needs a little improving. If you don't, we will.

Limberlost Ski Trip To Mark Season's Peak

Reservations are Being Made by the S.A.C. to the Skiers' Mecca Near Huntsville for Next Week-end

LAST WEEK ST. SAVEUR

Following last week's ski session at Saint Saviour, the season will reach its height this week-end, when Varsity devotees of the hickory blades and the thrill of rapidly varying altitudes in the open air will take the train Friday night for Limberlost Lodge, home of good clean fun, near Huntsville, Ont.

The S.A.C. can make all reservations either in its office in Hart House or in Room 82 of U.C. Limberlost Lodge has all sorts of different accommodation from dormitories to single rooms and cabins for parties, the prices ranging accordingly.

Limberlost is some 14 miles from Huntsville, buried in the snow-mantled Muskoka woods. The roads are usually clear and those who go by train are taken to the Lodge in the Limberlost station wagon.

All who want a week-end of fun will have to make their reservations soon. The train will return skiers to their studies Sunday night.

MEDIAEVAL ACADEMY HONORS DR. PHELAN

Saint Michael's Professor of Philosophy is First Canadian to be Elected to Corresponding Fellowship

The Mediaeval Academy of America has just announced the election of Rev. Gerald B. Phelan Ph.D., LL.D., as a Corresponding Fellow. Dr. Phelan is a native of Halifax and Agrege in Philosophy of the University of Louvain. He came to Toronto in 1925 as Professor of Psychology at St. Michael's College and has been associated with the Institute of Mediaeval Studies since its foundation in 1929. In 1935 he succeeded Very Reverend Henry Carr, C.S.B., LL.D., as President.

The Mediaeval Academy of America was established in 1925 and elects to Corresponding Fellowship outstanding scholars in the field of mediaeval studies who are not citizens of the United States. Their number does not exceed fifty and Dr. Phelan is the first Canadian to receive this honour.

Silk Stockings, Broken Braces . . . Discards May be Valuable

A bundle of such potential tragedies as ragged silk stockings or broken braces is really a cause of rejoicing, for, donated to the Local Council of Women, it is a very tangible means of helping the Red Cross Society. The former organization is directing the collection of almost every imaginable kind of used or useless article (except tin cans), ranging from old note books and newspapers to baskets and bottle-tops.

The steady stream of discarded magazines, rags, tin foil, etc. that comes in is sorted and compacted at the headquarters of the Local Council of Women. Here it is bought up by the junk men who are apparently not out of work despite the change in the usual course of their articles of trade.

Fifty per cent of the money thus obtained by the organization from the sale of the articles is given to the Red Cross. The rest goes to various war

Glee Club Plans Benefit Concert

On Wednesday, February 19th, the Hart House Glee Club will render its services to the Canadian Red Cross Society in Hamilton. The club, conducted by Dr. Charles Peaker, Mus. Doc., F.R.O.C., and accompanied by Victoria's Howard F. Brown, will present the following program:

I Waltzing Matilda ..... arranged by Thomas Wood

The White Paternoster .....
Sir Walford Davies

My Bonnie Lass ..... Thomas Morley

II
Under this Stone (a round) .....
Henry Purcell

A Capital Ship ..... arranged by Dr. Charles Peaker

Steal Away ..... a Negro Spiritual

III
Pianoforte ..... Howard Brown

IV
Olaf Trygvesson ..... Edvard Grieg

Quem Pastores ..... an ancient Latin carol

Hey Robin, Jolly Robin .....
Geoffrey Shaw

V
Organ ..... Dr. Charles Peaker

VI
John Peel, arranged by Mark Andrews

Haulers on the Volga .....
Russian folk-song

The Swazi Warrior .....
arranged by Thomas Wood

About 75 members of the club will go to Hamilton in two Gray Coach busses, where they will present the musicale in the Scottish Rite Cathedral, a Shriners' Temple in that city.

The proceeds from this purely voluntary affair will go to the Red Cross, according to J. L. MacDowell, club secretary.

WIC HOLDS FORMAL ON CUPID'S NIGHT

Like other campus formal, the Vic At-Home will be held Friday night without benefit of corsages. The proceeds of the novelty war pins which will be sold at the door will be divided between the L.S.S. and the War Savings Committee, the latter benefiting from the purchase and subsequent destruction of War Savings Stamps. The Academic Court will echo to the music of the Commodores as Victorians assemble for their Valentine's Night celebration, and the Bob Quartet will return to warble some of their choicest lyrics.

emergency funds. The junk dealers in turn take the mass of valuable refuse to depots, one of which is at Old Knox College and another at the foot of Frederick Street, where they sell it to those who convert it into useful material.

A flourishing trade in white elephants and discarded but useful things that have not yet seen their last days of service is being built up by the Local Council of Women, who, before they get a store, give such articles as clothing and chinaware to the Junior League Opportunity Shop where they are sold. Indicating what an endless variety of objects that is received by the Local Council of Women, was a heap in the corner of their office. It was a pile of coats, lamp shades, jewellery and books, topped by a sad little teddy bear nestling between an elaborate ash tray and an earthenware cognac bottle.

SECOND LECTURE IN V.C.F. SERIES GIVEN BY ZWEMER

The Tremendous Importance of the Crucifixion was Stressed by the Lecturer Yesterday Afternoon

QUOTES ALI SHAH

"A colossal event with cosmic significance" Dr. Zwemer termed the crucifixion yesterday, in the second of a series of V.C.F. talks dealing with the general theme "Facing Jesus Christ Today." His topic was "The Shadow of His Cross."

"That scene interprets life for each one of us," declared Dr. Zwemer, adding that in a sense each of us is on a cross. The unrepentant thief on a cross showed only self-love, and died losing his life. The thief who confessed and sought mercy, died receiving life, Christ, who needed no potential tears because he knew no sin, died giving life. The first died in sin; the second became dead to sin; Christ the Redeemer was the death of sin.

The speaker closed with a quotation from the Afghan student Ikbal Ali Shah: "The Cross is the centre of all revelation. To reveal my sin merely would lead me with despair; to forgive my sin merely would make me afraid of tomorrow. I want my sin conquered. Education could not do it. Social reform cannot do it. Our beautiful essays (Continued on Page 4)

W.S.T.D. GIRLS DRILL WITH SPIRIT

Fellow students who passed by the U.T.S. gym last night between the hours of six and seven, and heard the terse commands and sound of tramping feet, would have known that the W.S.T.D. was being earnestly put through their paces.

Sr. Lieut. A. E. M. Parkes announced that under the able direction of Sergeant-Major Andrews of the C.O.T.C. the girls are showing great improvement. "They are mastering new formations and carrying out orders with a greater ease, and there has been a general smartening of the whole company," she continued. On the command "halt" every foot stops simultaneously, there is a general clicking of heels that lends a military and more dignified air to the platoons.

The Commanding Officer asked the girls to be more punctual and to wear their caps on the campus when in uniform. She also asked that socks of a conservative colour be worn rather than the various rainbow colours now in vogue on the campus.

She also announced that the A.R.P. examination would probably be given after another four lectures.

WYMLWOOD SERIES HOLOS SIROIS QUIZ

All women undergraduate students are urged to attend the third meeting of the Women's Noon-hour S.C.M. series to be held on Wednesday at 1.30 p.m. in the Sunroom at Wymilwood.

This week the topic for the noon-hour "quiz" is the question "What is in the Rowell-Sirois report?" Miss Mary Bruck, IV U.C., president of the W.U.A., will interview Professors G. Brown and Gerald Riddell of the History department. These professors are well-known for their participation in the recent radio series of Round Table discussions.

W.E.A. PROGRAM FEATURES LECTURES FILMS AND GRAPHS

Workers Are to be Instructed in Methods of Protecting Health and How to Conduct Meetings

D. WREN IS SECRETARY

"Our slogan is 'Intelligent and Effective Citizenship' and we are endeavouring to develop a racial consciousness among the working people," D. Wren, Secretary of the Workers' Education Association told The Varsity.

Mr. Wren explained that in the past the work of the W.E.A. consisted merely in conducting evening classes for the benefit of working people, but since the war, its work has been greatly extended. By means of films and bulletins showing graphs, charts, etc. the W.E.A. endeavours to convince the workers of the necessity for health protection and other subjects concerning them, and that their income is sufficient to pay for these things. The association also prepares films which are designed to inform the workers of the proper way in which to conduct meetings.

Mr. Wren hastened to deny that the evening courses are a continuation of formal education. He explained that to become a member of the classes the worker needs only a sound understanding of the English language. The courses are conducted on a university plane but in language which the people understand; they have to do with subjects affecting the workers. The aim of the W.E.A. is to promote the idea of the social education as opposed to the selfish education of the industrialist.

Possibly the most popular evening course offered by the W.E.A. is that given by Dr. Morgan, on "The Economic Function of the State".

'LOOK' CONTEST IS OPEN TO STUDENTS

Any duly registered student of a junior college, college or university in the United States and its possessions or in Canada is eligible to enter the 1000 dollar picture story contest sponsored by Look magazine.

The first prize in this contest is 500 dollars and a picture story told in ten photographs can win it.

Entrants may use all types of subject matter to make these picture stories. Sports or studies, research or recreation — all these topics have picture potentialities according to the magazine moguls.

Not less than 10 photographs should be submitted and not more than 50. These should be accompanied by an explanatory story 2000 words or less in length.

The contest closes April 15, 1941. Full details will be sent to anyone requesting them, and information comes from the College Picture Editor, Look Inc., 511 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

VARIOUS PHYSICS PAPERS TO BE GIVEN AT SEMINAR

Television, air raids and food storage will be among the subjects of papers to be given in a seminar conducted by the Department of Physics at the McClelland Laboratory tomorrow afternoon. "Large Screen Television Reception" is the title of a paper to be given by M. Rubinoff. Dr. R. Richmond will discuss "Physics of Air Raids," "Colour Blindness and Air Observations," and "Physics and Windows in Wartime." "Physics of Food Storage and Transport" will be discussed by Prof. John Satterly.

Politics as a Profession To be Discussed by Hoadley

HON. GEORGE HOADLEY

Former Acting Prime Minister of Alberta, who will address today's
S.C.M. noon-hour group at Hart House on "Politics as a Profession."

LATIN PROFESSOR GIVEN B.C. POST

Professor L. A. MacKay, Distinguished Graduate of the University of Toronto, Leaves for the West

L. A. MacKay, Assistant Professor in Latin in University College, has been appointed to a position in the Latin Department of the University of British Columbia, it was learned last night.

Professor MacKay graduated from University College in 1923. He had two years of post graduate work here and studied for three years in Oxford on a Rhodes Scholarship.

Before his appointment to the staff of the Latin Department of University College, Professor MacKay lectured in classics at Victoria for two years.

"All my work," Professor MacKay said, "has been in classics. It is only in the last couple of years I have been lecturing in Greek and Roman history."

UNDERPRIVILEGED CHILDREN WILL BENEFIT FROM SALE OF NOVELTIES AT FORMAL

Corsages have been definitely banned from the Annual Dental At-Home to be held this Friday at the Roof Gardens of the Royal York Hotel.

Roses tied with ribbons in the Dental colours, garnet and blue, will be sold at the dance. The Committee has decided that proceeds from the sale of these novelties will go to the Dental Nurses' Alumnae fund for Underprivileged Children.

Music will be provided by Frank Bogart and his orchestra. A buffet lunch will be served during intermission. Tickets are now on sale and can be obtained from the class presidents.

City Blackout Put Off a Week; Varsity Party Japes Forestalled

An abrupt end came yesterday to the hopes of The Varsity staff that the date of the first Toronto blackout would coincide with the night of the second Varsity party when officials at the City Hall announced that the proposed blackout for tonight had been postponed.

The prospect of filling Thursday's issue with the exciting escapades of the Boys in the Back Room in the blackout area on the way to the party was thus ruined and The Varsity staff will try to hide its disappointment at the gay evening ahead of them at the Old Mill tonight.

Former Acting Premier and Cabinet Minister in Alberta will Address Hart House
Noon-Hour Audience Today

R. B. BENNETT'S FRIEND

Hon. George Hoadley, former acting premier of Alberta, for 14 years a cabinet minister in that province, and a friend of the Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, is well qualified to discuss the subject "Politics as a Profession" in today's S.C.M. noon hour talk at 1.30 in the music room at Hart House.

Mr. Hoadley and Mr. Bennett were launched on their legislative careers simultaneously when, in 1909, they were elected the two sole Conservatives in the Alberta House. From that time till 1935 the speaker retained his seat—a period covering 26 sessions.

Mr. Hoadley's executive experience began when he became the Minister of Agriculture and Health in the United Farmers' government of 1921.

During his last two years as a cabinet minister he held in turn the portfolio of Railways, Telephones, and Water Power, and the portfolio of Trade and Industry. In the absence of the provincial premier from time to time Mr. Hoadley took his place so that he was acting premier for a period all told of three and a half years.

According to the U.F.A. newspaper the reform measures of Mr. Hoadley's public health administration are not exceeded in Canada, and one of the enactments is in advance of anything in the British Empire.

Since 1937 the speaker has been en-

U.C. Lit Holds Nominations

The annual Nomination Meeting of the University College Literary and Athletic Society will be held Wednesday, February 19, in the U.C. Junior Common Room, C. L. Dubin, Literary Director of the Lit. told The Varsity yesterday.

"Nominations will be made for all offices on next year's Executive," he said, "and in view of the crucial times through which we are passing, next year may well be a critical one in the Lit's history. Therefore it is essential that the best possible men be named for the offices."

Elections to the Executive will be held February 28.

At the Nomination Meeting, the final debate in the Robinette Trophy contest will be held. Also there will be the election for the winner of the Maurice Cody Award, granted each year to the graduating member of the Lit. judged to have furthered public speaking the most during his years at U.C.

There will also be entertainment and refreshments. The meeting will start at 8 o'clock.

It is expected that this blackout will take place a week from tonight on Feb. 19. The experiment will take place in four areas of the city. The trials are to show the people what an actual blackout would be like and to aid in making future ones more efficient and safer.

The reason given for the several postponements of the dates was the complaints received by the various citizens that the blackout areas would be subject to robberies and accidents. In order to have the necessary precautions against these, considerable preparation has been required and this has caused the delay.

Sacrifice and Hypocrisy

The Stampometer, indicative of the numbers in the university who have pledged to buy War Savings stamps regularly, is rising but the rate is disappointingly slow. It is difficult to believe that out of a population of well over seven thousand, not even one hundred students have troubled themselves to pledge to buy stamps regularly through their own elected Students' Council.

In penning this criticism, we are aware that many students have been buying stamps and even certificates regularly from various sources. Nevertheless, we are certain that large numbers on the campus have never given the idea of buying War Savings stamps a second thought—and in many cases not even a first thought. Or perhaps the thought was there but the necessary effort to walk into the Council office was not forthcoming.

It is an insignificant sacrifice to make, but it is the aggregate of millions of seemingly insignificant sacrifices which is going to win this war. It is not going to be won by relying on Britain, or waiting hopefully for American aid. The psychology of hiding behind the prospect of greater American aid is a dangerous one; may it never become prevalent.

Actually there has been a good deal of hypocrisy concerning the amount of financial sacrifice students are making. They are devoting time, true enough, but they are still spending fairly profusely on social affairs. Financial sacrifice must be made, even if it is only a quarter a week devoted to purchase of stamps, which in itself is not a sacrifice but an investment. The student effort, confused and chaotic at present, must be co-ordinated and directed if possible into one constructive channel. Plans for such co-ordination are under way for next year, but the present is vitally important. The instrument is at hand in the Stampometer Pledge. The aim should and can be one hundred percent of the student body buying War Savings stamps every week through the Students' Council. It can be done and it must be done, or we through our apathy will be contributing to our own destruction.

"By the People . . ."

"That this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth."

Those simple yet meaningful words have rung down the years of history, symbolizing the essence of democracy. They welled up from the very heart of their author, Abraham Lincoln, whose birthday America celebrates today, and the sentiment expressed bears as much if not more significance in the world today than it did when the Great Emancipator uttered those lines at Gettysburg almost eighty years ago. For today Americans are striving to reach the great decision as to what role they will play in the fight "that this world, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth."

The crisis which faced Abraham Lincoln was the first of the three really grave crises which have faced American presidents. There had been serious situations before the Civil War, but nothing of such major consequence. Then fifty years later the first World War brought America and Woodrow Wilson face to face with a crisis of a different nature—an external war which nevertheless involved the United States' interests and dragged her into conflict. A quarter of a century later, in our own moment of time's flight, as it were, that same crisis has repeated itself.

The crisis which faced Lincoln was of a nature which has only occurred once in American history. The prospect of a mighty nation torn in twain, brother spilling the blood of brother, was something new and terrifying. The issue was more than slavery. It was a giant struggle between vast economic sections and well-established economic systems, systems which could not continue side by side in the same national economy. The outcroppings of the conflict could be seen, apart from the slavery issue, in the violent disputes over tariffs, territorial expansion, and land settlement systems which preceded the Civil War. The south, built upon an economic system of large land tracts and slave labour and requiring constant territorial expansion to replace exhausted areas, had lost most of its political power by the end of the 1850's. The only way to protect its economic system was to secede and set up a separate political system.

Faced with a split nation, Lincoln took a firm stand even though he realized the consequences in lost blood. To him the nation must be preserved. Four years of war brought victory to the north and the restoration of the federal union. And it brought death to the great defender of democracy from the bullet of a half-crazed actor.

Many of his speeches have gone down in the literary annals of the world, and one of the best-known contains the following excerpt:

"With malice toward none; with charity for all; with firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work we are in; to bind up the nation's wounds, to care for him who shall have borne the battle, and for his widow and orphan—to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace among ourselves and with all nations."

Confidence and Warning

Prime Minister Churchill was able, last Sunday, to bring to the peoples of the British Empire a speech which was far different from any other of the magnificent messages he has broadcast since he became leader of the nation. He was able to deliver a speech brimming with confidence, vitality and reports of victories.

Three great triumphs, apart from the many minor ones, Churchill recounted to his people. Firstly, Hitler had been unable to attempt any invasion of the mother island, an invasion which has been expected at almost any moment during the past seven months. Secondly, the people of England have stood up bravely against continued night and daylight raids, and through the heroic work of the R.A.F., those raids have been cut down greatly. Finally, he could report the smashing victory drive against the Italians in north Africa and the bombardment of Italian ports by navy and airforce.

Yet even in the midst of confidence and victory, Churchill warned the nation that graver and more terrible days were yet to come. There must be no overconfidence which "leading to neglect or slothfulness is the worst of martial crimes" next to cowardice and treachery. The people must remain ready but he had confidence in them. "I put my faith in the simple, unaffected resolve to conquer or die which animates nearly four million Britons with serviceable weapons in their hands."

He closed with an appeal and a pledge to the United States—an appeal for aid, an assurance that men were not wanted, and a pledge to stand ever firm. "Put your confidence in us. Give us your faith and your blessing, and under Providence all will be well. We shall not fail or falter; we shall not weaken or tire. Neither the sudden shock of battle nor the long-drawn trials of vigilance and exertion will wear us down. Give us the tools and we will finish the job."

ART MUSIC Drama

Saving the Best Till the Last
Hart House String Quartet

The Hart House String Quartet wound up its official season (I hope there will be another Beethoven Festival) with what certainly seemed at the time to be the finest effort they have put forth this year. It is dangerous, when the concerts are as far apart as they have been this year, for me to be dogmatic, but both in subject matter and execution last night was perfect.

Cesar Franck's sole quartet (about the longest piece of sustained emotion in chamber music literature) started off the program. This music is so intense that it is very trying to listen to it closely, (Continued on Page 4)

Marlborough Beach Goes East

(Of course you have been breathless with excitement all these weeks, waiting to hear more of the adventures of our daintiest globe-trotters, Fotheringham and Marlborough-Beach, while they are trapped in a stately Chinese garden, as a fiendish band of sinister Orientals pepper them with Tommy-guns and murderous glances.)

"Good Gad!" said Marlborough-Beach glumly. "The cads don't even take time off for the tea interval."

Just then the leader of the fiendish band, followed by his satellites and stalagmites, led a rush upon us.

"Mr. Wong, I presume," I said, facing him coldly.

"Yes, thank you, please," he replied urbanely, in faultless English.

"You wantum guide for Hong Kong shopping district?" he lisped. "My boys catchum best bargains for tourists."

"Good Gad!" we gasped. "We thought for a moment that you were the Customs."

Smiling, he led the way into the business district of the Chinese city. On our way down Wun Way Street, we were suddenly accosted by a Western Union messenger boy who handed Marlborough-Beach a folded chit of rice-paper. Peeling it open, Marlborough-Beach read it laboriously, and then handed it to me with a low whistle.

"Good Gad!" he gasped. "Read this."

I did so. It was a wireless message from the President of a Great Canadian University. "Come home at once," it read. "You have been appointed to the Chair of Chinese. The choice has been made because of your wide experience in the Far East and your extensive knowledge of the Mandalay Dialect."

"We must return at once," I said. Pausing only to refresh ourselves with a quick Chungking Cherry Whiz, we made our way to the steamship booking office and purchased passage home. As we took leave of ancient old China, we were loath to leave the land that had provided material for three Champuses Cads.

"Good Gad, it was fun," sighed Marlborough-Beach, "and the Mellow Mandalay Malteds were loaded so beautifully."

Correspondence

The Editor, The Varsity.
Dear Sir:

An article in The Varsity dated Dec. 5 refers to an effort to reduce butter consumption in the university dining halls. A few pertinent facts should be drawn to the attention of all who are tempted to spread their butter a little thinner, and thus participate in a discrimination against Canadian agriculture.

A survey of nine of the larger Canadian cities shows that the butter consumption for Jan. 1941 was 25 per cent less than for the same period one year ago. On Jan. 1st 1940 the total creamery butter in Canada was 41,631,024 lbs. On Jan. 1st 1941 the total was 33,394,182 lbs. This is a decrease of only about 20 per cent.

There have been some complaints about the price of butter. Butterfat prices are really not high in comparison with the increased purchasing power of the consumer and the generally improved business conditions. Labour prices have been pegged at the levels prevailing from 1926 to 1929 or the wages prevailing at the time they were pegged, whichever happened to be higher. The average wholesale price for creamery prints in Toronto from 1926 to 1929 ranged from 41½-43½ cents per lb. These figures are yearly averages and the winter price would be considerably higher. The wholesale price of butter solids in Toronto has been pegged at 34½ cents per lb. The corresponding price of butter prints would be about 35½ cents per lb. This pegged price is not only lower than the 1926- (Continued on Page 4)

Speaking OF SPORT

By Bill Quigley

It was the wintry night of February 3, 1940 when the Tricolour of Queen's stormed into Varsity Arena determined to put an end to the Big Blue's undebated record and at the same time avenge the humiliating trouncing they had suffered the previous week at Kingston. The game was a crucial one for Bailey's Bombers. A victory meant a chance to haul haughty McGill down from their seven years' stay atop the intercollegiate hockey ladder. A defeat would pull Varsity into a first place tie with our globe-trotters.

Varsity hit the rigging twice in the initial period and then decided to coast home. This bit of stagnant strategy surprisingly back-fired as Williamson & Co. took complete command of proceedings to produce a couple of counters. With from Donnie Dunbar to dunk the dark doughnut behind bewildered Mr. Burrows.

As we trudged triumphantly homeward, extremely self-satisfied with vivid visions of the gruesome fate that awaited McGill's Redmen, we noticed that "The Kid" was strangely silent. (He rarely is except when he's putting in his daily forty-thousand winks.) An explanation was in order.

"With all due credit to 'Ace' and the rest of us, did you stop to realize who really won that battle? I would never have had the opportunity to score that goal if it weren't for Joe Carruthers. In fact, two or three fellows would never have pulled on the blades for the tussle if there were no Joe."

It seems that "The Kid" had attempted to cart away one of the goal posts with his right thigh a few days before the pending struggle. Perennially a sucker for that lurking personality, Mr. Charley Horse, he hobbled into Joe's surgery morbidly muttering that he was through for the year. He knew that it was the worst of the many generous gifts Mr. Horse had presented to him. But cheerful Joe performed the magic he had shown so often before. Thus it was Mr. Carruthers who had enabled "The Kid" to experience one of the greatest thrills of his young athletic career.

How many victories jovial Joe has been indirectly responsible for in his twenty-one years at Varsity is difficult to surmise. But they must be numerous. Every athlete who ever came under Joe's astute authority could tell a tale similar to "The Kid's."

Joe, a master when it comes to treating bruises, cuts and sprains, could show many a M.D. a new twist or two concerning the art of Hippocrates. But his capabilities went beyond this field of mere "patchwork."

To Joe and the gang he was The Champ; to the sporting fraternity just plain "Mucky". A big fellow—he carried 190 lbs. around—The Champ was blessed with more than his rightful share of hockey ability. His back-hand had never been equalled in Varsity puck circles. Rarely a game went by that The Champ didn't lean against some unsuspecting defenceman and let fly with that invisible drive. But "Mucky" was as temperamental as a thoroughbred. If it suited his inclinations he would travel, if not, well, there wasn't very much anyone could do about it. With the possible exception of our friend Jo-Jo.

One night down at Brooklyn, the Blue and White had what they considered a set-up against St. Nick's Hockey Club. The Champ came into the dressing-room with a distressed look upon his good-natured countenance. He collapsed in a corner and emitted a few terrifying groans to attract Joe's attention.

"Boy, am I sick—I just wanna die," he moaned. "It's a cinch for us Joe, so tell 'Ace' I'm deathly sick. I just wanna die . . ." But Joe, with a twinkle in his eye, made the big boy dress.

Early in the game, Joe noticed a pretty young thing in the second row frantically trying to attract The Champ's attention. Carruthers immediately informed his protégé that Bailey would gladly dismiss him if he went out and gave Varsity a lead. The rest is obvious. He counted three times before you could say Lloyd McIlquhan and returned jubilantly to the bench.

"See you later Ace," as he winked at the blond. But Joe laughed last—The Champ stayed to the bitter end. And the blond hated hockey.

Joe knows Varsity athletes. He knows their likes and dislikes, their whims and temperaments, but what is more important he knows how to employ them to best advantage—when to humour, flatter, encourage or deride. So when any of you interfaculty hockey heroes are wheeled into Joe's little white emergency chamber on Bloor St. realize that the unassuming, sympathizer treating your wounds is taking a personal interest in your welfare and that he would sooner have you come to chat with him minus those disfigurements and dislocations.

DID YOU KNOW . . .

"Strongman" Southee's first name is not Joseph. Now and ever after it is George S. Southee . . . that diminutive St. Mike's basketball fiend became so enthusiastic yesterday afternoon that he vainly attempted to present Aer. Navigation B with two points. Undaunted by his first failure he again tried to scuttle his ship but shot wide of the basket, much to the relief of his Double Blue pals . . . that this coming Athletic Nite will be staged by School and not St. Mike's as previously reported. So who knows what is in store for the unsuspecting . . . that Donnie Dunbar of Toronto's senior Marlboros is now showing the outstanding form he displayed with Varsity last year. Watch his work in the coming O.H.A. playoffs. He's a great guy in the pines.

MEDS DOWN SCHOOL IN BASEBALL TILT

Sr. Meds, by virtue of a thirteen-run uprising in the first inning, extended their unbeaten string to four straight by trouncing Sr. School 13-3 yesterday afternoon.

After the initial onslaught instigated by the Doctors, School never threatened, a great display of fielding and hurling keeping the Engineers at bay.

The win solidified the Medical men's position atop Group I and establishes them among the favourites to cop the interfaculty baseball crown.

U.C. GROUP LEADERS AFTER WIN OVER VIC

Jr. U.C. trimmed Jr. Vic 6-1 in one of yesterday afternoon's two baseball encounters in the big gym.

It was the Red and White's fourth straight victory, thus firmly entrenching them as leaders in Group II.

Saul Fox's steady hurling kept the Victorians in check throughout the battle. He allowed but five hits and stemmed any Scarlet and Gold threats by whiffing nine would-be sluggers.

Jr. Vic: Hardy, Taylor, McDonald, Carson, Johnston, Fenton, MacKenzie, Zerbug, Sedgewick.

Jr. U.C.: Ballagh, Faber, Grant, Rotenberg, Beatty, Fox, McKinley, and Nichol.

A holiday's a good thing for the system so we took one. But everyone else didn't so we have quite a lot to catch up on.

In hockey, St. Hilda's are sitting at the top of the league by virtue of a single point, with O.T. & P. Vic I and U.C. still very much in the running. Actually the Saints have lost but one point, dropped when they tied U.C. last week. We must observe that Joan Griffith was missing from the Saints' line-up during that game, which would definitely make a difference, but things may happen yet, if the ice decides to stay with us. Hope-a-hope.

Tonight we find St. Hilda's meeting St. Mike's at 5 o'clock on the Trinity Athletic Field, and Vic I facing Meds at 6 at the Little Vic Rink. We guarantee plenty thrills and spills tonight.

College swim meets are coming up during this next week or two in preparation for the Interfaculty and Telegraphic Intercollegiate events which take place Feb. 24th and 26th. St. Hilda's had theirs on Jan. 29th, and have already chosen their team. Vic holds its meet on Feb. 18th and U.C. on Feb. 19th. O.T. & P. are entering a team in the interfaculty test, and we hope St. Mike's will be able to produce one this year. So all ye mermals, let's hear you splash it out for the honour of the old college, and the lucky ones honour of U. of T.

Airmen, Junior U.C. Triumph in Basketball

Aerial Navigation Spurred Ahead After Slow Start and Emerge Winners Over St. Mike's by 30-17 Score

RONAYNE STAR

Aerial Navigation B team snowed under St. Mike's E 30-17 in an interfaculty basketball encounter.

Up till half time, the game was close but the Flyers spurred ahead near the time score was 12-9 for the Flyers.

Jack Ronayne of St. Mike's was the best man on the floor and sunk 9 of his team's points. Harold Rosenberg and Frank Sheffield with 8 and 7 respectively were best for the Navigators.

Aerial Navigation: Rosenberg 8, Wismer, Sheffield 7, Reilly 6, McLaurin, Hall 3, Schofield 4, Constant 2.

St. Mike's E: Ronayne 9, Bucner 2, Sobolewski, Natoli 2, O'Reilly, Barry, Woods, Higgins 2, Funk 2.

Bob Miller, Dick Sully, Wally Brown, Win Out in Close Struggles in Interfaculty Indoor Meet

BROWN OUTSTANDING

Hee Phillips' charges didn't break any records in the three events run off in the Interfaculty Indoor Meet yesterday afternoon, but they provided the spectators with a couple of close finishes. Bob Miller of Vic edged out O.C.E.'s Wally Brown in the 50 yd. low hurdles by covering the distance in 6.9 secs. Brown's time was 6.93 secs. Cass and Fairchney tied for the third spot with times of 7 secs. flat.

Vic colours were again carried to victory when Dick Sully sped over the 440 yd. distance in 57.6 secs. to lead Lloyd Delaney of Trinity to the tape. Wally Brown turned to field work to leave the 12 lb. shot nearly two feet further than his closest rival, Tuckah of Aer. Navigation. Brown's mighty hoist hit the mat 45 3/4" from the white circle.

Results—
50 yd. low hurdles: 1. Bob Miller, Vic (6.9 secs.); 2. Wally Brown, O.C.E. (6.93 secs.); 3. Ron Cass, Vic (7.0 secs.); Fairchney, Vic (7.0 secs.).
440 yd. sprint: 1. Dick Sully, Vic (57.6 secs.); 2. Lloyd Delaney, Trin. (57.8 secs.); 3. Gerry Proderick, Vic (58.3 secs.); 4. Ged Clawson, U.C. (58.5 secs.).

12 lb. shot put: 1. Wally Brown, O.C.E. (45' 3/4"); 2. Tuckah, Aer. Nav. (45' 8 3/4"); 3. Harold Brown, O.C.E. (45' 35"); 4. Harold Bailey, Vic (43' 7/2").

OWEAR SPARK FOR U.C.

U.C. Jrs. came from behind in the last half and scored a 53-36 victory over Jr. Meds in the upper gym yesterday afternoon.

Meds led at half time by 23-20 but nice team work in the last half resulted in U.C. surging ahead. Butch Clayton was responsible for most of the second half U.C. points as he repeatedly broke away and tipped the ball into the hoop.

Bill Dewar for U.C. sunk 21 points as he capitalized on rebounds. Butch Clayton notched 16 points for the Royal Collegians. Star for Meds was Eddie Weinbaum who amassed a total of 17 points, mostly on long shots.

Jr. U.C.: McKinley 1, Beatty 7, Dewar 21, Clayton 16, Ballagh 6, Nicol, Zierler 2.

Jr. Meds: Kucherepa 5, Kyle 2, Weinbaum 17, Bryans 3, Davies 7, Rosenberg 2.

and I shall have to hear it a great many more times than I have before I begin to understand what it is all about. I would not be surprised to find that it will eventually be considered his most important work. The four players, by the way, did their respective parts obviously motivated by one ideal and succeeded completely in putting forth what Franck meant (in the intervals when I was lucid enough to remember that I was supposed to be a critic). If the audience did not always succeed in discovering the composer's ideas, it was because it had not studied the music in the same way as had the quartet.

The post-intermission Pity-Ring by Waldo Warner was more than somewhat of a relief and suffered thereby. Its airy evanescence needed something more than an interval to show up properly after the highly emotional Franck. It is all the most delicate fantasy, with "midnight chimes" and peals of bells floating over a soft background of ethereal imagery. The quartet played the whole with a delicacy of which four instruments should not normally be capable. The pizzicato "chimes" in the third movement were startlingly realistic and the unorthodox tone colours achieved by four similar instruments even more so. The music was completely summed up in the subtitle A Fairy Miniature Suite.

The Mozart Quartet in D Minor which closed the evening was the usual formalized classic, but it was played with understanding and a realization that Mozart was putting emotion into it, even in this mould. The chromatic minut and strange set of variations which forms the last movement were especially interesting. How the Quartet managed to change its style so often and so completely is somewhat of a mystery. It was almost difficult to follow.

The next thing to do is to keep our fingers crossed for the Beethoven Festival.

Nickel Transit

NEW YORK: After all, what is a subway but a hole in the ground? But there are almost two hundred miles of holes-in-the-ground and it's devil take the hindmost on those long trains that make a noise like the whine of a dive bomber with a boiler factory thrown in to simulate clatter. That is, not devil take the hindmost, but those doors are very likely to slam and catch you with your head inside the train, the rest of you on the platform, and the intervening neck tightly locked between the door and the jamb—or, in the case of some trains, between the two doors. This becomes increasingly awkward as the train starts to move.

The first thing the visitor is told by the sophisticated I-was-here-last-years is that you can get on a subway for five cents and ride back and forth, all day and all night, anywhere to anywhere and back, so long as you do not leave the station. You could spend days, and weeks and even months on the subway, all for the same nickel. But who wants to?

As a matter of fact there are some people who want to: if you have nowhere else to go, if you are homeless and destitute, you may ride back and forth on the subway. A poor man's Hunt Club, as it were. But then they passed a law saying that the homeless and destitute may go to homes for the homeless and institutes for the destitute, but they are forbidden from riding back and forth on the subway. At the end of the line, the guard clears all the passengers out, and wakes the sleeping, be they h. & d. or gays.

Sometimes the guards are quite rough about this matter. On the Hudson and Manhattan tubes, which run under the Hudson over to Jersey City, Newark, Hackensack, and other vital centres, a guard found a shabbily-dressed man sleeping at the end of the line. Calling upon his Gaelic ancestors, who also brooked little from the lowly and were never known for their patience, the guard threw the sleeper on the floor, pummeled him several times with his fists, kicked him till his teeth ran, and finished the job with a neat little black-jack. Neat and quite bloody, and if you don't believe me you can consult the court records.

For it seems the shabby man was neither homeless nor destitute, but just a commuter to Jolsey. He was sleeping, true enough, but that violates no ordinance, and the guard was rude about his manner of waking him. Our friend would rather be aroused by the sound of scraping toast any day, but then nobody asked him.

Feeling that he should have been asked, he marched into court and said, "Looksee here. I like to be awakened by the sound of toast scraping, and it was not none of us. I demand damages because of the rude awakening, and costs for the teeth."

Well, the case dragged for awhile but finally the Hudson and Manhattan tube outfit had to shell out eighteen thousand dollars and change. New Yorkers were jubilant—that's the way to show those big fellows. (The thing a New Yorker likes best is to get the other fellow to pay; next best, see somebody get the other fellow to pay.)

If you are of a romantic nature, you will fall in with the remark, "I like to ride on subways: watching all the faces, each one different, each with his own story to tell..." Personally, I find them all stupid and minor differences don't matter, and as for the stories those faces tell, there's too darned much noise.

But you do see certain things. You noble restaurant reads a paper written in Hellenic characters, and is now engrossed in four pictures with captions, all entitled "Ho Tarzan kai he kope test lochmes" which should prove amusing to all those who knew the glory that was Greece without benefit of Chapman. And as you pull out of a station, a sad old drunk and a merry young one are singing Down by the Old Mill Stream with harmony. (It's not the company I keep. Wherever you go in New York there's a drunk, and no one could write a comprehensive column without letting one or two stagger in. Some people can celebrate New Year's Eve on the Fourth of July: just give them a bottle.)

Early in the fall I was taking the Broadway Express home very, very late one night. The car was crowded despite the hour. There was a bit of a commotion down at the other end of the car, loud enough to be heard above the roaring wheels. A woman was shouting and stamping her heels against the floor and twisting her neck out as if she were getting set for a nice juicy hunk of epilepsy. (See? More drunks. There'll be another couple before we're through.)

And she was shouting: "I'm an American. Down with everybody who isn't an American. We don't need no Communism. We don't need no Fascism (pronounced fassism). We don't need no Nazism (pronounced as spelled). Hurray for America..." and so on and so forth and even et cetera.

Along came a dapper young man with a Willkie button and said to her: "Shut up."

"She looked at him once or twice and said, 'You are a dirty stinking Communist.'"

He said, "I am a member of the Republican Party," and swayed slightly. She said, "You are a filthy, lousy Red," and she kicked him.

He said, "Shut up. I am a member of the Sons of the Revolution, and my grandfather was killed in the Civil War," and he kicked her.

So she kicked him. So he kicked her.

Well, I'll tell you, the rest of us. What's that? Oh, the rest of us. Well, I'll tell you, the rest of us. What's that? Oh, the rest of us. Well, I'll tell you, the rest of us. What's that? Oh, the rest of us.

What's that? Oh, the rest of us. Well, I'll tell you, the rest of us. What's that? Oh, the rest of us. Well, I'll tell you, the rest of us. What's that? Oh, the rest of us. Well, I'll tell you, the rest of us. What's that? Oh, the rest of us.

As the train pulled away, we saw that the woman was making faces and the young man was kicking her again.

I put it to you fairly and squarely: What more could you expect for the same nickel?

1929 average but also below the present cost of production. A survey was conducted by the dairy farmers—Ontario through the Economics Branches of the Provincial and Dominion Departments of Agriculture for the years 1936 to 1939 inclusive. The cost of production of 100 lbs. of milk to be used for butter was found to be $1.40. The corresponding price of butter would be about 40 cents per lb. (This is the average throughout the year. (It is higher in winter than in summer.) Labour was calculated at 17½ cents per hour. The present cost of production has increased considerably. During the summer of 1940 feed prices had increased 12-14 per cent over those of the summer of 1939.

Farmers are thus required to produce butter at a considerable loss. Furthermore any decrease in consumption means decreased demand and still lower price next spring when production increases. The export of butter is very small and most of what is produced is for domestic consumption. No minimum price has been set. Unfortunately the farmer cannot just lock up his cattle and cease production entirely until the market price becomes high enough to meet production costs.

Dewan, speaking to the Canadian Federation of Agriculture on Jan. 22 1940 said "there would be no need to ask people to cut down on their butter consumption if prices were high enough to make it worth while for the farmer to produce."

To be fair to the Canadian farmer, what is needed is an increase in the price of butter and not decreased consumption.

S.C.M. Topic Is Christianity In Politics

Hon. George Hoadley, Former Acting Premier of Alberta, Points Out Difficulties Facing Member of Parliament

IN HART HOUSE

Hon. George Hoadley of Alberta reminded students that it is the duty of conscientious citizens to see that an intelligent Christian man is nominated as their representative in government, in his address in the S.C.M. noon-hour talk yesterday. "A deserving representative may be defeated because the voter blindly supports the party to which his family adhered, or through the influence of a manufacturer over his many employees," he said.

Mr. Hoadley pointed out the many difficulties which face a member of

Women Quiz Prof. Riddell

"The present economic maladjustment which resulted in the Rowell-Sirois Commission's investigation and report resulted from the fact that the functions of government were less extensive in the Dominion at the time of the passing of the B.N.A. Act in 1867 than at the present time," said Professor Gerald Riddell at the Women's Noon-hour S.C.M. quiz at Wymillwood yesterday.

Professor Riddell and Professor G. Brown of the History department were interviewed by Miss Mary Bruck, IV U.C. on the topic "What is in the ### Campus Probe Reveals Temporal Inconsistency

Hickory, dickory dock. . . Yesterday your favourite newspaper in the interests of science conducted a galling (you try to cover the campus in forty minutes!) poll of Varsity's timepieces. Among other things we are pleased to be able to corroborate those famous last words: "Anytime is tea-time."

At exactly four yesterday the clock in Falconer House showed two minutes and thirty-one seconds to four, the Hart House Pool Room clock had just ticked over to four minutes after the U.C. library one to five seconds slow, and the men's reading room of the University Library was a whole minute and eight seconds behind.

These figures are most significant. For one thing you need never be early when you call for a date at Falconer House. (But beware of Mulock and Cody cads: they will only be one and one and a half minutes late respectively.) For another thing the boys in the back room can always continue their snooker for three minutes and 57 seconds after the hour without fear of being late for those lectures that they are not going to anyway.

But we shudder to think of a maiden's icy fury when her beloved sticks to his books in the reading room for a full minute after she has so unwillingly closed hers so as to meet him in the no man's land between.

The biggest injustice of all is the 27 second difference between the locker-room clock and that in the big gym in Hart House. That means that you could be perfectly innocent in the locker-room and still arrive half a minute late for P.T.

The V.C. clock is 48 seconds slow and the U.C. rounds one only 25 seconds, which proves beyond a shadow of doubt

Students' Council Sells War Savings Stamps To Value of $300.00

University Stampometer

MAKE YOUR PLEDGE TODAY and HELP IT RISE!

Fraternity is Chief Purchaser of Stamps which will be Used for Resale at Subscription Dance

STAMPOMETER SOARS

War Savings Stamps to the value of $300.00 were sold by the Students' Administrative Council yesterday, it was announced last night. Chief purchaser of the stamps was a fraternity which bought them for resale at their scrip dance.

Meanwhile the University Stampometer, recording pledges of students who intend to buy a stamp a week, soared to new heights, breaking 50 during the day.

Students wishing to buy stamps or make pledges may do so at the S.A.C. offices in Hart House and Room 82, U.C.

Vic to Hold Valentine Dance

The spirit of old St. Valentine seems to be infusing Victoria College, judging by the number of couples who are planning to attend the annual Vic At-Home tomorrow evening—otherwise known as Cupid's Night. By last night four hundred tickets had been sold, and prospects were favourable for an increased sale today.

Music for dancing in Simpson's Arcadian Court will be provided by The Commodores, well-known local dance aggregation. A feature of the evening will be the playing of an original popular song written by Ted Gray. The song has been orchestrated by Percy Faith, internationally famed for his styled radio music.

In line with other formal dances held on the campus this year, the At-Home will dispense with corsages, but specially-designed crest pins will be sold at the door in aid of the At-Home War Fund. Proceeds will be divided between the I.S.S. and the purchase of War Savings stamps to be destroyed at a later date. The pins are sold singly, but a bargain price has been offered if they are bought in pairs, and the committee is hoping that each couple will buy two pins.

REGISTRAR'S NOTICE

Certificates of attendance in connection with the payment of the second instalment of University of Toronto Scholarships (not including College Scholarships) may be obtained at the Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall.

that U.C. is much faster than Vic. But Trinity is slower still.

Down on the south side of the campus there seems to be a little more efficiency. Simcoe Hall is only 9 seconds slow, the little red schoolhouse 21 seconds, and the Anatomy building 12 seconds fast. All this is not much use since the students down there never leave their own buildings anyway, and certainly no one ever has to pick up a date there.

The biggest and most deceptive shame in the whole university is the antique affair in the U.C. Junior Common Room. It is behind by three whole minutes and forty whole seconds, and when one has to get from there to the Economics Building where the only visible clocks are the professors' watches, all different ones, punctuality at lectures becomes somewhat difficult.

Hart House is inconsistent to say the least. The clock outside the library there was right on the dot, the pool room and the athletic wing have already been discussed. The clock inside the library is a minute slow, which matters; the clocks of the Graduate Dining Room and the Tuck Shop are both a minute fast, which doesn't matter. The orderly room is five seconds slow, but the people there don't tell the time the same way as ordinary people do so that's not important either.

Zwemer Talks To V.C.F. On "Fear"

"One of the Ruling Motives in Our Lives" Says Lecturer; Stresses Necessity of Prayer for Salvation

"ASCETICISM NO SOLUTION"

"Fear is one of the ruling motives in our lives," stated Dr. Samuel M. Zwemer yesterday in the third of a series of V.C.F. talks. Speaking on the subject "The Conquest of Fear," Dr. Zwemer added that we fear ourselves, each other, society, the future, and death.

"We all fear the dark," the speaker continued. "The Christian way out is a closer walk with God. With Christ as Guide we are freed from discouragement, loneliness, disillusionment and despair."

"Asceticism is no solution to the moral leprosy around us and within us. To be freed from fear of temptation we must come to God in prayer. Also, we need to fear the arch-enemy, Pride, which comes at the high-noon of success. God deals with this at the Cross, where we pour contempt on all our pride. In the light of His death for us, the only appropriate gesture is to serve humanity," he declared.

"If we live lives close to Christ, all our problems and fears disappear. A man is a coward until he knows Christ, and then he fears nothing; for Christ tells him to fear not," he concluded.

Newman Club Welcomes Leven

The Oak Room at Newman Club was crowded for the welcome last night to Rev. Dr. Stephen Leven of Oklahoma City.

A former National Director of the Confederation of Christian Doctrine and Vice-Rector of the American College at Louvain, Father Leven took from his wide experiences anecdotes that rocked the gathering with laughter and drove his serious message home in a pleasant way.

The call for Catholic students to rise to their opportunities and responsibilities in dispelling misinformation and putting in positive spiritual instruction was the keynote as the speaker detailed the working of the Confederation in a specific area such as his own parish of 2500 squares miles with fewer than

King Arthur Story Just Fiction Claims Professor at Vic Lecture

"The story of the romantic King Arthur is for the most part purely fictitious and without historical evidence," said Prof. W. H. Trethewey, in an address entitled "The Legend of King Arthur." This was the second in the current series of Wednesday lectures held at Victoria College.

Prof. Trethewey pointed out that the first account referring to Arthur dates to the ninth century. Up until the twelfth century, he was thought of as a Celtic warrior chieftain leading his troops victoriously in war. Geoffrey of Monmouth, a prelate possessing a vivid imagination and a contemporary of Henry I, was responsible for transforming him into the gallant personage whom we associate with the legend, the speaker continued.

Prof. Trethewey explained that at this time, the English kings were desirous of possessing a tradition comparable to that of the Capetian kings of France. Geoffrey set to work and elaborated a rounded-out account of the history of England, in which Arthur is depicted as the head of a sumptuous court, surrounded by chivalrous knights and beautiful ladies. The court he was describing is obviously that of King Henry, himself, but it sufficed to provide England with an ethic past and a traditional origin almost surpassing that of France, the speaker added.

It was a common belief at the time that King Arthur would return to be the political saviour of his country, the speaker continued. He explained that the great Arthur didn't return in person but that he restored a position of literary and cultural eminence to England. The professor said that many other stories now attached themselves to that of Arthur, such as that of "Lancelot" and the "Holy Grail."

In conclusion, Prof. Trethewey stated that following the present conflict there will emerge a new era in which we must forge ahead with a new ideal, a twentieth century ideal, inspiring us to be at least of equal worth and temperament with our forefathers.

Novelty Feature Of Vic Party

Out of consideration for those fatigued lads and lasses who will go toddling home in the "wee-sma-hours" on Saturday morning from Friday's Vic At-Home, Saturday's 473 class party has been especially designed—a Hangover Party! It's a brand new idea around Vic and so far it has aroused a great deal of curiosity among those who have heard vague rumours via the grapevine telegraph system.

Schoolmen to Elect Officers Amid Toike-Oikes

This week, with much fanfare, a wealth of jokes, and a sprinkling of lusty Toike-Oikes, all good Schoolmen will elect their representatives to next year's Engineering Society Executive—as well as to the year executives and various clubs.

For such personages that are not of the blue blood of school, the elections may need a little explanation, as often they do to Schoolmen themselves. They work this way:

The students of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering have as their official organization the Engineering Society, of which every embryo engineer is a member, dues being collected with the fees. Annual elections are held to choose officers of the society who, during their tenure of office carry out the duties entailed.

Much voluntary service is generally lavished about to keep the ball rolling, although conscription is occasionally resorted to, if the need warrants it. Such is the fate—at least once—of every first-year man. To this system, Schoolmen say, belongs the credit for School's "acknowledged superiority" in every phase of university activity including the T. A. Reed Trophy race.

Besides the presidency and the vice-presidencies of the Engineering Society, there are the offices of treasurer and secretary. Balance of the executive is made up of the presidents of the different years and the chairmen of the various clubs.

While no little part of the society's activities has to do with the social education of the blue-and-gold men, most of its important work is of an academic nature. Among the purposes of the Flying Officer Lawrence Cryderman, 26, graduate of Victoria College, was killed while on duty in a fighter plane of the Canadian squadron in Britain, it was learned yesterday. Cryderman was a member of The Varsity staff in 1937 and was well known in university boxing circles.

C.O.T.C. Ball Set for Feb. 21

C.O.T.C. and Training Centre orders for February 21 include the annual C.O.T.C. Ball at 2130 hours, one of the largest and most colourful formal campus dances. Hart House, as usual, will be the scene of the soldiers' shindig with Stan St. John as quartermaster for the militarists' music.

The dance, open as it is to members of both the C.O.T.C. and the Auxiliary Battalion, is of interest to the majority of the university students. An attendance of nearly 500 couples is expected as our budding soldiers leave their bayonets for the finer study of strategy and tactics.

One of the interesting features of the ball will be the debut of the University Pipe Band, a group of 14 of society as laid down in the constitution are the encouragement of original research and co-operation with graduate engineering associations. General meetings, scholarships, smokers and dinners are some of the means to these ends. For these reasons the election of dependable and independent officers is a serious business and this consideration underlies the frivolity attendant upon such affairs.

Nominations closed last night and although at the time of going to press the details are not available, it seems that the struggle for the presidency is to be fought out by Red Brundrit and Johnny Leitch. These men will begin campaigning in earnest today and continue until Friday.

Hence on Friday of this week—after a hectic barrage of loudspeakers, pretty girls, novelties, blotters and noise, the Average Schoolman will hesitatingly issue forth from the sanctity of the Grads or the coal-hole to cast his ballot. Having done so, he will probably repair with the remainder of his equally shy classmates to the "Osgoode Hall Annex" where a good time will be had by all. . . .

The C.O.T.C. Ball

Next week the opportunity is being presented to several thousand students of military science to forget their guns and maps and directors and join in their unit's one social activity of the year. On Friday, February 21st, the annual C.O.T.C. Ball will be held in Hart House.

The military Ball is an annual event, and has been so for many years. This year, however, it has an added importance on the campus, for never before have so many students been engaged in one or another type of military training. With the exception of under-age groups and those exempt for physical reasons, almost the entire male student body is in either the C.O.T.C. or the Training Centre battalion. This should ensure a record attendance at the dance.

The committee in charge has been working hard to make the affair a success in every way. It is to be hoped that the esprit de corps of Varsity cadets will be sufficient to ensure solid support.

The Public Approves

Perhaps the results of the poll of public opinion on the lease-lend bill just completed by the American Institute of Public Opinion will have some influence on government members who are opposing the bill because they insist that the people do not want it. Gallup says that they do want it, and Gallup is usually right.

The final results of his poll show that four out of five sections of the country are in favour of the bill—one of them by an overwhelming majority—while in the fifth section the division of sentiment is so close that the final verdict for that area is in doubt.

The question put to the people was "Do you think Congress should pass the President's lease-lend bill?" Naturally a great many of the answers received were not straight "yes" or "no". Many voters attached limitations to their answers, or modifications which they thought should be made to the bill. The commonest of these modifications, according to Dr. Gallup, are that no American ships or American soldiers should be sent abroad, that some limit shall be placed on the amount of aid given Britain under the bill and that the bill should be in force only for a definite period of time.

"If the nation-wide results of the institute's sampling are applied against the total of 50,000,000 voters in the last Presidential election," said Dr. Gallup, "the situation is approximately as follows: favour the bill, 27,000,000 voters; opposed to the bill, 11,000,000 voters; qualified opinions, 7,500,000; no opinion, 4,500,000. If all those who now give a qualified answer, plus those who have not yet formed an opinion, were eventually to side with the "noes" the total opposed would be 23,000,000—still less than a majority.

A second question asked by the Institute was, "If Congress does pass the bill, should the powers which it grants to the President be given to him for as long as the war lasts or for only a limited period of time, such as two years?" Nearly all were agreed that if the bill does pass, a definite time limit should be placed on the powers granted the President.

Followed by Applause

For a man who repeatedly insisted that he was going to England merely as a private individual and was representing no one and nothing in particular, Wendell Willkie has been receiving a tremendous ovation. The attention given to his reports and opinions seem to belie his words. The reception given him in England was a tremendously enthusiastic one. The reception he has been receiving in Washington at the hearing of the lease-lend bill is scarcely less enthusiastic.

It is easily understood why he was so popular in Great Britain. As for the United States, no matter what their opinion of his views, he is bound to be popular with Americans for his proven sincerity and his plea that all government members must support the government without regard for party. Mr. Willkie himself has always done so in any major issue.

At the lease-lend bill hearing the other day when one senator insisted upon going over the speeches Mr. Willkie made during the campaign criticizing Mr. Roosevelt's activities abroad, Mr. Willkie retorted that his views were still the same, but that now he was striving for national unity; that he had fought hard during the campaign and had lost, and so President Roosevelt "is my President now." The crowd wildly applauded its approval.

It is a strange and a dramatic situation, but then Wendell Willkie seems to be an unusual person. He is a vivid contrast to former unsuccessful presidential candidates who have faded into obscurity a few weeks after their defeat.

About Time

Columbia University is about to have a new $1,000,000 gymnasium, complete with all the trimmings, but no one will begrudge it to them after hearing the alumni secretary's description of the present gym.

Concluding a long list of its shortcomings he wailed, "And as for the smells in the gym—one can assemble hundreds of former students who will attest, if necessary before a notary public, that the gym smells are thick enough to cut with a knife. Even solemn trustees of the university, cautious against exaggeration, have avowed they would recognize the gym smell if they were standing on a gale-swept mountain in mid-Africa and a preserved small bottle of it were uncorked to windward of them."

That being the case, we quite believe the secretary's statement that "it created an inferiority complex among Columbia men."

Traditional Beauty

Ballet Russe

Last night's program of the Ballet Russe at the Royal Alexandra Theatre was thoroughly traditional and beautifully balanced. The company had every opportunity to display its virtuosity to an audience which fell in with the spirit of the evening and played their part in inspiring the artists to do their best.

"Les Sylphides", with its cool, almost under-sea, beauty was the first on the program and was also, for many in the audience, the best. In a program such as this, where each ballet is equally good and equally famous, though for entirely different reasons, one cannot come out dogmatically and say, "This is the best," because it would be like comparing chalk

TRAINING CENTRE TO ROUTE MARCH TO SUDBURY

Auxbat Battalion will March to Northlands Accompanied by the Orchestra

FUN AND FAVOURS TO ALL

In an exclusive interview to The Varsity last night, officers of the Training Centre told of plans to resume route marches now that milder weather has set in.

Officials are pleased to report that the first route march will be a short but brisk walk to Sudbury. One of the officers was heard to remark that this route march is only the beginning and the route marches should improve as time wears on and the marchers wear out.

Upon hearing the announcement at the Armories, the entire battalion cheered as one man, and waved his hat. Students then gave suggestions upon which route should be followed. Some students wanted to go by way of Florida but this scheme was laughed down. After much bickering, it was finally decided to go by way of Midland because practically the whole battalion knows a swell blonde up there.

The route march will first pass through Mimico, and it is feared that a few of the marchers may be detained by the authorities. However, if everything goes well right through the march to Sudbury, officers are considering extending the route march to Baffin Bay as the seal fishing is supposed to be excellent there this season.

When they arrive in Sudbury, there will be special igloos for the battalion to warm up in. Also, every route marcher will receive a small carton of Dr. Scholl's electric feet pads.

"There's nothing like a good old-fashioned route march," one of the lads was quoted as saying, but we couldn't catch him. The band will also be there, and all the route marchers will be pleased to hear that someone has stolen their music of "The Beer Barrel Polka."

The battalion will meet at the Hart House Tower at 1400 hours on Friday, and it is expected that they will march for 1600 hours.

and cheese.

"Les Sylphides" is the best known ballet in the company's repertoire. It has no plot; it is a suite of dances in the romantic tradition which interprets Chopin's music, against a decor by Benois. In the peaceful atmosphere of a moonlit summer night the sylphs glide into a silvered glade before a wood. The dancing and groupings are perfection. Riabouchinska's fluidity and grace of dancing is perfectly amazing—she charmed everyone. With Baronova, the other star of this ballet, she showed us classic dancing at its best.

The great dramatic ballet, "Petrushka", is entirely different, relying more on plot and characterization than on dancing. This work, which has been called "the Hamlet of ballet", tells the tragic story of Petrouchka's hopeless love for the Dancer, and of his ill-treatment at the hands of the Blackamoor who wins the Dancer. ## Victoria Pucksters Whip Doctors; Drop Thrilling Game to Molarmen

Vic Seconds Recapture First Place Tie with Druggists; Winning Counters Come in Final Stanza

Vic Seconds climbed back into first place alongside Pharmacy in the Group III hockey standing with a timely 3-1 verdict over the bruising Senior Meds squad yesterday afternoon. That makes it three for four but Pharmacy has a game in hand.

Cam McKenzie opened the scoring on behalf of the Victorians only to have Hoc Gillespie, far and away Meds' best man, knot the score before the period was out. Though Meds had the better of the play in the final canto (Wolfrain and Paton decided it in Vic's favour).

Sr. Meds: Pritchard, Warren, Wilson, Fulton, Dennis, Deut, Dandwell, Spence, MacDillan, Gillespie, Stephens. Vic II: Bothwell, Pallat, MacKenzie, Cumming, Wolfrain, Cass, Flewelling, Livingstone, Boville, Paton.

Sport Personalities

By Bill Quigley

JACK RONAYNE

From Detroit, the "City of Champions", Jack came to St. Michael's College in the fall of 1937 after establishing a brilliant athletic record at Catholic Central High School.

In 1936 Catholic Central won the Michigan State High School football title but had to forego a trip to Florida due to a Michigan State athletic ruling barring post season games. Many of that team, on which Jack was a first stringer, achieved prominence at Notre Dame, U. of Detroit, and other large American universities.

Jack is Athletic Director at St. Mike's and is mainly responsible for the new theme of the Double Blue — "quantity as well as quality." He has edited basketball teams in the field—three city teams and five intercollegiate. Added to these are ten other athletic squads.

A tireless worker and relentless fighter, Jack captained this year's Mulock outfit and was an All-star lineman on last year's champions.

Ronayne holds the distinction of being one of the few Americans — if not the first — to hold a regular spot on an intercollegiate hockey team. He's a goal-tender of no mean ability and points to fellow countrymen Brimsek and Karakas, with pride.

As if this weren't enough, he can be found leading the Gaels on the basketball court and ball diamond as well.

A great organizer and familiar figure in the Athletic Wing, we hold no fears for the future of St. Mike's athletic achievements so long as men with the qualities of Jack Ronayne are at the helm.

INTRAMURAL SQUASH

The following games have not been played or are unreported:

Appleby (Dent) vs Mullin (For). Fitzpatrick (S.P.S.) vs Miller (Vic).

Armstrong (S.P.S.) vs Jones (Trin).

Participants are reminded that results of all games (including defaults) must be posted by the winner on the draw sheet in the main locker room.

Powerful Dentists, Led by Crouch, Crush Last-Minute Threat of Scarlet and Gold Sextet

A last-minute scoring drive by Vic I just failed to click as the Scarlet and Gold sank before a powerful Dents sextet 2-1 in a thriller diller at the Arena yesterday.

The Dentists went into an early lead in the opening period when Sibbald scored from Ferguson. Later in the period Beatty reached pay dirt on a pass from Crouch.

MacKenzie got the only tally for Vic half way through the final frame when goalie Woods was lured out of the nets by Wright. In the closing minutes the Victorians swarmed all around the Molarmen's net but couldn't deposit the disk.

Crouch was the star for the victors with a brilliant passing and shooting display. Castaldi came very close on some fast breaking rushes. Woods turned in a fine performance between the pipes and Hambley was the big defensive bulwark.

Johnny Hogg led the parade for the Scarlet and Gold, backed up by MacLead and Stone.

Vic I: Deacon, Kirkland, MacKenzie, Hogg, Brown, Young, Stone, Purvis, Wright, McLeod.

Dents: Wood, Hambley, Ferguson, Beatty, Crouch, McKee, Channel, Burgman, Bigelow, Castaldi, Sibbald.

The Interfaculty and Intercollegiate Swimming Meets are being held this year under rather novel circumstances. Due to world conditions—must I tell you about them?—there can be no real intercollegiate, but races are being run off here and at the other universities, during the interfaculty contest, and special ones, which will be timed, and the results compared.

So Feb. 24th and 26th have been set aside for the interfaculty event, and these special races which will be included in the intercollegiate contest. On Monday, Feb. 24th, the following races will be run off, in the Hart House pool: The preliminaries of the intercollegiate and interfaculty diving and plunging, the finals of the interfaculty style and ornamental swimming, the intercollegiate and interfaculty 100 yards free style and 150 yd. medley finals.

On Wednesday, Feb. 26th the interfaculty 150 yd. medley relay, and 200 yds. free style relay and diving, and interfaculty and intercollegiate 50 yds. free style, 50 yds. breast stroke, 50 yds. back stroke and plunge will take place. For those unable to make these two days, arrangements have been made for the following races to be run off, on the time basis at the Lillian Massey pool on Thursday, Feb. 13th, Friday, Feb. 14th and Monday, Feb. 24th — free style, breast stroke and back stroke. The college tournaments are scheduled for next week, Vic on the 18th and U.C. on the 19th at the O.C.E. pool, and people who just aren't the aquatic type are specially invited to come. This is not a life-and-death event, so come on out and—splash. Sorry, no time for a joke!

ST. MIKE'S UP, SCHOOL ON DECK

Despite all reports to the contrary, St. Mike's will act as hosts at this week's University Night, and School will handle the welcoming duties next week. And by the look of things at the moment, the Rah-Rah Boys from Bay Street have lined up a mighty good show. It promises to be the best of the lot.

Although the Senior Interfaculty Assault-at-Arms should receive top billing, we think the evening's basketball game will provide the best entertainment. It's a natural. The teams? O.C.E.'s undefeated, untied high-flying squad and the Saints' City League aggregation. The Teachers need no introduction to those who have taken in their recent interfaculty doings, which consist in the main of pouring approximately thirty field goals through the opposing hoop inside of half an hour's play. St. Mike's found themselves in a tough league and a good one, dropped better than half their contests but by close scores. Just a week ago they toppled the previously undefeated Simpson Grads 40-35.

St. Mike's, except for Fran Matthews, who hails from Niagara Falls, Ontario, is an All-American team. They number among their ranks Jack Lavarnway and Bill Roberts, both New Yorkers and members of last year's intercollegiate Blues, Fran played intermediate. Jack Casey, Mike Paddon, Joe Foley, Jack Butler and Jack Luddy are all better-than-average ball-handlers. We believe Messrs. Belchamper, Prince, Wynne, and Browns will give St. Mike's a good game, but to expect them to come out on top of a team that has been playing together all fall and against some of the toughest opposition in the province would be a stretch of the imagination. In passing, it might be mentioned that O.C.E. have been granted permission by the Athletic Directorate to enter the O.B.A. play-downs.

Entries for the Assault seem to be marking time at the moment, but a goodly number of wrestlers signed on the dotted line last night. The big question is—Who's going to fight Bill Ramore? Here is a classy master of the dukes, intercollegiate team member, who has a punch, nothing like that of Jock Piggot of three years ago, but nonetheless a right solid blow. As the boss said, "I can't fight him. I weigh 162, and boy, am I eating!"

It's just another one of those things. The intercollegiate b.w. & f. team that would have been wearing the blue and white this year, we mean. Boxers like Hurst, Patterson, Stanley and Ramore; wrestlers like Cutt, Mustard, Dobson and Scott; fencers like Tapsell, Mantley, Horsey, Leslie and Miller. All these boys, with the exception of one or two of the fencers, hoped to bring home the bacon from McGill last year in the form of the wrestling and boxing titles. It is these boys who will peddle their wares Saturday night. It will be worth seeing.

The effort is being made to stage a lacrosse game between St. Mike's and Senior School, last year's and this year's Dufco Cup winners respectively. With team padding allowed this would give Pharmacy, for instance, an opportunity to do their bit, for they came up with a surprisingly good lacrosse club last fall. Winst McCatty, last year's Varsity swimming coach now at U.C.C., will bring four high-school relay teams down to the pool, and a waterpolo game should complete the already well-filled card. Warren Stevens will commentate as he flashes his intercollegiate rugby movies on the screen in the fencing room.

But the best is yet to come. St. Mike's own swing band, George Casarette and his International Collegians, no less, will be on hand to give out. It looks good, we repeat. And it's all on the inside, folks, only two bits, one 'quahat of a dollo, two dimes and a nickel...

ST. MIKE'S A BALL HAWKS OUTSLUG TRINITY SQUAD TO TIE FOR GROUP LEAD

The St. Mike's A baseball club found themselves with a first place deadlock on their hands in Group III after laying the wood in grand style to Trinity in the lower gym yesterday afternoon to slug out a lop-sided 13-3 victory.

The Irish counted but once in the first inning, but started to connect from the second on, knocked out 14 hits for their remaining twelve runs. Trinity's best frame was the last when she pushed over all three of her tallies.

St. Mike's A: Podcasy, Ronayne, Higgins, Sendakre, Coughlin, Ragusa, Blum, Roberts.

Trinity: Boddy, Howard, Wagland, Downey, Riley, Baillie, Philp, Hedgins.

TRINITY A CAGEMEN TRIM WYCLIFFE HOOPSTERS

Wycliffe A dropped another close hoop game last night, this time to a Trinity A team who had the goods when it came time for the showdown. The score was 41-35.

Led by the hard-working Fry Bros, Harry and Herschell, Wycliffe was actually ahead at half-time, but only by one point. It was nip and tuck until the final minute when Trinity potted a couple of quick baskets to settle the issue. The win was enough to place the Anglicans in a first-place tie in Group V.

ova, in the role of the Dancer, lived up to the great tradition of other ballerinas who have made this role famous.
It made Petrouchka, himself, all the more disappointing, for Lazovsky, in this role, fell back on the midwived hand-on-heart method of miming, and an over-acrobatic interpretation, both of which amused the audience thoroughly, and completely spoiled the tragic atmosphere of the role.

The leaping bounding rhythms of "Prince Igor" finished the evening off with a flourish. This exciting ballet with its barbaric frenzy is completely contrasted to the romanticism of "Les Sylphides" and to the drama of "Petrouchka". With no plot and no named characters it depends entirely for its appeal on the wild Tartar barbarian translated into dancing.

Thanks . . . For Bach!

Tuesday Organ Recital

One has only to glance at the program to judge the interest of this week's recital. The opening number, Bach's Prelude and Fugue in C major, was singularly well chosen for this type of organ concert. It is a large work, majestically conceived, and does justice to the composer's logical and forceful intellect and sense of form. The different arrangements of the Chorale-Prelude Deck thyself, my soul, with gladness were most interesting. We were led from the considerable elaboration of the classic Bach, to the more simple arrangements of the classic-romanticist Brahms and finally to the modern improvisation of Karg-Elert which was not as dis-sonant as might be expected from even this cautious composer. Of the third group, the short Chorale-Prelude was delightful in its chromatic simplicity.
The Felix Borowski Sonata in A minor was quite simple in structure and theme.
With a gripping and rhythmical first theme reappearing in each of the succeeding movements, it alternates the restless with pastoral-like melodies and proceeds to a robust A major conclu-parliament. "Although he is elected to support the policies which were laid before the electorate by his party, he may find that plans come up at the caucus which are in complete opposition to the promises made during the party's campaign."

The speaker continued by commenting on the interpretation placed on the phrase "a good man." "A good man in the Christian sense of the term would fight the changed policy; a good party man would support his leader irrespective of such an action," he said.

The man who fights his party cannot get a second nomination, he stated, and told his audience to hesitate in placing the blame on their representative when election promises are not carried out.
"The government is more often to be blamed when a thing remains undone," he continued.

season the 473 executive is planning to take Burwash Hall by storm this Saturday night with the innovation of the Hangover Party idea. According to the president, Jim Tapsell, mere words cannot do justice to the deco-preciated, or even believed, for that matter.

He promises that they are extra-special, super-colossal, and all that and the general idea of a Hangover is carried out throughout, but more than that he

The other day, one of the morsels of pulchritude which infest the campus grabbed her purse in a hurry and scampered over to the drug-store to make a trifling purchase or two. . . .
About to pay for the gee-gaws, she was amazed to pull a string of stamps from the purse that she couldn't recollect buying, followed by a number of car tickets, money, and other things which she never carried as a rule. . . .
And the things usually indigenous to her purse were absent. . . . no knitting needles, no rug hooks, no miniature looms. . . . "This is not my purse!"
cried she, acutely sizing up the situa-was flung forth by a passing boor, up piped up: "Missed out on the Formal,

There is a lack of equality in the re-

Will Discuss Anti-Aircraft Weapons

Col. F. C. Wallace, British Army
Speaker at R.C.I. Lecture
Tomorrow Night, Fought at Dunkirk, is Research Expert

CONVOCATION TALK

Col. F. C. Wallace of the British Army, who was in command of the anti-aircraft defences of Dunkirk during the evacuation, will speak on the subject of Anti-Aircraft Artillery at the meeting of the Royal Canadian Institute, Saturday at 8.15 p.m. in Convocation Hall.

At the outbreak of the World War Col. Wallace was a subaltern in an Irish regiment and served practically the entire war in France. He was in command of an anti-aircraft regiment when the present war began and he took the regiment to France in the autumn of 1939, serving there till the evacuation of Dunkirk.

Col. Wallace came to the United States with the British Scientific Technical Mission as the Army Service representative and is now attached to the Canadian General Staff working with the National Research Council.

U.S. National Student's Federation will Foot Travelling Bill of Toronto Team to be Chosen by Council

MAINE WILL VISIT HERE

Prospect that several University of Toronto debaters will be chosen to visit ten American universities on a debating tour this spring was revealed at yesterday's regular meeting of the Students' Administrative Council.

Recently an invitation was received from the National Students' Federation of the United States suggesting that a team from Toronto be sent on an all-expense tour of twenty-five American universities during the last three weeks of March. The Students' Council, after consideration, replied that if the itinerary were reduced, a team might be sent.

At present the S.A.C. Debates Commissioner is endeavouring to contact debaters in all colleges and faculties who might possibly be eligible for such a team, and college executives are being urged to submit names. Any debaters interested in the proposed trip are asked to speak to a member of their executive.

It was also announced yesterday that a debating team from the University of Maine will make a one-day stand in Toronto on Tuesday, April 1, to debate (Continued on Page 4)

NO ELECTION DINNER

Amid the clamour of speeches, shouts and blaring sound-trucks, all presenting the respective merits of numerous candidates, Schoolmen will go to the polls today to select the various executives for next year.

Officers in the Engineering Society, the Athletic Association, the Permanent Executive, and the three year executives are being contested in today's election.

Due to pressure of work, the present executive has decided not to hold the usual Election Night dinner in Hart House at which the results are customarily announced. Results may be obtained by phoning Midway 6897 tonight between 7 and 10 p.m. They will be published in full in The Varsity on Monday.

The nominations in part follow:
Engineering Society Executive
President: W. F. Brundrit, J. M. Leitch.

1st Vice-President: J. R. Gundy,

F. E. Miller, P. Turner.

2nd Vice-President: J. T. Cawley,

President: H. A. G. Kingsmill, A. L. MacLean.

Vice-President (2): B. L. Davis, J. S. Munro, R. Scott.

Secretary-Treasurer: J. D. Barnes,

E. J. Bartley, D. McConvey.

Keynote Set For Vic At-Home By Commodores

The dulcet rhythms of The Commodores—the band sensation of the year—are to set the key-note for the merry-makers at the Vic At-Home tonight at the Arcadian Court.

In anticipation of this all-important of Vic social events, the ticket sales have soared, and during the past few days almost all of the 400 tickets have been sold.

Vic has joined the parade of corsage-less Canadian colleges and faculties, so that rather than buy flowers for milady, the young swain will be afforded an opportunity to donate his money to two services. Half the donations are to be given to the International Student Service and half will buy War Savings stamps.

In order to show that donations have been given, the young lady will be given a pin at the door. For an extra, but smaller contribution, the gentleman may get another for himself.

These pins have been especially designed for the occasion and consist of a scarlet crest on a golden background, the colours and shape of that of Victoria College's crest.

As well as the local-talent floor show, another special feature of the evening will be the playing of V.C.U. President Ted Gray's composition, "The Stars Tell Me We're Through" in Percy Faith's arrangement by the Commodores.

Noted Chinese Leader To Speak on Sunday

Three Addresses to Students of All Faculties will Celebrate
"Universal Day of Prayer" for Students

RE-VISITS CAMPUS FEB. 18

A busy schedule has been planned by the S.C.M. for Sunday when C. S. Tsai, formerly a national secretary of the Y.M.C.A. in China, and recently international secretary of the British S.C.M., will be on the campus. The day is being observed throughout the world as the Universal Day of Prayer for students.

At the 11 a.m. service at Westminster Central United Church Mr. Tsai will speak on "Christian Students in China." In the afternoon he will lead a discussion on the subject "Students Re-think Their Faith in China and Britain" at an All-University Tea to be held at 4.30 p.m. in Wymondley for which there will be an admission charge of 25c. This will be followed by an All-University Student Service in Trinity Chapel where the visitor's topic will be "That All May Be One."

The visiting student leader will be on the campus again Tuesday, Feb. 18th for another day of meetings and forums.

Mr. Tsai is well qualified to discuss the actions and attitudes of the students on other continents who make up the World's Student Christian Federation. From his graduation in 1934 till 1939 he travelled throughout "free China" (Continued on Page 2)

LABICHE PLAY HIGHLIGHT OF FRENCH CLUB SEASON TUESDAY NIGHT

"The biggest dramatic event in U.C. this year," according to Betty Jane Teagle, president of the U.C. French Club, is the club's presentation of "La Lettre Chargee" by Labiche, which is to take place at the Women's Union Theatre Tuesday night.

Dispensing with the usual speaker, the meeting of the club will feature the play, performed in French by club members. There will also be the customary songs and refreshments, followed by dancing. The meeting will begin promptly at 8.00 p.m.

C. S. Tsai

For five years a general secretary of the Y.M.C.A. in China, who will address various S.C.M. services and discussions Sunday and Tuesday in connection with the World's Student Christian Federation day of prayer.

Students' Matriculation Text Books Sought by I.S.S. for Internees

Matriculation books—long-forgotten Algebras and Histories and Chemistry and Latin lying dusty on the back shelves of Varsity students—are the objects of a drive started today by the University I.S.S. Committee, still hard at work, after its recent campaign, to case the lot of the student prisoner.

The books will be collected during the next week or two by John Coleman, S.C.M. secretary, at the S.C.M. Hart House office, and packed away to friendly aliens who are forced to stay in Canadian internment camps until they can be returned safely to England.

These friendly internees, according to Robert Mackie, world secretary of the Student Christian Movement, who recently visited two of Canada's civilian internment camps, are largely composed of 17-year-olds who were busted out of Britain mistakenly during the critical time when France fell last summer, and brought to Canada. Some have already been proven entirely in sympathy with the Allied cause and have been transported back to England.

So cautious is the investigation into each case, however, that many have been held on technicalities, and may not be able to leave the camps for long

SCHOOL STICKHANOLERS DROP CLOSE CONTEST

In a keenly contested game at the Arena yesterday afternoon, St. Mike's A eked out an 8-7 win over St. School. The fracas featured fast play and heavy checking. Morrison led the Irish with 3 goals and two assists while Hector bulged the twice twice. O'Sullivan, Lavery and Buckley each counted once for the Double Blue. Linden, Allen, Forestall, and Mole turned on the light for School, the three first named netting a pair each. The only penalties of the game went to the Bay Street boys, Buckley getting both.

Bennet set up many valuable plays for the winners with Underhill working hard in goal for the School boys.

months, during which they have only the facilities for study offered by the International Student Service.

Also in demand in connection with this drive are the voluntary services of several students who are willing to work a few hours a week in helping to pack and ship the volumes, Coleman said. Students wishing to help should apply at the S.C.M. office.

Hart House Guest Interviewed in Hospital

Boris Roubakine—violinist, Received Fractured Jaw and Face Lacerations in Motor Accident

HANOS NOT INJURED

A guest of Hart House and a renowned musician—Boris Roubakine—suffered severe injuries as a result of a motor accident here in Toronto last Tuesday.

Mr. Roubakine came to this city to accompany violinist Bronislaw Huberman at a concert for Polish relief in Massey Hall last Friday; he had previously accompanied the same artist for over a year in a tour conducted throughout South Africa and the United States.

Due to the accident which involved the car in which he was riding, Mr. Roubakine suffered a fracture of the upper jaw and a number of cuts about the face; doctors put twenty-three stitches in his chin. As a result, he is confined to the Toronto General Hospital and is unable to play in Winnipeg next week as scheduled. Nevertheless, Mr. Roubakine is thankful that his hands were not injured in any way.

Boris Roubakine was born in Switzerland, near Lausanne, both his parents being Russian. His father was a psychologist who was particularly interested in reading and consequently wrote a treatise on The Psychology of Reading; his library which he considered a model laboratory of reading consisted of some 90,000 volumes.

Mr. Roubakine speaks Russian, French and English; he studied piano and composition in Lausanne and in Paris. Since that time he has risen to become a teacher in the Lausanne Institute of Music.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE GIRLS TO MEET FEBRUARY 17

On Monday, Feb. 17, at 8.30 p.m., in the Women's Union the annual meeting of the U.C. Women's Undergraduate Association will be held. There will be nominations for the council, year executives and house party committee, and reports of the council will be given. Elections will be on Friday, Feb. 21, and the results will be announced at the Junior-Senior dance.

W.S.T.D. HEARS TALK ON FIRST AID

Yesterday evening another in the series of A.R.F. lectures was given by Dr. Blanche Burton on first aid.

Sr. Lieut. A. E. M. Parkes stated that Mrs. Ellis, National Commandant, had reported to her that four women of Company A had been taken on for full time secretarial duty in Military Headquarters. The Air Force too has even succumbed and has two or three secretaries also in Ottawa. This is only the beginning but it is the first step in the recognition of women in the service on a full time basis.

"The suggestion has been made that a two weeks course may be organized in late June. The girls would go to camp which will be similar to the camps now used for trainees. Special instruction will be given along various lines such as food administration and nursing. Graduates may also be interested in coming to take work in the training session," Lieut. Parkes said.

"HIS INCOMPARABLE LOVE" TITLE OF FOURTH ADDRESS BY DR. ZWEMER

"Christ's love has four dimensions," asserted Dr. Samuel M. Zwemer yesterday in the fourth of a series on the theme "Facing Jesus Christ Today." His topic was "His Incomparable Love."

"The love of Christ is broad enough to include all classes and races, reaching even lepers, outcasts and sinners," said the speaker. "Christianity alone reaches down to all men, eliminating caste and racial prejudice."

Referring to Francis Thompson's poem "The Hound of Heaven," Dr. Zwemer said that Christ's love for us never ceases. "Down the years, across the centuries, He looks for us until he finds us."

"Christ does not cast us off when we sin, but lifts us from sin. To do this for us, he humbled himself, even to the death of the cross. He stooped to wash his disciples' feet; He even washed the feet of Judas."

Spring Brings Elections

According to the calendar spring is officially still more than a month distant. However, the annual elections held every spring were moved forward this year and the weather seems to have moved forward with them, judging by the balmy zephyrs and coat-less strollers on the campus yesterday.

With earlier examinations in all faculties, and the resultant desire to get the year's business over as soon as possible, all college and faculty elections are getting under way earlier than usual. Engineering Society and year executive elections at S.P.S. are being held today, and will be followed in close order by elections in other colleges and faculties, and finally by the Hart House Committee elections. From now on handshaking, speechifying, blotter-donations and back-slapping will be the order of the day as hundreds of candidates seek the glories and responsibilities of office.

This system of open campaigning is by far the healthiest on the campus, we feel, as long as the expenses involved are kept to a minimum. In most faculties a limit is placed on the amount a candidate may spend on his campaign. Under this system, however, the voter must be especially careful to keep his head through the terrific bombardment which will surge over him from the battery of candidates. This is the place for discrimination, and he should not vote merely because Jones gave him a nice blotter or Brown slapped him on the back and called him by the wrong name.

It is granted that many candidates are known to the voter neither by sight nor by name. This is unfortunate for it places a limit on intelligent voting. However, that limit can be raised for it requires but little effort to ask a few questions in an attempt to find out something about a candidate and his qualifications for the particular office. The responsibilities of holding office in the various student government bodies of this university is a considerable one, and consequently care and discrimination must be exercised by the voter if his interests are to be looked after.

Apathy, towards which there is a constant tendency locally, more prevalent in some spots than others, is disastrous. Intelligent voting is a vital requisite of any democratic system of government, and the place to begin is here on the campus. Attendance of the complete student bodies at the polls should be something which can be taken for granted. Apathy at the polls must be avoided but that is not all. Intelligent interest must continue through the following year when the elected executive is called upon to carry out its program. There is a tendency to sit back, let the officers run things completely, and take no interest in things whatsoever, even to the extent of missing most open meetings.

In college elections the students themselves have ample opportunity to elect whomever they desire, and it is up to them to devote some attention to the matter rather than voting merely for a name printed on a blotter. Intelligent interest at the polls and intelligent interest through the year should become bywords at the university, and throughout the nation in general.

The President's Report

Neatly bound in 174 pages of type, the President's annual report on the condition of the university has been published, dealing with the session 1939-40. Within its covers the slim volume holds the complete story of the functioning of the largest university in the British Commonwealth, and it is worthy of at least a glance, if not complete perusal, from every student.

Covering the first year of the war, the report naturally gives a place of prominence to those activities of the university in connection with war work. Many of these could not be mentioned specifically for obvious reasons, but the aggregate of war service performed at Varsity was great last year and has been steadily increasing.

"Research work, both in pure science and in the application of science to war and its problems, has been pursued with untiring energy. In the Motherland war conditions have necessarily interfered with scientific research; all the more reason therefore must our Canadian universities carry on a full program of teaching and research. In medicine, dentistry and engineering, and in the department of physics, chemistry, and psychology—to take only some examples—special war problems have been dealt with, and members of the staff have cheerfully worked on without holiday to reach their solution, or apply scientific principles to concrete military needs."

The registration last year kept up to standard fairly well, with a drop of only 149, leaving a total of 7,811 students, while the total staff numbered 1037.

It is virtually impossible to give any adequate picture of the university as it may be seen through the President's Report. It is a book which should be placed on the "must" list of every student and as many people outside the university as possible.

Red Hearts and White Lace

We are in favour of Valentine's Day. Humanity needs and welcomes an opportunity to express sentiments of affection and good will. In the last few years, the cards have been growing more sedate and conservative. We cling to our belief that the cards of yesterday had certain values and attractions.

The most superb card we recall was bought in a general store many years ago when we were twelve and in the sixth grade. The teacher of the District Number Five school deserved that card. We had done our duty with apples and nuts, but an outstanding card was needed to express adequately one's sentiments. The storekeeper had his usual supply of five-cent cards; they were satisfactory for most purposes. This year he had a few fifteen-cent cards.

Nothing like them had been seen before. They were large, flowery and lacy. They were gorgeous, breath-taking and magnificent. The one we chose after full deliberation was a huge heart in design, and all over it were superimposed small hearts. The whole thing had an outside lacy covering with hearts as the motif of the pattern. Inside was a wholly satisfying, rich, deep sentiment. We did not hesitate over the fifteen cents. Teacher was worthy of the best. —Christian Science Monitor.

ARTE MUSIC Drama

An Echo from the Past

Moriz Rosenthal

Moriz Rosenthal was a pupil of Franz Liszt, one of the greatest pianists the world has ever known. He was an intimate friend of such great musicians as Brahms, Schumann, and Johann Strauss. It was awe-inspiring to behold a man who was a mature artist while such giants of the musical world as these were alive. To most present-day music lovers these men are ancient history; composers of a school of the past—romanticism.

Rosenthal's program contained works of only three composers. From the classics he played the Sonata in E major, Opus 109, by Beethoven. This is one of the last and most inspiring of the Sonatas, filled with technical difficulties and subtle nuances. The former gave the pianist many trying moments, and he succeeded only in glancing over the surface of the composer's intellectual depths. It sounded perhaps like the ghost of Chopin returning to have a try at Beethoven. Extreme rubato in Beethoven is most disagreeable to modern ears, and it must have rhythm. An idiosyncrasy which seems common to the romantic pianists does not suit the classics; it is the habit of playing accompanying notes before the melodic ones with which they are written.

Chopin fared better, although the lack of co-ordination between the two hands again was bothersome. Unfortunately Mr. Rosenthal simply hasn't the

"Oh pshaw," said the Boys in the Back Room in a sorrowful chorus. "This sort of life isn't doing us any good at all. We should never have left our cosy Back Room to go to that Varsity party, for now our head is splitting."

And so it was, and just when they were wondering what to do a little crooked man with a bucket on each foot came up to them and said, "I know just the place you should go."

And they said, "Where?" And he said, "Burwash Hall, for that it where the class of 4T3 is staging a big Hangover Party and they'd just love to try things out on you."

So they went and the little crooked man with a bucket on each foot led them through a door shaped like a big key-hole, explaining, "That is for people with big heads, so they don't get jammed coming through."

"Oh," they said, and passed through, and their heads didn't get jammed at all.

No sooner were they within the cool and dimly lighted hall than two brisk little men asked them to stick out their tongues and then started to measure them. "For vest and pants to go with the coat on your tongues," they explained. "Oh," said they again and two chir-opodists especially retained by the joint executives of the Girls are Only Good to Dance with Club and the Boys are Only Good to Dance with Club went to work on their tortured tootsies.

Just then one of them tried to pick up an ice-bag, but she gave him the cold shoulder. When he offered to buy her a bromo all was just too cosy for words.

"But why," they asked, being by this time comparatively hep, "do you, little man with a bucket on each foot, have a bucket on each foot?"

"Oh that," he uttered in wild surmise, "that's simple. In each bucket is a solution to restore my danced out limbs."

"Oh!" they chorused again and added, "This here Hangover Party is sure a good thing. We are quite refreshed and not at all nauseated any more." So then they had their pink elephants driven around to the double doors and rode majestically back to the Back Room.

and witnessed three years of the Sino-Japanese War. Besides his Y.M.C.A. work he was active in the administration of I.S.S. relief. In 1938 he was a speaker at the Madras World Missionary Conference where he spoke on the platform with the Japanese delegate.

Mr. Tsai joined the staff of the British S.C.M. just after the beginning of the war as the representative of the W.S.C.F. which post he left in September 1940 to study theology in the U.S.

control of his hands which he once had. Notes rang out where they should not and melodic outlines were indistinct. The Barcarolle must have been on very choppy waters. The Mazurkas and the C sharp minor Waltz are among the best of Rosenthal's interpretations.

Liszt was the composer of the three final selections. Au lac de Wallenstein showed more control and the atmosphere was well portrayed. The Tarantelle was too great a tour de force for the artist. The wind-up was the old war-horse the Hungarian Rhapsody No. 2, with a cadenza by Rosenthal which was approved by Liszt. In this the artist was resolved to do or die. The finale was so energy-consuming that one could not help but wonder whether he would be capable of finishing. It culminated in a terrific climax, topped by the cadenza.

The feelings of the audience were mixed. For such a meagre gathering the applause was great, but people were overheard uttering such remarks as "ghastly". Others were just sorry that the artistry that must have been there had vanished. It is cruel to have to write thus about an old man who seemed to have a job to do, and did it as well as he could.

Jr. Interfaculty Gymnasts' Meet Opens Today

Upper Gym to be Scene of Trials of Coach Charlie Zwygard's Men at Five p.m. This Evening

The bar and mat boys have their innings in the Upper Gym tonight at five, as the Junior Interfaculty Competition gets under way.

There is a choice with regard to the method of entering participants in this meet. A faculty may enter individual men, or may send in a team of three. Coach Charlie Zwygard is anxious that all the contestants be on time for the meet, so that the trials may be staged without delay.

Prominent intercollegiate gymnasts, former members of the Varsity championship squad, will act as judges for the events. The judges are Jack Tocky, Willie Mark, Doug Simpson, and Ollie Brett.

SCHOOL III DOWNED BY ST. MIKE'S B IN SOFTBALL FRAY

S.P.S. III lost an opportunity of tying St. Mike's B mushballers for the leadership of Group VI yesterday by dropping a 7-2 decision to the Irish. The Saints, undefeated and untied, gave Robertson on the mound excellent support both in the field and with the willow, pounding out ten hits off the combined efforts of Olsen and Robinson.

Olsen started in the box for the Engineers, but lasted only part of the first inning, giving way to Robinson. The Saints were held scoreless only in the second frame, collecting three runs in their two big innings, the first and last, and added the other in the third.

In the last frame Olsen came back to the mound to relieve Robinson. Robertson allowed S.P.S. a single run in each of the first two innings in chalking up his third straight win.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Owen Prichard

STRICTLY STATISTICS

'Way back in last autumn posters were distributed about the bulletin boards on the campus setting out in 1-2-3 order the sumptuous athletic menu available to students on payment of the Athletic Fee. Personally, we thought the posters told the tale completely, but it seems that some students are still not quite clear as to the use which is being made of the income from this fee.

To delve into history, the Athletic Fee came into being in 1937-8 after the student body and the Students' Administrative Council had signified their desire to see such a system in use. This graybeard recalls the campus-wide approbation which brought the Fee into existence. After Al Williams of the football team, one of the prime movers, had acquainted every campus group with the general principles of the scheme, the students in various faculties voted on the question, and were overwhelmingly in favour of the idea.

The result has been a expansion of our intramural athletic system into a set-up which is the envy of every university in North America. Not only are we financially favoured with a good thing (the Queen's-Western-McGill fees go from seven-fifty to ten bucks) but the amount of participation by students in all branches of sport has increased annually. If you like facts and figures, chew on the following: Last year our intramural program proper had 48 per cent of the total male registration competing in some sport; add to this the residence and fraternity leagues which also operate in Hart House and this is increased to 54 per cent; the inclusion of our intercollegiate athletes brings the total to 61 per cent.

Much of this growth in intramural athletics has been caused by the work of the Athletic Fee in financing the work of keeping the Athletic Wing open during the evenings. This year in particular, the worth of this is seen in the number of evening contests which can now be held despite the pressure of military drill at the former afternoon periods. Even if there were no military drill, the open gym would be needed to accommodate the crowded schedules necessitated by the expansion of the sport program. In 1939-40 there were 15,053 admissions during the evenings, and to date in the '40-'41 season the admissions have totalled 9,605.

In the days before the Fee, you used to buy a student's season ducet for $3.50, admitting you to all football and hockey games in the regular intercollegiate schedule. Although many were not able to attend because of drills, $3.57 hiked up to the Bloor Street Bowl last autumn to view the Big Four and O.R.F.U. grid contests. Besides this, the Athletic Fee has given them a host of other privileges whose popularity can be gauged by the annually increasing participation in the various features. Among the most popular of the winter privileges has been admission on three evenings and all afternoons to the Varsity Rink. To give a once-over-lightly to some other sports, we remind you that your Fee covers reduced fees in golf, ditto at two riding clubs, and free figure skating instruction at Varsity Rink. The Athletic Directorate has leased grounds near Aurora, trails have been cut and a cabin erected, for the use of the thousand or more students who use the course each weekend. The Arena is now used for interfaculty hockey games, a great improvement from the outdoor league of yore, and practice hours are available for half the usual charge.

The Women's Athletic Association has benefited to an inestimable degree by the assistance of the Fee, out of which a grant is made annually to its treasury. Things are much rosier now than when the gals had to pay $40.00 a team for a season's use of the hockey cushion.

The point we would like to make out of all this is that the cancellation of intercollegiate sport this year has not in any way decreased the amount of athletic value you have obtained for your three dollars, in fact we are getting a bigger sports program than in any previous year. As we stated a mile or so above, a few folk are wondering why, if there's no intercollegiate competition, the three buck fee isn't reduced. We hope the facts as we have tried to give them provides the answer. For the truth is, intercollegiate sports financed themselves for forty years before the inauguration of the Athletic Fee. The big time sports carry on largely through the gate receipts accruing from the past-boards purchased by John Q. Public. The chief beneficiary of the Athletic Fee is the average student, who has been enabled to participate freely in some sport either as player or spectator.

To this list of privileges we would like to add special mention of the emergency surgical service provided for accidents that may occur in intramural games, an undertaking which is administered by the Athletic Directorate and is completely separate from the University Health Service.

The conclusion is obvious—we have a good thing in this Athletic Fee and in the whole sports system on this campus, so let's make the most of it.

Trinity, School Enter Ski Teams In Finals Sunday

Intramural Slalom and Downhill Meet Takes Place at Collingwood. Cross-Country and Jumping Next Week

Three S.P.S. ski teams and one from Trinity will zoom around the flags on the sparkling snows of Collingwood this Sunday afternoon in the finals of the intramural slalom and downhill.

The competition is going to be close, since there are some smooth skiers on these four teams. There is a flock of them from School, to wit, Netter, Connor, Kingsmill and Ellice, while Ante of Dents and Wilgess and Robinson from Trinity deserve high ratings.

The racing will start at about one o'clock in the afternoon. The cross-country and jumping will probably be held the next weekend at the university club.

FORESTRY PUCKSTERS WIN FROM WYCLIFFE 3-1

Coming from behind to outskate their rivals, Forestry pucksters added a win to their score yesterday by defeating Wycliffe 3-1 in their tussle at the Arena.

Both teams started evenly, and neither side had the advantage until half-way through the first frame, when Howard Hazell of Wycliffe returned to the ice from a stretch in the penalty box and staged a magnificent lone rush to tally the Theologs' initial goal of the season.

Forestry, led by Pud Puttock, outskated the Anglicans from then on, and would have scored many more counters but for the superb net-minding of Bill Coleman.

with Larry Smith

NOT SO MANY DAYS AGO, friend O'Mara sidled up and whispered plaintively in our ear. . . "Wuncha like to write a Hither, huh. . . Expecting a touch and thus, through surprise, unable to resist the long-haired king of campus humour (that makes us even, O'Mara) we nodded assent. . . whereupon he relaxed on the office table, chortling with glee: "Whee, now I'll get even with the boss." . . . So here we are with the unfunniest Hither OF THE YEAR.

THOUGHTS ON WRITING in a column which is read by more than two people (the editor and his mother) . . . Somehow people just don't look at editorials. . . In a recent debate someone came out with the crack that less than ten percent of Whitney Hall girls read the editorials in your morning mag. . . Maybe it's true but today we can be happy . . . (even if we didn't get a Valentine) . . . 'cause millions and millions read the Hither . . . I know because O'Mara told me so. . . Anyway, it's comforting to know that ten percent of Whitney Hall GIRLS READ.

ARBITRATION OF RIVAL CLAIMS DEPT. . . It seems that publicity agents for the respective merits of California and New Hampshire as vacation spots had a minor clash some weeks ago. . . Following are excerpts from two stories which ran under the same head when news of Bette Davis' marriage hit the front pages. . .

Boston, Mass. (AP) — Arthur Fornsworth, who married Bette Davis, screen actress, last night, met his bride in 1939 when she was vacationing in New Hampshire.

Hollywood, Cal. (AP) — Bette met Fornsworth about a year ago when he came here from Boston on a vacation.

Which goes to prove that even the mighty machinery of the Associated Press can go wrong once in a while. AND SO DO WE.

CAMPUS DANCE PUBLICITY MEN, racking their brains for new angles, ought to take a tip from the University of Minnesota. . . The Minnesota Daily these days is full of publicity for, of all things, THE CONSTELLATION BALL. . . It had us guessing for a while until we turned the page and ran smack into a picture of three huh-oo co-eds. . . Do you get it now? . . . They chose the name 'cause at Minnesota there are SO MANY HEAVENLY BODIES!

A TRAGIC TALE OF FRUSTRATION, due to the intercalary peregrinations of a lost ring, was told in about thirty words in The Varsity's classified ads yesterday (if you read such things) . . . Evidently the owner, driven quite frantic chasing the ring, is nearing a breakdown. . . "Would the person who found a Victoria College pin and took it to the Registrar of University College and then decided to turn it in at Victoria instead, please phone —"

"A PLACE FOR EVERYTHING and everything in its place" was a motto drummed into us in grade school. . . Even though we haven't stuck to it, still our sense of propriety was injured when we read an item from Princeton to the effect that a course in the development of slapstick has been introduced with early movies of the Marx Brothers and W. C. Fields forming the first lecture. . . It's not the course that bothers us, for we haven't anything against the Marx Bros. and W.C. . . . But it was a blow to read that the lectures were being sponsored by none other than the sedate, dusty and solemn (so we had supposed) Princeton University DEPARTMENT OF ART AND ARCHAEOLOGY! . . . no less . . .

THE ULTRA-ULTIMATE in modern advertising, struck our eyes late yesterday afternoon when a local wholesale fish merchant drove his truck up to Hart House to provide for part of today's luncheon menu. . . In bold language there blazoned from the side of the truck these words . . . "If it swims, we have it." . . . JUST WRAP ME UP A WHALE, PLEASE.

WHY IN THE WORLD all Hither items degenerate into departments of such and such a la New Yorker we could never figure out. . . But since departments and lots of dots are always with us in Hithers here's something that might fit in an "Ain't Education Wonderful" department. . . Seems a second-year coed in English piped up in the middle of a discussion with . . . "I never knew Milton wrote Pepp's Diary." . . . Neither did we, sister, and the boys in the office are quite indignant. . . They still claim it was SHAKESPEARE WHO DONE IT.

DID YOU EVER HEAR OF Esse- quibo? . . . You probably haven't and you probably don't care . . . but we're still going to tell you that every day one copy of The Varsity is wrapped up, stamped and sent off to a missionary at "Sarnia Manse, Suddie, Esse- quibo, British Guiana, South America." . . . So you can stuff that down the throat of anyone who belittles The Varsity in future. . . Just like the paint ad, WE COVER THE WORLD.

CHUM MICHAEL, permanent tenant of this space, told one yesterday about the gal who got oooooo engrossed reading the Hither that she missed her street-car stop on the way home. . . We'll offer a hundred to one she gets home O.K. today. . . Probably never got past the first item. . . So realizing that maybe we should have stayed with the editorials which nobody reads anyhow, we'll say so-long. See you on page 2 I HOPE, I HOPE, I HOPE.

Class Party By Vic 4T3 For Hangovers

The 4T3 Hangover Party, ostentatiously announced by chubby pink elephants cavorting across the bulletin boards in the dignified halls of Vic, is just around the corner. Tomorrow night is the night, Burwash Hall the place, and 8.30 the hour.

The tempo will be set by Jim Bottomley's 6-piece orchestra. This band made its debut in university circles at the last Co-op dance and met with such universal approval that a repeat performance on the campus seemed in order. George Umehara will sing along with the band.

Besides a variety of novelty dances, spot dances "with valuable prizes" and a number of Paul Jones to times such as "There's a Tavern" or "Pink Elephants" to lighten the general Hangover atmosphere, a skit will be presented, whether on the Hangover theme or not it has been impossible to ascertain. For this skit the 4T3 executive has once again been able to secure the services of the Mighty Victorian Art Players, a group of ambitious and talented young men whose last effort along dramatic lines left conventional Victoria fairly gasping.

BULLETIN BOARD

STUDENT CONFERENCE
The annual Student Conference of the Inter-Varsity and Inter-School Christian Fellowship will be held Saturday afternoon and evening in Knox Church, Spadina and Harbord. The Rev. Stanley Glen, M.A., Ph.D., will speak at 3.00 p.m. At 7.45 p.m. Dr. Samuel M. Zwerner will speak. Discussion groups and Conference Supper are added features. Plan to be there.

DR. ZWERNER
Dr. Zwerner will lead the last of a series of discussion groups today at 1 o'clock in Room 8, University College. At five o'clock in the same place he will give his closing talk, dealing with the topic "The Power of His Gospel!"

VIC S.C.M.
John Coleman's study group will meet at 3 p.m. today in Room 23, Emmanuel College.

against a Varsity team. The American debaters are on an extended tour. It is expected that the debate, sponsored by the Students' Council, will be held in Trinity Library. The local team has not yet been chosen.

Reports on other Students' Council activities revealed that $870.00 worth of War Savings stamps have been sold in the Council office since February 1 when the campaign opened. It was also announced that all faculties are now definitely co-operating with the S.A.C. in drawing up lists of blood donors for immediate contributions. Complete lists will be compiled by the S.A.C. to be sent to the committee in charge of blood donations, who will contact volunteers as they are needed.

POWER OF THE GOSPEL IS ZWEMER'S TOPIC IN CURRENT SERIES

Church Has Lost Sight of Importance of Its Message, Says Former Princeton Professor

"GOSPEL A STIMULANT"

"Red with blood and black with shame," was Dr. Zwemer's description of the Mediterranean world in the time of St. Paul. Speaking in University College on the topic "The Power of His Gospel," Dr. Zwemer pointed to the suffering which accompanies the similar conditions existing today.

"Missions today lack realism, because the Church has lost the sense of the immediacy of its message, and of the supremacy and sufficiency of Christ. We appreciate the spiritual values of non-Christian religions without realizing their spiritual bankruptcy," he said.

"Who is Christ, and what did He do? He died for our sins and rose again according to the Scriptures. What does this mean to me today? In contrast to the Russians and their Lenin who say that Christianity is an opiate, Paul terms the Gospel a stimulant, a tonic, a dynamic," he continued.

"The truth of this statement becomes a pragmatic fact when we accept it. When you meet a supernatural person and see a supernatural work and have a supernatural experience, doubt is vanquished with the affirmation 'I know whom I have believed.' Then we say as David Livingstone did in his diary, Jan. 1st, 1846: 'I will place no value on anything I have in this world, save in relation to Jesus Christ,' the speaker concluded.

Clokic Discusses Fate Of Modern Democracy In Totalitarian World

Return to Individual Enterprise after Conclusion of War Thought Improbable by Manitoba Professor

DICTATOR NEEDED IN WAR

"There can be no return to individual enterprise after the victory, perhaps over," Dr. H. McD. Clokic of the Economics Dept. of the University of Manitoba said Friday in his lecture "Democratic Possibilities in a Totalitarian World" in the Economics Bldg. Dr. Clokic said we must apply inventiveness to modern institutions, to make a new kind of totalitarianism — democratic, not autocratic.

As for the political party system of our day, it has the advantage of being the only method in which all men are equal at the polls, he said.

Speaking of the position of the American government in the present crisis and in the crises to come, Dr. Clokic said, "The American constitution is based on the eighteenth century idea that all government is a necessary evil. Each department is formed to be a check on each of the others. The possibility of an effective centralization of effort is made very slight by this."

"In war," Dr. Clokic said, "Americans, like all other peoples, must realize they have a constitutional dictatorship. They must depend on the democratic feelings of their dictator."

COL. WALLACE TALKS ON ANTI-AIRCRAFT DEFENCE TECHNIQUE

Elaborate Workings of Air-Raid Protection Scheme Outlined by Anti-Aircraft Commander at Dunkirk

AIR BOMBINGS CLASSIFIED

Col. F. C. Wallace, who had charge of anti-aircraft gunnery at Dunkirk, lectured to the Royal Canadian Institute on Saturday night, on the workings of Britain's protection against enemy aircraft.

"In the last war," the lecturer said, "Britain used the trial-and-error method in her anti-aircraft defence, but now with the help of the best scientists Britain has the best equipment, much better than the Germans have. Now the anti-aircraft defence is very elaborate, with sound detectors, searchlights, predictors and height finders, in addition to the anti-aircraft guns themselves. One result has been that the anti-aircraft gunner now needs to be very skilled, for the target is difficult and the apparatus complicated."

Colonel Wallace outlined the best weapons against an air offensive, the most important being a large air force with more and better fighters, and the others anti-aircraft artillery and the passive weapon of concealment. This last form of protection is still in an imperfect state, he explained, owing to the layout of modern cities. The enemy naturally knows that a concentration of anti-aircraft artillery shows that there is a military or industrial objective in the vicinity.

"There are three types of air attack," explained Colonel Wallace, "those on military objectives which are usually medium or low level bombings and are the easiest to fight; civilian bombing, which is hard to combat for the aviator flies a high zig-zag course and doesn't bother with target or bomb-sights; and the attacks on transports and supply ships, which are of all kinds and require different types of defence."

VIC SOPHS HOLD HANGOVER PARTY

Celebrating that "worn out feeling" after the Vic At-Home, Victoria sophomores came to life in a big way Saturday evening to dance to the music of Jim Bottomley's orchestra at the 473 Hangover Party. Prize dances, a floor show featuring clever repartee, a striptease act, and coloured spot-lighting were all in the party, with genial president Jim Tapsell at the microphone.

MEL HAMILL TO PLAY FOR ATHLETIC DANCE

Plans for the annual Victoria Athletic At-Home, to be held on February 28, are well under way, a member of the executive told The Varsity yesterday.

At the dinner (6.30 to 9.00) in Burwash Hall the boys entitled to Athletic Awards will receive their "V's" and 10 of the girls who are graduating this year will receive athletic pins for outstanding performances and all-round participation in athletics.

After the dinner there will be dancing in Wymilwood to the strains of Mel Hamill's orchestra. If desired tickets may be purchased for the dance only instead of the whole evening. The executive is also anxious to impress on the student body of Victoria that the cost of the tickets has been reduced from last year and that they are expecting a record crowd.

JITTERBUGS RESUME JIVE AS SWING CLUB RE-OPENS

Campus jitterbugs will have an opportunity to resume rug-cutting activities at the jam sessions of the re-established "Swing Club". Once more eads and coeds will don their oldest and "give" to the rhythmic strains of George Carty and his orchestra. Student reactions are varied.

"Well," said Tom Paton, IV Vic, "looking at it from a psychological point of view, it releases us from our inhibitions and our suppressed desires." "It's a good thing for you to get rid of all your rhythm," said Jean Booth of V. Mary Ellen Fenwick, freshmen, remarked that it gave her a chance to "jitter with the rest of the 'jag-bugs'."

Victorians Frolic Valentine's Day At Annual Dance

Both Dan Cupid and the devotees of the Scarlet and Gold were on the loose last Friday evening as the sixteenth Vic formal and St. Valentine's day combined to give them a chance to get away from the cares and worries of the ordinary day.

One of the special features of the corsageless dance was the opportunity provided revellers to make donations to both the Dominion's war effort and the International Student Service, to which services they responded with the sum of some $170.

During the course of the evening the Bob Quartet lampooned a number of the prominent members of the college; V.C.U. President Ted Gray's song, "The Stars Tell Me We're Through," was played by The Commodores in Percy Faith's arrangement; and a sit-down supper was served with a Valentine's motif.

Brundrit Victorious In Gala School Election

Led by Band, Engineers Invade Hart House 1,000 Strong as Cannon Blasts Announce Campaign

Led by three Scottish pipers in a march from the Applied Science building, one thousand S.P.S. students en masse invaded Hart House Friday afternoon, opening officially the Engineers' annual election campaign.

At the stroke of twelve noon the campaign began with terrific blasts from a miniature cannon, which could be heard throughout the university campus. With the different bands playing, the singing and yelling of S.P.S. men, and huge banners and signs galore being displayed, the Engineers, in their usual style entered Hart House, marched down the hall and into the Great Hall.

After the elections, many Engineers marched downtown carrying banners with the familiar sign "Buy War Savings Certificates"; but later were broken up by the police due to traffic congestion. The remaining S.P.S. men took the afternoon off to see a hurlesque show.

The results of the S.P.S. elections: Engineering Society Executive — President, W. F. Brundrit; 1st Vice-President, J. R. Gundy; 2nd Vice-President, J. T. Cawley; Treasurer, J. N. Dickie; Secretary, H. Hall. Athletic Association Executive — President, H. J. Barrett; Vice-president, W. Henry; Secretary-Treasurer, D. Grosskurth (Accl.).

Executive 4T2 — President, J. P. D. Rogers; Vice-president, K. Kidd; Secretary-Treasurer, D. Allan (Accl.); Athletic Representative, W. L. Blaud. Executive 4T3 — President, W. A. Mooser; Vice-president, R. F. Lewarne; Cody Announces Prospective Speed-up as Curriculum Changes in Medical Course Are Prepared

CONSIDER SUMMER COURSE

Should military necessity warrant it, the medical course for students in their fifth and sixth years would immediately be "speeded up," announced President Cody last night.

Dr. Cody said that the university would not take such action unless it was requested by the Army Medical Corps. In this event, he continued, the Faculty of Medicine would submit, for the approval of the university senate, necessary curriculum changes which already have been carefully prepared.

"While I am not aware of an immediate shortage, it is possible that there might be one later in this war," said the President, "and the University of Toronto is ready to meet any exigency which may arise."

Colonel A. R. Hagerman, medical officer for Military District No. 2, declared that up to the present time there had been no sign of any shortage of army doctors in Ontario. "But what the situation is in other parts of the Dominion, I cannot say," he added.

In case of emergency, fifth year medical students would take their sixth year during the summer months and graduate in the fall.

STEW MUNRO WINS BRONZE IN ANNUAL S.P.S. ELECTIONS

The Bronze "S", the highest athletic award which the Faculty of Applied Science can bestow, was won at the annual School Elections on Saturday by Stew Munro, star plunging-half of the champion S.C. School grid squad.

Only one of the coveted awards is given each year, and the winner is chosen at the annual elections. Last year the "S" was won by Doug Turner, intercollegiate rugby star.

Stew has played intermediate as well as intramural rugby and interfaculty baseball, and hockey. This year he won the McPhene Memorial Trophy as the most useful rugby player to his team. He will receive the award at the Alumni Dinner on March 1st.

Secretary-treasurer, G. R. Heffernan; Athletic Representative, R. C. Quinton.

Executive 4T4 — President, J. Ward; Vice-president, J. D. Abell; Secretary-treasurer, W. G. Kingsmill; Athletic Representative, W. W. Moffat.

Club Chairmen — Civil Club, W. S. Glynn (Accl.); Mining and Metallurgical Club, V. H. Smith (Accl.); Mechanical Club, D. J. Parrish (Accl.); Architectural Club, C. F. T. ## Sigmund Freud Discussed In Varsity Interview

Nephew of Famous Austrian Psychoanalyst, a Toronto Visitor, Reviews Life of Freud

By Marg Parks

"Sigmund Freud seems to be better known among the people of Canada, the United States and England than among those of his native country, Austria," stated Dr. Harry Freud, nephew of the originator of psychoanalysis in an interview with The Varsity during his recent visit to Toronto. Dr. Freud, a European refugee, received his Doctor of Law degree in Vienna and is at present living in New York.

Dr. Freud chose to deal, in the interview, with the personal history of his uncle, and revealed that the great scientist, for example, in his earlier (Continued on Page 4)

Vic Graduates Hold Election At Early Date

Wednesday, February 19, will be the new date of the annual elections for the permanent executive of the graduating class of Victoria College, Ed Kirkland, vice-president of the Victoria College Union, told The Varsity yesterday. The election will be held a month earlier this year due to the change in the time of publication of Torontonensis, necessitating an earlier submission of executive pictures. The preliminary election will set a precedent, having formerly been held at the same time as the other executive elections, in March.

All nominations for the offices (president, vice-president, associate president and treasurer) must be in by 5 p.m. on Monday, February 17th. Any undergraduate in third year Pass Arts or fourth year Honour is eligible for office. Only members of the graduating class will vote.

LAURIER, MINES MINISTER TO ADDRESS LIBERAL CLUB

Tomorrow at 1 p.m. in the Graduate Dining Room of Hart House, the first luncheon meeting of the University Liberal Club will be held. The guest of honour and speaker of the occasion will be the Hon. Robert Laurier, Minister of Mines in the Ontario government.

"Special interest has always been attached to Mr. Laurier's career because he is a nephew of Sir Wilfrid Laurier," a member of the executive of the club informed The Varsity yesterday.

Publicity---We Can Help

There has been much discussion this year, official and unofficial, about the nature and effectiveness of university publicity. We explained our stand, early last fall, that such publicity was becoming increasingly important in this age of advertising; that present university publicity was effective within certain limits; but that a definite positive policy should be laid down and acted upon; and that this could best be achieved through the establishment of a separate full-time department of publicity which would be distinct from the rapidly growing Department of University Extension from which publicity now emanates.

At the moment, however, with the year fast drawing to a close, the time is opportune for discussion of what fundamentally is the best technique of publicity any university can have—and that is the example of those who have passed through its halls and have entered the varied walks of life.

Graduates often report that people in other parts of the province look upon the university with disfavour, though not for any specific reasons. Do something, they plead, to publicize the university and change that attitude. We do agree that something must be done, and something is being done on a small scale all the time. But is that the only remedy? Are those many graduates all doing their utmost individually to reflect credit upon their alma mater? Are we, as future graduates, going to be forces for the good of Varsity—or for the continuance of a general attitude of disapproval? That is the question which must be posed to members of this year's graduating class, and if possible, those in authority who will be called upon to speak to coming graduates in the next few months should discuss that phase of the new life as well as jobs, salaries, and other material considerations. Constructive suggestions are needed.

In broad outline, the problem is one of assuming the full responsibilities of life in the community. Whatever be man's basic nature, a subject of much discussion, his world is at present organized upon the community, and the communal life has become the normal life. Within the community, each has his duties and responsibilities if each is to derive the many benefits for realization of which, fundamentally, the community was created. University men and women are considered to have been trained as specialists in the professions and in other walks of life requiring qualifications; likewise, they are supposedly trained in the elements and art of good citizenship. Unless they apply the results of this training in their everyday life after graduation, the grounds are ample for claiming that university training is either useless or ill-directed, and that universities in general are of little value.

That is the broad statement of what can become, and in some places has become, a very serious matter. It is a problem upon which every graduating student should expound some hard thought, and upon which those above us should give advice. We have had privileges at university but by and large we have earned them, saved for them, worked hard for them, and made sacrifices for them. On those grounds no one may rightfully criticize us. But if, after working for these university privileges, we fail to apply our training to the problems of community life, then we are failing ourselves, and transcending self, we are failing our university and the many others who will in the future wish to partake of the manifold opportunities it offers.

All in The Front Line

The interdependent relation between industrial production and the fighting forces was one of the points stressed by Ernest Bevin, British minister of labor, in his radio talk to the people of Canada yesterday. We are all in the front, or should be, in this war, whether we fight in Africa, undergo bomb attacks in England, or enjoy the security of life here in Canada. We have a duty here as a great producing and training centre from which a steady stream of munitions primarily, and men too, must flow. Those who toil in the mines and factories are as vital to the triumph of our cause as are those who man the planes, the guns and the ships.

The labor minister told of the plea which had been made to British labor that no soldier or civilian must suffer because anyone had slackened on his job. Production must be maintained, and those who help to maintain it are vital cogs in the war machine. Another cog, just as necessary, consists of the personal sacrifice of each and every citizen—of those who as yet are not giving their lives. It might be said: "Let no person suffer ill, nor let the nation come close to peril, because you slackened in your effort and were too selfish to sacrifice." Those of us who are not on the actual front nor in the arsenals of production can contribute just as important an effort by personal sacrifice through the regular purchase of War Savings stamps. Purchase of stamps and certificates is a weapon for victory and an investment for the future—not in any real sense a sacrifice.

PERFECTION

Perfection Itself

Zara Nelsova

An enthusiastic audience greeted Zara Nelsova, first cellist of the T.S.O., in the concert in the Great Hall of Hart House last night. She is one of Canada's most artistic musicians, and remains in this country because of world conditions.

A delightful two movement Sonata by Boccherini provided a fitting opening. The Sonata in A major of Beethoven which followed was a revelation. Seldom are we given the chance to hear the cello works of this great master, and much more seldom are they given performances like this one by Miss Nelsova and Mr. Barkin. Perfect phrasing, exquisite colour, rhythm, and a thorough understanding of the composer was demonstrated in their rendition. A much better and more voluminous selection of superlatives such as Lawrence Gilman would have been able to find would be necessary to adequately express in words the beauty of Zara Nelsova's playing.

Any group after the Beethoven would be an anti-climax, but this superb artist could play anything after anything else and it would sound excellent. Her final encore was the dashing Zapateado, by Sarasate. It is a virtuoso piece which only top-notch violinists can manage; on the cello it must be doubly difficult. But last night's artist has such mastery over her instrument that anything she tackles sounds easy.

BLYTH YOUNG

Half 'n Half

Conservatory String Quartet

If the Conservatory String Quartet had been content to half fill the T.C.M. Concert Hall, and had played an evening of string quartets (or quintets), this review would very probably be completely favourable. When they were playing the second Rasmoufky Quartet by Beethoven, they were perfectly quartetish and extremely enjoyable. The second movement, Molto Adagio, with its air of hesitating tonality and the Allegretto Scherzo with its "Weinberger" melodies were especially well done.

The other number on the program was a Concerto for Violin, Piano, and String Quartet by Chausson (perpetrator of that favourite of the New York Philharmonic's guest violinists, Poeme). It is doubtful whether a more unmusically piece of tripe can ever have been written. Terribly dated to a school of violin playing which is happily passing out of REPORTER: That's very odd Mr. Gitch. Of course you realize that Gone with the Wind is a four bell as well as a five Star production. It is filmed in gorgeous technicolor and has a cast of thousands.

GITCH: I know all that . . . the truth of the matter is . . . I don't like quiddies.

REPORTER: Yes, but Gitch . . . the picture took over eighteen years to make and involved an expense sheet totalling 40 billion dollars. . . Now confess Mr. Gitch . . . what is the real reason that you're not seeing this splendid vehicle.

GITCH: Well . . . it ain't on a double bill.

REPORTER: But Gitch . . . The picture runs over four hours. Isn't that long enough to stay in one theatre?

GITCH: Naw . . . I stay to see the show twice anyway. I bring my lunch.

REPORTER: I see . . . well . . . doesn't the cast interest you . . . Think of beautiful Vivien Leigh playing the part of the lovable vixen of the Southlands, torn between two loves . . . think of masculine Clark Gable.

GITCH: This guy Gable is miscast. . . You need a guy like Jimmie Cagney for the part of Rat Butler . . . And besides I don't like this new guy Selznick . . . I know a Selznick back home and if this is the same guy he don't get no business from me.

REPORTER: Yes . . . but millions have seen this great epic of the South.

GITCH: Listen, bub . . . I like to see double bills with an assortment of newsreels and short subjects . . . I like my money's worth.

REPORTER: Well . . . I think G.W. T.W. will give you your money's worth.

GITCH: Listen, pal . . . do you know what I got at the Orpheum theatre last week and it wasn't even Bank Night . . . I saw a good double bill with Gene Autry and Rex the Wonder Canine . . . I got a 24 piece set of Pink Pandora dishes, with silverware thrown in, 3 yo-yos, two encyclopedias, a Morris chair and two sofas, not to mention the free candy they gave away in the lobby.

REPORTER: Well, Mr. Gitch, I must admit that's wonderful . . . how much did you pay to get in?

GITCH: Who pays? . . . I go on passes.

existence, the atmosphere of the piece is one of the most abject sentimentality. A string quartet playing unison passages with a piano is disgustingly servile—and when it is done with no more purpose than to provide an orchestra for a display of technical romanticisms, one either laughs or becomes sick.

That the audience went wild over the whole thing (that he neglected Beethoven) may unfortunately cause the members of the quartet with some other Kathleen Parlow and Alberto Guerrero to repeat their time-wasting with a similar monotony.

VIC AHEAD IN FENCING

By George Forster

School of Practical Science added another scalp to their already well-lunged Saturday night as they walked away with the Davidson Cup at the Senior Interfaculties Assault-at-Arms. The Engineers, by virtue of their victory in the Novice Assault, and their overwhelming win Saturday, cannot possibly fail to win the coveted mug, although the fencing finals are not yet completed. S.P.S. garnered 27 points; Vic stood second with 15.

The School mat-men swept the wrestling, winning every match but one. The prize package of the wrestling show was the overtime bout between Fox of School and Buchanan of Aerial Navigation, which the Engineer won by a narrow decision.

The boxing card was cut down to three set-tos because of defaults. Lloyd Delaney of Trinity was forced to default to Rolf Stanley of Wycliffe because of an infected lip, while George Oliphant, former Mustang grid star and now O.C.E. basketball coach, was unable to break away from the O.C.E.-St. Mike's cage tilt in time for his bout.

IRISH WHIP TEACHERS IN CAGE THRILLER

St. Mike's City League Crew Hold Lead All Through Game
in Downing Pedagogues 52-39

Throwing back an early second-period challenge, the St. Mike's City League cage squad flashed some of its real seasonal form to take the measure of O.C.E. 52-39 in Saturday night's exhibition game before a packed gallery. Right up till the last few minutes it was a nip-and-tuck battle in which the Irish never relinquished the lead they acquired in the first minute of play. Two long-distance baskets in the last fifteen seconds shot the Irish score into the fifty-point stratum.

The Gaels took the lead on a free toss; referee Tony Ragusa, who did a capable job throughout, was forced to call numerous fouls during the first twenty minutes. Hal Brown quit the floor early in the second period. Jack Lavarney, who never got going, joined him soon after. By the half-way mark St. Mike's held a 21-12 lead but had muffed more than a few sure two-pointers. But O.C.E. returned the gift, missed four perfect set-ups when close in.

The Teachers brought the fans to their feet with an inspired rally in the first two minutes of the second half. Wally Brown, Wynne, Prince and Charlie Belchamber, who sank five free throws out of five tries and turned in the best all-round performance for O.C.E., each dumped in a basket to haul themselves within one point of the Irish.

That was the closest they ever got. St. Mike's, settling down after a shaky start, treated the crowd to a smart exhibition of ball-handling, throwing out a passing attack that the Teachers could not match. Mike Padden got hot, counted four times on beautiful one-handed tosses, finished up high man with 13 points under his belt. O.C.E. kept close behind for a while, lagged 32-29 at one point, then fell back for keeps.

IT'S GETTING COLOSSAL

Wethinks (that's editorial for methinks) that the contractors who built the Athletic Wing in Hart House should have used a composition of rubber cement, because the walls will have to have a two-way stretch if the University Nights continue to attract crowds like that of Saturday.

A well-deserved hand goes to Jack Ronayne, Athletic Director of St. Mike's, who led the committee in charge of the evening. The Irish were swell hosts, and the Bay Street boys turned out en masse for the big event. The Father Superior of St. Michael's granted all the lads special permissions for the evening, and they made the best of their turn to stage a University Night.

What we liked was the way in which the lads of the committee co-operated in putting the program across, and in handling the record through of over 1,100.

Last weekend Chief Host Jack Ronayne and this scribe were delegates at an O.A.C. function in Guelph, where we spent some time looking for a mysterious guy named Smith whose room had been allotted to Jack. On questioning the hall porter and the fellow in the next room, we were reliably informed that Smith was not Smith the wrestler (who was also a stranger to us), but Smith of Dairy Option. "Why, of course," we chorused feebly, "Smith of Dairy Option!" and we were led away muttering.

So we think it's only fair to let you know that when Ronayne had all you lads and lassies tramping by in the Grand March on Saturday he was not trying to find the Blue Ribbon Couple; he's still looking for Smith of Dairy Option.

Seriously though, Saturday was a wonderful demonstration of how popular these Saturday shindigs have become with Joe College and Betty Coed.

The sports menu was varied enough for the widest range of tastes, with everything on the card from Chinese Checkers to water polo. The Senior Assault provided some good B. W. and F. tilts. Desmond Whately of Aerial Navigation put up a surprisingly good scrap against intercollegiate champion Bill Ramore of School. The Pilot did a fair job in the first half of the bout, keeping his guard snug enough to prevent Bill from breaking in for telling punches. But Ramore's lefts to the face finally started the claret flowing, and the decision was a clean one for the Engineer.

The basketball fans were raving about the torrid tussle staged by the St. Mike's city league squad and the snappy interfaculties O.C.E. A outfit. At half-time it looked as if the Irish would take the game by a wide margin, but the Teachers turned in some of the classiest basketball seen in Hart House this year to make a bold bid for victory. Until close to the closing minutes it was anybody's game. Prince was making nice shots from all sorts of angles, but the apple just wouldn't pierce the hoop when the points were most needed. The Brown Twins and Belchamber, in fact the whole O.C.E. squad, showed all and sundry that their dazzling record in the interfaculties loop was not wholly due to poor competition in the group. Those Pedagogues are good, as every St. Mike's player will testify.

George Casarette and his International Collegians were a pleasing feature of the Double Blue's program. Once these boys, all 16 of them from St. Mike's, got into the groove they were solid and mellow throughout. Fifteen of the bandmen hail from the States, and the other from Colombia, S.A. Three-quarters of the group went to high school together at Aquinas Institute in Rochester. Ed Dorrity, the Kodak City's gift to campus journalism, was feeding us enough newsy items about the orchestra to fill a dozen columns. For instance, did you get a load of the way Drummer-boy Paul Fox smacked the skins? Paul doesn't use drum-sticks; he prefers the rungs of chairs for sending out his boogie beat. He has never had a lesson on the drums, sings every note of the melody to himself while his hands are busy pounding out the rhythm. The general opinion seemed to be highly in favour of asking Casarette and his classy crew to return for another evening of their danceable music.

We feared that spring were here, come end of last week, but 'twere a fluke. The icy blasts be with us again—probably be a soft, quiet drizzle when this meets the eye—and the hockey schedule will resume its interrupted pace with a game tonight at 6 between St. Mike's and Vic I on the Trinity Rink. Last week's games will have to pick themselves up at odd moments during this week's free times, so there should be a game or two a day to keep Joanie Griffith's worries away. It'll be some going to make up probably half a dozen games but it's got to be did so here's counting on that ice.

Vic and U.C. are holding their swimming meets at the O.C.E. pool this Tuesday and Wednesday nights respectively at 7.30. Due to the fact that P.T. are not entering a team this year, U.C. are expected to enter two teams in the interfaculties meet starting next Monday. So people who can barely get along with their feet on the bottom will probably rate excellent chances for one of these teams. Come on out everyone. If you can get around in a bathtub your chances are A1. Let's see lots at both these meets.

days had no particular interest in psychology and very little more in entering which he chose to study on medicine the University of Vienna.

In this field he was the first to indicate the possibility of using the derivatives of the herb coca in anaesthesia. Later, when he moved to Hamburg, his discoveries were developed by Dr. Koller.

After making biological studies in Trieste, he went to Paris where he studied hypnosis with Professor Charcot. Disatisfied with this as a method of psychological investigation, he developed the technique of psychoanalysis.

The main part of this was achieved in Vienna where he lectured and wrote An Introduction to Psychoanalysis.

In 1888 Freud lived in an apartment house on the site of the Vienna Theatre which had burned down in 1833. By living there he dispelled the superstition which had kept the place uninhabited. Later he moved to Bergasse St. where he remained until the advent of the Hitler regime.

Freud was left bankrupt after the Nazis burned his books, ruining the publishing company in which he had assets. One of his pupils, Princess George of Greece, paid his debts and through her influence with the German government, helped him to escape to England.

According to his nephew, Freud's outlook in his later years became more philosophical, a fact which is reflected in his writings of that period, notably Moses and Monotheism.

Results—

During his 16 years of suffering from cancer Freud underwent thirty-five operations but took nothing to relieve the pain, not wishing to dim his mental alertness.

Of his six children five are still living. Two of them are engineers, one of whom is a British, and one a French citizen. Another is a lawyer now with the British Pioneer Corps. One daughter is married and the other, Anna Freud, the only one carrying on her father's work, is interested in child psychoanalysis, and is working in England.

Freud died and was cremated in England in 1939. "He never discussed psychoanalysis in his private life," Dr. Freud concluded.

S.P.S. WINS SENIOR ASSAULT AND DAVIDSON TROPHY

Vic beat Jackson of Trinity in the 118-pound class. Intercollegiate champ of the 145-pounders which he outsmarted "Pat" Paterson of U.C. was the pick George Lewis of Vic.

The pick of the fights was the Ramore-Whately scrap in the heavy division. Outweighed fifteen pounds, Ramore showed the results of his intercollegiate training as he scored a technical knockout in the third. The Englishman opened several cuts on the big Flier's face before Mel Glionna stopped the fight.

Only the foil finals were run off in the fencing. Ralph Thiers of Vic came out on top in this weapon with Cunningham of Vic second and Ballie of S.P.S. third. Finals in the epee and sabre will be staged next Saturday.

Results—

Boxing:

118 pounds: Hurst, Vic defeated Jackson, Trinity (decision).

135 pounds: Stanley, Wycliffe defeated Delaney, Trinity (default).

145 pounds: Paterson, U.C. defeated Lewis, Vic (decision).

165 pounds: Gausby, Trinity defeated O'Donnell, S.P.S. (default).

Heavy: Ramore, S.P.S. defeated Whately, Aerial Navigation (T.K.O.).

Wrestling:

118 pounds: Cutt, S.P.S. defeated Lambie, Trinity (two falls).

125 pounds: Mastard, S.P.S. defeated Coleman, Wycliffe (default).

may be heard. It may be delicate and intimate, bringing into close relation the performer and the audience.

Even when the reality is as bad as the stuff that was bandied about in the Hart House Music Room, the idea of chamber music in the abstract loses none to its charm. Whatever the Chamber Music Society perpetrated there, it has often been credited with turning out good concerts.

To sum up the whole trouble (or at least its major part) as shortly as possible, no one was in tune with himself or anyone else. In such small instrumental combinations the difference of a vibration or so between the instruments is glaring, and on Friday the differences were much greater than that minimum. One cannot tune a stringed instrument at 5 p.m. in one room and expect it to still be in tune at six in another—yet so sanguine were the performers. Neither can one properly tune a "cello by plucking the strings or rasping across them fortississimo.

With the dice loaded against them from the moment the performers entered the room, composers Telemann, Gibbs, Haydn, and Chaminade had no chance. You who were absent were lucky.

Professional Smoke

Randolph Macdonald's Photographs

The photographic exhibit in Hart House Art Gallery, by Randolph Macdonald, is distinctly friendly. It has been said that a man who smokes is usually a more genuinely sociable character. There are at least four pipe smokers in the show. A study of Walter Bowles, pipe in hand, won an award of merit at the O.S.P. convention. Another successful portrait is of Professor Coventry, who beams through swirls of smoke.

The architecture is striking for the angles at which the pictures are taken and for the good lighting effects. There is one larger landscape, Loch Tay, which merits attention for the cloud effects and pleasing composition.

"Thank you, thank you sir"—a proletarian, tipping his peaked cap, displays a sincere feeling.

All in all the exhibit is quite pleasing, though a variation from the portraiture might serve to give us a more complete knowledge of Mr. Macdonald's excellent work in photography.

AVENGE DEFEAT BY SCHOOL

Jr. Meds finally entered the baseball win column with a 3-1 victory over Jr. School on Saturday at noon. They avenged the 13-1 defeat by School earlier in the year.

Meds scored all of their three runs in the first half of the first inning. S.P.S. tried in vain to rally in the second inning after being held to no runs in the first, but they only shoved across the only other run of the game.

The game was mostly a pitcher's battle with Al Dixon of Meds shading the School pitcher as he fanned eight batters and only allowed three hits.

Dean Mitchell Celebrates Sixty-Ninth Birthday; Last Before Retirement

Promoted to Rank of Brigadier-General in Last War; Has Held Office in Empire Club and Music Societies

DEAN OF S.P.S. SINCE 1919

Today Brig.-General Charles Hamilton Mitchell, Dean of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering, is celebrating his sixty-ninth birthday, his last as a member of the university staff. Due to very exacting duties in connection with an important military post which he has filled since before the outbreak of war and a desire to "get out before the age limit overtakes me" Dean Mitchell plans to retire from the headship of the faculty at the end of this term.

The Dean is a graduate of Varsity where he took his B.A.Sc. in 1892. As an undergraduate he served for three years on the staff of the Varsity under the editorship of Stephen Leacock.

From his graduation until the outbreak of the last war Dean Mitchell practiced engineering, taking time out to receive his Civil Engineering degree from the university in 1898, and again (Continued on Page 4)

New Items Appear In Torontonensis

"In the coming issue of Torontonensis we hope to surprise our readers with several new and original features," Editor Al Mallon told The Varsity last week.

"Our part of the work is progressing fairly well," he continued, "but we find that more active co-operation from the various campus organizations will be necessary if we are to go to print on schedule."

Mallon hopes that Torontonensis will go to press during the third week of March at the earliest. Several organizations have not yet turned in their reports, and this might possibly hold up the publication for some time.

In the coming issue the sports section will differ from previous years. Instead of featuring intercollegiate sport activities, there will be 20 pages devoted to the athletics of the home campus. There will be fewer pictures, and more articles, written to suit the interests of all, especially graduates.

Satisfaction Regarding Course Expressed by Lads in Blue

A survey of navy lads training on the campus revealed that the boys in blue have plenty of work, consider Hart House the high spot of their schooling here, have been well treated, but have not yet had time to size up the ins and outs of this vast conglomeration of federated faculties and colleges.

This situation was clearly summed up by George Trow who remarked, "The short period of three months doesn't allow us time to get acquainted with the university as we would like to."

When asked about the amount of work they are faced with, another seaman declared, "They throw it at us 26 hours a day."

Besides their daily classes in the Physics Building the navy recruits spend from 7.30 to 10.30 three nights a week at Western Technical School learning woodworking, sheet metal work, electricity, and machinery. Every Monday morning is spent drilling at the armories. It was pointed out that little time was left to study.

Seniors to Name Moss Winner

Nominations for the University College candidate for the $300 Moss Scholarship, awarded annually to the "best all-round man or woman in the final year," will take place at 1.00 p.m. Thurs. Feb. 20, in Room 6, University College. Candidates will also be named for the Permanent Executive of the year.

All final year students of University College, either third year Pass, or fourth year Honour students, are eligible to make nominations, and are urged to be present.

join the R.C.N.V.R., compared the navy course with his university work. "It is more practical and less theoretical, and has more hours and less homework," he said, and added, "They're a swell bunch of chaps."

Hugh Allen and Hugh Joyce were questioned regarding Varsity co-eds. Both complained that they hardly ever see any, and remarked, "Any time they want to drop around to the Physics Building they're welcome."

The naval students have been granted free membership to Hart House while they are here. All were quite in favour with the Great Hall meals. Today they are scheduled to be shown about the place, and informed of their rights as the myriad of facilities are unfolded before them.

The minimum educational requirement for the training is Middle School mathematics but many of the recruits have their Honour Matriculation, and a few have had one or more years in university. The theoretical work so far has been concerned with brushing up on upper school mathematics.

Dean of S.P.S. to Retire at End of Term

Brigadier-General C. H. Mitchell, retiring Dean of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering, who today is celebrating his sixty-ninth birthday. Dean Mitchell, head of School for 22 years, served overseas during the First Great War, and was a member of the Board of Governors of the University of Toronto from 1913 to 1919. He is a graduate of this university and was a member of the staff of The Varsity during his undergraduate years. He holds the Distinguished Service Order, and is a Companion of the Bath and a Companion of the Order of St. Michael and St. George.

MARCH 5th IS DATE NAMED FOR HART HOUSE ELECTIONS

Wednesday, March 5 has been announced by the Comptroller's Office as the date for the annual Hart House elections. Nominations of undergraduate members of the House will be received at the Warden's Office between Friday, February 21 and 6 p.m. on February 26. Withdrawals will be permitted up to 6 p.m. the following day.

Elections will be held for all the standing committees of Hart House including House, Library, Music, Art, Camera, Squash and Debates. With the exception of the Camera and Squash committee elections these are open to all undergraduate members. The Camera Committee election is open only to members of the Hart House Camera Club and to qualify for the Squash Racquets Committee a member must certify that he has played at least six games in the past year and his name must have been on either the A, B, or Freshman lists for at least three weeks prior to the election.

A special election open to members of the Glee Club only will be held to elect the executive of that body on Tuesday, February 25.

The Debates Committee has decided to carry on this year although there have been no debates at Hart House since the start of the war. It is thought advisable to have a committee ready to work on debates should they be resumed.

The same election rules obtain this year as in former years. Candidates are held to a maximum of $5 for election expenses and must not give away any articles of value.

Nomination forms are obtainable at the Warden's Office.

Y.C.L. PAMPHLETS

Students are requested to bring any Young Communist League pamphlets which they receive to either of The Varsity offices. They are reminded that it is illegal to keep such in their possession.

Librarians Frown on Students Excuses As they Fail to Return Books on Time

A Variety of Excuses Are Offered by Late-Comers, but Most Students Pay Fines Without Comment

BURSAR RECEIVES FINES

Here are a few helpful hints on what excuses not to use when returning a library book late.

Students who frequent the University College reading room will not be interested because they are usually very prompt about returning their books, it was learned. Weather and social conditions cause a variation in the number of late books at the university library.

A big dance or a snowstorm always foretell a greater number of excuses the following morning. Of these the most overworked and consequently least effective are "I missed the street car" or "I slept in." Consideration is given to students who have bona fide motor accidents, or are sick, if they call the library on time. (N.B.: If you lose a (Continued on Page 4)

THE VIC S.C.M. HOLDS OPEN HOUSE TONIGHT

"How will the war affect social change in England?" is the topic Vic students will discuss tonight at the S.C.M. monthly "Open House."

Prominent thinkers have expressed two different opinions. "Local government in England is today inadequate to meet the needs of war-time. Ninety thousand children in the city of London alone are getting no schooling whatever. What does this mean to the future of the Motherland?" This statement is typical of one attitude.

MR. TSAI TO ADDRESS S.C.M. SUPPER PARTY

To mark Mr. C. S. Tsai's return to the campus for today the S.C.M. is planning a supper party for Meds, S.P.S., and Dents men this evening. At 5.15 p.m. in the Debates Room at Hart House Mr. Tsai will speak on "London University Under Bombs", which will be followed by supper in the Great Hall.

The visitor, who addressed several meetings about the university on Sunday is a former general secretary of the Y.M.C.A. in China. Last year he was appointed International Secretary of the British S.C.M., which post he held till coming to America in September 1940.

At 1 p.m. Mr. Tsai will meet Varsity life students at lunch. Due to a change in plans he is unable to be present at the Victoria College Open House. However the meeting will be held as planned at 8.30 p.m. in Alumni Hall, and the topic of "Social Change in Britain"

U.C. FRENCH CLUB PRESENT LABICHE COMEDY TONIGHT

"La Lettre Chargee", one of Labiche's comic plays, will be performed tonight at a meeting of the U.C. French Club, to be held at 8 p.m. at the Women's Union, to which all are invited.

On former occasions, part of the time was taken up by a talk in French; tonight there will be no talk and the play will therefore be longer.

As usual however, the Women's Union will resound with the echoes of La Marseillaise and other French songs, and after serving of refreshments, dancing will be "a l'honneur".

Theatre Night To Replace Matinee Series

University Drama Committee Hopes that Change of Time will be More Convenient for Players and Audience

4 COLLEGES REPRESENTED

The four Arts colleges, Trinity, Victoria, St. Michael's, and University College, will each be represented at the first University Theatre Night, to be presented in Hart House Theatre.

The Theatre Night is intended to replace the Wednesday afternoon series of plays previously sponsored by the committee, as it was felt that due to military drill the men of the university found difficulty in attending afternoon performances. It is also hoped that persons outside the university will find the evening performance more convenient.

"The Rising of the Moon", by Lady Gregory, a play dealing with Irish life will be presented by the Trinity College Dramatic Society, under the direction of David Ker.

Second on the evening's bill will be the St. Michael's Drama Society, appearing for the first time with the Drama Committee; they will present "The Bishop's Candlesticks", by Norman MacKinnell directed by Thomas McDermott.

The University College Players' Guild offering will be two scenes from Clifford Odets' "Waiting for Lefty", with Vincent Blockley directing.

Mystery is the principal ingredient of the play scheduled for the end of the evening. It will be "Wits' End", by Wall Spence, given by the Victoria Dramatic Society, and directed by Betty McRae.

Ingholt to Speak On Caravan City

Professor Harald Ingholt, Danish scholar and authority on the Near East, will deliver a lecture on "Palmyra, Caravan City of the Syrian Desert," in the Household Science Building tomorrow. The lecture is under the Archaeological Institute of America.

For two years Professor Ingholt carried on excavations at Palmyra, and for eight seasons explored the site of Hama on the Orontes, where he made many discoveries concerning the city mentioned in the Bible as the scene of battles between the Hittites, Assyrians, Turks and Arabs.

Coming from a museum post in Copenhagen, the explorer took a lectureship in Archaeology at the American University at Beirut.

Dental Students to Present Musical Numbers at Dentantics

Dentantics, annual show of the Dental faculty, will be produced in Hart House Theatre February 26. The Varsity learned yesterday.

This year's new features include a glee club of 20 members, a harmony quartet of three tooth tuggers and a Dental Nurse, a piano team and skits put on by each of the five years. Only feature of last year's Dentantics which will be missing will be the skit of the "Foreign Legion", a group of Australian students who were in Toronto during 1939-40.

Highlights of the show will be the

VACANCY FILLED BY COWIE

Harold Ernest Eby, 40, Officer Commanding Machine Gun Coy, C.O.T.C., died on Saturday at the Toronto General Hospital. He had been ill since last October with a heart condition.

Since the outbreak of the present war he had been actively associated with the university C.O.T.C. A former Company Sergeant-Major he was appointed to the rank of Lieutenant in command of the Machine Gun Coy, this year. The place left vacant by his death will be taken provisionally by 2nd Lt. A. H. Cowie, Capt. Miller, Adjutant C.O.T.C., said.

Apart from his post with the C.O.T.C. Lt. Eby was on the staff of the Morse St. Public School, and on the executive of the Public Schools Athletic Association. He received his Bachelor of Arts degree extramurally from this university, and after several years on the staff of Jordan Public School, he joined that of the Morse St. School in 1922. In 1925 he enlisted with the 48th Highlanders, and was with that regiment for several years.

Liberals to Hear Hon. Robt. Laurier

Hon. Robert Laurier, nephew of the great Sir Wilfrid, is to address the University Liberal Club luncheon today in the Graduates' Dining Room, Hart House. In his cabinet capacity he will speak on the subject "Observations on the Mining Industry in Ontario since taking office". He has just returned from an extended trip through Ontario's northern mining areas.

U.C. JUNIOR-SENIOR SWING TO AVONDE

The annual University College Junior-Senior Dance, to be held February 28 in Eaton Auditorium, will close the U.C. social season, Gord Pyne, third year Literary and Athletic Society representative, told The Varsity yesterday.

Richard Avonde and his orchestra will supply music for the flashing feet of the Artsmen and their ladies during the evening.

Jack Macdonald, Chairman of the Dentantics Committee, has written three songs which will be heard for the first time at the show.

The graduating year will lampoon staff members in their skit.

Postwar World

There has been talk in the United States, from time to time, of asking England and Germany to state their war aims, as was done in the last war. The requests have been few and have received little attention, no doubt mainly because most people feel that it is quite obvious what both sides are fighting for. The question has been answered for England in countless cartoons representing an attacked person fighting to save his life, while someone stands idly by and asks him why he is fighting. Viewed in that light, it does appear to be a pointless question.

However the question that goes hand in hand with it—the question of each side's plans for a postwar world—is one about which everyone must wonder. It too has received remarkably little attention, although a few American Congressmen have suggested that a statement of their plans be demanded from both governments. The suggestion has also been made by a certain group in England who feel that the British cause would be helped by a detailed statement of her plans for Germany, Italy and the rest of Europe after she wins the war. Last week, however, Premier Churchill put an end to the discussion in the British House of Commons when he said that there was no demand for such a statement from the United States.

Denying that any such step was necessary, Mr. Churchill stated that the United States thoroughly understood "what we are fighting for and what we stand for," and added that statements on British policy would be made by Cabinet members whenever they seemed "agreeable to the public interest."

Speaking on the same subject, Clement R. Attlee hinted that in his opinion a declaration of a specific program now might lead to disunity at home as well as abroad. He went on to say that when such a statement is made it must be one that will make for unity in Great Britain, and unity with the dominions and the United States and all the civilized peoples of the world who are concerned in this war. "It is a matter in which the right time must be chosen and the right thing said if we are to use this very powerful weapon to bring about the end of the war and the establishment of peace."

Perhaps they are remembering the enormous effect of the statement of President Wilson's postwar plans in the last war, and are hoping to repeat his success when the proper time comes.

Persistent Mr. Hoover

However much you might disagree with former President Hoover's plans to feed what he insists is a starving Europe, still you must admire the man's persistence and determination. In spite of the fact that he has received little support even in the United States he is still going ahead enthusiastically with his arrangements, and has now revealed that he has submitted a plan to the British and German Governments for supervised feeding of 3,000,000 Belgians as a test for possible extension to other occupied European countries.

Mr. Hoover has drawn up what appears to be a logical and workable plan, but he cannot do away with the greatest obstacles to his entire scheme—the fact that it must depend a great deal on Germany's word, and the additional fact that if his plan fails it would be injurious to the British cause.

No one will fail to sympathize with Belgium if it is true, as Mr. Hoover insists, that within a month the entire nation will be practically without food unless aid is forthcoming, and that more than half of the workers are unemployed and destitute and could not pay for food if it were to be had. His statement that a similar situation will soon prevail in Norway, Holland, Central Poland and Free France also presents an unpleasant prospect, but however sympathetic the public may be they will probably agree with the views of the British and the United States Governments.

The British Government maintains that the best way it can help the people of Belgium and similar countries is to overlook their present hardship and to concentrate on winning the war. The view of the United States Government was expressed by Under-Secretary of State Sumner Welles when he said that his government had had no part in the negotiations, and that it was the duty of the German Government to care adequately for the citizens of all countries occupied by Germany.

Faced with such a definite coolness toward his plans both from his own and from the British Government, Mr. Hoover will probably get no further than he did before. He will probably receive much sympathy and little help.

Tip to the Fair

We don't suppose you consider perfume such an absolute necessity that it would ruin all your best dates to have to go out without it, but still if you happen to be addicted to it you had better stock up, just in case.

Just why France should be the only country where the essential oils for high-grade perfumes are obtainable is difficult to understand, but that seems to be the case, and so it has been reported by the Toilet Goods Association of America that, with imports cut off, the perfume stock is approaching exhaustion. As a result the prices will rise, and some products will disappear from the market entirely.

It may seem all very sad to you, but the statement issued by the chairman of the association had its humorous side, it seems to us. He explained that they had been trying to persuade the British Government to permit the passage through the blockade of the necessary materials for the manufacture of perfume, but so far had been unsuccessful. Perhaps the British Government was busy worrying about something other than the state of perfume supply in America.

Meanwhile, just as the hosiery firms got busy frantically preparing a substitute for silk stockings, the perfume industry and the Department of Agriculture are now making surveys in South America aimed at production of the necessary oils in the Western Hemisphere. However this need not cause too much optimism, since it may require five years for their development. You will probably have forgotten all about the stuff by that time.

Oil and Troubled Waters

Undergraduate Exhibition at Hart House

A large part of the undergraduate art exhibit which is currently showing in the Hart House Art Gallery is a group of wishy-washy watercolours. Most of them show excellent composition and design, but are too watery and suffer from a lack of colour. The oils are generally much better. Most of their subjects are commonplace and prosaic; but in nearly every case they have received excellent artistic treatment. A pair of street scenes by P. M. Gardiner, Bridge by D. G. Partridge, and a water colour study of a freight car by L. G. Baker are all noteworthy. Landscapes are scarce and, on the whole, disappointing. Three winter scenes by J. R. Blair are interesting but lack the contrast and life that such scenes generally present. Several studies of buildings show good perspective but their lines are too stiff; they are representations, not impressions.

An interesting experiment which borders on impressionism is Old Barn, by P. M. Gardiner. Based on the theory that perception is not limited by a frame, it shows a scene with a fairly distinct but irregular border. The result is outstanding in its perspective, but it leaves the observer with a feeling of vagueness which may or may not be desirable. A pair of facial studies by H. N. Milnes are intriguing as studies in design, but repulsive as works of art. The show is sadly lacking in portraits, but the two representatives of this class, one in pastel and one

Essay on War Savings

In view of the fact that on account of there is a big drive on now for war savings, it seems a propos that people should know more about what people are doing about war savings stamps. People who buy war savings stamps may be classed under two heads:

- (1) People who do
  - (2) People who don't.
- We will now proceed to discuss people under these two heads. (2) People who don't. In discussing (2) we may divide these people into two parts:

- (1) People who haven't much money.
- (2) People who think money is the root of all evil.

In discussing (2) we may examine it under the following heads:

- (1) People who are naturally pessimistic.
- (2) People who have had sad monetary experiences.

In discussing people who are naturally pessimistic, we may treat them under the following heads:

- (1) People who realize that the Dominion debt has risen from 300 million dollars in 1900 to 3 billion dollars in 1936.
- (2) People who call a glass half empty instead of half full. In discussing the latter we may TREAT these people under two heads:

- (1) People who drink
- (2) People who don't.

We see that this method of approach to the subject (in which we take justifiable pride) may seem too analytical, but it has one striking feature which any other method lacks, i.e. (that is), it is WELL PLANNED, and for this reason prevents any possible chance of (a) becoming vague, or (b) of wandering from the subject.

(At this point, several shots are heard and our analytical essay-writing friend disappears from view in a pool of blood. He will not be heard from in some time.) Scatterbrain.

in watercolour are well treated.

The absence of oil portraits and landscapes hardly makes the exhibition representative of modern Canadian art. Perhaps if undergraduate exhibits were held more often, more contributors could be interested and more representative collections presented.

Political Music

Junior Vogt Society

The committee is to be congratulated on a more than usually well-prepared and smoothly running program of Moscovski and Beethoven rounded out with new Canadian works by Court Stone and William Hinks. The Shklar sisters opened the program with Moscovski's Suite for two violins and piano. The piano part was well handled except for a few minor slips but I found the first violin a trifle on the squeaky side and the second not very sure of itself. However, they were quite within their powers (in spite of a lack of finish) and achieved a fair degree of unity of interpretation. Doris Dalton played the first movement of the Beethoven Sonata Opus 31 No. 1. It was a "messy" performance with cloudy pedalling covering up some nice spots of interpretation and a nice and well controlled tempo. One must take great care with the details of Beethoven and certainly there is no excuse for not taking reasonable care with the opening argpeggio and its succeeding counterpart in this sonata. The society would do well not to import so-called half prodigies who can neither play nor understand the works they present.

We had interesting contrast in the new works played. William Hinks evidently had to delve into modern history for his inspiration. He got lost soon after the beginning of the Robespierre suite and blundered through some long and tiresome stuff to a conclusion. Much better was the work representing the September crisis. It was more compact and benefited by less radical harmonies over which the composer had more control. One felt, though, that he relied too much on inspiration and not enough on intelligence and knowledge.

Court Stone played two of the works presented here at the university last week, Sea Poem and Mists. They are fairly compact works representing some sincere and intelligent thought. Their impressionism is true to topic. Lack of originality is no crime in young composers with self-criticism being their chief aim. I thought it significant that both seemed improved on this second hearing.

Scarlet and Gold Take Early Lead to Edge Rivals by a 28-27 Score in Close Game of Basketball

JOHNNY LUCAS STARS

Jr. School's basketballers dropped their first game of a triumphant season yesterday afternoon as Jr. Vic outgated them 28-27 and toppled the Engineers into a first place tie with U.C.

Just after the final whistle sounded Patchelli sank a long shot which would have turned the tide of victory if it had come moments sooner. As it was the Scarlet and Gold stubbornly hung on to win by a single point.

The winners turned on an early spurt and gained a slight lead which just lasted to the close. School fought hard to eradicate the advantage but failed. Vic held a five point lead at the half holding their rivals to a 14-9 count. In the second period S.P.S. had a slight edge in scoring, but the play was fast and close.

McClelland led the scoring for the winners with a grand total of 9 points. Rutledge and R. Johnston followed close behind, nothing 8 and 6 points respectively.

Johnny Lucas, playing one of his best games for the Blue and Gold, was high scorer of the game, picking up 11 points in all. Kellam, Anderson and Patchelli each had 4.

Jr. Vic: Rutledge 8, R. Johnston 6, M. Johnston 3, Shugart, Stamos 1, McClelland 9, Paslowski 2, MacDonald, Jr. S.P.S.: Workman, Lucas 11, Ciglan, Kellam 3, Anderson 4, Shorter, Brooke 2, McNiven 1, Wilson 1, Patchelli 4.

Last night at 6:30, in competition with a snow-storm, St. Mike's and Vic I battled it out on the Little Vic Rink. Seven pucks whizzed by the tender ears of yours truly and nestled into the St. Mike's net, while not one found its way past Helen Rodd, Vic's goalie. It was Vic's neat passing and Helen Carefoot's long distance puck-raising that impressed us most, but the fighting Irish were game throughout.

Tonight at 7:30 all you potential mermaids of Vic are invited to a splash party at O.C.E. Really, it will be a lot of fun, good fishing and all! Tomorrow, at the same hour and in the same place, U.C. will kick up some mean spray, we hope. They expect to produce two teams if they don't lose too many in the frolic. Before we leave, just in case you haven't heard the interfaculty swim meet will take place on the 24th and 26th on the same day as this highly rated intercollegiate telegraphic event, so make your reservations early and get your free hanky.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Stan Westcott

FRUSTRATION FRUSTRATED

"Spank" splatted the dark leather glove as the taller blond-haired fellow swung it viciously at the chin of the smaller lad. The glove landed with nerve-numbing ferocity and the little guy sat down in the resin on his blue silk trousers. He was on his knees, tousled head bowed but slowly coming out of a bewildering fog, and waiting for the sonorous drawl of the referee to toll off the numbers consecutively from one to ten. "When he comes to 9 I'll get up and shove that pasty-passed lugs' teeth down his gullet," murmured blue-pants to himself—not too loudly.

But the ref. wasn't counting. "Maybe he ain't had the benefit of a college education," thought blue-pants.

The arbiter gazed at the little figure huddled on his knees, little guessing what was whirling around in that low-hanging cranium. Then he raised the hand of the blonde. "The Winnah!" he said. A technical knockout.

The huddled figure speedily came to life, tore off his knees (not literally) and raced at the referee. "I'm alright . . . I'm okay . . . I'm alright . . . nothing" the matter with me . . . what are ya trian to pull . . . anyway . . . and sundry other remarks, you probably get the general drift.

Mc Gionna, the second, rushed into the ring and grabbed the little guy's flailing arms. "C'mon out, it's over."

"But I'm okay, I wanta fight, whatsa matter, let me go, I'll . . ." etc. etc. "The fight's over, kid, and there's nothing you can do about it now," counseled Mc. "You might as well come out of the ring." Which Bob Hurst did for it was none other than Rugged Robert. (He prefers Burpin' Bob.)

Hurst cursed and swore all that night going up and down the scale of defamatory abuse using everything but Joe Jacobs' timeworn call of "We wuz robbed." He hated to lose his first fight as a full fledged Varsity intercollegiate bantamweight, and especially by the uncomplimentary TKO method. His teammates called him Tiger ever afterward.

Bob dropped this fight at Penn State College early in 1940. The week before O.A.C. visited Toronto for a B. W. and F. exhibition bout, but Bob's scheduled opponent failed to show up.

A year previous Hurst had been training diligently for the Junior Assault at Western. Then on the Friday he was to leave, he was asked to substitute for Dillon and journey to Annapolis to box with Varsity against the Navy. He went but dropped a decision to his opponent.

He had the thrill however of meeting Jack Dempsey who refereed the bouts. Later the Manassa Mauler penned his autograph on Bob's program.

Two days before Hurst's disastrous journey to Penn State he broke his thumb, but he didn't find out that it was fractured until the following Wednesday. Then it was encased in heavy plaster for a month and Robert missed a trip to Cornell and at battle with Coast Guards here, as the officials declared that it was unfair for Hurst to box with a heavy blob of cement in his glove. Bob has been horribly mangled.

A week before the Senior Assault at Montreal the Doc scraped the plaster from Robert's ailing member, but he (Hurst not the physician) was unable to get in the ring for training until the day previous to the trip. His medical adviser advised Hurst to stay away from boxing for a while. "Might bust yer thumb," he reasoned, but Rugged scoffed at the thought and scampered off to the French metropolises.

He scampered back to Toronto a couple of days later with another defeat clutching the tail of his record. He was becoming the Winless Wonder to his sparsals.

At Montreal, during the first two rounds, Bob was caught off balance and blasted into the mat several times. He took long counts more for a rest than to recoup added senses. (People go to summer resorts for the same reason.)

Late in the second round Bob clouted his opponent hard above the eye slashing the flesh. Blood gushed out. The referee stopped the squabble, had the gory flow terminated, and then allowed the bout to continue. Bob lost another decision. The cut eye however required four stitches after the bout.

Until this year Hurst had never earned a victory in ring warfare. He entered the Interfaculty Assault hoping to ameliorate this dire condition. On Saturday night Bob faced an inexperienced kid, Jackson of Trinity, who was much taller and possessed arms which protruded some distance beyond Bob's, but couldn't match his ring knowledge and generalship.

Hurst forced the fight, wriggled inside the long arms of his opponent to reach up and land hard lefts to the face. He fought hard and well to earn his first ring victory.

"Gee," muttered Robert, "I hope we have intercollegiate boxing back next year." And so do we.

DID YOU NOTICE

George Lewis, coming out of a clinch in his bout with Frank Patterson Saturday eve, sling a wild right which landed on referee Mc Gionna's rubbery proboscis. Mc grinned gleefully and didn't even bat an eyelid.

In this column last week Emmanuel's hockey outfit was taken to task in a friendly fashion for consistently losing games by gigantic scores. They must have taken the lesson to heart as they only lost 4-2 yesterday afternoon to S.P.S. III.

U.C. III take over Emmanuel's place on this week's hot seat for dropping a game 11-1 to School Fourth.

S.P.S. hardly ever lose a doggone thing. Of four interfaculty games in which School participated yesterday, the Engineers swamped the opposition in three of them and succumbed in the fourth, only after a dogfight, by one point to Jr. S.K. basketballers, 28-27.

Two School Teams Triumph In Hockey Double Header

Thirds Drop Emmanuel 4-2 in Close Struggle as Theologs Threaten to Break Winless Jinx

Fourth's Troupe Royal College Thrills 17-1, Scoring at Will in Rout of Hapless Artsmen

FIRST PERIOD SPLURGE

The Emmanuel College hockey team came within a hair's breadth of winning their first hockey game this year when they were defeated 4-2 by S.P.S. III yesterday. It was the closest game the Theologs have played all season.

A concerted School drive in the first period resulted in three goals and put the Engineers ahead 3-1. Emmanuel made a strong bid for victory in the final half but was unable to catch the Schoolmen.

Bill Bland got two goals for the Engineers with Rabey and Reid netting the others. Henderson and Clugston scored for Emmanuel.

Emmanuel: Oliver, Jull, Rutherford, Henderson, Bradford, Smith, Norquay, Clugston, Stevenson, Zurbrigg.

S.P.S. III: Bland, Shepherd, Rabey, Prideau, Temple, Reid, Code, Spence, DeMarco, Seymour, Livingston.

IRISH EDGE WYCLIFFE IN BASEBALL CLASH

St. Mike's B muballers staged a second inning slugfest to come from behind and defeat Wycliffe 9-7. The Theologs' big inning was the first when they sent nine men across the platter. The Double Blue scored the same number in the second inning and got three more in the third.

Robertson of the Gaels had the better of the pitching, allowing 10 hits to 13 off Murray. Doherty got three hits to lead the sluggers.

St. Mike's B: Kelly, Agro, Doherty, O'Sullivan, Barrett, Maloney, Robertson, O'Reilly.

Wycliffe: Coleman, Coburn, Abbott, Marble, Robinson, Murray, Knight, Green, Kerr.

WARNING

To Whom It May Concern

WHEREAS some Graduating Classes will leave Varsity very early this year:

AND WHEREAS we want to have a copy of Torontonensis ready to hand to every graduating student before he leaves:

AND WHEREAS we are being held up by lack of material from many colleges and societies:

The book will not be out on time unless we have your immediate co-operation.

There are actually groups who have not informed their photographers which proof they want to use!!

The names of colleges and other organizations who are offenders in this regard will be published in The Varsity unless there is a quick response to this warning.

School V and Knox Win Cage Tilts Defeating St. Mike's and Trinity

Engineers Outclass Irishmen in One-Sided Scrambleball Contest as Bell Stars for Schoolmen

SCORE 33-5

S.P.S. fifts trounced St. Michael's E basketball team 33-5 yesterday afternoon in the big gym and played a superior game all the way.

The shooting and passing of both sides was poor, but School were superior in being less erratic than their opponents. The Irish were woefully weak around their won basket allowing their rivals shot after shot before grabbing the rebound.

M. Bell led the School parade with 8 points but was followed closely by McKennen with 7, and by Moses and Hudson with 6 apiece.

Jack Ronayne scored 3 for St. Mike's, and Higgins dropped in the remaining field goal.

S.P.S. V: McKennen 7, Frost, J. Bell 2, M. Bell 8, Moses 6, Hudson 6, Hubbard, De Paul 4, Scymour, F. Bell. St. Mike's: Woods, Notoli, Shantz, Heintz, Berger, Ronayne 3, Higgins, 2, Barry, O'Reilly.

Morrison Scores 18 Points to Lead Presbyterians to 54-33 Victory Over Red and Black Hoopsters

RILEY STARS FOR TRINITY

Knox A cagers humbled Trinity A to the tune of 54-33 in a scrappy scrambleball set-to yesterday. The Anglicans were unable to put up a united defence to the powerful Theolog attack.

Morrison ran wild for the Presbyterians to chalk up the grand total of 18 points. Moorhead and Weir each got 12 more while Johnson was close behind with six field goals and a foul shot. Riley was tops for the Red and Black with 10 points, backed up by Wagland who got eight.

Knox A: Morrison (18), Moorhead (12), Weir (12), Ferguson (1), MacKay, Crawford, Barr, Johnson (11).

Trinity A: Cowan (7), Klein (6), Riley (10), Wagland (8), Tseng (2).

Excuses Disliked
By Librarians

book it is better to report it and then start looking for it than to carry on a secret and frantic search for a week and then confess.)

In most cases the librarians are not happy about imposing fines. Students sometimes think that they gather in the quarters with fendish glee for their own interest. However, all money collected in fines is turned over to the Bursar's office.

Among the most touching cases are those students who bring night books down at nine o'clock, carry them into the reading room without first going to the desk and bring them up about eleven. Their horrified "But I had to here all the time, only I forgot to bring it up," is really heart rendering. Chronic offenders are entered in the "black book" and sometimes lose their library privileges.

Most of the students questioned about library fines have either never incurred them or paid them without much comment. After all, what is there to say? "Once in my first year I filled out two slips for the same book and they tried to fine me for not returning it," said Edith Torrance, II Vic. "Sleeping in one week cost me $1.50 in library fines," commented Helen Rodd, also II Vic.

But here is the sort of thing that makes librarians lose faith in humanity. Last week a student dashed in with a late book and the excuse that he had missed the street car. "Would you have been on time if you had caught it?" he was asked. "Well, just a little late," was the answer. The librarian was merciful and so the offender departed with his finances unimpaired. However, when the librarian looked at the book slip and saw that his address was Knox College she wondered what street car he had missed.

Pledges for War Stamps Break Stampometer; New Section Installed

Approximately 100 Students, 40 of Whom Are Women, Have Already Pledged Themselves to Buy War Savings

$840 COLLECTED TO DATE

Yesterday the mercury in the University Stampometer overflowed and a new section of tubing had to be installed to enable the indicator to show further pledges of War Savings stamp purchases.

In spite of the fact that a belief is prevalent among the co-eds that they can't get into Hart House even for so patriotic a purpose, the Students' Administrative Council was pleased to announce yesterday that 40 of the 97 pledges made up to the time the Varsity went to press were made by women. For the bashful co-ed, lists have been provided at the women's S.A.C. office in Room 82, University College.

The mercury has been climbing steadily, the S.A.C. said, and every day shows a more gratifying increase as people become more and more aware of the necessity for financial participation in the war. Over $870 in War Savings stamps have been sold since the campaign opened. Many sales, such as the purchase of $300 worth by one student who had intended to use the money for a European tour, are impossible to record on the Stampometer.

String Ensemble Plays at Musicales

The program to be presented at the Wymilwood Musicales on Sunday evening, February 23, will afford students the privilege of hearing some of the little-known works of the better-known composers. The selections are to be presented by a string ensemble under the direction of George Coutts who has recently been appointed organist-choir-master of Walmer Road Baptist Church.

Nomination Meeting of U.C. Lit, Debate Finals, Held To-Night

This evening at 8 p.m. the U.C. Junior Common Room will be the scene of the Annual Nomination Meeting and the finals of the Robinette debates to be held by the U.C. Literary and Athletic Society.

Members will nominate candidates for next year's executive positions on the society. C. L. Dubin, Literary Director, said that in view of the seriousness of the situation it is imperative that next year's executive be as strong and capable as possible, and all members are earnestly urged to be present tonight.

Candidates for the Maurice Cody Memorial Prize will also be nominated. Only members of the graduating year are eligible for this prize, which is awarded for Public Speaking and Interest in the College. Members, when voting, should keep in mind the candi-

BRITISH-AMERICAN UNION WILL BE DISCUSSED BY MODERN HISTORY CLUB

A Mock Parliament will be held by the Modern History Club in Cartwright Hall on Monday, February 24, to discuss the problem of 'Union Now.'

In full the resolution reads: "That Canada should support the formation of a federal union between the United States and the British Commonwealth for the better prosecution of the war and the assurance of a lasting peace."

Prime Minister R. A. J. Phillips and Opposition Leader Art Stinson will lead the argument and will be supported respectively by Donald Rowat and Harold Nelson, president of the club. Goldwin Gregory, National Secretary of the Union Now movement will be guest speaker.

date's ability to speak publicly and his interest in University College and its activities throughout his undergraduate course.

The finals of the Robinette debates will also be held on this occasion. This year there was a record number of entries for these debates; the 2nd and 3rd year teams emerging victorious from previous encounters will confront each other in a final intellectual tussle. Earl Brown and Sam Kelner, 2nd year, will oppose Eric Hardy and Bob Phillips, 3rd year. The subject of the debate, which Brown and Kelner will defend, is "Resolved that Canadian Radio Broadcasting be Government Owned."

Refreshments and music, traditional features in all U.C. meetings, will be provided, and thus the evening will end on a light convivial note.

LAURIER ADDRESSES ONTARIO'S LIBERALS ON MINING INDUSTRY

In Fifty Years Ontario Mining Has Produced Mineral Wealth of $3,500,000,000 Provincial Minister Discloses

ASSETS DIMINISHING

The Hon. Robert Laurier, Minister of Mines in the Ontario government, addressed the Liberal Club luncheon yesterday on the subject "Observations on the Mining Industry since taking office". He stressed the importance of the Ontario mining industry not only to Ontario, but also to Canada as a whole, pointing out that from 1891 to the present day this province has produced mineral wealth to the total of $3,500,000,000. He said, "Mining is one of the most important basic industries in Ontario, employing 35,000 men who receive $60,000,000 in annual pay." He added that last year its produce ex-

S.C.M. DISCUSS EFFECTS OF WAR

At Open Meeting in Alumni Hall Members Discuss "How the War will Affect England". Led by Havelock

Last night the S.C.M. held Open House in Alumni Hall at Victoria College. John Coleman opened the meeting and welcomed Miss Margaret Kinney, National Secretary of the S.C.M. and Mr. C. S. Tsai of the W.C. S.F. Mr. Coleman spoke for a short time on the subject of "Unity."

A discussion of "How the war will affect England" was led by Prof. Cass-Beggs, Prof. E. A. Havelock, Margaret Grant and Eugene Hallman. Miss Grant (Continued on Page 4)

Hart House Glee Club Sing in Hamilton To-Night

Sixty Singers Are Going by Bus to Give Concert in Scottish Rites Cathedral for Charity Purposes

PIANO AND ORGAN SOLOS

Hart House Glee Club, some sixty strong leave for Hamilton in two buses at six o'clock this evening for Hamilton where they will give their second concert of the season in the Scottish Rites Cathedral. The concert, sponsored by the Shriner's of the Cathedral, is being given for charity purposes, and will include piano and organ solos by Howard Brown and Dr. Charles Peaker, and club's pianist and conductor respectively.

The final concert by the Glee Club is scheduled for Sunday, March 2, the last concert in the Hart House Sunday Evening series, and the program will be substantially the same as is to be presented tonight.

Members of the Glee Club who have C.O.T.C. or Training Centre Battalion drill are requested to report to their respective battalion headquarters during the day. The club will meet in the east common room, Hart House, at ten minutes before six o'clock, having had supper, and being ready to leave immediately. It is hoped that a full choir will travel in each bus. Dr. Peaker being in one and Mr. McDowell, assistant conductor in the other, so that any last minute singing difficulties may be ironed out en route.

STORM, CHLOROFORM FEATURE 'WITS END' AT THEATRE NIGHT

Plays by St. Michael's, U.C. and Victoria to be Presented at University Theatre Night Next Thursday

NO TRINITY PLAY

People with weak hearts should leave the University Theatre Night in Hart House Theatre next Thursday evening before the last play, according to reports of its character obtained from director Betty McCrae, of the Victoria Dramatic Society.

"The scene is a lonely house on a stormy night," she informed the Varsity, "and one of the rooms in that house is a padded cell. Chloroform and revolvers occur in the plot. As to whether you guess the end or not, it all depends on how bright you are."

The drama so described is "Wits' End", by Wall Spence, whose cast will be Joe Dales, Barbara McNabb, Mary Campbell, Virginia Beebe, Alice Evans, Victor Botts, George Forster, Beth Gibson and Joan Heath.

The first play on the evening's bill will be presented by the St. Michael's Drama Society, which has this year included women members for the first time, and has not previously appeared under the auspices of the Drama Committee. Aileen McNally, Shielagh Ryan, Thomas McDermott, Dean Coffey, William Weidman, James Coughlin and Louis Fiaschetti will appear in "The (Continued on Page 3)

EXAMINATION FORMS AT REGISTRAR'S OFFICE

Students registered in the Faculty of Arts are reminded that applications for the Annual Examinations should be filed on or before March 1st. Forms of application may be obtained at the Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall, or at the offices of the College Registrars.

CHRISTIE WILL QUIZ NATIONAL SECRETARY

Women undergraduates will have the opportunity to hear Paul Christie, prominent Trinity College student, interview Miss Margaret Kenney, National Secretary of the S.C.M. at the weekly Wednesday meeting of the Women's Noon-hour "quiz" series held at 1:30 p.m. at Wymilwood.

The subject for discussion will be "Why go to Church?" It is the hope of the committee that a large number of students will participate in the "quiz."

"It is the aim of this group to provide an informal discussion in which the visiting expert will be asked specific questions. We have tried to invite a speaker and an interviewing student whose views about the subject are quite different," said Jeanne Booth.

"Why go to Church?" is a question often heard from undergraduates — perhaps there is no need served by the church but on the other hand very large congregations at some churches would seem to argue the point. Does the church merely offer an opiate for the masses? Come to the meeting and let us hear your views on such problems. The invitation extended by Jeanne Booth, III Victoria, chairman of the committee.

Status of Universities Will be Determined At Ottawa Conference

DR. J. R. P. SCLATER

Who will address today's S.C.M. Noon-Hour group on "Why Be A Parson." Dr. Sclater is minister of Old St. Andrew's United Church.

SCLATER TO SPEAK IN NOON HOUR SERIES

Minister of Old St. Andrews United Church will Address Group in "Your Job and God" Series

Today's S.C.M. noon hour talk at 1:30 p.m. in the Music Room at Hart House will be given by Dr. J. R. P. Sclater, minister of Old St. Andrews United Church, on the topic "Why Be a Parson." The address is one in the Wednesday noon hour vocational series entitled "Your Job and God."

Dr. Sclater has had considerable experience in ministering to students, being formerly the minister of a student church in a Scottish university. For a week each year he is the visiting preacher at Harvard University.

The talk will be of special interest to theologians and those students who are considering entering the ministry. However all men are invited, and will find the address helpful.

VISITORS' DAY

Sunday 23rd February will be Visitors' Day at Hart House when members may introduce visitors, including ladies, into the House between the hours of 2 and 4 p.m., on presentation of their membership cards at the door. The building will be open for inspection and afternoon tea will be served in the graduate dining room.

Symphony Has Final Brush-up For Important Annual Concert

"C sharp," roars Conductor Godfrey Ridout. Once again the University Symphony Orchestra is doing a last-minute brush-up on its annual concert at Convocation Hall this year scheduled for February 27. The program is to feature Gwen Duchemin, well known Toronto pianist, with the orchestra, playing the Beethoven piano concerto in C minor. Other items on the program will be the overture to the "Marriage of Figaro", the Ballet Music from Schubert's "Rosamunde" and Haydn's Second "London" Symphony. A young French Canadian, Jean Le-tourneau, will sing a group of songs, among which will be one by his father. The University Symphony has been most fortunate in obtaining the services of Godfrey Ridout, young Toronto

President Cody and Hon. J. L. Ralston will Meet Monday to Discuss University's Part in War Training

PROPOSALS DRAWN UP

In an attempt to define the position of Canadian universities in relation to the war, President Cody will journey to Ottawa this week-end, along with other university heads, to confer with the Hon. J. L. Ralston, minister of national defence, it was learned yesterday.

The conference, to be held on Monday, was called in an effort to recast the status of universities in the war scene, primarily in the light of changed conditions following the lengthening of the compulsory training period from one to four months.

The Varsity learned yesterday that a special Committee on Military Training, consisting of President Cody, A. B. Fennell, registrar, Lieut.-Col. H. H. Madill, Lieut.-Col. W. S. Wilson, and E. A. Macdonald, secretary-treasurer of the S.A.C., has been discussing the situation. A list of proposals and questions dealing with the wartime activities of the university has been drawn up, and a meeting is being held today to revise it. The proposals will be taken to Ottawa and discussed there, possibly being used as a basis for a revised military setup in the universities. Information concerning the university has been gathered at the request of the Dominion government, and will also be submitted, stated a spokesman for the committee.

Corsages Taboo At Newman Ball

Frank Bogart, "The Piano King" and his orchestra, will supply the music for the annual Newman Ball on Thursday night, Feb. 20th in the Concert Hall of the Royal York Hotel.

Al Neville, chairman of the dance committee, said, "I don't believe any committee could have worked harder than we have to make Newman Ball a success. We are confident it will be and we are looking forward to welcoming what promises to be the largest crowd that has ever attended our annual dance."

Corsages, in keeping with the trend of the times, are taboo. Instead present plans entail the selling of war savings stamps at the door.

Among the many guests who will attend are the President and Mrs. Cody, Father McHenry, the Club Rector, Father McQuillen, former rector, and Father McLaughlin, Superior of St. Michael's College.

In an interview with The Varsity last night, he expressed satisfaction with the way the program was shaping up. "I am pleased," he said, "with the way the works are progressing, though there is plenty of room for improvement, and I hope there will be a good turnout to the concert." The next rehearsal will be on Saturday.

Just A-Wondering . . .

There are quite a few questions which have been lurking in the corners of the male undergraduate mind this past year as he shouldered arms or wheeled left or dug trenches or sat through a lecture in military tactics. Now, with the end of term fast approaching and a summer looming ahead, those questions are beginning to pop out into the open, demanding answers.

"... The government said we were to take military training. O.K., we did. They said we would have two weeks at camp in the summer. O.K., that'll be fun. . . .

"... But when will we be going to camp? Unless we are in the 21 year old class we just go for two weeks. That means we'll have most of the summer free. Most of us will have to dig up jobs so we can come back next year. Wonder if they'll tell us when we are going to camp so we can make plans for a job? Hope they let us know soon or some of us may be too late. We're looking forward to going to camp, you know—sure, we'll learn a lot and it will be good for us. But we're just wondering when that camp period will come. . . .

"... How is this four-month training plan going to affect us, anyway? Will we perhaps have to spend four months at camp? That means the whole summer. Will we get paid or will we lose out on the summer-earning that we usually count on? Will the C.O.T.C. be affected any differently from the Training Centre? . . ."

These are merely samples of the questions which are worrying undergraduates on this campus, and on other Canadian campuses, today. A conference of university heads and the Dominion department of defence is being held next Monday and will no doubt seek the answer to some of them. The question of when the camp period will come is probably one to be decided by the local military authorities rather than the university presidents, but it is one upon which some general information should be shortly forthcoming. Let's have some light on the facts.

The Flames Spread

A glance around the world today seems to disclose a real element of truth in the statement of Prime Minister King that "among diplomatic and military authorities there is a growing belief in the possibility of a world-wide conflagration involving an attempted German invasion of Britain, timed with thrusts at Suez and Gibraltar and a Japanese thrust at Singapore." Plus, it might be added, a Bonfire in the Balkans.

It is not a pleasant prospect, this world of ours today. For the moment there is a lull in bombing activity over England, and attention has shifted to developments in the Balkans where the crisis stage has been reached time and again. Rumania is crowded with Nazi troops, poised on the Danube border in preparation for an attack at Greece through Bulgaria, should the Greeks fail to accept German "advice" to sue for peace with Italy. Perhaps the drive through Bulgaria to Greece will come anyway, or it may veer eastward to the Dardanelles and the southwestern shores of the Black Sea. Already Nazi officers in civilian-dress are honey-combing Bulgaria. Newest complicating factor is the freshly-concluded non-aggression pact between Bulgaria and Turkey, and conjecture is rife as to what it really means. On the face, it appears to give the Nazis a free hand to surge southward through Bulgaria. In Africa the forces of Italy are still meeting reverses, and according to latest reports, even the Ethiopians are making them run. Britain still sweeps the Mediterranean.

The Far East is again coming into the limelight as a possible arena of conflict—"at any moment" warns the publication of the Soviet navy, which proclaims an imminent crisis between Japan and the "Anglo-American bloc." The United States is taking preparatory action in the south Pacific, and has agreed to exchange envoys with New Zealand which is also threatened by the new developments. Unconfirmed reports have been received to the effect that Japan has increased her naval strength in the south Pacific considerably in the past few days. Meanwhile Japan blandly states that she has no intention of attacking British or Dutch interests, and that her plans are predominantly economic. So is war.

Like so many red flares in the dark night, the world is lit up these nights by many danger spots, all of them simmering, and the aggregate threatens to produce an even wider conflagration.

Track Clear! Full Speed!

Featured by the war review speech of Prime Minister King and the tabling of estimates for the coming fiscal year, the Dominion Parliament is in session again after reconvening on Monday. Warning the people of the nation that the road which leads to victory "is going to be much harder, much longer, and much more terrible than most people imagine," Mr. King urged Parliament to keep the path clear for vital war business.

Parliament meets after the dismal failure of the dominion-provincial conference which displayed to the world a lack of leadership and a pettiness on the part of some of our public men. But for the nonce all that is past; any plans for reorganizing the structure of the country have been relegated to the peace-time agenda; and now the nation must be set squarely on one course and one course only—putting teeth into Canada's contribution to victory in every way possible. As Mr. King pointed out, there have been many successes of late, but we must "see that they do not blind us to the real struggle that still has to be faced."

Financial considerations will no doubt take up much of Parliament's time in the new session, for according to Finance Minister Ilsley, at the present rate of government spending about $800,000,000 will have to be raised by borrowing next year. The estimates for non-war expenditures, amounting to about 430 millions, are 18 million less than in the current fiscal year.

Increasing attention will have to be given to plans for the co-ordination of Canadian war industry with that of the United States, it is felt, for as America moves further and further toward complete aid to Britain, the stream of varied armaments pouring from her factories will swell greatly. It will become increasingly important to co-ordinate the two industrial systems, and confine Canadian production to materials which are not being turned out in greater quantities by American factories.

The track has been cleared for war business; let action follow.

The Colorful Male

For some years designers of men's clothing have been trying to convert the male American to a livelier sartorial palette, with slow success. The recent preview of spring fashions in New York, however, predicts an approaching "era of elegance" in men's attire in "jewel" tones, including twilight blue, Capri blue, plum, wine, maroon, and green.

If the forecast proves accurate, the facile pen of the copy-writer will be leaping more exuberantly than ever across the half-page advertisements of the retail stores. No longer will the seller of worsted suits be permitted the modest announcement that "these are offered at substantial savings" or that his wares are "year 'round weights." He will be gurgling instead, "Let us clothe you with the suit that fits your character. No more conservatism! Wear our Beau Brummell model in sapphire, amethyst, or ruby. A suit to please even that critical-woman-in-your-life."

For the man of affairs he will offer the "career costume." Casual as a stroll at Palm Beach, yet smart as a walk through the Bois de Boulogne before the occupation. Watch the contracts roll in, prosperity by day and popularity by night! "Choose the color that 'does things for you.' We have it in spinach green, ice blue, coral pink, and shirred aqua."

The Case of Metty The Mettrazol Kid

(Letters continue to flow into uncle Dunkle's mail bag. Here is one from a girl in Extension.)

Dear Uncle Dunkle:

Last Sept. I arrived wide-eyed in Varsity intending to meet the right people. But why hadn't somebody told me those things?

Before long however I learned what it was to belong to an all girls' course. Our glamour and ardour has been dampened from our toll in the lovely U.C. cellar. Years ago outsiders used to walk down the corridor outside our work room but now even that has ceased because of a horrible sign on the outside door—"Ladies Only."

Day after day I stood gazing out at the C.O.T.C. on the back campus while the girls did my craft work. One day I was startled when a man sallied in. He must be a brave from S.P.S. to have disregarded that sign.

He came up and in unbelievably good English he said: "Chee Babes I'm just de new janitor, when are youse dames gonna quite wok?"

Then I heard about male nurses. I went right over to the School of Nursing. But what do you know. They don't train them there. Tsk. Tsk.

I searched the Bulletin Board to find out how an extension girl can extend her activities. First I tried the Follies but got lost in Hart House looking for the practise room. I ended up in the C.O.T.C. orderly room but they wouldn't let me stay. Another day I was going to Tait House but got my directions mixed and went to Gate House. There again they were soooo surprised. Evidently this is another place I can't stay at.

The great day is at hand with the day of the formal approaching and Dear Kindly Druid what shall I do?

Most of my pals need your help too. There are a lucky few who drifted over from pass arts—but we came straight from reform school.

I have been to the R.C.I. every Sat. night but now I'm not only not beautiful but intelligent too. I've read all the ads, my saddle shoes are a true Varsity colour. What shall I do now? Please answer immediately before I develop a neurosis or psychosis.

Yours, Metty.
Shall Metty join the boys' hockey team, the Y.W.C.A. or the Varsity staff? Who will she ask to the formal? Who knows? Who cares?

Card of Thanks

Judge and Mrs. G. W. Morley and family of Owen Sound wish to express their warmest thanks for the many kind expressions of sympathy from the President, the members of all faculties and especially those of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering, and also from the officers of the C.O.T.C., and the students and friends of the University of Toronto, concerning the sudden taking of their beloved son, George, who has been called to higher service.

For his usual pleasing appetizer Sir Ernest MacMillan gave us the sixth Brandenburg Concerto. Written originally for violins and a harpsichord, the effect was recreated by a real harpsichord played by Dr. Arnold Walter, and the cellos and violas of the orchestra. The harpsichord continuo was rather obscured by the other instruments but it seemed to somehow give the orchestra the brilliance and precision which it lacked.

Knox B Takes Severe Beating
as Aerial Navigation Pile Up Goal after Goal in Yesterday's Game

VANCE INJURED

There was only one hockey game at the Arena yesterday, but enough goals were scored to take care of almost a week's ordinary play in the intramural league as Aerial Navigation bombarded the Knox B goal to score seventeen direct hits for a new interfaculty hockey record of 17-0.

Stan Vance of Knox received a lengthy gash over the eye during the blanket, and needed the attention of Trainer Joe Caruthers.

Jim Duff and Don Ball, former teammates on the North Bay Juniors hockey squad, tallied five and three goals each. Ron Lake hit the strings on five occasions, Geer banged in three more, and Wagner added the seventeenth.

The North Bay pair in particular were impressive with their clever stick-handling and play-making.

Aerial Navigation: Tuchak, Sheffield, Wagner, Ball, Geer, Duff, Moir, Lake.

Knox B: Evans, Swallow, Vance, Stiles, Hood, Gillis, Barr, Mills.

Sport Personalities

By George Forster

CUDDY FABER

Among the newcomers to the world of intramural athletics this year, is a chunky bunch of trinitrotoluene who promises to go a long way in local sports circles. Although this is his second year at Varsity it is Cuddy Faber's freshman year as far as organized athletics are concerned. His previous achievements in the world of sport had been solely confined to obtaining his 35 P.T. credits per annum, but this year Cuddy decided to take a shot at the intramural sports whirl.

Faber turned out for the Royal College grid squad last fall and was assigned the signal-calling spot. This year the Red and White had one of the strongest teams which has emanated from its decorative portals in many a year, but it was put in the strongest group in the league.

Cuddy showed that he was a smart and brainy quarterback when he guided the team up the long, hard trek in the direction of the Mulock Cup, but the injuries sustained by the team, along the journey were too much for it.

Typical of the tough luck sustained by the Royal College team was Cuddy Faber's story-book run against the strong Vic team. Late in the first half Cuddy pulled down a lofty boot from the educated toe of Victoria's Red Heinrich, behind his own goal line. He galloped 90 yards through the entire Vic team and was pulled down inside the Scarlet and Gold 10 yard line, only to have the half-time whistle blow before the Royal College could put the ball in play.

Currently Cuddy is burning up the gym floors with the Sr. U.C. basketball squad. He has been turning in consistently high scores, and on one occasion got 11 out of the team's grand total of 13 points. Cuddy combines play-making ability with scoring punch, qualities found in all too few basketball players. He also plays hockey and basketball for Royal College teams.

S.P.S. III DOWN U.C. III IN CAGE TILT

The U.C. III cagers were sent further into the cellar of their group yesterday as they bowed to S.P.S. III by a count of 37-23.

The Engineers played only four men throughout the contest, but this quartet piled up an impressive tally, with Berrin and McCallum notching 13 and 12 points respectively.

Six out of the nine players on the Red and White roster made the score-sheet, but no one made what might be called an impressive display of the hoop art. Jim Bitove with six points was top scorer for the Artsmen.

U.C. III: Hall, White (4), Brown (5), Campbell (2), Lichtig (2), Bitove (6), Berg, Keiser (4), Wood.

S.P.S. III: Berrin (13), Onasick (6), DiMarco (6), McCallum (12).

Last night Vic mermaids swam, splashed and went home wet from the O.C.E. pool. The competition was good, everybody cheered for everybody else, water flew in all directions, and fun was the keynote of the evening.

Bea Harrison came out on top, having neatly tucked away first place in the ornamental, 50 yard breast and 50 yard back; while Beth Springer, only one lap behind, won firsts in the plunge and style swim.

We know that it isn't ethical to strike a sour note after the competition is over but here goes. Why is it that in a college the size of Vic, where there are enough gals interested in hockey to play on two teams, more aren't interested in swimming to the extent of turning out to the meet? We tried to impress the fact that you didn't have to be a champ, but where did it get us. Maybe you believe in "Quality not quantity".

Anyway the nine gals who turned out and did and dived so nobly deserve all kinds of commendation and a rhododendron apiece.

N.B. All the college badminton games MUST be played off immediately as the interfaculty schedule starts next week.

Please come to S.P.S. at 5:00 o'clock to have the picture taken. Bring uniforms. At 6 p.m. we play a game with Meds at Trinity Rink.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Owen Prichard

It's usually on occasions such as commencements, first and last issues, athletic banquets and what-not opportunities for oratory, that some one hits upon the idea of stressing the connection between brain and brawn, winding up a few thousand well-chosen words with a blurb about the ancient Greeks and a punchy quotation about "A sound mind in a sound body."

This much-used quotation has been tossed around by so many guff-throwers that we personally begin to squirm whenever we hear some after-dinner Demosthenes begin to get his second wind for the home-stretch drive on the state of the nation's youth.

We have always been ready to grant that Canada's youth are badly in need of directed instruction in the matter of Physical Education and Health; but the sad truth is that few intelligent efforts have been made to meet this pressing need. Consequently we were pleased to see the new course established in this university under the name of Physical and Health Education, and in response to enquiries on the set-up of this course we want to point out a few of its features.

The calendar outlines the aim of the new venture in the following way: "The Course is designed to provide the student with a sound scientific knowledge of the structures and functions of the living human body and of the value of the different forms of physical activity in promoting the healthfulness of the body's tissues and organs and the efficiency with which they perform their functions."

The importance attached to the course by the university authorities can be seen in the fact that from its inception last fall the course has been allowed to offer a degree upon completion of the prescribed course of study extending over three years. The title of this degree is Bachelor of Physical Education and Health.

There are some general considerations that we shall mention here which make this course an attractive one for any student.

First, the course is not one of these which you have seen caricatured in movies where some oaf is dragged into a college by means of a physical ed course simply because he can carry a football through a herd of stampeding buffalo. This course is one which is on a high academic standard throughout, and bulging biceps alone will not get you the degree.

Warren Stevens' aim as the director of the men's physical and health education is the development of the whole man. This idea is as old as Plato, but here is an honest attempt to bring Plato's theories out of the text books and into the realm of practicalities. Steve has received many requests for information on the course from secondary schools and other institutions responsible for edifying the nation's youth. This university will have a great influence on the next generation if enough people from this course go out from the campus to apply what they have learned to the instruction of the young. The building up of the nation's fitness and health-consciousness is no trifling task, and there is a place in it for thousands of trained people. Not all of you will be engaged in lifetime jobs in schools and churches (where the training of the younger part of the population is a large item on the program) but most college men assume some sort of social responsibility in service clubs and athletic committees where the background of such a course would be invaluable.

A wide selection of subjects has been made in the first year of this course, so that a man can transfer into the second year after a year of the Pass Arts course for instance without a lot of curricular adjustments. Or, to look at the question from another angle, let us suppose that after you come to Varsity you have a hankering to study medicine. A degree in Physical and Health Education, or even one or two years in the course, would in our opinion be an ideal pre-Meds training for any future medic.

To amplify this latter point, consider the subject of Functional Anatomy and Applied Physiology, which is taught in the second and third years. This double subject runs concurrently in the two branches, and combines (a) "the structure of the living body and of the independent and reciprocal functioning of all its tissues and organs," and (b) "the variations that occur in the quality of the structures and in the degree of efficiency of their functions in a healthy person."

Another useful subject in this course is that of Health Assessment and Promotion, by which the student is taught to assess the health of the individual as a total organism with a view to estimating fitness for work and recreation. Add to this the studies of Mental Hygiene, Preventive Medicine, and Corrective and Remedial Work, and you will see what we mean by saying that this Course is a sound one, constructively conceived and planned.

The Physical Education bracket of this course teaches the theory and practice of fundamental skills, first aid, the technique of coaching and officiating, organization and administration.

We predict without hesitation that, in view of the lessons we have been forced to learn during the past few years by the course of world events and social situations, this course in Physical and Health Education will soon assume the prominent place it merits in this and other universities.

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

pieces by Eugene Hill, a young Canadian organist, the meat of the first half of the program was presented: Sibelius' Symphony No. 3. It had a sort of mid-night sun quality throughout the first movement at least, frequent use of sustained organ points of one sort or another against copious melodies helping give this effect. The symphony is supposed to be in C major but a great deal of the time was spent more in Sibelius' majestic element, the relative minor. One of its most effective features is the way his midnight sun seems to wake up from its gloaming horizon and work up smoothly and fascinatingly to a high noon, an image which was evoked several times. The orchestra was more or less satisfactory, although a little more clarity and precision would be appreciated as usual.

The broadcast portion of the program opened with Mozart's fortieth symphony, which is one grand virile struggle from beginning to end. The strings laid in with all their customary surplusage, which was in this case very well placed.

Especially delightful was the languorous Andante, which along with the trio of the Minuet was a respite from the surging strife of the rest.

Delius' Easter (Once Upon a Time) was the next item, and if it is true that "A chain is as strong as its weakest link" that weakest link must have been pretty strong in this case. The individual melodies all had punch and they were woven into a really fascinating whole. A celeste and assorted other percussion instruments, not to mention some shouting thrown in from backstage, completed the adornment.

The program finished with the powerful but rather well known Prelude to Die Meistersinger, which if it did nothing else revealed the fact that the T.S.O. has a splendid trumpet section. Even if one came away from it a bit confused from the power of most of the items, one certainly was well satisfied with the evening's listening.

The Sr. School mushballers edged out the Sr. U.C. squad 2-1 in a hard fought battle yesterday.

Hits came few and far between in the game and all of them were clean blows. Minaker, the Royal College moundsman, allowed only one bingle, but Schoolmen capitalized on walks and sent two runs across the plate. The Red and White got three hits off Diak but were only able to score a single run.

Druggists Put Up Game Fight but Lose to Pedagogues, 41-18. Sam Levine on Defense, Eccles and Belchamber Star

LITCHEN GOOD FOR LOSERS

The classy hoopers of O.C.E. A once more proved themselves the class of the group as they defeated Pharmacy A by a score of 41-18 in the Upper Gym yesterday.

The Teachers were minus the services of Charlie Prince in this encounter and their passing was below its usual brilliancy because of the cramped quarters in the Little Gym.

Despite the decided edge in scoring power possessed by the Pedagogues, the Druggists put on a game fight all the way, and mopped up enough O.C.E. shots to achieve a score which was a vast improvement over the 75-12 shelacking they absorbed in the last encounter of these teams. Sam Levine did some rugged work on the defence, and gave everything he had to keep the Pestle Pounders in the running.

Eccles and Belchamber had an easy time of it, piling up scores of thirteen and ten points respectively on the neat passes fed them by Aymer and Wynne. Joe Litchen was the big gun for the losers, scoring ten points out of his team's total of eighteen.

Pharm. A: Garrett, Levine, Pulham, Litchen (10), Bennett (4), Willer, Cox (4).

O.C.E. A: H. Brown (8), Charbonneau (2), Aymer (2), Eccles (13), Belchamber (10), W. Brown (2), Wynne (4), Oliphant.

LAURIER ADDRESSES
ONTARIO LIBERALS

ceeded that of Ontario's field crops.

The problem of the mining industry is that its assets are continually diminishing, and that they must be replaced by continual prospecting. The Hon.
Laurier warned, "If we do not make provision for new mines, we will wake up some morning to find we have no industry left." "Prospectors and field
mentioning that the 1937 figure of 15,296 claims registered had slumped to 6,672 two years later. He attributed this falling off to a difficulty in obtaining "grubstakes" for the long northern trip and a general lack of unfrozen capital. Ontario's mining laws were models of legislation — "rational, simple, and just."

The Hon. Laurier stated that his government proposed to alleviate the plight of the miners by co-operation with the federal government. He recalled that, at the same time as the Dominion-Provincial conference, a meeting of representatives of the mining industry in Canada was held. Certain ideas had been recommended, most important among which was a transportation subsidy to miners, to enable them to reach prospecting grounds more cheaply. His government was also considering throwing open to claim-staking approximately 70,000 acres which had previously been staked but which have since reverted to the crown.

The speaker stressed the importance of Ontario's mining industry. "Our gold pays for our foreign exchange; our nickel is now strengthening the hulls of the British fleet and the tanks of Wavell's victorious army."

DR. SILCOX WILL ADDRESS
S.C.M. MONTHLY MEETING

"Anti-Semitism in the Professions" will be Dr. C. E. Silcox's topic when he speaks to the regular monthly meeting of the S.C.M. of U.C. in the Women's Union on Thursday night at 8 o'clock.

Dr. Silcox was an undergraduate at University College. Upon graduation he served at the Congregational Church in the United States, and until recently he has been secretary of the Christian Social Council of Canada. He is the author of the historical treatment of church union in the book, "Church Union in Canada". He has done research work on Anti-Semitism in Canada. Last year Dr. Silcox spoke in Hart House on "The Case against Pacifism."

A special invitation is extended to Jewish students to meet with the S.C.M. for this discussion.

The Rights of Fish

NEW YORK: The time has come to cry "Halt!" to all this vandalism.
When they tore down the Sixth Avenue Elevated, it was well and good.
When they tore down the Ninth Avenue
Elevated, it was still well and good.
When they sold the scrap iron from the Sixth Avenue El to Japan, and the scrap from the Ninth Avenue El to the American government, so that if what threatens in the Pacific happens the Sixth Avenue El will be fighting the Ninth Avenue El—even that was well and good. But now they are going to tear down the Aquarium.

The time, I say, has come to cry,
"Halt!"

If they haven't started demolition work yet (and they haven't) the renowned Aquarium is still situated in the Battery, which is at the uttermost bottom of Manhattan Island. The venerable old building was once the immigration office, Castle Gardens, through which the waves of immigrants passed on their way to plant the Norwegian flag in Minnesota. Before that it was a theatre where Jenny Lind, the Swedish nightingale, made her first American appearance. Every year two and a half million people drop in for a social call on the fish who have superseded the late Miss Lind and the waves of immigrants. And now they are going to tear down the Aquarium.

Weep, oh, weep for the Aquarium, soon to be departed from us. "These are times that try men's soles," said Tom Paine. True. And what of the eels? Especially the electric eels who used to be placed in an electric circuit and then grievously annoyed so that they turned on a Neon sign. What of the seals who used to go diving among the dirty green waters and make barking noises? Yes, and what of the thousands of pisces with the exotic names who all looked like guppies to me?

They are tearing down the Aquarium.
The people who want to go from Manhattan to Brooklyn (and there are such) or from Brooklyn to Manhattan may use the Williamsburg Bridge, the Brooklyn Bridge, the Queen's Midtown Tunnel, and sundry ferry lines as well as eight subway routes. Are they satisfied? No. They must have another tunnel, one which will go from Brooklyn to the Battery, and come out where the Aquarium stands. The needs of progress, the ever-forward surging of this city of seven millions, the world of the day after tomorrow demand that the Aquarium must go. Perhaps, 'twere better thus, but 'tis said, 'tis passing sad.

What will happen, you may ask, to the rest of the Battery? The green-sward upon which the British garrison once played cricket will remain: the little old church where the Van Vlie-mens and the Books and the Schuylers and the other Dutch burghers of New Amsterdam are buried will remain; the ferries to Staten Island (which is a borough of New York), to Ellis Island (whence come today's waves of immigrants), to Bedloe's Island (where stands the Statue of Liberty, after whom a famous piece of football strategy is named), to Governor's Island

(a centre of incarceration — visiting days on Thursdays) — these will remain. But it will not be the same with the Aquarium gone, and with a million cars from Brooklyn being spewed forth by the Brooklyn-Battery tunnel.

It is fortunate, and we may derive what small comfort we can from the fact, that the City of New York has not contracted to sell the fish to the Japanese government. What fantastic things would happen to military strategy if this had been done defying the imagination. But it has not been done. They are going to build a new, a streamlined Aquarium in the Bronx Park Zoo.

Streamlined. Bah! Is not a fish, then, streamlined of itself that it must be transported from the old fort to one of these monstrosities of the modern architectural imagination? And only two hundred and fifty thousand people visit the Aquarium. Once the old building stood, austere and lonely, looking forward to the endlessness of the ocean, and the fantastic state of New Jersey:
tomorrow the Aquarium will be but an adjunct to the monkey house and the polar bears and the kangaroos, the ibexes and the arduarks, the harte-beestes and the duck-billed platypi.

I throw the lie in the teeth of anyone who claims that this is a social measure, designed for the benefit of the fish. I brand as utterly false the claim that the fish have formed a union and demanded shorter hours and improved housing. The fish are happy in their old home: they get fresh water and good food, and what more could a sensible fish want? They live in contentment. They are fruitful, they have multitudes, and they fill the waters of the tanks.

If they really want to do something for the fish in this town, let them help out the suckers who parade up and down Broadway waiting to be taken in by some confidence racket. They could alleviate the lot of the mermaid who swims in a goldfish bowl in theatre lobbies, because it must be awfully cramped. There is a fellow named Whitefish on 83rd St. who would probably appreciate a windfall. And they could always clear up those muddy waters that people like to fish in.

But the razing of the Aquarium is something entirely insane and stupid, to say the least. The arrangement as it stands today is satisfactory to all concerned, and the bureaucracy has to stick its nose in. The fish are happy, the people who visit the Aquarium are happy, but the bureaucracy is sad. So much happiness always makes it sad.
The people should rise in revolt.
Tear up the streets, and shoulder your muskets in defence of the liberties of fish. The Battery is easily reached, but the Bronx Zoo is inaccessible to the hundreds of thousands of little children.
In the interests of our youth and our future, we must not let the Aquarium go to the Bronx: we must keep it in the Battery.

Besides, I live in the Bronx, and now it's going to smell of fish.

S.C.M. DISCUSS EFFECTS OF WAR

made it clear before the discussion started that the opinions expressed were not necessarily those of the speakers but were presented for discussion purposes only.

The general thesis of the discussion was the potentiality of certain changes being effected by the present war in England and that these may bring with them a new social order. These were divided into five headings: political, re-distribution of the population after the bombing and evacuation, food, education, and church.

One great problem discussed was that of the 90,000 children of school age in London who are not attending school now due to present conditions. There is no way of checking up on attendance at schools, it was revealed.

Report of Commission To be V.C.U. Subject In Open Meeting To-Day

Advisability of Election Campaigns in Student Elections will be the Subject of Debate in Alumni Hall

REPORT MIMEOGRAPHED

The advisability of establishing an election campaign similar to those conducted by other colleges will be debated at an open meeting by the V.C.U. this afternoon.

When the question was brought up in Alumni Hall at the V.C.U. last fall a Royal Commission was appointed by the V.C.U. to investigate the situation, and this afternoon's meeting will hear the report of the Commission, Ted Gray, president of the V.C.U., told The Varsity yesterday. The student body will then discuss and vote on the report.

"As there was considerable controversy on the subject last fall," Gray said, "this meeting should be of particular interest."

For the convenience of those attending the meeting, Gray announced that the V.C.U. will provide mimeographed copies of the Royal Commission's report.

JOHNS HOPKINS PROFESSOR TO DELIVER LECTURE ON "GREEK INSCRIPTIONS"

Dr. B. D. Meritt of Johns Hopkins University will deliver a public lecture sponsored by the Victoria College Classical Association on the subject "Greek Inscriptions." The lecture will be held Friday, February 21, at 5 p.m. in Alumni Hall, Victoria College.

Dr. Meritt, in Toronto at the invitation of Dr. Alan Brown of the Sick Children's Hospital, will also speak to a group of Toronto doctors on "Greek Medicine in Stone."

Three College Societies Hold First Theatre Night

CAVEN ATKINS REVIEWS UNDERGRADUATE ART

Mr. Caven Atkins, director of the art class in Hart House, will review the work of undergraduates at 1.30 p.m. today in the art gallery.

Student Soldiers Relax in Rhythm

Stan St. John will set the rhythm for the student soldiers on Friday when the campus veterans of High Park and the University Armouries will form up in two instead of platoons and companies in the battlements of Hart House for the annual C.O.T.C. Ball. Reinforced by the forces of the University Training Centre Battalion, the military dance this year assumes even more of an All-University aspect as the Dance Committee Strategists plot the arrangements for the attack and overwhelming defeat of Gloom. Zero hour is set at 2130 hours.

To complete the rout of the blues, the University Army plans to use the services of the 14-piece pipe band, considered at military Headquarters as a "secret weapon" of no mean proportions.

President Cody, Honorary Colonel of the C.O.T.C., and Mrs. Cody, as well as Lt.-Col. and Mrs. Madill and Lt.-Col. Wilson and Mrs. Wilson will be present to review the proceedings.

Slater Answers 'Why be a Parson'

"Have you the gift of friendship?" is the first question that I would put to those who are thinking of entering the Ministry," said Dr. J. R. P. Slater, minister of Old St. Andrews United Church, when he spoke on the topic "Why be a Parson" at the S.C.M. noon-hour session in Hart House Music Room yesterday.

"The Ministry is a creative profession," continued the speaker, "in which the parson in each community is regarded as a scholar, a gentleman, and a leading citizen, who will work hard in an effort to raise the standards of the locality. The fact that such demands are made upon the minister shows that his profession is one that taxes his best abilities, and therefore must be a worthwhile occupation."

Dr. Slater concluded his address by saying: "If you have a passion to help people in their difficulties, and believe in God and in His power, then I urge you to consider the ministry as your life work."

Next Wednesday, in this series of talks on "Your Job and God," Mr. E. A. Corbett, Director of the Canadian Adult Education Movement, will speak on the subject "Education as a Profession."

WYMLWOOD TO BE SCENE OF VIC MUSIC AT-HOME

Featuring the popular music of Gren Hobson and his orchestra, the Victoria College Music Club will hold their annual At-Home Friday evening in Wymilwood. Also on the program for the evening will be an auction sale of many of the properties used in the club's recent production of "San Toy," according to Bill Graff, president of the club. Proceeds of the sale will go to war work.

ONE-ACT PLAYS

The immense popularity of the University Drama Festival a few months ago gives promise of top-rate entertainment which theatre-goers will enjoy at the Theatre Night to be held in Hart House this evening. Three one-act plays, each of a different type, will be presented by the dramatic societies of St. Michael's, Victoria, and University Colleges.

The brand of drama being produced combined with the low admission price make this production well worth the interest of all students. The casts are drawn from the three dramatic organizations, and are well known throughout the campus. Without a doubt Theatre Night will meet with the approval of all who attend.

Owing to military drill, a great number of students interested in dramatics, and even members of the dramatic clubs themselves, were unable to attend the Wednesday afternoon presentations of one-act plays. Theatre Night has been arranged that everyone may find an opportunity to enjoy the fruits of the labour which is expended in long hours of planning and rehearsal.

U.C. To Hold Primaries For House Poll

Finals of Robinette Debate, Nominations for Office also on Program of U.C. Lit Open Meeting Last Night

COOY AWARO TO CARSON

Primaries to select University College candidates for the Hart House elections will be held within the next week according to a resolution passed by the U.C. Literary and Athletic Society at its open meeting last night.

In making the motion, Bob Phillips pointed out that the primaries would assure U.C. the best representation on the ballots and would eliminate the "throat cutting" which had prejudiced U.C. men's chances of being elected to Hart House committees in the past. The motion was passed after considerable discussion.

Representatives of Third Year, Eric Hardy and Bob Phillips, won the final debate for the Robinette Trophy, defeating Second Year representatives Sam Kelner and Earl Brown who were defending the motion, "Resolved that radio broadcasting in Canada be government-owned." Three of the four debaters had taken part in the finals the previous year, when Hardy and John Clarry, now on active service, defeated Kelner and Brown. The trophy winners were also presented with engraved cigarette cases as souvenirs of their (Continued on Page 4)

Former Labour Office Director of League of Nations Traces Collapse to Internal Weakness

LIKE 1870

"France's obvious weakness was the major cause for her collapse," stated Dr. S. Mack Eastman who until last year was director of the League Office of the League of Nations. He explained that the failure of the League of Nations was responsible for the failure of France. The League, he said, ignored France when she was wisely conscious of her weakness and strove to make up for the deficiencies of her power in the 15 years following 1920. In 1935, however, the League of Nations had its last chance when the Ethiopian affair cropped up, and it failed with the Frenchman Laval, ironically enough, for the most part to blame.

Dr. Eastman was speaking in the second of the series of lectures under the auspices of the English-Speaking Union and presented in the Royal York Hotel. He introduced his talk by quoting the poem "Ode to England" by Sir Charles G. D. Roberts, who happened to be in the audience.

Dr. Eastman pointed out that there was a similarity between France's position in 1870 and 1940 but not between that of 1914 and 1940. In 1914 she was (Continued on Page 4)

BUDDING DENTS AND NURSES TO FROLIC AT DENTANTICS

JACK MACDONALD

Next Wednesday, February 26, will be a red letter day for the dental students and dental nurses. This is the day that the 21st Dentantics show will be produced. Judging by the way the show is shaping up, the committee expect that it will be the best ever put on. Dentantics is the climax in the social life of the dental students, and is eagerly awaited with a great deal of anticipation.

It has been rumoured that the feature of the show will be the Dental Nurses' skit, which according to gossip around the faculty is excellent, and is arousing a good deal of interest and curiosity.

Jack MacDonald, producer of the show, has been working on it for three months, and among his contributions are three songs which have been described as "Lulu" by the members of the band.

Besides the light fantastic contributions, there will be some serious drama. The climax of the show is something new and something different; better than that Jack MacDonald would not elucidate.

Producer of Dentantics, annual show of the Faculty of Dentistry, which will be presented Wednesday, Feb. 26.

Exam Forms Must be Filled In Before March 1 Deadline Rush

Arts students are being given about two and a half weeks to fill in and hand in their examination application forms; the deadline is Saturday, March 1. According to Mr. A. B. Fennel, the university registrar, there are always some students who forget about it until it is too late, but there will be a check-up made after the deadline, and forms will be mailed out to the tardy ones along with a notice of the customary fine.

In Simcoe Hall as in the library, lack of punctuality is not tolerated from the students. And in both places money is exacted for failure to comply.

Mr. Fennel told The Varsity that there is a vast amount of clerical work involved in arranging for the exams and hence the apparent strictness. The forms can be procured in any of the four college registrars' offices or in the university one in Simcoe Hall. At the same time students are to fill in their registration cards for next year in duplicate.

The examination time-table will not be out until some time in April. The officials try to avoid any clashes but that means using all six days of the week, and if there are any unexpected and unavoidable outside engagements the students concerned will probably have to write a special exam at a different time, paying a special fee to cover the extra cost. In pass subjects this does not alter the marks but in honour courses the students will receive a special rating, that is, they will be graded according to their honours, but will not be ranked in their order with the rest of the class.

Saturday Mar. 1 is the deadline.

O.C.E. Will Close Early To Release Students For Essential War Work

University Stampometer

Ontario College of Education will Write Examinations Two Weeks Earlier than Usual This Year

TO ENO MAY 31

In order to release students for work on farms and in essential war industries, the senate of the university has sanctioned the holding of final examinations at the Ontario College of Education two weeks in advance of the previously announced schedule, it was announced yesterday by Dr. J. G. Althouse, dean of the college. As a consequence the college will close on May 31st instead of on June 13th, as was originally intended.

In an effort to further aid the war effort, the faculty, with the consent of the Ontario Department of Education, has made it possible for those students whose work proves satisfactory to the director of practice teaching and to the instructors in the various subjects of their course to be granted certificates without the necessity of writing their final examinations, thus enabling them to leave the college on May 15th. This latter consideration applies only to those students who are taking their work intramurally and not to extramural students. It was emphasized by Dr. Althouse that the faculty takes the full responsibility for the granting of certificates and that no appeals from its decisions will be considered.

Student opinion has shown itself favourable to these changes, since the reasons for them are fully realized. Male students are especially favourable because the new ruling removes their worries with regard to the problem of attendance at the summer camp of the Auxiliary Battalion of the C.O.T.C., without making special arrangements regarding their final examinations. There is also ample evidence that all students are resolved to take full advantage of the privileges granted in the second part of the announcement by settling down to serious study without any delay whatsoever.

Noted Danish Archeologist Lectures on Palmyra

Professor Harald Ingholt Has Spent Last 17 Years in Near East Doing Archeological Research

UNIVERSITY AT BEIRUT

A young Danish archaeologist went to Syria 17 years ago to begin excavations in the fertile archaeological fields of ancient civilization, and on his first day in the country, he was the guest of the High Commissioner from France. The High Commissioner was General Weygand, and the young archaeologist was Harald Ingholt.

Since that time, Mr. Ingholt has spent eight years in Syria. At the time of his introduction to the country, General Weygand was interested in the ancient caravan city of Palmyra to the extent that he intended to plant 3000 palm trees there the following year, but Mr. Ingholt was interested in learning the secrets buried there beneath the sands of the Syrian desert.

Contrary to what might have been expected, Doctor Ingholt found very little opposition from the Moslems in the environs of his diggings, and in one case he succeeded in enlisting the support of the chief citizen of the village.

After a few years in the Near East, Doctor Ingholt accepted a professorship in the American university located at (Continued on Page 4)

"The Caravan City of the Desert" was the Subject of Professor Harald Ingholt's Lecture Yesterday

MEETING OF EAST AND WEST

"Palmyra, the Caravan City of the Syrian Desert" was the subject of a lecture given by Professor Harald Ingholt of Denmark yesterday in the Household Science Building. "Probably no other city has a history like that of Palmyra," he began. "First mentioned in an Egyptian inscription of the 11th century B.C., it rose in the 3rd century A.D. to challenge the supremacy of Rome. Situated as it is on the caravan route across the Syrian desert, it shows clearly, throughout, the fusion of oriental and occidental elements," continued Professor Ingholt.

"The route through Palmyra was the cheapest way across the desert. A charge was made on all the caravans entering the city, and, as there were hundreds of them, the fortune of the city rose miraculously till at the end of the 3rd century A.D. it was richer than most of the Eastern cities," he went on.

After giving a few brief facts from the city's history, Professor Ingholt then described the finds of the archaeologists on the site. His remarks were illustrated by numerous slides and (Continued on Page 4)

"Beacon" Sheds No Light

Scattered reports in the American press are slowly building themselves into the disclosure of what is reported to be a vast Nazi-dominated association aiming at damaging the United States and destroying the "good neighbour" policy which so far has existed in the western hemisphere. The party is said to be operating from the Canadian border to the tip of South America, but it would not be too wild a guess to say that it has its counterpart, perhaps unwitting but more than likely fully recognized, among various subversive groups here in Canada.

Disclosure of the association comes from Mexico where there has been a defection in the ranks. There four years ago, a Mexican party of Nazi leanings was organized as one group in a continental association. Other groups were hard at work in the United States and other western countries. Its main purpose was to immobilize or weaken the United States by stirring up hatred for the government at Washington; by provoking political, diplomatic and economic problems in the Latin American countries; and by instigating labor troubles in key American industries. Apart from weakening the United States as a potent world force, the party aims at undermining the hemispheric solidarity which has followed the "good neighbour" policy.

A mirroring of this attack on the "good neighbour" policy has of late been apparent on this campus, not through any actions or thoughts of the students themselves, but rather through the nefarious circulation of a Communist "news-sheet." Although it bears the inspiring name of "The Student Beacon", it nevertheless has no connection with Varsity students, nor does it manage to shed any light.

Reversing our previous criticism of The Beacon's makeup and typography as messy and illegible, we would now say that its makeup is the best thing about the paper. Bad as that may be its quality surpasses by far that of its word-content which is now devoid of all thought except for a few unintelligent ramblings, obviously much strained after.

The unilluminating Beacon seems to take a great interest in campus activities, showing a typical lack of knowledge. But its main purpose appears to be that of undermining Anglo-American relations. Unless the Young Communists prefer life under Hitler to the freedom they ordinarily (and in some cases undeservedly) enjoy in Canada, then they had best cease spouting nonsense and prepare to do a bit of fighting, for they are doing their utmost now to destroy that weapon which is going to be so effective in producing a British victory.

Election Time Again

It's election time around the university again and therefore time for a little propaganda on behalf of a good turnout of voters. Most of the leading campus organizations are about to elect new executives, and if you have any interest at all in your college activities you should be on hand to have your say in the matter.

There are always a certain number of people each year to whom this business of voting is a vague mystery. They wonder how "so-and-so got such-and-such a position", but they do not seem to realize that they might have had the right to help elect whomever they wanted. In many cases, the final choice is decided by an amazingly small percentage of the students who should be voting. This year, make it a point to vote if you possibly can. It makes for more satisfactory results, and gives you a greater interest in your college activities.

In the next few weeks most of the campus clubs and societies will hold their elections. All undergraduate women of University College will meet to elect W.U.A. executives for the various years, and at Victoria College the annual elections are soon to be held. Next year's executive of the U.C. Literary and Athletic Society will be elected next week. At one p.m. today in Room 6, U.C., third year Pass and fourth year Honour students of U.C. will gather to nominate candidates for the Moss Scholarship and the permanent year executive. Dozens of other elections will take place in the various colleges, and in the smaller clubs.

Next year's most responsible positions are about to be filled and if you have any interest in who will be who around the university, you had better cast your vote when the time comes.

Can We Abolish Tariffs?

World abolition of tariffs after the war in order to bring about higher standards of living and better wages for all peoples was part of a plan proposed recently at an advertisers' convention in New York. The man who presented it was Russell W. Davenport, personal representative of Wendell Willkie in his Presidential campaign.

In spite of the fact that it has the appearance of a somewhat impossible achievement, Mr. Davenport seems quite confident that it can be done. "The world beyond this war must be different from the world behind this war," he declared, and went on to explain just how such a thing could be achieved.

"Our tariff theory must be reversed. We can't, of course, suddenly abolish tariffs. But we can gradually reduce tariffs; we can rationalize them, and we can extend to entirely new horizons the principle of reciprocity. There must be one common purpose among the nations who join in the open market—to raise the standard of living. Not just their own, but the standard of all others. Since our standard is highest, we must take the leadership. We must develop, by the export of heavy industries, those nations which are industrially backward. But we must devise a system of investment by which native capital can share in the equities and the profits."

In theory Mr. Davenport's proposal sounds fine. The main question he will have to answer is "Can it work?" Not until a little uncompleted business in the world today is cleared up at any rate, we might venture to say.

Capes For Co-eds

Co-eds are coming in for a little attention from the fashion designers this spring, if you can believe what you read in the style columns. It seems that they have been watching college girls trot from class to class and back and forth about the campus with their coats thrown over the shoulders and the sleeves dangling free. Putting two and two together, they have reached the conclusion that we are just too busy to take time to get into them properly and so—capes will reappear in the fashion shows this spring, designed especially for us.

We think it is all very considerate of them to go to such lengths to assist us but we have an idea we will still see coats-over-the-shoulders on the campus this spring, capes or no capes. Besides, we have a horror of things designed for the college girl. It probably developed from watching fashion shows staged "especially for girls about to enter college." Anyone who has seen one is bound to understand.

University Theatre Night

Tonight in Hart House Theatre the University Theatre Night will offer campus relaxers three one-act plays. We suggest that if you lovers of the Drama find yourselves unburdened by impending essays and tests you might do very much worse than roll in, relax in one of those superbly padded seats and give eye and ear to the collegiate thespians.

Vic is doing Wits' End, ballyhooed as a spine-chiller, calculated to cause heart-failure in the infirm. St. Mike's will present the time-worn but usually enjoyable The Bishop's Candlesticks. U.C. is to produce scenes from Odets' Waiting for Lefty.

We feel mild pangs of regret that Trinity has

I was seated in my brown study of a Sunday evening busily engaged in a knotty calculus problem which finally got the better of me. Throwing the book aside, I muttered to myself "This shouldn't happen to a dog."

My huge shepherd dog who had been lying beside the fireplace rose as if startled by a nightmare, looked at me slowly with his big blue eyes, and then averting his gaze finally walked away. It seemed to me that he brushed aside a tear and the decided drop in his tail convinced me that something was amiss.

Feeling sorry for Rover (for that was his name), I asked what was the matter. There was no answer from the unhappy beast but this time I saw him brush away another tear—this time distinctly with a boogie beat.

"He's hungry," I thought to myself, and I threw him a bone. As quick as a flash, he threw it back at me, and before I knew it we were deeply engrossed in a game of catch.

"By the way," Rover said suddenly, "I don't think I'll ever forgive you for what you did to me."

"What do you mean?" I said. "Oh nothing," he answered, as he threw a fast sinker that caught me in the pit of my stomach.

I was determined to find the truth. I had noticed the dog acting queer lately, and he had never behaved that way before. At any rate, he had never thrown sinkers at my stomach before.

I continued my questioning until finally Rover broke down. After taking a long pause for station identification, he said, "I don't like that phrase you've been using lately."

"What phrase?" I queried.

"Oh, don't play the innocent with me," he countered. "You know that phrase, 'It shouldn't happen to a dog' . . . what shouldn't happen to a dog?"

"Oh Rover," I said as I breathed a sigh of relief, "that doesn't mean anything. I was just having trouble with this problem, and I merely happened to remark that it shouldn't happen to a dog. I wasn't referring to you in particular."

"Well, I don't like it. What makes you think I couldn't solve the problem," he kept on, "do you think I'm a moron like you? Let me see that problem."

Before I could stop him, he grabbed the book from my hand, and before a minute had passed he had solved the problem on a sheet of paper even remembering to leave large margins for corrections. In ten minutes, he had solved every problem in the book.

"There," he said. "After this, make sure you watch your big fat mouth."

There was nothing I could say. I just sat there dumfounded as Rover took down an Encyclopedia, curled up in my favourite easy chair, and calmly began to read. Yes, I said to myself, Rover is right. Hereafter I shall not be so hasty. Dogs are sensitive. I will never use that phrase again. I shall have to watch my big fat mouth.

Hank Rooster.

cancelled its repeat performance of the old Abbey Players masterpiece, The Rising of the Moon. We always enjoy the play, even when it is not done full justice, as was the case when Trinity presented it last fall. But no doubt it was a wise step to drop the whole production, rather than carry on with an under-study in a key role, even though it does show an airy disregard of the bromide about the necessity of the show going on.

The main point is that three of the four major campus theatrical groups will be in there trying tonight, and it really is only fair that they get a little support. And as well as supporting them, the chances are that you will enjoy their performance. M. O'M.

Hall and Graham Lead In Hockey Scoring Statistics

Athletic Office Figures Reveal One-Point Lead for Aerial Navigation Iceman in Scoring Race

BIG TEN'S RATING

Don Hall of Aerial Navigation leads the intercollegiate hockey loop in scoring points, according to statistics released by the Athletic Office yesterday. He has 19 points to his credit, one better than Knox's Don Graham. Graham is way out in front in the matter of goals with a grand total of 15. Cummings is next with 11, Hall and Jack McKay are tied for the leadership in assists with nine apiece.

Big ten:

	G.	A.	Pts.
Hall, Aer. Nav.	10	9	19
Graham, Knox	15	3	18
Cummings, S.P.S. IV	11	5	16
McKay, Knox	6	9	15
Morrison, St. M. A.	6	8	14
Boa, S.P.S. IV	5	8	13
Wendorf, O.C.E.	9	3	12
Bennett, St. M. A.	5	6	11
Scantland, O.C.E.	4	6	10
Duff, Aer. Nav.	9	1	10

JUNIOR VIC HOOPSTERS WIN EASY 38-10 MATCH

With a comparatively easy 38-10 win over Junior Meds yesterday afternoon, Junior Vic came out of near-oblivion in the Group II standing to tie for first place with Junior School, whom they defeated 28-27 Monday eve.

Vic had things pretty well their own way throughout, didn't bother taking care of the rebounds as Meds' shooting range and direction went haywire. Johnston Bros., Munroe and Rod, took correct bearings on the opposing basket, racked up nine pretty baskets between them. Lou Paslawski also got warmed up, canned five field goals.

TWENTY-TWO LAPS

Which is, being reduced to its lowest terms, the two-mile meander. For this event the trackmen get together for the next-to-the-last time on Friday afternoon to contest ranking places, and for those who care to take a look at what would have been Varsity's intercollegiate cross-country aggregation, this will be your last and at the same time best opportunity. Hec Phillips went one step further: "It is the makings of a winning intercollegiate team."

Fortunate it is that three of the boys who will be taking part tomorrow are freshmen. Perhaps, before their hair takes on a different hue and the best they will be able to do is creak around the paths emitting wheezing gasps, they will get a chance to show some of their stuff where it counts the most, i.e. in intercollegiate circles. Gord Lorimer, Frankie Bennett and Geoff Parke-Taylor all have great possibilities, have showed up well to date. Hec holds high hopes for these newcomers.

Bob Delaney and Tom Barnett are to run too. So it's youth stacked up against experience, acquired over quite a period of years. Old Man Experience provided the finishing touch to send Bob Delaney home in front in the mile race. It has sent Tom Barnett to the tape first many times, but not this year. Tom hasn't hit his stride, and for the past month has been trying to shake off a parasitic cold. Lorimer is in better condition than his two contemporaries. Frankie Bennett won the novice barrier, but that was way back last fall and Geoff hasn't arrived first in a major test. That leaves us with Lorimer and Delaney, and we'll take Bob on the strength of his greater track knowledge. But as Hec said, it can be any one of the above five, so take your pick. Any way you look at it, it sizes up as a lulu of a race.

Vic is well in the forefront in the indoor standings, but the competition may be thrown wide open between the Scarlet and Gold and their present arch-rivals, O.C.E., if the Teachers can manage a win in the 880, 6-man relay. It will be Vic against O.C.E., Hal Brown against Jerry Proderick in the stretch in the evening's second headliner.

RE THE BIG TEN

Not Mid-western football, but the scoring standings of the hockey loop, out today. It so happens that a couple of pretty weak teams have been thrown into groups where they haven't the slightest chance of seeing light, and that the strong boys do not fail to capitalize on their weak sisters to pile up huge scores, viz., Aerial Navigation 17, Knox B, 0. Not that we blame the Navigators. After all, a game's a game, and it's Knox's tough luck, and they'd do the same to us if, and all that, but it is hardly a fair reflection on the Herculean or Trojan or what have you efforts of better players in better groups. For instance, the best hockey emanates from Group I, which constitutes the toughest league. It is also the lowest-scoring bunch, due to all-round even-Stevener games. So, after much toiling about among stacks of score-sheets, we thought it might be a good idea to give you the high-scorers in the various groups.

Junior School monopolizes the lion's share of the scoring in Group I, with Bill McLaughlin out front with six points, three goals and three assists. Morrison of St. Mike's leads Group II with 14, Bob Binning of Pharmacy Group III with nine, Don Graham of Knox Group IV with 18, Wendorf of O.C.E. Group V with 12, and Hall of Aerial Navigation, chief twine-twanger Group VI with 19. Space does not permit the naming of second and third place players. More later.

WE SEE BY THE PAPERS

Through the Saskatoon Sheaf we learn that "Professor E. A. Hardy, president of the Western Intercollegiate Football Union, speaking at the 13th annual Huskies' Football Banquet, announced that plans are underway for the operation of the league next fall." The Sheaf headlined the story: Intercollegiate Football Next Fall.

O.K., let's cut out the joke now down east. We've been laughing ourselves sick over it for nearly a year now, but it's getting a bit tiresome trying to keep it up.

Two Close Tilts Played On Arena Ice Yesterday

Manager Gord Mercer Scores Both Goals for Winners as Trinity B Edge Woodsman 2-1

A thrilling last minute stretch drive gave Trinity B a 2-1 victory in a scrappy puck contest at the Arena yesterday.

Gord Mercer of the Anglicans scored in the first period to put the Red and Black in the lead which they kept for the rest of the chukker. Late in the final frame Grant Puttock notched the count on a pass from McKay only to have Mercer break away again and put the game on ice.

Puttock led the Treemen and spent practically the entire game on the ice. "Moose" Eccles on the rear line handed out his usual quota of bruising body checks.

Manager Gord Mercer got both goals for the Anglicans while Bruce Reid starred on defence.

Forestry: Ballantyne, Puttock, McKay, Monaghan, Lee, Campbell, Tait, Allan, McBride, Taylor, Eccles.

Trinity B: Morley, Reid, Knight, Garrett, Livingstone, Hall, Laidlaw, Turner, Mercer.

KNOX BEAT FORESTRY IN BASKET TUSSLE

Len Self dumped in a long-distance basket to prevent Knox B with some of the best news they've heard this season, a 34-32 squeak over Forestry. The Woodsman missed their chance to tie for first place in Group VI.

Forestry fought from behind a 21-16 count, went into a one-point lead on baskets by Bentley and Purdy with but a single minute left.

Sr. Meds Tie Undeclared Drug-gists as Both Goalers Scintillate; Spence Stars for Doctors

A goodly proportion of the student body of the Ontario College of Pharmacy came out to the University Ice-Box yesterday to see their hockey team continue its undefeated record by tying Sr. Meds 1-1.

Both teams failed to score in the opening period but several break-aways just failed to click. Spence of Meds opened the scoring half-way through the final period on a pass from Dennis. A few minutes later Russell, Jardine and Binning put on a power play; the last showed in the disc.

Jerry Casselman of Pharmacy and Gus McBrien of Meds were tops between the pipes, both pulling off some sensational stops. Binning and Jardine came very close on some scoring rushes and Jack Boyes stood out on defence for the Druggists. Spence was the star for the Scalpel-Swingers.

Sr. Meds: McBrien, McMillan, Stephens, Spence, Fulton, Wasyluk, Murray, Gillespie, Weran, Dennis and Candwell.

Pharmacy: Casselman, Boyes, Murray, Jeffers, Jardine, Russell, Binning, Dunning, Walther, Elliott, Quirk.

DOON BOXER

The "Terror of Hutton House", as his friends know him, has probably the strangest athletic record of any of Varsity's outstanding athletes. Although Donnie has been an important cog in our thirteen hockey and football machines throughout his stay at U.T.S. and Varsity, he has never been a member of a championship squad.

Don has been a stand-out defenceman on Varsity junior and intermediate puck teams and at present combines with "Beefy" MacMillan to give Trinity what many consider the hardest hitting defence in the intercollegiate league. Ed Wilkey attempted to get Donnie to bolster the defence of his tottering Bowles' Rangers. But it was no dice as Boxer decided to stick with the Red and Black.

All-star Mulock quarter-back for the past two years, Don has made Trinity a consistent threat with his quick thinking and amazing ability to boot field goals.

Consistently troubled by a "trick" knee, it is a matter of speculation as to what havoc this gamster might have wrought had he gone into battle in top shape.

Don claims to be a friend of the race-horses—but we've definitely decided he's been going to the wrong feed-box—he's, more correctly, a pal to the ponies.

U.C. III OUTBAT FLYERS IN ONE-SIDED GAME

U.C. III mullaballers unleashed a powerful offensive throughout yesterday's four-inning tilt to swamp Aerial Navigation 27-8.

Minus a shortstop, the Navigators could neither stop the College hickory wielders nor start a rally of their own. The Red and White had a field day, every member of the team coming home with at least one run, and some flattening their averages with four or five.

In the final stanza, with the game definitely decided, the Men With Wings put together four runs in a final spurge before being tamed by Bill Nicholls' slants.

U.C. III: Duncan, Waisglass, McNulty, Dorst, Loffmark, Clavir, White, Nicholls, Hunter, Grant.

Aer. Nav.: Constant, McLaughlin, Van Hayne, Tuckah, Price, Wismer, Schofield, Scott.

Game today at 4 p.m. with Dents. Following turn out: Alcombrack, Ledingham, Davey, Nichol, Faber, Kindner, Rowat, McNulty, Flanagan, Laidlaw and Nicol.

SPORT SPLASHES

The play-off berth has been decided in Group III (Senior School for four furlongs) but Dents and Knox got together in the pool last night for a friendly square-off. Knox matched goals with Dents in the last period, but lost 5-3 on the strength of her first-period showing.

Dents led by a comfortable 3-1 margin in the first period, but though strong in her desire to win from an opponent other than the lowly Wycliffe crew, who wind up their schedule with Dents tonight still scoreless let alone winless, Knox couldn't make the grade, which is quite evident from the score, isn't it?

Lipman and Beatty both skidded in a brace of Dentist goals while Kilgour got the odd one. Swallow majored in scoring for Knox, counting twice, while Jim Jack picked up the third.

Dents: Morrow, Lipman, Brunton, Beatty, Clark, Chapkin, Katz, Kilgour. Knox: Crawford, Davidson, Jack, McInnis, Johnston, Farrow, Swallow.

Table Tennis Experts, Senior Intercollegiate Gymnastic Meet Top Features of Varied Athletic Program

CAGE EXHIBITION

An exhibition of table-tennis by top-ranking players of the province will be the highlight of Saturday evening's University Night, fifth in the series. Victoria College will act as host.

Last year the exhibition, a far cry from the basement type of table-tennis as most people know it, was one of the highlights of the entire series of Athletic Nights. The demonstrating players, members of the Canadian Tennis Club, are to be Marj Downham, Ontario ladies' singles champion, Joyce Smith, Toronto and District champion, and Lou Beedle and Charlie Burnside, top-ranking men players. The exhibition will consist of ladies' and men's singles and mixed doubles. Unable to take part because of an injured knee, Leo Haber, second year Aerial Navigation, and one of the province's top-ranking players, will comment on the game's highlights.

A further major attraction will be the Senior Intercollegiate Gymnastic Meet in the upper gym. Senior Vic will renew cage hostilities with Senior U.C. The Vic girls and an all-star intercollegiate team will offer an exhibition under girls' rules. Dents, intercollegiate volleyball champions, have accepted a challenge from Vic, who went as far as the semi-finals, in an upper gym non-title bout. Fencing finals will be held in the upper gym. The pool program is not yet complete. As usual, there will be dancing in the lower gym from 10 to twelve.

By Marg Foulds

Last to hold their swim meet, U.C. turned out fairly well last night at the O.C.E. pool, approximately 15 strong, to have Betty Mortimer, II Arts, show them how the fish get around. Out of 6 races, Betty paced 4 and trailed in the other 2 by just so much. The breast stroke, crawl, plunge and style went under her thumb, while the ornamental and back crawl were won by two freshies. Pat Austin, I P.T., was the lucky one in the former, and generally put in a good performance throughout the meet.

Most remarkable feat of the evening is credited to Eleanor Richardson, also I P.T., with her lightning back crawl. Eleanor won by almost a length, leaving the rest, including Betty Mortimer, far behind.

"Was a good meet. See the Intercollegiate-Intercollegiate affair next Monday and Wednesday nights in Hart House. It'll be good."

Last night saw St. Hilda's and U.C. win definite victories over Vic II and Meds respectively, on none-to-delightful icy surfaces. The scores, kept low by weather conditions, were 5-0 and 4-0, but would probably have been different on better ice. However, St. Hilda's and U.C. continue to hold 1st and 2nd places, in that order, in the schedule. They may reach the finals just like that.

This Saturday night, Vic are offering a Vic All-star girls' basketball game on the program. The all-stars will be selected, probably from O.T. & P. St. Mike's and U.C., though other colleges may be represented. More later, but watch this.

DENTS DOWN TEACHERS IN 23-16 BASKET TILT

A scrappy O.C.E. B cage quartet fell lower in the Group VIII basketball cellar yesterday afternoon as they were handed a hard-luck 23-16 loss by Dents C.

Things weren't too bad at all for the Teachers until a couple of minutes before the final whistle. The score was tied at 16-16 when Bob Swanick was banished from the game with four personal registered against him.

EASTMAN ANALYSES COLLAPSE OF FRANCE

strong in alliances while 1940 revealed Russia, Spain and Italy in the hostile camp while United States was not ready to help and Great Britain was not in a position to lend any more aid than was necessary.

With regard to France's inward weakness, the speaker explained that no country which had endured such blood-baths as France had in the last war could hastily reconstruct her position. He pointed out that France's population continued to decrease until 1939, when Germany outnumbered her by two to one.

Dr. Eastman regretted that the Council of the League of Nations refused to allow France to mobilize on Hitler's entrance into the Rhineland. He stressed that France and England grossly underestimated the strength of the foe until it was too late. France thought that she had a wonderful army because it was so much better than that of 1914, but she failed to realize that it was still far inferior to that of the foe, he continued.

To describe France's policy, the speaker quoted the quip: "In Germany everything not expressly permitted is forbidden, while in France everything not expressly forbidden is permitted." "France lacked the dynamism of the fanatical foe and the mechanical momentum which made the foe powerful. It was which the miracle that Reynaud believed in that could have saved her," Dr. Eastman stated. However, he pointed out that if she had adapted an adequately mechanized army, public opinion in the democracies would have condemned her as militaristic.

With regard to France's rejection of Churchill's offer of an Anglo-French union, the speaker expressed his opinion that Reynaud would at least have accepted it in principle if it had come two weeks sooner but it came too late. Dr. Eastman lamented the lack of recognition of the part played by the French troops in the evacuation of Dunkirk.

Pratt Discusses Poetry's Source

The outstanding importance of careful records and scrupulous respect for authentic detail was emphasized by Dr. E. J. Pratt, speaking yesterday on the subject of "Source Material for Contemporary Poetry," as the third speaker in the Victoria College lecture series.

Dr. Pratt stated his intention to try to combat the prevalent idea that the author of prose, especially of the historical or scientific type, must engage in more detailed research than the writer of verse. In this connection he pointed out the distinction between subjective poetry, which is of necessity more concerned with mood, music and phraseology than with historical fact and objective poetry, in which authentic detail is imperative in order to avoid the ludicrous.

"Although there are some types of verse in which some insignificant errors and anachronisms should not affect one's evolution of the work, in dealing with historical subjects the laugh can very easily be turned against the author, no matter how much license he may have requested," he said; "latitude which may pardonably be allowed in the fantastic is fatal in the historical or scientific poem."

Student Artists Show Their Work

Almost every faculty is represented in the undergraduate exhibition which is on display in Hart House Art Gallery now and is to stay until Feb. 29. Oils and water-colours take up most of the space, with one or two pastels. One surprising feature is the oil done inside a wide, rather irregularly shaped grey border. There is a rectangular frame outside the whole thing, and the part covered by the picture itself is approximately the shape of Australia.

Almost all of one wall and half of another is taken up by water-colours by the architects, with subjects ranging from landscapes to close-ups of freight cars and houses. The remainder of the space is shared out between the different undergraduate colleges and faculties. Dents being the only one not represented.

The Canadian Campus

By Alex Colville

Staff Writer, The Argos Weekly

A Canadian University Press Feature

Students interested in arriving at that destination which gloomy prophets are always claiming is the ultimate goal of all students, namely nowhere, are advised to hasten with all speed to Kingston where, it is claimed, there exists a bus bearing on its front the sign, "Nowhere". Rather a defeatist bus company, we would say.

In the Gateway of Jan. 31 is printed a huge six-column article, complete with a painstakingly-drawn diagram, on the most fascinating subject: "Fluorine and Mottled Teeth" in Alberta. The diagram, in the form of "Odes to an Inconstant One", etcetera.

We have heard of sandwiches made of sardines in olive oil, mixed with mayonnaise, with the addition of roast pork, raw carrots, cold cabbage, a poached egg and red pepper — now we have discovered a new concoction brewed by the University of British Columbia students in an attempt to raise money for the Red Cross. We don't know whether or not it was successful (it takes a long time for news to travel from the Pacific to the Atlantic coast) but we expect the worst. Here are the ingredients of the night's entertainment: Glamorous feminine legs scintillating under colorful costumes, the luring under colorful costumes, the Rabelaisian humour of a mysterious science-fictioner's skit, tantalizing rhyms by Sid Poulton and his boys, a genuine Hawaiian hula by one of the coeds, a Rumba and La Conga dance by thirteen sorority sisters and, crowning climax, a novelty song and dance item by a famous visitor to the campus, "little eight-year-old Dolores Frest, Canada's own Shirley Temple". Gaudy, one American Shirley Temple is surely enough to satiate the most depraved appetite.

The debating Union of Queen's, apparently having nothing better to do with its time, has been haggling over the age-old question of the advisability of having loved and lost as compared to never having loved at all, and, consequently never having lost. The winnah claimed dourly that if they were going to lose their love they didn't want it at all, which seems rather a demanding policy to us. This winning side, by the way, was composed entirely of men, which is not surprising when one considers that for centuries the supposedly dominant male has been pelling the gentler and more fickle sex with pleas for more permanent passion, in the form of "Odes to an Inconstant One", etcetera.

We have, not in this corner, but on this campus (Mount Allison University, for the benefit of the ignorant) a venerable sage, philosopher and poet in a MOST UNUSUAL form: that of a fourth-year engineer. Can you imagine words of abstract and aesthetic content flowing from the mouth of a will-be plumber? Yet immortality is assured him, for he has made the following definition: "Petting: the study of anatomy, using the Braille system."

Having received a small amount of scientific education we are imbued with that skepticism which is supposed to be the curse of our age. As a result we find it difficult to credit the somewhat fantastic story from Queen's of the freshman who thought a neckerchief was the head of a girl's society.

Without meaning to be offensive, we nominate the editor of the U. of Western Ont. Gazette for the position of "King Bum of Canada". In an editorial written for the benefit of the bloated capitalists of London, (Ont.), he complains bitterly of scanty endowments and pleads for the wherewithal to erect a Women's Union Building. Lightly mentioning five buildings already owing their existence to endowments, he writes, "For these gifts we are duly grateful," adding, "but the surface has been merely scratched." The best, however, is yet to come; in a final plea to "those who have the extra few thousands," he asks them to "consider sending a few dollars to the College on the Hill", closing his editorial with "We can use the money, AND THE INHERITANCE TAXES WOULD ONLY GET IT ANYWAY."

Beirut in Syria, and from 1931 to 1938 he lectured on archaeology there.

The American University of Beirut, Professor Ingholt informed, was begun as a missionary enterprise but since its founding it has grown out of that stage. At present there is an enrollment of 1800 students; this year the number has increased considerably in view of the fact that many from Iraq, the Sudan, Egypt, Palestine and so on who would otherwise have gone to England are now studying there.

With his return to his native land, Professor Ingholt became a lecturer in Semitic languages and the Old Testament in the newly founded University of Aarhus. At the same time he worked on his book dealing with his excavation work in Syria at the sites of ancient Palmyra and Hama.

Having received permission from his university in Denmark to come to North America on a lecture tour, Professor Ingholt left Europe in September of 1940. But any conversation with him concerning his native country ends with that information; his wife and family are still there.

Previous to coming to Toronto, Professor Ingholt was lecturing at New Haven; next he will go to Hamilton, Chicago, and London, but he will return to this city for March 2 when he will speak at Branksome Hall on the life and work of an archaeologist.

photographs, especially in the case of the Temple of Baal, the chief god of the city, and the ancient tombs.

"Religious texts are very scarce, as no papyrus have as yet come to light; however, they should be well preserved in the dry sand, and if any are found they will be very valuable," he added.

The fusion of oriental and occidental influences is illustrated in the sculpture as Persian dress is worn with Roman helmets. The schematic folds of the drapery, and the wide-open eyes are definitely oriental. In tracing the development of the sculpture of Palmyra, Professor Ingholt pointed out that the 3rd century examples show more Greek influence; they are less rigid, but they lose the strength of the earlier works.

This lecture was sponsored by the Toronto Society of the Archaeological Institute of America. The next in the series will be given in March by Professor Brieger of the Department of Fine Art in the University of Toronto. His subject will be, "The Growth of the English Parish Church."

length in yesterday's issue, range in subject from the modern thriller type to the forceful story of "The Bishop's Candlesticks," scenes based on an incident in Hugo's "Les Misérables." U.C.'s "Waiting for Lefty" portrays scenes which illustrate the modern workman faced by the problem which a strike creates. Vic, who chose the terrifying "Wits' End", promises the ideal entertainment for those who love a mystery. The drama chosen by St. Michael's players is a beautiful story, a moving incident in the life of Jean Valjean.

We have every reason to believe that you will be delighted with Theatre Night. Everyone should find that the plays chosen suit his or her taste, and that the admission fee will not disturb the most carefully balanced budget. The curtain will rise at 8:15 p.m. sharp on this presentation, which seems to have all the qualities which go to make a successful enterprise in the field of amateur dramatics.

PLAYS PRESENTED BY DRAMA CLUBS AT THEATRE NIGHT

Arts Colleges Initiate New University Drama Evenings which Are Taking Place of Wednesday Afternoon Series

THREE CLUBS PARTICIPATE

Last night saw the first of the University Theatre Nights.

These evenings devoted to drama in the Hart House Theatre are to replace the regular series of Wednesday afternoon plays put on by the separate drama clubs of the different colleges. University College, St. Michaels and Victoria each contributed a play for last night's entertainment.

Directed by Vincent Blockley, U.C. gave a group of scenes from Clifford Odets' well known play, "Waiting for Lefty". There was a large cast composed of John Burns, Vincent Blockley, June Ariel, Philip Kerwin, Walter Beatty, and Alice Wickson.

The play opens with a strike meeting of a New York taxi drivers' union and in the succeeding two scenes presents views of the individual drivers' private poverty-stricken lives which finally force them to strike.

St. Michael's presented Norman McKinnel's version of "The Bishop's Candlesticks", an adaptation from Victor Hugo's "Les Misérables". The cast was led by Thomas McDermott as the

Arts Students Frolic As U.C. Year Ends

Final Fling at Annual Junior-Senior Dance in Eaton's Auditorium on Last Day of February

MUSIC BY AVONDE

"Students of University College will have their final fling before impending examination gloom at our annual Junior-Senior dance," declared Gord Pyne, third year president.

This last social event of the Royal College will be informal at Eaton's Auditorium on February 28 and music will be provided by Richard Avonde and his orchestra.

Merry-makers will get election results of the W.U.A. and the men's Literary and Athletic Society right at the dance as has been the custom in the past. Hugh Pedlar and Margie Smith will entertain with a singing duet.

Tickets for the Junior-Senior go on sale Tuesday, Feb. 25 in the junior common room from 11-2.

LIBRARY EVENING

On Thursday 27th February Mr. Robertson Davies, Literary Editor of "Saturday Night", will give an informal talk in the library of Hart House on "Play Reading as Related to the Development of the Theatre." The time will be 8.15 p.m. This is the last Library Evening of the season. All members of Hart House, and especially those interested in the theatre, are invited to attend.

Vic Co-Eds Entertain Eds

Betty Co-Eds of Victoria who attended the annual formal, as well as sundry others of the fair sex from the same college, will return the compliment of innumerable invitations and dates this coming Saturday when the time of the Spring Tea Dance rolls around.

Swingsmith Howard Cable will be on hand with his rhythm-makers to deal out the tempo for the occasion in the dim-lit halls of Wymwood. In spite of the danger of rushing the season, a special Spring Supper will be served in keeping with the general theme of the event.

Dancing is scheduled to begin at five o'clock and will continue until eight. In view of the fact that Vic is playing host at the Varsity Night in Hart House, the committee expects many of the dancing couples to adjourn from Wymwood to the sports wing of the Massey Mansion.

Art Reviewed In Hart House By Instructor

Caven Atkins of Sketch Club Criticizes Lack of Individuality and Close Adherence to "Correct" Tradition

ADVISES CAREFUL FRAMING

The annual Undergraduate Show in the Hart House Art Gallery was reviewed yesterday at 1.30 p.m. by Caven Atkins, instructor of the Sketch Club. The show, he said, divided itself readily into two sections, paintings by those with whom art is a hobby and those done by architecture students as class projects.

"I am interested to see that there are men who want to paint, whether the result be good or bad," he said. "However there seems to be a lack of individuality in this show." He condemned the student artists for too close adherence to "correct" tradition. In the architectural field especially, he said, the results show that the subjects were approached with a preconceived idea of how the subject should be rendered.

According to Atkins, it is wrong to follow a pre-twentieth century school because "art should be a means of emptying ourselves of something we have reacted to. It should not consist merely of a play stimulus gained from repetition. The artist should use his own eyes to the full.

In criticizing the show in general he said that a sense of form was generally lacking especially in nebulous forms which seemed to lack weight.

In the midst of the walking tour of the gallery which followed his opening remarks Atkins took time to caution greater care in the framing of pictures. P. M. Gardiner, II Vic, was held up as the horrible example. "Back of Town" was commended for its fine plastic rendition, but was shown to have been overwhelmed by its frame.

War Guests Accommodated By Committee

Circular to University Staff Outlines Work Already Done in Placing Children and Mothers in Canadian Homes

OTHERS MAY FOLLOW

The committee for British Overseas children set up last summer as a sub-committee of the Toronto Women's War Service has sent out a circular to the staff of the university telling of the work already done in an effort to enlist support for the program they are engaged in carrying out.

They have already placed about 150 children and 18 mothers in homes and it is to help these guests that contributions and assistance are required. The guests were invited through four British universities: Oxford, Cambridge, Birmingham and Manchester.

As stated in the letter, the committee does not consider its work done when homes are found for the war guests, but it intends to give protection and supervision to them as long as there is any need for it.

As well as contributions the committee is looking for summer homes so the war guests may have a holiday in the Canadian countryside.

Along with the circulars, a detailed report of the work of the committee up to this time has been sent to those who have already contributed to the fund. This report contains a description of the trials and difficulties overcome since the inception of the plan.

It is not definite yet whether any more children will be coming to Canada. The report states that there is still a possibility.

FRIDAY RECITAL

Members of Hart House are informed that there will be no recital today at 5 p.m. in the Music Room. The next and final recital of the season will be held on 28th February, when Clifford Poole, pianist, will give the program.

Nominations Open To-Day For Hart House Offices

Every Undergraduate Member of the House is Eligible for Library, Music, Art, Debates or Squash Committees. Election Expenses Limited to Five Dollars per Candidate and Valuable Gifts to Electorate Prohibited

Nominations for the Hart House Standing Committees open today. Any undergraduate member of Hart House is eligible to stand for the House, Library, Music, Art, Debates, or Squash Committees, it has been announced. In the case of the latter committee the following statement must be signed: "I have played squash at least six times during the present academic year and my name is now on the ranking list (A, B, or Freshman Section) and has been there at least three weeks prior to the date of nomination."

In order to prevent the elections from seeming a costly business the Warden's Office have in past years limited the election expenses of each candidate to five dollars and have prohibited the giving of any articles of value to the electorate.

Formerly there was a rule that candidates for the Debates Committee were restricted to personal solicitation as the only form of electioneering permitted. However, since there has been no debating in the House for over a year and debaters have not had this chance to become known it has been decided to permit them full privileges of electioneering. This will be permitted as well as the present policy regarding debates is followed.

This year as usual the 300 vote rule will obtain. Each year two men are re-elected on each committee by the outgoing members and their faculties are not allowed to elect a representative until men from each of the other faculties have been elected to the committee. However, should a faculty not poll a minimum of 300 votes for their leading candidate they fail to elect a representative and the place is filled by the leading candidate from the faculty or college whose representative of the year before was re-elected. Any remaining vacancies are then filled by popular vote. No more than three representatives from each faculty or college are allowed on a committee. All except the Glee Club and Camera Committees are subject to this rule.

Those re-elected this year are: House—J. R. Flieger, IV Wyelife; M. A. Murphy, IV Dents; Music—R. M. Belva, III Trinity; A. J. Thompson, IV Wyelife; Art—P. M. Gardiner, II Vic; W. Shulman, IV S.P.S.; Debates—L. S. Albright, III Vic; J. E. Wolf-rain, II Vic; Glee Club—J. L. MacDowell, III Vic; Camera—A. C. W. LaMont. The Library Committee is wide open this year as all this year's representatives are in their graduating year.

CAMPAIGNS START IN NEXT ELECTION BY VIC INNOVATION

Publicity Complete with Posters and Speeches will be Initiated in Spring Elections by Aspiring Candidates

MAXIMUM EXPENSE IS $2.00

For the first time in her history Victoria College has decided to allow campaigning and publicity to go hand-in-hand with elections and yesterday's open meeting of the V.C.U. decided what restrictions should be placed on the candidates. The innovation will swing into action with the spring elections.

No more than $2.00 may be spent on campaigning and publicity by the candidate or his supporters. Posters are to be allowed and can be condemned on only three grounds: size, they cannot exceed the size of a sheet of the Varsity, (14" x 20"); caricatures, they may contain no caricatures of the staff; and they are not to represent things risqué. Before they are hung in Alumni Hall the posters must pass the inspection of the nominating committee. The nominations will close at 5 p.m. on Monday instead of Tuesday as formerly to allow longer time for display of the posters.

Only one poster at a time is to be allowed in Vic itself but posters may also be hung in the different residences (Continued on Page 4)

Picture Lecture For Camera Fan

Dr. A. I. Willinsky will speak on "Amateur Photography" at the Royal Canadian Institute lecture in Convocation Hall tomorrow night.

Dr. Willinsky has travelled throughout the world taking pictures. Mr. Murray of the Institute stated that the pictures would be of the Mediterranean area and should be of special interest today.

Dr. Willinsky is a prominent surgeon in Toronto who has developed a hobby of photography and has an enviable reputation as an amateur photographer.

He is a native of Omaha, Nebraska, attended Jarvis Collegiate from 1899-1902, and graduated from the University of Toronto in 1908 obtaining his M.B. The speaker is also a fellow of the American and Royal College of Surgeons and has taken post-graduate work in London, Vienna, Rome, Paris, Dublin, and Edinburgh.

HART HOUSE ELECTIONS

Nominations for the standing and special committees of Hart House (except Glee Club) open today. Nomination forms may be obtained at the Warden's office.

Polish Club Stage Dance

The Polish Club of the university meets at Newman Hall this evening and will take over the club-house for their Annual Ball.

Dancing will commence at 9 o'clock and come to a finale in the early morning, for it is only at their own ball that the Polish students can enjoy again their beloved polka and the folk-music of the homeland.

The president of the Polish Club, Lillian Karmalska, of VI Medicine, told The Varsity: "Only rarely do we Polish boys and girls hear the music of our native dances and have the opportunity to dance with that great gusto that characterizes them. So you will agree that we look forward to our Annual Ball and hope that all the Polish students will take this opportunity to join with us in keeping alive some of the fun of old Poland."

Auxbattmen Chortle With Glee As Training Draws to a Close

Hardened auxbattmen who were sought out yesterday and questioned regarding their sentiments concerning the termination of military training next week expressed their satisfaction in such terms as: "I think it's swell"; "It's okay by me"; "Now we can do some work".

It was announced to the Training Centre Battalion last Saturday that parades will be discontinued after Friday, February 28, until such time as the unit goes to camp. However, men who have not completed the minimum number of hours required before that date will be required to continue attending parades until their full time is made up.

Questioned concerning the matter, one Classics student who had apparently had too much training or something, went away muttering words which sounded like the Vic motto badly distorted, "Absent students in armores."

"Maybe now I will get some essays in on time," admitted Fred Stokes of second year Poly Sci.

Claiming that his feet have become flat from walking down to the armories Ed Nickerson vowed that the army would not even think of accepting him now.

One single dissenter who wishes to remain in the ranks of the anonymous broke the unanimity by complaining that the training period was going to be over before they could give him his commission.

Many Colorful College Memories Invested in Cherished Fraternity Pins

Merely frivolous knick-knacks to the uneducated the little fraternity pins which adorn the males and females of the campus are replete with memories of beautiful romances and stirring adventures. The class pins of the first and second years are reminders of the fights and other exciting encounters of initiation week, while the pins of the senior years remind them of the dignified days approaching graduation.

On the whole, pins, mainly school pins, are well loved by campus collectors. One differing of opinion came from Betty Blair, III Vic, who said when interviewed on the subject that girls' dresses are fussy enough anyway and that she prefers rings. A freshtee who wishes to remain anonymous remarked that she enjoyed collecting pins and hoped to collect a few more during the next three years.

One freshman thinks that psychologically pins are a symbol, the stimulus to which are conditioned many associations of college incidents. Another opinion expressed was that pins are an awful danger on the pocketbook.

A U.C. sophomore thinks that frat and class pins are decorative and dainty and look well on clothes, while a classmate says she enjoys wearing hers because she always feels so proud to tell people what college she comes from.

Harvard and Hart House

Drastic changes have come over tradition-hallowed Harvard College in the past week or so, changes which are substantial steps in the direction of expanding educational opportunities in the higher seats of learning in the United States. The changes are two. First of all some $9000 worth of new "commuting scholarships" have been offered to Massachusetts high school boys who have shown all-round abilities but are lacking in financial resources. Secondly, plans have been introduced to make college life more attractive for the five hundred "commuters" or day students.

The day student situation at Harvard is far removed from conditions on this campus where over half the students come from Toronto itself. At Harvard, traditionally the home of wealthy students, out of several thousand men there are only five hundred who do not live in residence. This has meant that the "commuting" group is in a way set off from the general student body. Only one building was provided for them, and there they could study and eat lunch on a co-operative basis. Many more day students applied for admission but facilities for handling them were inadequate with the result that they were refused. Under the new scheme, however, all future commuters will be welcomed into dorms and Houses and dining-halls, and it is considered by all a sweeping move for the good. For the first time since the House system was established in 1931, day students will be allowed to rent studies in the Houses along with resident students, and they will also be given an opportunity to play on House teams, use House libraries, and join in the other extra-curricular activities of residence life.

Here at Varsity, Hart House eliminates conditions such as exist at Harvard. Practically a community in itself, Hart House serves as a day-time home for several thousand male undergraduates and provides them with activities of every sort. Reading rooms, a restful well-equipped library, a music room, chess room, a beautiful efficiently-run dining hall, a quiet chapel, an art gallery, a whole athletic wing with every facility—these are only a few of the advantages Hart House offers in an attempt to make college life more stimulating, more attractive, and more developing for the average student. The aim of its founders was the developing of every side of a student's character, and everything possible has been done by the staff of the House to bring about the realization of that aim.

We would like to reprint a portion of an editorial on Hart House written last year by the editor of a western college newspaper.

"It (Hart House) is the unifying centre on the campus. It fulfills one of the highest functions of a university . . . to give students an opportunity to mix and make friends, to enjoy themselves, to listen to informal harp concerts (as I did) and to play games at any time. And what more can a university do for its students than to teach them by experience how to make friends and how to spend their leisure time profitably? Students at college should learn more than how to make a living. They should learn how to live."

That is the purpose and function of Hart House—to teach students how to live the fine type of life at which we all should aim.

Under The Plow

Europe, emerging from a second winter of war, is bending greater efforts every day toward increasing its food production. Farming methods and food habits are undergoing many changes under war conditions, as governments lay down regulations concerning the production of foodstuffs.

Information obtained by the American Agricultural Department reveals the nature of the changes in several European countries. In the German-controlled Netherlands, long the home of livestock and dairy farming, dairy and pasture lands are being plowed under to make room for food crops. No crops other than grains, beans, peas, potatoes, sugar beets, several other vegetables, flax and hay may be grown. In Spain farmers are required to plant cotton on ten percent of all land suitable for that crop. In Denmark, Norway and Sweden, as in the Netherlands, stoppage of feed imports is forcing farmers to turn from production of dairy and livestock products to food-crop farming. In Germany, due to a reported lack of tin, the canning industries have been compelled to reduce production, and the nation has turned to dry vegetables, aided by new drying processes.

Belligerent and occupied Europe is without doubt feeling the pinch of war and blockade. But the only position to take is still that the responsibility for that condition lies with the Nazi aggressor who has overrun half the continent. A weapon for victory, such as the blockade, must not be relaxed, especially when it lies within the power of the party responsible to alleviate the misery which is rampant.

AR MUSIC Drama

Dramatics

University Theatre Night

The First University Theatre Night was of a quality that merited an audience less like that of a small town. University College opened the program with scenes from Clifford Odets' well-known Waiting for Lefty. The play was unconvincing because of inefficiency in the mob scenes and worried hurried lines in the two duos. Alice Wickson as the disgusted wife of a down and out taxi-driver gave a nice performance. Effective lighting redeemed the effort.

Although St. Michael's attempted no more than the simple, one-track Bishop's Candlesticks, they did a thoroughly good job. We were slightly disturbed by an insufficiently imperious bishop and a convict with too cultured an intonation. Dean Coffey as the convict had a splendid conception of his part which burst forth at times with great effect, while Thomas McDermott and Sheila Ryan contrasted the roles of naive bishop and irritable sister well.

Vic had a great deal of fun with Wall Spence's Wits' End mystery play. The plot is not up to much but things have a nice habit of happening just wrong and accumulating. Mary Campbell as Della was quite fascinating, Alice Evans and Victor Butts were good ordinary people, and the rest made hay out of assorted eccentricities. George Forster got lots of laughs as his usual self exaggerated.

Although the evening's entertainment offered lots of material for criticism, the actors, audience and critics can all say that they enjoyed the evening.

Igor Gorin at Eaton Auditorium

We like Igor Gorin. We like his choice of program . . . we like his personality—we like his voice. It is an educated voice, with natural melody straight from the Muse. And he has a sense of humour!

The program was marked by quick transition from the serious to the comic, the melancholy to the whimsical. Troppo Savi I Gusti, by Cavalli, the opening number, received a quiet, thoughtful interpretation—sound, but not startling. His light, effort-

BULL BOARD

The weekly meeting of the Young Communist League, Local No. 1917 (Oct.), will be held in Room 13 at 999 Queen Street West tomorrow at Mt. 1615 hours. Members are requested to bring their own beads. Important business will be conducted and reports will be heard. Come equipped with your mimeograph machine, stamps, envelopes and a scratchy pen. Deadline for our next issue of the "Bacon" is tonight at midnight so no member may be seen alive after then.

A social program will be held after the meeting. Comrade Yehudi will sing "There'll always be a Lenin" and will be accompanied by Professor Fifth Column. Able-bodied Comrade Ivan Awfulotofalbackonwhenever Igoskatingovich and Lance-Corporal Sisileff will play a mouthorgan duet entitled "The R.C.M.P. will get you if you don't watch out". A silver collection will be taken to help defray the expenses of our minister plenipotentiary and envoy extraordinary at Internment Camp No. 5, somewhere in England.

less expression quickened in the M'ha prese alla sua ragna, by Paradis, which served as a light and witty filler, amusing but rather slight. Although we prefer a tenor for La Danza (more particularly Jan Peerce) Gorin treated this rather worn number with admirable restraint. It was good if not exciting, and by this time, his voice, which had been rather tight and repressed at the beginning, had become flexible and much more expressive. The sensitive accompaniment enhanced the lovely deep-toned melody of Fortunio (Messenger), which Gorin sang with a quiet sadness, a sadness continued in Si Tu Le Pense (Koechlin), a gentle love lyric, with an exquisite lingering conclusion. Stojowski's No Palu Wurba, a Slav melody with deep, full-toned and sustained music showed up Gorin's lower register to good advantage; the tone was placed well forward, with a purity almost completely lacking the throaty overtones that mar many a baritone.

In the English group the outstanding number was a brief and simple love song, of Gorin's own composition, Within My Dreams. It was strong and purposeful,—and quite beautiful, with a strikingly subdued conclusion, meditative and dreamy, yet with inner strength.

He sang the usual None But The Lonely Heart with evident sincerity, but with occasional ragged phrasing. However, he has the ability to feel and convey a mood. In the other important serious number (Over the Steppe by Gretchaninoff) he was much better, and established a sense of intense, brooding gloom.

Gorin is a comedian of no small merit, and in our opinion he was at his best in the humorous numbers, especially Burlak (The Drunkard), a Ukrainian folksong, and his own composition, Shepherd's Song. The former, a tale of a worker's riotous Saturday night, was a gay and humorous impersonation done with evident enjoyment; the latter was even better with its thoughtful opening, brightening to swift and rapid gaiety (inspired by vodka and korjiki) and overfervent conclusion.

Of the encores, . . . Largo el factotum was inevitable, but amusing, with amazing eyebrow manipulation. He rose to a lovely falsetto on "Fee-gara!", but on the whole, he lacked sufficient agility. Old Mother Hubbard, and Sing o Song of Sixpence were done with the droll and elfin touch of a rather shy, but imaginative and quite ingratiating little boy.

As usual, the accompanist was deft and sensitive and sympathetic. In this case it was Adolph Baller who played the Chopin Nocturne in B Flat Minor quite adequately, as a perfect technical exercise. But it had a pleasantly cool, flowing quality. The very pictorial Great Gate at Kiev (Moussorgsky) was a more interesting display of controlled dramatic power,—and we liked his encore, a Czech polka of his own composition.

O.C.E. Cagers Win Close Tilt From St. Mike's

Charlie Prince Scores Winning Basket with Only Seconds to Go After Tying Clash with Foul Shot

IRISH AHEAD FROM START

The Teachers can thank Charlie Prince for keeping their united and unbeaten record intact, as the Pedagogos nosed out the St. Mike's A team 41-39 in one of the most thrilling games witnessed in the upper gym this year.

The Irish took the lead early and were never headed till the end. With a minute and a half to go, Prince scored on a foul shot to tie the score 39-41. One minute later, this same Charlie took his familiar stance just past the centre line and let go a high looping shot that dropped cleanly through the hoop, putting O.C.E. on top for the first time.

At half time the score stood 21-18 in favour of the Irish with Tom Murphy showing the way in the scoring with eight points. Prince, Belchamber and Harold Brown divided their total equally between them in this half. The second half opened at a faster pace but the shooting became a little erratic at times, especially from close in.

FENCING FOOTNOTES

Embrayo d'Artagnons are polishing up their lunge, thrust, parry routines for the fencing finals which are to be run off during the Saturday net get-together at the Sports Salon in Hart House. In the preliminaries, held last Saturday, Thiers and Cunningham of Vic and Baillie of S.P.S. finished in that order. These three will proceed into the finals.

The Scarlet and Gold of Victoria looks good to cop the honours. They have in their ranks men like Jim Tapsell, a finalist for the Dominion Amateur Crown, Bryce Wilson, John Mantley and Ralph Thiers who ran away with the preliminaries. It was the fencers who were largely responsible for Vic's winning the Davidson Cup and all of their big names of last year are still in the running.

Only the foil finals will be held this Saturday. The finals for the other two weapons epee and sabre will be held in the near future.

SKI STUFF

The tail-spinning telemarkers and hurtling herringbones will hold the cross country and jumping finals at the Varsity Ski Club grounds at Aurora over the week-end. The three School teams and Trinity will run in the finals, while the boys from Group II who got lost in the woods during the cross-country preliminaries will do a repeat performance.

Kingsmill and Connor of School are being picked by the experts to take the jump with Kingsmill, Ellis and Cruikshank favoured in the cross country. Russ Smart, Chairman of the Intramural Ski Committee deserves several big bouquets of orchids for the fine work he has done in connection with the ski meets this year. Russ has been responsible for all the organization of the weekly contests and has worked untiringly for the good of skiing at Varsity.

SEE YOU SATURDAY

Comes Saturday, comes another athletic night with oodles and oodles of reasons for making the trip down to the College Boy's Club House and shelling out the required two bits per person. President Bud Casserley of the Victoria College Athletic Union has worked out a program which should attract millions and millions of people.

The feature attraction of the evening will be the waterpolo game between Emmanuel and Sr. Meds, played as polo should be played—on horses. Real, live, rubber horses will be mounted by the aquatic Tommy Hitchcocks to make the game even more difficult. Anyone who has ever tried to ride one of those beach horses, especially when inflated to the bursting point, will appreciate what lies before those brave souls who will venture into the cold, green depths of the pool.

In addition, at no extra cost whatsoever, the Scarlet and Gold girls' basketball squad will prove to all and sundry why they won the championship this year. The Vic Vixen will play a squad of All-Stars consisting of such cagers as Kay Cunningham and Zoe Christie of U.C., Annabelle Macdon of St. Mike's, Joan Griffiths of St. Hilda's, Wilma Perry of O.T. & P., and many, many more.

In the Ping-Pong Parlour a group of Ontario Champions, past, present and future, will give a demonstration of how the game should be played. All of you amateurs who have been showing off your table-tennis technique before the little woman at previous Varsity Nights better drop around and pick up a few pointers.

The intramural gym meet will be staged in the upper gym under the able direction of Charlie Zwygward who has coached Blue and White teams to victory for eight consecutive years. Here again Victoria should repeat last year's victory and retain the H. A. Wilson Cup.

For volleyball fans, the champion Dents sextet will play the powerful Vic squad. In the lower gym Sr. Vic and Sr. U.C. will square off in a cage clash.

Last but not least there will be dancing. As is usual square dancing will get underway in the upper gym. The callers will be no less than Jack Brown, Art Stinson and Jack Matheson of Limberlost fame.

All in all, it looks like a real night.

Vic Firsts Retain Mathematical Chance of Gaining Playoffs with 6-0 Shutout Over U.C. Firsts

JACK BROWN STARS

Vic I hockey team retained a mathematical chance for a play-off berth in Group I as they outscored U.C. I 6-0 in an interfaculty fixture played at Varsity Arena yesterday. The Scarlet and Gold, as the score indicates, were just too good for the Royal College.

Victoria broke into the scoring in the first half, but were held to a one-goal margin by a desperate Red-and-White team. However, in the second stanza the Victorians opened up and bulged the twine five times.

Brown with two, and Stone, Young, Wheeler, and Wright with one apiece did the scoring for the winners. The entire Vic team showed up well, with Jack Brown and Gerry Stone being particularly effective.

The first events of the interfaculty intercollegiate swimming meet will be held at Hart House this Monday evening, Feb. 24. Those participating are to meet at the Porter's Desk in Hart House at 7 p.m. sharp.

There are still several vacancies in the free style and in the intercollegiate relays, and the need for sprinters is very great. If you ever consider yourself a swimmer of sorts, come up to the Lillian Massey pool this afternoon or on Monday and get Miss Edwards to time you.

This year, owing to a sore foot, Varsity's star mermaid, Dot Hobson, intercollegiate record holder, will be out of the meet.

To be eligible for the intercollegiate competition, a girl must have passed last year. This does not apply to the interfaculty teams. Do not forget that freshmen are eligible for the intercol-

Sr. School Score Four Goals in Final Period to Defeat Jr. Meds 4-1 in Fast Game at Arena

SCORELESS FIRST SESSION

After a scoreless first period which featured wide-open play Sr. S.P.S. came back with a four-goal spurge to defeat Jr. Meds 4-1 in a fast interfaculty hockey game played at Varsity Arena yesterday.

McLenden scored first for School and Stu Munro added another two minutes later on a screen-shot. McLenden netted a second time to make it 3-0 for the Engineers.

Willinsky finally broke the ice for the Medicos as he picked up a loose puck at centre, when School had both defenses in the enemy zone, and went in close to beat the Science goalie.

Forestell scored the final tally for School just before the game ended. Munro and McLenden went well for the Engineers, while St. John and Willinsky played good hockey for Meds.

legiate team, and if they want to try for the sprints see Miss Edwards n.d.g.

Team members are asked to see Dr. Davies and get their eligibility slips in to their managers immediately. A girl may enter only two intercollegiate events, but in the interfaculty competition, she is allowed three, including the relay.

Tomorrow night at Hart House at 9 o'clock, the champion Victoria Senior basketball team, despite their lack of condition, will try to hold their own against an all-star team from the other colleges. There is talk of several former intercollegiate stars being called out of retirement for the game.

Last night saw the Vic I overpower the Meds hockey team 9-0. Vic kept the play in the Meds' zone most of the game, and displayed a nice passing attack. Helen Carefoot was high scorer.

The interfaculty badminton tournament is scheduled to begin Monday at St. Paul's Church, but if this is to be successful, the colleges had better hurry and finish up their own tournaments so that their teams can be named.

UNIVERSITY THEATRE NIGHT OPENED BY ORAMA CLUBS

Bishop and William Weidman, the convict with Sheilagh Ryan as Personae, the Bishop's sister and Marie, the maid, played by Aileen McNally. The play was directed by Thomas McDermott.
It deals with an 18th century French bishop who succours an escaped convict, only to have the convict steal his treasured candlesticks; when the convict is apprehended the bishop forgives him and has him set free once more.

Victoria College put on "Wits' End", a mystery play by Wall Spence. The play concerns the trials of a storm-trapped trio and a framed girl in a mad household where an insane doctor is trying to cure his aetromegalic daughter whose pituitary gland has run amuck. Betty McRae directed the cast of Joe Dales, Barbara McNabb, Mary
Campbell, Virginia Beebe, Beth Gibson,
Alice Evans, Victor Butts, George
Forster and Joan Heath.

A LITTLE WHILE AGO we gave Michael the choice of coming over to the Dental Infirmary to have his teeth remodelled, or printing a Hither and Yon from yours truly. Apparently M.
O.M. decided it was the lesser of two evils to have me write a Hither. It will certainly be much harder on the readers of The Varsity . . . I CAN ASSURE YOU.

EARLY in the afternoon one blustering day a few weeks ago, a Pass Arts student was seen wending his way homeward with his back to the wind. Unfortunately for him the telephone poles are set in the sidewalk. As a result he bashed his head into the telephone pole.
Shaken from stem to stern he removed his hat, turned around and said, "So sorry! really old man, so sorry!"
Dashing the fog from his brain he perceived the pole, gave it a hefty kick and limped off muttering such words of frightfulness that one almost could believe he was a MINER FROM THE REDSCHOOL HOUSE.

BETTER NEVER LATE. — The boys in one of the colleges in the western side of the campus decided one day to lock out a member of the class who was never on time. Arriving early they locked the door and awaited developments, and when a gentle knock was heard one of the lads jumped up and threw chalk at him through the transom. The knocking grew so loud that the door shook on its hinges. Growing weary of this pastime our chalk throwing friend unlocked the door only to have the professor catapult into his arms. Dropping the prof. to the floor amidst a cyclone of paper the lad beat a hasty retreat. It turned out that the tardy class member had taken the afternoon off to see GW'W. . . . THIS SORT OF THING MUST STOP.

AT THE ATHLETIC NIGHT last week two Dents arriving late rushed up to the track to see the basketball game. Without looking at the score they said to the pretty babe next to them "Whose game?" Up she got hopefully and replied "I AM." . . . DON'T

ALL RUSH TO THE NEXT ATH-LETIC NIGHT. . . . I want to get in too.

A SWEET YOUNG THING dropped into the College of Optometry the other day and said, "I have broken my glasses. Do I have to be examined all over again?" "No," quipped the student with a sigh, "only your eyes."

POLISHING THE APPLE. . . . A senior student, accosted by his former professor in the junior lab, was asked how he was getting on. He told the professor that it was not until this year that he realized that the professor's subject was the most important he had ever taken. The prof. expanded like a balloon, turned to the class with a new light in his eye, and repeated the statement with due reverence. The student fled with the remark "I didn't expect him to take me seriously. For a moment
I almost thought I rubbed the skin right off the old apple!"

He mixed up a letter from home
With a Varsity-bound passionate poem,
He addressed Pop as "Honey",
And asked her for money,
From the doghouse no more will he roam.

IN DEFENCE OF THE YOUNG-ER GENERATION who, according to the oldsters, are going "to the dogs" we discovered the following extract in an ancient journal: 100 years ago
"Medical students were rude, profane, dissipated. Swearing was fashionable, even for ladies(?). It was the mark of a gentleman to get drunk, the standard of comparison was "as drunk as a lord". HOW TIMES HAVE CHANGED!

AND NOW, DEAR READER (only one person could read it to the bitter end) I BID YOU "GOODBYE" As I crawl back into my old shell for another year (you hope). . . .

Robertson Davies Speaks Thursday

Mr. Robertson Davies, Literary Editor of Saturday Night, and until recently an actor on the London stage, will be the guest at Library Evening on Thursday at 8.15 p.m. in Hart House library, and will give an informal talk on "Play Reading as Related to the Development of the Theatre".

Mr. Davies acted at Old Victoria Theatre and other theatres in London, playing roles in modern, eighteenth century and Shakespearean dramas. From his wide knowledge of the theatre he has written a book entitled "Shakespearean Boy Actors".

Mr. Davies plans to make a few general remarks about the effect the theatre has had on playwrighting, and then to hear questions and discuss any particular plays or authors the audience wants to bring up.

The speaker's father is W. Rupert Davies, publisher of The Kingston Whig Standard, and present head of the Canadian Press. He received his early schooling at Upper Canada College, and his university training in England at Oxford. His wife was formerly Brenda Newbold, assistant stage director at the Old Victoria Theatre. He returned to Canada a year ago to be appointed to his present post with Saturday Night.

Tonight the Dental Nurses are holding their annual At-Home in the Oak Room of the King Edward Hotel.

The girls and their escorts will trip the light fantastic to the music of Luigi Romanelli and his band. The nurses have planned some novelty dances which will provide fun and frolic for everyone.

"A record crowd is expected," states Bunny Ball, president of the Dental Nurses. Guests of honour will include Dean and Mrs. Mason, Miss Courtney, and Doctor Jewell. Assisting with the arrangements are Bunny Ball, Mary Hopkins, Ida Thompson, Doreen Klayner, Gertrude Bryson, Peggy Pepin and Henrietta Mann.

Willinsky Delivers R.C.I. Lecture

"The Fundamental Principles of Amateur Movie Making" is Topic of Saturday Evening Convocation Hall Lecture

TRACES PICTURE HISTORY

"In every 100 feet of film there are 4,000 pictures and these are projected on the screen at the rate of 1000 per minute" Dr. A. I. Willinsky said at the Royal Canadian Institute lecture at Convocation Hall Saturday, speaking on "The Fundamental Principles of Amateur Movie Making."

Tracing the history of photography, the speaker revealed that the first photograph was taken in 1840. It required an exposure of thirty minutes in bright sunlight, and it was necessary for the face of the subject to be whitened with chalk and her eyebrows to be painted with carbon.

"Two musicians," Dr. Willinsky said, "are responsible for the invention of Kodachrome film." These men began to study colour photography in 1921, and colour film was released in 1925, he said.

The speaker explained that the com-

University College Literary and Athletic Society Will Hold Primary Elections Wednesday; First Time in History

APPLICATIONS TOMORROW

For the first time in the history of Hart House elections University College is holding primaries to select official U.C. candidates for the various committees, it has been announced by an official of the U.C. Literary and Athletic Society. The primary election will be held Wednesday.

"All candidates for the primary elections must hand in written applications at the Lit. office not later than tomorrow noon," he said. "These applications must bear the signatures of a mover and seconder as well as the candidate's own."

The Lit. official pointed out that the society was not attempting to bar other U.C. representatives from contesting the Hart House elections, but that those candidates successful in the primaries would have the society's official sanction and would be nominated for Hart House offices by members of the

Quints Learn to Skate Dr. Dafoe Tells Varsity

By Don Moore

"The Quints are the picture of health and happiness. They are having a wonderful time learning to fancy skate, but spend most of their time sitting down," Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, beaming with pride, informed The Varsity in a recent interview.

The doctor turned up unexpectedly at the Dental Faculty, where he was visiting with Dean Arnold Mason, dentist to the Quints, on a flying visit to Toronto.

Dr. Dafoe affably launched into the subject of the Quints' health, their latest escapades, and some of their cute remarks. From the merry twinkle in his eyes it is readily seen why he is so popular with the famous five. The girls love winter sports, he said, and there is no difficulty in getting them to eat or sleep as they work up a healthy appetite.

Yvonne, he related, was quite put out by the fact that she was the last one to lose her baby front teeth. She worked at them until they were loose enough to pull out and then presented them proudly to him.

At the present time the doctor is the only life member of the Canadian Medical Association living in Canada. He is a graduate of the University of Toronto as are nine other members of his family which must be a record in itself. In spite of the fact that Dr. Dafoe has been lionized in both Canada and the United States, he is still the same quiet lovable country doctor that he was before he became famous. Among some of the well known Americans who have visited him are Wendell Wilkie and Mayor La Guardia of New York, "both of whom are strong champions of all aid to Britain," he stated.

Dr. Dafoe ended his interview by expressing the opinion that the University of Toronto had a Dental College that was tops on the continent.

Eccentricities Lacking on Campus Professors Unanimously Agree

Perhaps a course should be introduced into the university for the development of eccentricities, as professors about the campus are almost unanimous in declaring that quality non-existent in students.

Dr. Tatham of the Geography department deplores the fact that to professors all the students are the same. "Eccentricities," he said, "develop later in life." Dr. Tatham finds that students who have been away from academic life for a year or so are more individual than those who come to the university fresh from high school.

Professor Lehmann, Department of Botany, says he has never known a truly odd student except . . . and by a glance he hinted mildly that he had some doubts about The Varsity re-

Fear Plane Down Off East Coast, Either in Sea or on Remote Island; Widespread Search in Progress

THREE OTHERS MISSING

Sir Frederick Banting, discoverer of insulin as a shock treatment for diabetes, was reported missing last night in an aeroplane which had not been heard from since Friday morning.

When The Varsity checked with the Canadian Press at seven o'clock this morning, the famed scientist was still missing.

An official announcement released from Montreal stated that the plane was "a military aeroplane being delivered by a civilian organization." It said that the plane had been flying in favourable weather when it was last heard from on Friday. It is feared that the craft may have been forced down off the east coast of Canada, either in the sea or upon some remote island.

The announcement said "an intensive and widespread search was commenced immediately, and is still in progress."

Aboard the plane in addition to Sir Frederick were: Captain Joseph

While the pipes skirled to the air of "Highland Laddie" the C.O.T.C. Pipe-Band of nine pipes, three side drums and a base drum, made its debut at the annual regimental ball in Hart House on Friday night. The band was commanded by Pipe-Major Reid, formerly of the Gordon Highlanders. After its performance in the big gym, President Cody praised the band and affirmed that it would be an inspiration to the members of the contingent.

The large number of guests, who comfortably filled the gym while they danced to the music of Stan St. John, were received by Dr. Cody and Mrs. Cody, Lieut.-Col. Madill and Mrs. Madill and Lieut.-Col. Wilson and Mrs. Wilson, the two colonels being the officers commanding, respectively, of the C.O.T.C. proper, and of the Training Centre.

The big gym was decorated at one end with a huge poster of the head of Winston Churchill and the words, "We

MODERN HISTORY CLUB PUNDIT ATTACKS VARSITY AND "CAT"

Beating the Ontario Legislature to the wire, the Modern History Club Parliament opens tonight in Cartwright Hall, where the club's orators will wrangle over the merits and demerits of Federal Union. Prime Minister R. A. J. Phillips' statement for the press was censored, through an agreement, he is convinced, between the leader of the Opposition and The Varsity's masthead. "Just because Mr. Stinson is a plutocrat, is no reason why he can influence the press in flagrant denial of the rights of the common citizen. I shall read to Parliament tonight the complete statement which the leader of the Opposition caused the papers to refuse."

When interviewed, Art Stinson had nothing to say regarding his opponent's charges. "Since last November," he declared with distaste, "I have heard vociferous proposals credit Federal Union with the successful solution of all our really fundamental problems from winning the war to writing funny Champus Cats. Too many people have been deluded by their false prophets. We'll disillusion them tonight; we'll blast these misconceptions!"

In answer to the government's charges of corruption, Deputy-Leader of the Opposition, Harold Nelson, retorted with: "I realize that we are dealing with scurrilous, unprincipled rogues. They have tried to bribe me." Mr. Nelson promised further explanation when the debate is under way, and concluded, with a dramatic gesture: "Federal Union shall not pass."

Propaganda Minister Don Rowat, when questioned about tonight's battle of the century merely quipped: "When we get Federal Union, people will have more of everything than anybody!"

Hart House Elections

(Editor's note: Last year the Warden of Hart House wrote an account of the administration of Hart House by committees, nominations and elections for which will shortly be held. In the hope that it will stimulate a more enlightened voting on the part of the electorate, we here reprint portions of his article.)

The House Committee

The House Committee are concerned with the general management and social activities of Hart House including the annual All-University Fall Dance. They are responsible to the Board for seeing that the structure itself and all equipment are maintained in good repair. They deal with all matters that make for the comfort and convenience of members. The tuck shop, billiard room, barber shop and guest rooms come under their supervision. This committee are also directly concerned with the operation of the Great Hall both as regards the daily meals served to members and the large number of special functions and dinners. The House Committee are represented on the Board of Directors of the University Settlement and members of the Committee visit the Settlement regularly. They are also responsible for the management of the annual committee elections in March.

The Library Committee

The Library Committee control the library, being responsible for the purchase of all books which include biography, novels, history and general literature. Their object is to build up and maintain what is rapidly becoming a first-rate collection of books chosen for leisure reading. This committee are making a valuable collection of private press books which are shown in a display case. "Library Evenings" are held from time to time when a selected speaker chats on his own leisure reading and a discussion follows. This committee also select the periodicals for the reading room.

The Music Committee

The Music Committee supervise all the musical activities of the House, the chief of which are the series of eight Sunday Evening Concerts, weekly Friday Afternoon Recitals, and also a series of six songsters. The musicians of this city most generously make themselves responsible for these programs as friends of Hart House. The committee arranges mid-day Sing Songs each Friday, which are a popular feature, and informal piano recitals by members are held from time to time.

The Art Committee

The Art Committee arrange fortnightly exhibitions in the art gallery and monthly exhibitions in the print room. They organize weekly art classes and informal discussions on art in the gallery. The arts and crafts room comes under the supervision of this Committee as do the purchase of prints and art books and in conjunction with an Advisory Committee of Artists the purchase of pictures for Hart House.

The Camera Committee

The Camera Committee are in general concerned with the encouragement of photography among members of Hart House. They control the use of the camera quarters, the valuable equipment in these quarters, and the arrangement of exhibitions, the chief of which is the annual exhibition of photographs by members of Hart House in the art gallery during January.

Squash Racquets Committee

This committee control the use of the squash courts, arrange individual tournaments and are in touch with the intramural Squash Racquets Committee regarding the tournament arranged by that body. This committee also arrange matches between other clubs and Hart House.

The Debates Committee

The Debates Committee are responsible for the holding of debates through the year, although their work has been suspended during the past two years owing to the war. The committee are responsible for building up the procedure of parliamentary debating in Hart House and it is now a tradition that Cabinet Ministers and occasionally the Prime Minister of Canada are present as Honorary Visitors. In past years these debates have done much to encourage an interest in public affairs among undergraduates.

Glee Club Committee

This committee supervise the activities of the Glee Club which includes the Christmas broadcast of carol singing in the Great Hall and the Sunday Evening Concert at the end of February. The club holds weekly and at times bi-weekly rehearsals.

The Graduate Committee

The Graduate Committee are responsible for the social and athletic activities of senior members of Hart House (both faculty and graduate). The graduate dining-room and north common room come under their supervision. Monthly dinners are arranged and in general the committee seek to provide for the comfort of senior members. As regards athletics, they arrange gymnasium classes, badminton tournaments, golf instruction and other activities.

The Hart House Ideal

The ideal which should inspire the committees and all members of Hart House cannot be more nobly expressed than in the Founders' Prayer of Hart House which is as follows: "That Hart House, under the guidance of its Warden, may serve, in the generations to come, the highest interest of this University by drawing into a common fellowship the members of the several faculties, and by gathering into a true society the teacher and the student, the graduate and the undergraduate; further, that the members of Hart House may discover within its walls the true education that is to be found in good fellowship, in friendly disputation and debate, in the conversation of wise and earnest men, in music, pictures and the play, in the casual book, in sports and games and the mastery of the body; and lastly, that, just as in the days of war this House was devoted to the training in arms of the young soldier, so in the time of peace its halls may be dedicated to the task of arming youth with strength and suppleness of limb, with clarity of mind, and with a spirit of true religion and high endeavour."

ART MUSIC

String Sinfonietta

A String Orchestra at Wymilwood

The latest Wymilwood Recital was the best thing which has happened there this year. A small string group of ten players, under the direction of George Coutts, played Handel, Dunhill, et al. in a pleasantly informal manner, obviously because they were enjoying it even more than we.

Handel was especially well done with the impersonal tone of pure string music. The dynamic shading was especially delicate, and the players were wise enough to reduce vibratos to an absolute minimum. In such a way they retained the original atmosphere of the music as much as possible.

Modern English String Music has developed a school of composition which is completely individual. Thomas Dunhill's Chiddingfold Suite, very typical of its slightly atonal kind, was much more difficult. The rhythms of the final cords were more than slightly sloppy, far too often. The second movement was a very complicated delicacy describing effectively some Dryads and Fawns.

The last group was composed of three shorter selections by Russians Glazunov, Bialow, and Rimsky-Korsakow. Les Chanteurs de Noel, by the first of the series was interestingly modal. In all three selections, the strings, except for their tonal difficulties apparent in massed chords, shone.

Of the encores, the most noteworthy was a series of variations on Brother James' Air, almost as beautiful as the original.

This time, you who were present were lucky.

Student Beacon Is Humor Magazine Of Biting Wit

Currently Contains Joke Levellied at Rival, P.M., and Football Satire, "The Big Push is On"

MAILING TROUBLES

By Annie La Bunter

The current issue of The Student Beacon is bound in its usual tasteful hand-decorated white covers, lined with aquamarine. Unusual interest is provided by this week's contents, including as it does an article on football "The Big Push is On" and a humour section of which the highlight is "Has B.M. heard this one before?"

The vagueness of the type line and the paper quality make it a cutting satire on those publications which it is imitating and provide not a little humour to the reader, all the better because it is apparently unconscious.

It is always interesting to speculate on the source of any publication's financial backing. It would seem, although no advertisement appears, that this particular magazine has the support of the Faculty of Optometry. Certain it is, however, that such publications offer greatest support to this faculty.

We would suggest that the publishers obtain a new typesetter and printer, for if they are paying present incumbents anything they are being sadly taken in. Also, there seems to have been a slip up in the mailing department. Someone is appropriating half the allotment for postage and is using one cent stamps instead of two for his mailing list.

There is great humour in this little magazine but also great room for improvement. It might be a good idea to keep it clean.

Theatre Organist

Casavant Organ Recital

The latest Casavant Organ Recital seemed to prove of more interest than usual to the general public, judging from the attendance, for, besides the recital, this time by the English organist, Quentin Maclean, the organ itself, and something of its mechanism, was explained by one of our well-known Toronto organists, Dr. Peaker.

Quentin Maclean, a big, jovial Englishman with a sense of humour, proved, that besides being an excellent technician, he is gifted with a delicate im- as he did last year in Convocation Hall, agination, fine taste, and a dynamic personality. His program was far from being really difficult, but each number was done well, and showed a sympathetic mind which could adapt itself to the changing mood of each selection. In his first group, the Mozart Fantasia for Mechanical Organ sounded as mechanical as it was supposed to sound; the Cesar Franck Pastorale was reflective, and delicately treated; the John Ireland Capriccio showed an unusually light, cheerful, and playful character for an Ireland work; and the Vaughan-Williams Prelude and Fugue, conventional in form only, was completely modern in its rugged dissonances, and sturdy, resolute style.

The post-intermission group contained of course the lighter and more humorous selections. The Allegro con Bracia from Tchaikovsky's 6th Symphony was typical Tchaikovsky — graceful, melodious, and emotional. The rendition of the "Scherzo" from Mendelssohn's A Midsummer Night's Dream showed to advantage the organist's smooth, rapid technique, and delicate imagination in his choice of stops. One would remark again on his tone colour in the Delius' On Hearing the First Cuckoo in Spring — the cuckoo was surprisingly lifelike. The March of the Little Lead Soldiers by the modern French organist and conductor, Pierné, is a well-known radio-organ favourite, but is nevertheless good light music, and gave the re-

Victoria Capture Every Event In Senior Gym Meet

By Marg Foulds

Boy, have we got a pocketful of dope today! The Intercollegiate-Interfaculty Swim Meet starts tonight at the Hart House Pool (see elsewhere in this issue); the Interfaculty Badminton Tournament starts today; and two hockey games took place last Friday and Saturday. Wow!

On Friday, O.T. & P. overwhelmed Vic II by the score of 11-0. This O.T. & P. team has some really A1 team plays and, to date, has lost but one game, to U.C. However, they have yet to meet St. Hilda's, and this game, taking place tomorrow night at 7, should be a battle royal. On Saturday Vic II again met defeat at the hands of U.C. but by a more moderate score, 5-0. Vic II have not had the breaks this year, but we would like to congratulate Flo Allan on her consistently outstanding performance throughout the season. She's one of the best in the league.

The badminton is scheduled to start today, if all goes well. U.C. have been particularly slow in playing off their college matches, but we hope things will straighten themselves out to enable those hard-working souls running the interfaculty affair to get things started today. More about that tomorrow.

At Athletic Night, Vic Srs. maintained their position as basketball queens of the campus when they defeated an all-star team from St. Mike's, U.C., St. Hilda's and O.T. & P. by the score of 12-9. We want to see more of this sort of thing!

Speaking OF SPORT

By Edgar Simon

MORE DARNED FUN

People who attend the weekly University Nights have accustomed themselves to varied exhibitions of the Body Athletic. So much so, in fact, that the Hart House pundits find it necessary to keep them amused by staging novelty events such as waterpolo on rubber horses.

Waterpolo on rubber horseback is fun, particularly when the contestants get constructive about the whole thing and start to beat each other over the head with their mounts, but there is a regular Hart House sport which cops just as many comic cookies. It has the added advantage of providing more actual enjoyment to the contestants than any other intramural sport. In case you haven't guessed—which you probably haven't—I'm referring to interfaculty baseball.

IT'S THE SCREWIEST GAME . . .

Posted on the wall of the Big Gym is a lengthy, well-thumbed document. Filling two pages of faint blue mimeograph, it seems to have been thumbed by more and read by less people than any other literature on the campus with the possible exception of the Students' Handbook. It is the official set of rules for Hart House baseball, the weightiest and most involved piece of prose that ever escaped discussion in an English Seminar. Any resemblance between these rules and the decision of the umpire is purely accidental.

Baseball games are divided into two parts, discussion and lab work. Both are equally fascinating. The lab work bears superficial resemblance to a regular softball game; the discussion bears considerable resemblance to the Chicago Round Table Conferences.

A GAME OF SKILL

Though it may strike the hardened basketballer or waterpoloist as a sissy's game, indoor baseball at the Hart House boasts a staggering array of finer points. It is not enough, for example, for a team to boast a good pitcher. It helps, but even in the unlikely event of Bob Feller turning up to do a mound chore for Aerial Navigation C, said Mr. Feller would be somewhat mystified to find a potential infield out converted into a single by the kindly intervention of three friendly parallel bars. Furthermore, although newspaper reports lead us to believe that Mr. Feller is not a nervous man, he would certainly feel somewhat rattled in spirit to behold a high pop fly bounce idly among several assorted girders and finally come to rest in the eager paw of an energetic outsider, thereby starting a ten-minute argument with the decision going to the side with the better supply of rhetoric.

A FEW RULES DISCUSSED

"A batted ball," says the rule book, "is in play and may be caught off any of the apparatus, railings or walls, except as designated in Rule 4."

Rule 4 then proceeds to give an imposing list of apparatus, railings or walls off which a batted ball cannot be played. The obvious solution is that the fielder should catch the ball, sprint hurriedly to the posted set of rules, consult them, and govern himself accordingly.

"If a ball strikes an obstruction in fair territory," the rules proclaim, "it shall be fair no matter where it rolls."

The ominous portent of this ruling can only be realized when an interfaculty mushballer tells you of a few Mephistophelian cranies into which a baseball can roll.

After wrestling gamely with as many points as they can cope with in two pages, the rules proceed to pass a most magnificent buck.

"All points not governed in these rules," states Article 14, "shall be governed by the current rule book of the Ontario Amateur Softball Association."

Article 14 knows only too well that some of the points not governed by these rules can be dealt with by nothing less than a Royal Commission.

GETTING THIS STRAIGHT . . .

This column is not a crusade. The writer has not the slightest wish to reform the Constitution or even to amend any of the rules. As constructed, the code leaves baseball games slightly this side of chaos, which is the way they ought to be for the maximum enjoyment of player and spectator. The only purpose of this column is to sing the praises of a game in which the hopeless tyro can not only participate but also have more fun than a kid on a back lot.

School Cagers Whip Tooth Tuggers;
O.C.E. Splits with Fighting Irish

Engineers, Led by Guy with 11 Points, Outclass Dents to Win 48-24, and Gain Two-Game Lead Over Molarmen

A powerful S.P.S. IV cage outfit completely outclassed the Dents B quintet in a Saturday morning fixture, doubling the score on their luckless rivals 48-24.

Bus Guy led the Engineers, gathering 11 points, while Jim Turner accounted for nine. Ed Schneider led the slim scoring parade for the Dentists with six points.

The victory left the unbeaten School team far ahead in Group VII, two games ahead of the second-place Molarmen.

BADMINTON TOURNAMENT

The Interfaculty Badminton Tournament will be held in the upper and lower gyms on Wednesday evening, Feb. 26, it was announced by the Athletic Office Friday night. Only singles matches will be played in an elimination round and a faculty may enter as many as four contestants. Full intramural points will be awarded.

Gallant Trio of Pedagogues Holds St. Mike's Squad to 24-24 Tie as Cellar-Dwellers Battle

Playing only three men against a St. Mike's C quartet well stocked with reserves, O.C.E. B cagers managed to split the verdict in a Friday fixture, 24-24. Sharing the damp confines of Group VIII's cellar, the two teams thus failed for the second time to decide the matter of individual tenacity. Abandoned by their fourth man in the early minutes of the game, the remaining trio of Pedagogues kept their rivals hustling throughout a ragged set-to, leading them by one point at half-time, and holding their own all the way.

Only the high-gear scoring efforts of Bat Battersby enabled the Irish to keep up with the Teachers' Trio.

WOMEN TO STAGE
NOVEL SWIM MEET
IN HART HOUSE

Telegraphic Scheme Combines Intercollegiate and Interfaculty Competition; McDonald, Mortimer, Carter Form Relay

PRELIMS TONIGHT

By Marg Foulds

This brand new Telegraphic Women's Intercollegiate Swim Meet, combined with the Interfaculty Meet, taking place tonight at 7:30 in Hart House, and Wednesday night at same time, is hereby explained.

Due to world conditions, an Intercollegiate Swim Meet has been arranged with each university swimming at home. The special races chosen to be intercollegiate events are to be swum off at each college, during its Interfaculty Meet, and the races are timed. The results are then telegraphed to each college, and the intercollegiate champions declared on this basis. See? Don't miss this.

Tonight, at the Interfaculty Meet, three final intercollegiate events will be run off, and also four interfaculty events, with some preliminaries for intercollegiate finals to be run off on Wednesday night.

The races are, in this order:

1. Long Plunge — eliminated to three people. Finals on Wednesday.
2. Ornamental Swimming—final.
3. Medley Relay — intercollegiate final. Team swimming for University of Toronto, Bobbie McDonald, Betty Mortimer, Joan Carter.
4. Diving — eliminated to five people. This event is open to anyone. One plain and one back dive compulsory, and three optional ones. Finals Wednesday.

5. 200 yd. Relay — intercollegiate final. Those swimming for the University of Toronto: Tibs Annesley, Joan Griffith, Bobbie McDonald, Peggy Park.

6. Style—final.

7. 100 yds. Free Style — intercollegiate final.

In the ornamental event the Star and the Dolphin are compulsory plus one other trick. The degrees of difficulty of the tricks are: 1. 1 for sculling forwards or backwards, canoe, fish swimming, backward somersaults with tuck, waistup, spinning top, water wheel, sculling feet first on breast; 1.2 for propeller, marching, forward somersault; 1.3 for seal swimming, vertical figure eight; 1.5 for horizontal figure eight, shark, porpoise; 1.6 for revolving on surface, propeller figure eight, sculling with one leg up, back outstretched somersault, spiral porpoise; 1.7 for torpeda, rolling log; 1.8 for submarine; 1.9 for swimming upside down, outstretched or reverse somersault, perpendicular spiral; 2.0 for pendulum floating and sculling with two legs up.

The diving is from the low board. The plain and the back dives are compulsory and there are three optional.

Individuals entering this meet may not go in more than two intercollegiate events, nor more than four interfaculty ones, three of which may be speed and at least one relay. She cannot enter more than three speed events altogether nor more than two single speed ones. If still confused, see Freddie Baxter. She has it straight, anyway! I repeat—don't miss this!

Vic Tumblers Humble Schoolmen by 2,321 to 1,799; Brett of Dents Stars with Swan Dive on Mat

TOYE TALLIES 908

The Victoria College gym team made a clean sweep of all the events in the Senior Interfaculty Gymnastic Meet on Saturday night to retain their championship laurels for another year.

The only other faculty with a team contending was School of Science, whose bar-and-mat-men were shaded by the Scarlet and Gold outfit by a decisive margin of 2,321 points over 1,799. The Victoria trio of Toye, Simpson and Murch won in a breeze with their superb displays in the four departments of competition—high bar, parallel bars, horse, and mats.

The individual with the highest tally was Jack Toye of the winning team, who tallied a total of 908 points. The second slot was filled by Doug Simpson, also of Vic, with 839. Willie Mark of S.P.S. and Offie Brett of Dents took third and fourth positions, scoring 747 and 736 points respectively.

The veteran Willie Mark showed all of his usual ability to take the individual first in the high bar work. Jack Toye, who gave a consistently fine performance throughout, shaded his partner Simpson by four points to lead the parallel bar competition. Toye once more came through with a blue ribbon on the horse event, but was hard pressed for the win by J. Gluch of University College.

The mat department gave Offie Brett of Dents a chance to pile up points on his specialty. The precision-working Brett was 20 points ahead of his closest rival, Simpson. Brett clinaxed his smooth performance with a graceful swan dive from a running start, ending in a neat forward roll. In this division Willie Mark impressed the enthusiastic audience by the remarkable strength shown in his hand-stands. Simpson likewise earned a good many points on the judges' cards by his daring back flips.

ROUND
THE TRACK

By Dave MacIntosh

School's up-and-coming freshman track prospect, Gord Lorimer, beat out Frankie Bennett of St. Mike's in a photo-finish Friday afternoon to cop the interfaculty indoor two-mile event in 10 minutes, 41.4 seconds. Hugh Keenan of Meds, who stayed well back in fourth slot till the final lap, overtook and passed Geoff Parke-Taylor of Wycliffe ten yards out to wind up in third spot. George Lewis of Vic placed fifth and Art Thompson of Wycliffe sixth.

The race was strictly a Lorimer-Bennett-Parke-Taylor affair from the starting gun. The three bunched together, swapped the lead back and forth for twenty laps. On the twenty-first circuit it was evident that Geoff Parke-Taylor was tiring fast, and the first place struggle narrowed down to Lorimer and Bennett. The Schoolman had the edge in the final sprint, hit the tape a yard ahead of the St. Mike's freshman. Both Bob Delaney and Tom Barnett turned up with bad colds, were forced to look on from the side-lines.

Vic's six-man relay squad of Sully, Miller, Lewis, Proderick, Cass and Herlick turned in a time of 1 minute, 48.7 seconds in the 880 yard relay event. Busy playing hockey, O.C.E., Vic's sole rivals in this event, postponed their running of the race until tomorrow afternoon, when the last two events of the indoor season, the mile relay and high-jump, will be run off.

Another swash-buckling rip-roaring Errol Flynn film is with us again, this week at the Imperial Theatre with Santa Fe Trail as its title. The story has very little to do with the Santa Fe trail but otherwise, IMPERIAL the picture is a fairly good one of its kind. FE It has all the shootings and killings that any lousy adventure-loving fan wants, but just a bit too many to suit this department. Flynn is Flynn as usual, and Olivia de Havilland is more beautiful than ever (too bad no technicolour) but two men manage to walk off with all acting honours.

Firstly, Raymond Massey turns in the top portrayal as the fanatical John Brown. This characterization comes fairly close to his Abe Lincoln. Van Heflin, a newcomer to the screen but who scored in the recent stage version of "Philadelphia Story" plays Brown's aide and lieutenant with sustained power.

Supporting cast also contributes faithfully with Alan Hale, Ronald Heagen, and young Gene Reynolds turning in their customary satisfactory performances.

Best bit is the siege at Harpers Ferry, where John Brown is finally captured. But with "Gone With the Wind" and "Virginia" also playing in town the cycle is beginning to fray around the edges. It's time for a change. —F.S.

BANTING MISSING; PLANE FEARED DOWN

Creighton Mackie of Kansas City, Mo.; Navigator William Bird of Kidderminster, Worcester, England; and William Snailham of Bedford, N.S.

Credited with being the leader in the experiments which led to the discovery of insulin as a treatment for diabetes, Dr. Banting of the University of Toronto was knighted in the King's Birthday Honours list published June 4, 1934. Associated with him in the experiments were Dr. J. R. MacLeod and Dr. Charles H. Best, also of this university.

The discovery was made in 1922, and Dr. Banting and Dr. MacLeod were jointly awarded the 1923 Nobel Prize for Medicine.

Born at Alliston, Ont. in 1891, Sir Frederick graduated in medicine from the University of Toronto in 1917, after attending Victoria College. He won the Military Cross in the First Great War, and was wounded in France while serving as Medical Officer of the 44th Battalion, Canadian Expeditionary Force.

In 1938 Sir Frederick made discoveries in the field of cancer research which were hailed by Dr. William Ewart Gye, director of the Imperial Cancer Research Fund in London as "substantial contributions to the problem." Dr. Gye added: "Dr. Banting is one of the world's really great men."

FINAL ROUND REACHED IN SKI TOURNEY

The last round of the intramural ski competition sided to a stop up at the University Ski Club yesterday afternoon with a scanty turnout for the final jumping and cross-country. Of the three entries in the jumping Doug Clark, MacDonough, and McMurrich ranked in that order, giving first and second place to S.P.S. II and III.

S.P.S. II also took the lead in the cross-country with John Ellis and MacDonough first and second. Trinity's Alex Cruickshank pounded in third to give his team second place in the team cross-country was re-run at the same order.

Group II's unsuccessful preliminary time as the final. Mendel and Lundberg of Trinity came first and second with Pete Rankin of U.C. third.

The complete team standing according to percentages on all four events will not be out for a couple of days yet but S.P.S. II looks a pretty certain first. A number of teams will however lose points for defaulting in some races.

"To Me Music is International" Baritone Igor Gorin Tells Varsity

By Win Hillier

"This is my first visit to Toronto, and I love it very much," Igor Gorin smiled, as he deftly extricated himself from the myriad autograph-seekers who besieged him in his dressing-room after his recital in Eaton Auditorium last Thursday.

The youthful baritone, who is Ukrainian by birth, Viennese by education, and American by adoption may well say "To me all music is international," for in addition to his native language, he sings in Russian, Italian, German, French and English. The latter, however, is his dearest medium, for, as he said, "Why should I not want to talk English a great deal? I am an American citizen now. America is the place where I want to sing, and here I am."

"Moreover," he added, "I compose all my songs in English."

Igor Gorin's Ukrainian admirers in Toronto were greatly disappointed when he explained regretfully that although born in the Ukraine, he no longer speaks that language fluently, since his family moved to Vienna during his early childhood. There he received all his education, and even embarked upon the study of medicine, before he decided that "singing was better for me." However, he is greatly interested in Ukrainian music, and added, "I am now recording a whole album of just Ukrainian songs."

It is quite clear, nevertheless, where Mr. Gorin's interests lie, for he elaborated further, "I am trying to get my English so perfect, and I have no chance to speak much Russian either." Incidentally, we do not feel that he has great cause for concern, particularly after our discovery that he learned English in six weeks.

Mr. Gorin believes most sincerely that a singer should be in close touch with his audience. When asked whether he preferred the radio to the concert stage he exclaimed with enthusiasm, "Oh, the concert is the whole thing!" Nevertheless, his present tour, which includes recitals at Chicago and St. Louis, allows for radio work as well, and he urged The Varsity to listen on Saturday evening, March first, when he will sing in the Chicago Opera Company's production of Pagliacci.

Correspondence

in peace-time, the function of the university is to train men and women to make their maximum contribution to our country.

We have submitted the following suggestions regarding military training in the university to Dr. Cody, feeling that we reflect the concern not only of members of the Student Christian Movement but of other students as well that this university should as effectively as possible meet the great demands upon it in these days. We invite comment and discussion by other students.

1. Many graduates of the scientific faculties will be of greatest service to the war-effort in specialized work for which they have been prepared. Therefore training in which they are engaged at university should utilize their special background and have in view the capacity in which they are likely to enter the services, rather than being standardized military drill.

2. In view of the fact that, as enquiries have shown, a surprisingly large number of students must take summer jobs in order to make their attendance at university possible, the pay under any scheme of extensive summer training should be supplemented in some way to enable these students to return to university.

3. In view of the fact that many students must take part-time jobs during the college year in order to support themselves, some provision should be made to give special financial assistance in those cases where military training removes the possibility of such self-support.

Since now, more than ever, Canada needs the contribution of large numbers of highly-trained specialists, every effort must be made to maintain the academic standards of the university. In cases where military training is causing deterioration in academic work through fatigue, lack of time for laboratories, physical strain, etc., some adjustment could properly be made in the advice of faculty-members in the courses concerned.

Yours sincerely,

Margaret E. Grant,
Associate-President, S.C.M.

"The primaries are being held to prevent too many U.C. men from running for office and hurting each other's chances," he explained. "They will eliminate all but the very best candidates available."

It was pointed out that only one U.C. man is a member of the present Hart House committees, a situation which was laid to the previous lack of co-operation among U.C. candidates.

The voting on Wednesday will take place from 11 to 2 o'clock at the U.C. Junior Common Room.

CODY AT OTTAWA TO DISCUSS TRAINING

al War Services, which heads of other Canadian universities will attend, they hope to clarify the existing training regulations as they affect students, and to iron out difficulties which the universities will experience due to the changing regulations.

On Saturday, President Cody, Honorary Colonel of the C.O.T.C., visited every campus of the University Training Centre Battalion and thanked the men for the cheerfulness and efficiency with which they had shouldered the task of military duties during the school year.

Outlining some of the major difficulties existing in the military set-up, he explained that the conference had been called to attempt to recast the status of universities in the war scene. No matter how adverse conditions might become by next September, he stated, the work in research faculties, particularly in the School of Applied Science and Engineering would continue next year. In addition, he hoped to be able to secure a definite assurance that students would not be called up for training before the end of the term.

Plans for camp training would likely go forward as originally planned, he stated, but it was still doubtful whether or not the period would be for two weeks or four months.

The proposals being presented to the government at Ottawa today were compiled during the week by a special Committee on Military Training consisting of President Cody, A. B. Fennell, Lieut.-Col. H. H. Madill, Lieut.-Col. W. S. Wilson, and Lieut. E. A. Macdonald.

Vic Athletes Will Celebrate Annual At-Home

Athletes, would-be athletes, and their admirers from Vic will get together once next Friday for their yearly frolic at the Victoria College Athletic At-Home.

Dancing is scheduled to begin at nine o'clock in Wymilwood with the minstrelsy provided by Mel Hamill and his orchestra. Prior to the topsidorean efforts, many of the merry-makers will dine in Burwash Hall at six-thirty.

At the dinner, the men who have won athletic awards will be presented with their "V's", and ten graduating women who have been outstanding in sports will receive athletic pins.

The committee in charge has decreed that no corsages are to be sent, but by way of compromise flowers will be sold at the dance and the proceeds turned over to the Red Cross as another contribution by the college in its war effort.

ON SCIENTIFIC MISSION

Announcement of the death of Sir Frederick Banting, co-discoverer of insulin, in an aeroplane crash off the coast of Newfoundland was made before the House of Commons yesterday by Defense Minister Hon. J. L. Ralston.

Paying tribute to the late director of Banting Institute of the University of Toronto, Prime Minister King revealed that Sir Frederick had been en route to Britain on a mission of high national and scientific importance.

Sir Frederick was previously announced as missing along with three other men aboard the craft, which was later spotted from the air. The pilot of the plane, Joseph C. Mackey, was the only survivor.

Banting had been concentrating on aviation medical work since the war began and took every opportunity to familiarize himself with the physical problems which airmen encounter. Along with his associates he set out to find the way for airmen to fly at high altitudes with efficiency and security. Just a few days ago he felt that very definite progress was being made.

Chin Wen-han Compares Chinese and Canadians

"Ninety-nine per cent of the Chinese girls neither smoke nor drink and their present slogan is face the powder instead of powdering the face," according to Mr. Chin Wen-han, Sino-British scholarship student at the University of Toronto, as he compared the Chinese and the Canadian way of living in an interview with the Varsity.

"Chin", as he is known around East House, comes from Chungking, where his father is a member of Chiang Kai-shek's Supreme Military Council. Having completed the work for his M.A. and obtained his LL.B. degree in China, he is now studying in the Faculty of Law at Toronto for his Master of Laws degree. His scholarship was to have taken him to England but the plans were changed by the government because of the war.

Comparing the universities in China and those of Canada, he pointed out that while there is a general similarity between the two in standards and studies there are some differences in the ed-to-ed relationship.

POSTERS OF CANDIDATES TO DECK HART HOUSE

Candidates for election to Hart House standing committees may start putting up their posters any time after 8 a.m. Thursday, February 27, the Warden's office announced yesterday. Wires to hang them on will be strung along the corridor leading past the Hall Porter's desk to the Great Hall.

Posters may not be larger than 24" x 36" and each candidate is limited to one. No temporary posters or reservation cards may be put up. Posters may be done by professional as well as amateur members of the House. The best amateur productions will be kept by the House to add to its permanent collection of election posters. The designer of each poster is asked to place his name, year and faculty on the face of the poster.

The posters at present displayed on the wires are examples from other years taken from the permanent collection of the house.

Any member who wishes to make posters may leave his name at the Warden's office and it will be posted on the bulletin board.

Nominations for the elections close at 6 p.m. on Wednesday, February 26. Although these are busy and confusing times the Warden's office urge that any members not expecting to leave soon on active service should seek election at this time in order to continue the democratic tradition of the House. Nomination blanks may be obtained at the Warden's office.

BICYCLE PLAYS PART IN DISTRIBUTION OF VARSITY

By Maurice Schwartzman

The business of daily distributing the Varsity around the campus is not a simple one, as Art Gibson smilingly remarked. Art Gibson should know, for he is the one that does it.

Just before 9 a.m. every week-day, except for Mondays, when the whole time-table is shifted forward an hour, he is to be seen making his way towards the Press Building, to emerge a few minutes later with a large bundle of Varsities. He has a definite schedule and it takes him the better part of the morning to complete his rounds, although he rides a bicycle for this purpose. The Science Building is the first to be visited, shortly after 9, and in the same trip the buildings adjoining the front campus are also served. U.C. is the most voracious, requiring well over 500 copies.

The second trip concerns Victoria College and the Bloor St. area. Trinity, St. Hilda's and other residences come third, while the Medical and Science Buildings close the cycle.

The druggists are last on the list, receiving their bundle around 12 mid-day, only about half an hour after the Varsities. Only four professors have copies delivered to them individually, the others no doubt relying on their moral authority to emerge victorious from the eager crowd of (Continued on Page 2)

Schooling in Democracy

The success of the German government and the German educational system in educating their children in the schools to be enthusiastic Nazis caused many Canadian educational authorities this year to stop and consider the situation over here. Democracy was always something that had been taken for granted in our schools. Certainly it had never been taught or drilled constantly into the students, as Nazism has been in Germany. Many persons reached the logical conclusion that a course in democracy should be instituted in all Canadian schools, not to cram democracy frantically down children's throats but to make them as democracy-conscious as the German school system has made its pupils Nazi-conscious.

To many it seemed reasonable that if such a schooling could be so successful in Germany, a modified version of it could surely be useful here. Canadian children should grow up democracy-conscious, and in order to achieve such a result the study of our type of government, its principles, and the reasons for its superiority to other types should be instituted in the schools. According to a statement made last fall by Dr. C. C. Goldring, superintendent of schools, "war consciousness" has been added this year as a new subject on the curriculum of Toronto schools.

In addition to being taught concrete ways in which boys and girls can help win the war, students are being taught the principles of democracy, lessons of history, systems of government, causes of the war, what we are fighting for, freedom and patriotism. However it is doubtful if this program is being followed as yet in many Canadian secondary schools. It will probably spread as time goes on, but on the other hand it may be allowed to drop when the war is over. It is to be hoped that, if the educational authorities consider it worthy of being a regular school subject, they will see that it is a permanent one.

The United States has adopted much the same attitude on the subject. In December a study of some 800 public school textbooks throughout the country was undertaken, so that any that were found prejudicial to the United States form of government, society, or system of free enterprise might be removed. A great deal of controversy was bound to arise over just what is prejudicial. Last week 12,000 educators assembled at Atlantic City for a convention of the American Association of School Administrators, and immediately began to heatedly debate criticisms of textbooks made by Professor Ralph W. Robey of Columbia University and others.

One spokesman for the educators insisted that "we believe there are very few if any of the texts used in the schools deliberately or otherwise written to break down the American plan of life." The chairman of the meeting suggested that certain entrenched groups were merely interested in cutting the cost of the schools. Another educator stated that the original plan was an excellent one, but that it had gone astray.

Richard Feier, author of "Elements of Economics," one of the textbooks charged by Professor Robey as being unduly critical of elements in American political or economic institutions, also joined in the argument. He protested that his book is "pedagogically sound and based on facts honestly and frankly presented from a true American point of view." He also said, "I feel that Dr. Robey's method of criticism by the extraction of paragraphs and parts of paragraphs to suit his special purpose is unjustified, unwarranted and scholastically unsound." And Mr. Feier concluded his defense with a statement that will probably meet with approval—"I sincerely believe that free discussion of free schools is the best way to preserve our democracy."

The dispute is expected to continue all this week, and it seems that would-be reformers have set themselves quite a task, because when they decided what ought to be removed they had only nicely begun. The debate as to which side is in the right could go on forever.

Aid From American Universities

The response to the university's plea to pledge to buy war savings stamps seems scarcely sufficient when one reads of the donations being made regularly by the American universities to the British cause. Contributions have been sent to England in various forms, the most popular one being ambulances.

Now the Greek Government is coming in for its share of aid. Two ambulances for the Greek army, one the gift of students and stag members of Columbia University and the other bought with contributions from colleges and universities throughout the United States and Canada were presented to the Greek Government on Sunday in an outdoor ceremony on the Columbia campus before a large audience.

The presentation was made by Professor James P. Gifford, assistant to the dean of the Columbia Law School, on behalf of the American-Hellenic Student Committee for Medical Aid to Greece. Nicholas Lely, Greek consul general in New York, accepted the ambulances with "deep gratitude as a token of the sympathy of the American people for our cause."

We have made our contributions too in several ways, but surely if the American colleges can be so ready to help, we can give our support to the sale of war savings stamps.

Fathers' Spree!

The Home and School club of one of the city high schools had a Fathers' Night one evening not so long ago and the fathers had the time of their lives. The reason for their great glee—they held a debate to decide whether or not women should take part in public life, and the opposition won.

We wouldn't spoil the fathers' fun for anything by questioning their victory, especially because we are sure that the gentlemen were merely amusing themselves. Even if they weren't we can afford to disregard them as champions of a long lost cause. But just in case they were serious, we think they should reconsider the financial aspect of the situation, about which such people are always talking. If women disappeared from the business world completely millions of women would be dependent on their fathers and brothers for support, women who are now earning their own living. Wouldn't that put the fathers right back where they started—or even further back?

I've Got 'Em On My List

A Persistent Variety of Pest

Although the mission will probably be as fruitless as the average crusades of the past; it is about time that some attack was made on those persistent people

(In the interests of science, the two co-eds have been prevailed upon to reveal more about their sad dilemma, viz., the single personality.)

As though it weren't bad enough to be two people with but a single personality between them (and nary a brain in good working order), the two co-eds, both having journalistic dreams, decided they momentarily lost consciousness and both signed up with The Varsity (the Undergraduate Newspaper in case you didn't know). But that was only the beginning of their troubles. To give you a rough idea:

The personality, with the co-eds in tow, stalks into the Varsity office. "Oh," gleefully shouts the Women's News Editor, "there's a story for you!"—and gallops out before the co-ed who at that moment possesses the personality has a chance to explain that the two co-eds plus the personality have 5 essays and 6 tests for tomorrow and just can't take a story. So they're left holding the story. And what to do about it is the problem.

Who shall do the story? Only one person is needed. And obviously a personality can't go all by itself—someone has to go along with it. Personalities are funny that way. But which of the co-eds will go and which will have the custody of the precious personality? The one who goes out on a newspaper story obviously needs a personality, a winning personality, to obtain the desired information or reasonable facsimile. But what will the other one do? A personalityless co-ed can't prepare for 7 tests and 8 essays. And someone just has to study for those 9 essays and 10 tests 'cause professors just don't understand duel-people-single-personality excuses, and all other available ones were exhausted long ago. It's so confusing. . . . And there are still those 11 essays and 12 tests. . . .

The co-eds, with the help of sympathetic friends, finally hit on the scheme of part time usage of the collective personality. Co-ed one went to bed at seven (Honest she did!) granting the use of the personality to co-ed two until next morning. Then co-ed two went out and had herself a wheehee of a time ('cause this is a wheehee of a personality, not one of your garden variety, everyday, wishy-washy personalities) and she didn't go to bed at all. Came dawn and, promptly at ten, co-ed two handed over the personality, still miraculously in one piece to co-ed one who proceeded to lectures to take notes for co-eds one and two. (With but one personality the notes would be the same anyway, so why waste ink by having two co-eds take the same notes) and co-ed two minus all personality went home.

But personalities, even amazing, stupendous, supercolossal personalities like this one may have their frailties, and remember that this personality had been up all night having a wheehee of a time with co-ed number two. Sooooo . . . Before long co-ed number one started to yawn, then she started to blink, then her head began to nod . . . to nod . . . to . . . nod . . . Sllll!

Can no help help the miserable co-eds out of their sad plight?

Supernurses's Better Half.

who love to make themselves obnoxious to other theatre goers by showing off their knowledge in stage whispers or appropriate hums.

Those who come to listen are terribly annoyed by those gadflies perpetually buzzing in their ears. Certain members of this craft enjoy telling at a place how they know the actors in the play (or recall in their second childhood how they knew them in their first); others at concerts take a delight in humming under their breath (and very probably in another key) the themes of the music which is valiantly attempting to get across. Then there are those who carefully announce to their neighbours how the murder is to take place and how it will be solved.

Novitates of the same ilk are those who wildly clap the final number until the performer has taken his two bows and then dash madly for the exits. The quality of the music influences them not

TRINITY SENIOR TO ADDRESS TEUTONIC CLUB MEMBERS

"Cycling through Europe" will be the title of an address given by Miss Margaret Moffat, IV Trinity, at the regular meeting of the Teutonic Club to be held in the Women's Union tomorrow.

Miss Moffat bicycled through Germany, Austria, Hungary, Scandinavia, and the U.K. during the summer of 1939. She sailed from a northern German port only the night before Hitler's legions marched into Poland. "This is the first time to my knowledge that an English student has given an address in German," the president announced, "but I hope that the precedent will be followed."

PAPER DISTRIBUTION REQUIRES BICYCLE

Varsity-seekers.

There are about 5,500 copies of the Varsity printed daily, and although this should leave only about 1,500 students without their favourite newspaper, there are great numbers of copies left over every day. Medical students seem the least interested, taking only a small percentage of the copies provided for them.

The U.C. junior common room is also a paradise for those who cannot find copies anywhere else, the reason probably being that its "habitués" have already tapped other sources of supply. The transferring of a certain number of copies from places such as this to the Economics Building where many go Varsity-less, is being considered, but students are directed to the University Library where arrangements have recently been made by which 200 copies are available every day.

There exists at present no system for collecting remaining copies at the end of the day, thus several tons of paper are supposedly wasted in the course of the year.

VIC PUCKSTERS DEFEAT U.C. II WITH 7-0 SCORE

Frankie Powell Led Attack of Scarlet and Gold Ice-Men to Bring Them into First Place in Their Group

NOW LEADING PHARMACY

Vic Seconds mauled the second squad from U.C. 7-0 in a hockey tilt at the Arena yesterday afternoon to hop into first place in their group 1 point ahead of Pharmacy.

The winners were vastly superior to their Royal College rivals, outspeeding and outplaying them without difficulty. Vic scored almost at will, hurling three pucks in the net during the first period and four in the second.

Frankie Powell led the victors' attack with a four-star scoring spree. McKenzie, Paton and Bothwell punched the twine for the other three goals. Ross Cunningham turned in a contortionist's display in the Vic nets to earn his first shutout of the season. Parret was a tower of blonde strength on the winners' blue line.

VARSITY ORCHESTRA HAS WOMEN MEMBERS

Out of a membership of about twenty-five, the University Symphony Orchestra has ten women members. The Varsity learned Saturday at another "final brush-up" on the orchestra's annual concert. Several theories were offered as to why there were not more women in the Symphony.

"Women are usually more concerned with other things and just can't be bothered coming to practice," said Robin Wearne, I. Physio.

Men had a head start in music as well as many other things and women are still fighting for their rightful place in the music world. Although they are accepted more now in the field of symphony orchestra, they are, perhaps, not as interested in it as men are, as they have more to do and just aren't able to squeeze in time for practice.

Most of the women members of the University Symphony are from Meds, Occupational Therapy or Physiotherapy. There are four violinists, four cellists and one who plays the flute. "While many of them have had experience in other orchestras you don't have to be of professional calibre to play in the orchestra," stated one member.

"The reason I like the orchestra so much is that it gives me a very good chance to practice," said Paula Ledoux, II Meds, as she carried her 'cello into the rehearsal.

Fumio Shimidzu Extremely Peeved As Aspiring Judoists Desert

Fumio Shimidzu and a few of the boys drew up firesides and had a little chat in the wrestling room yesterday.

Everything was still and calm as we discussed present and future plans for the university world of judo. Fumio, who has been instructor in the gentle art for the past year, was his usual genial self, shaded perhaps with a North American worldliness which only added another point in his likeable makeup.

Fumio is not the kind of fellow who could get really angry with anyone but he was more than slightly peeved with the actions of a few of the less considerate undergrads. At the first of the season there were about forty students who were falling all over themselves in an effort to learn how to fall all over themselves. Poor Fumio had to take each individual aside and teach him the very primary tricks of the trade until he was black in the belt.

But most of these undergrads were

The Women's Intercollegiate-Intercollegiate Swim Meet got underway last night, but due to the mammoth plunges people insisted on taking, and the precision with which they performed their ornamental tricks, only five races were completed. Two of them, the 200 yd. relay and the medley relay, were intercollegiate events, and the times made were unobtainable at a comparatively civil hour last night.

Of the three intercollegiate races run off, two were preliminaries, finals to be run off on Wednesday, so we have one definite set of results to offer. Thus, you see, Wednesday night will be the night. All races will be finals and Varsity intercollegiate results will be made known. At 7:30—Hart House—on Wednesday, eh?

In the ornamental swimming, the only final, Freddie Baxter, St. Hilda's, ranked first. Helen Cardy, St. Hilda's, second, and Jackie Scott, O.T. & P. third. The results of the preliminaries leave Betty Mortimer, U.C., Jackie Scott, O.T. & P., and Doris Fenner, Vic, in the plunge lanes, and Joan Griffith, St. Hilda's, Bea Harrison, Vic, Barb Bott, U.C., Marg Stock, U.C., and Joan Carter, U.C. in the diving finals. Betty Mortimer almost equalled the record by making 63 feet 6 inches in the plunge. Wednesday night, at 7:30, the style, scheduled for last night, will be run off, and the 100 yd. intercollegiate relay will go on later in the evening.

The Badminton Tournament did not get started yesterday, but is threatening to start today. Matches will be played on the St. Paul's courts, when things do get under way, and we hope to be able to inform you of same in the past tense tomorrow.

KNOX B HOOPSTERS OEFAT PHARMACY B

With only four men, Knox B defeated Pharm B 36-20 in a basketball fixture in the upper gym yesterday afternoon.

The first half was close with Knox leading 14-11, but in the second, Knox won the Knockouts 22 points to the 9 collected by Pharmacy. Archibald and Crocker led the winners with 13 points apiece while Waiter was the best for Pharm, collecting 6.

Knox B: Self 6, Barr 4, Archibald 1, Crocker 1.
Pharm B: Waiter 6, Titcher 4, Newman 4, Steele 4, Jeffers, Martin, Kestenberg 2.

VARSITY AQUACADE

Intercollegiate sport dropped in on Varsity last night after an absence of almost a year. It couldn't make a personal appearance, so it came by proxy. University athletics have been forced into such a state of decay that competition is now being staged by correspondence.

That does not mean exactly that people who can write prettily, or spell crepuscule, kaleidoscope, and having a swell time, wish you was here, will win intercollegiate championships. They may not in fact. But inter-varsity rivalry will be carried on by the mail-man.

The first step in this process was made in Hart House pool last night. And if a cause needs a champion, what better one could be picked than that of a profusion of gorgeous co-eds all dressed up fit to kill in bathing suits paddling around in shivering green H2O? That was the pool-room attraction last evening.

Intercollegiate meets have been banned temporarily, even for the girls, so the new idea is for the various university swim teams to compete against the clock in their own water-holes, and then compare times by mail with the other colleges. The mermaid brigade with the best time will be declared the intercollegiate champ. In case of ties duplicate letters of congratulation will be mailed.

The intercollegiate time trials were combined last night with a portion of the interarsity meet in a spectacular aquatic display which would indubitably place Willie the Kid Rose's outfit in the shadows, even though it did lack the charming presence of his missus—the champagne-gulping Eleanor.

The gals put on a very interesting and entertaining program, and when, upon occasion, they fumbled mentally and began drifting down the pool broadside instead of using the regulation follow your nose method, it served only to add interest to the evening. On the whole they were very classy (not only their appearance either, smartly pants) and executed the difficult manoeuvres of their routine with much élan.

Most of the interarsity events were preliminaries. The finals will take place tomorrow night along with the remaining intercollegiate events. Thus it is readily discernible that the best is yet to come. Wednesday evening's card ought to attract great hordes of humanity to Hart House. Artsmen should be especially eager to attend as there isn't the slightest chance that S.P.S. will win. Won't that be a novelty?

THE LAST CALL

This afternoon's meet closes the book on Varsity track for the year. The last of the indoor competitions will be held. During the season's trials the Scarlet and Gold of Victoria have forged into a slight lead over all their rivals. If School or O.C.E. want to pick up the blue chips in this important intramural sport, they will have to apply the pressure with both hands in order to catch the Truth-Shell-Make-You-Free-men. But they can still do it if they turn out in force.

The events on the card are the high jump and the one mile relay. Hec Phillips has a dozen or more charges who can hop over the bamboo at the 5 ft. 6 inch level, and he expects keen competition in this event. Bob Hamilton of S.P.S., Ollie Brett of Dents, and Al Purdy of Forestry ought to show the way to the jumpers. But there are many fellows around who can't be counted out; e.g. the Brown twins of whom you have no doubt heard.

The four man relay event should see a keen fight between O.C.E. and Vic. Maybe a dark horse will bob up to topple the dope (whoever he is). At any rate this final card will be one of the best to date and ought to draw a goodly supply of participants and spectators.

St. Mike's D and Doctors III Are Victors in Basketball Games

Irish Hoopsters Gain Ten Point Lead in Final Fifteen Minutes of Game Against Wycliffe B

SCORE 26-16

A scrappy St. Mike's D hoop squad put on a last period scoring drive to down Wycliffe B 26-16.

The Irish and the Theologues battled evenly throughout the opening period to a 16-16 tie at half time. A Gael spurt in the final fifteen minutes gave them a ten point lead at the final whistle.

Jack Killea sparked the Double Blue with 12 points. Cloonan was the defensive star. Coleman and Abbott with 8 and 6 respectively led the Wycliffeans.

St. Mike's D: Brady, Kelly, Sullivan, O'Connor, Springer, Cloonan, Killea, Moynihan.
Wycliffe B: Abbott, Latimer, Coleman, Kerr.

SCORE 27-11

Meds III defeated Vic III 27-11 in a rugged basketball game yesterday afternoon in the lower gym. Meds took an early lead and Vic never threatened to overtake them at any stage in the game. At half time the score stood 9-4.

The second half produced more scoring but the passing and shooting were away off. Murray led all scorers with ten points and McClure, also of the Doctors had 7. MacKenzie led the Victorians with six.

Meds III: Wilson 2, McClure 7, Murray 10, Marchant, Bryce 4, Kahn 3, Barootes 1.

Vic III: McArthur, MacKenzie 6, Baker, Waugh 3, Paton 2, Bryce, D. Sully, K. Sully, Nixon, Taylor.

ECCLES HURLS SHUT-OUT FOR O.C.E.

Eccles led a seventeen-man baseball team from O.C.E. to a 9-0 win over St. Mike's A as he hurled a no-hit, no-run game to blank the Irish without a murmur.

Eccles had complete control of the contest throughout and fanned ten of the St. Mike's batsmen. O.C.E. fielded seventeen different players at different stages of the debacle. St. Mike's had only seven on their lineup.

The winners blasted out a four-run burst in the opening inning. They followed this with 2 in the second. The Irish held them off the score sheet in the third. But the Teachers broke out again in the final session with a five-run spree.

ST. MIKE'S TO STAGE A MODERN DRAMA

"Craig's Wife," another St. Michael's College Dramatic Society production, will be put on in St. Joseph's College School Auditorium tonight.

"Craig's Wife" is a modern drama by George Kelly and deals with the attempt of a wife to subjugate her husband and use him for her own selfish ideals.

Mary Martin plays the part of Mrs. Craig; Stan Scudiere that of Mr. Craig. They are supported by Betty Lynott, Louise Hart-Smith, Gerrie Wilson, Mary Tilberg, Luke Troke, Brenda Doghish, and John Nelligan.

This play, under the direction of Rev. Father J. O'Donnell, is part of the plan of the society to promote drama in the three colleges.

Tickets may be procured at St. Michael's College entrance off St. Joseph St.

Aerial Navigation Suffered First Defeat of the Season Yesterday by the Score of 6-2 and Force Group Playoff

TIE NOW WITH SCHOOL

A tigerish School Fourth's hockey team clawed Aerial Navigation into submission by a 6-2 score at Varsity Arena yesterday afternoon, and hurtled into a first place tie with the Fliers, forcing a group playoff before either team can continue into the Jennings Cup playdowns.

This was the first defeat for the Navigators. They had previously edged the Engineers 3-2 at the early part of the season.

Moeser opened the scoring for School shortly after the game started. Wagner tied the count for the losers. Then the Engineers blasted home two more pucks before the period ended. They outscored the Fliers 3-1 in the final period.

ADDITIONAL PARADES HELD FOR AUXBATTMEN

Auxbattmen who have not completed the required 110 hours of parades by Friday when the training syllabus concludes are required to continue drilling till their full time is made up. The additional parades will be held till March 15th at the regular hours, it was learned at the Orderly Room yesterday.

The names of those who have not had the minimum number of hours of training were read at the parades last week. Anyone still in doubt concerning their time should inquire at the Orderly Room in Hart House.

Those who missed parades were given credit if excused for illness on the presentation of a doctor's certificate, for sports up to twelve hours, or any other reason which was accepted at the Orderly Room.

U.C. JUNIOR-SENIOR TO BE HELD FRIDAY

Closing event of the current University College social season will be the U.C. Junior-Senior Dance, set for Friday, February 28 at Eaton's Auditorium. It will follow the Graduate Banquet, tendered the senior year by 4T2, to be staged in Eaton's Round Room.

Swinging to the music of Richard Avonde and his orchestra, Royal College students will cut a merry rug as they vie for prizes which the committee promises to be "only slightly short of super-colossal."

A floor-show, featuring a duet by Marjorie Smith and Hubert Pedlar, will also be presented.

TRINITY DRAMA CLUB TO PRESENT COMEDY

"Symphony in Two Flats" by Ivor Novello will be Given on March 7th and 8th with Stuart Parker Directing

AT HART HOUSE

"Symphony in Two Flats," a three-act romantic comedy by Ivor Novello, will be the Trinity College Dramatic Society's major production of the year, it was announced last night. The play will be given Friday and Saturday, March 7 and 8.

Directing the production is Stuart Parker, a Trinity graduate of 1939, who starred in the University Drama Committee production of "Holiday" and has also been active with other dramatic groups including Hart House Theatre and Centre Stage.

"The title of the play," said Paul Christie, president of the society, "derives from the fact that the action represents concurrent events taking place in two apartments of a London studio block."

Margaret Newlands, Margaret Hogarth and Sydney Jones play the Bohemian inhabitants of the first flat, while Bill Somerville and David Ker, as an Australian mutton baron and a young house-agent respectively, provide matrimonial difficulties.

Inhabitants of the other flat are a young composer and his wife, played by Paul Christie and Rita Weyman, whose conventional life is disrupted by the disturbing influence of Max Clarkson.

"The play can in no way be classified as experimental drama," Christie concluded, "but few will dispute its claim to the rank of first-class entertainment from the pen of an expert in the trade."

DIRECTOR DIES IN PLANE CRASH

he discovered insulin and honours had poured on him increasingly ever since. The Banting-Best chair of medical research was established at the University of Toronto and the Banting Laboratories were built. Dr. R. T. Woodyard, famous diabetic specialist at Chicago, said that the discovery of insulin would rank with the greatest discoveries in medicine.

Banting was a medical student at the University of Toronto when the last war began and he was forced to finish his course in medicine before enlisting. In the summer of 1916 he went to France with the 44th Canadian Infantry battalion. This time he enlisted as a captain in the 15th General Hospital Canadian Army Medical Corps.

History was made on March 22, 1922 when the message to sufferers from diabetes was broadcast in the medical journal and the Toronto Daily Star. Although most of the credit went to Banting, the latter was the first to declare that he must share the honour with Dr. Best.

CHINESE STUDENT DISCUSSES CUSTOMS

in China, where a date is a very important matter. "In fact," said Chin, "it is practically impossible to get a blind date."

To illustrate the seriousness of the affairs of the heart in China, Chin said that when a man is in love, it is customary for him to have three or four of his best friends as advisors and intermediaries.

Breach of promise suits are conspicuous by their absence, engagements sometimes last four or five years and divorces are extremely rare. He put this down to the fact that "there is so much consideration of marriage beforehand without counting on emotion."

Chin stressed the point that although China is progressing rapidly, it has only been a republic since 1920. Under the new regime, education is compulsory up to twelve years of age and then optional. The next stage of schooling corresponds to the Canadian high school period.

Two of the universities which Chin attended were Tsinghua University where he was the editor of the Tsinghua Weekly and Yenching University in Peking. Pictures of the latter, at which he was a freshman, appeared in a recent copy of Life and well illustrated the extreme beauty of the Chinese buildings and grounds, which he described.

The status of women in China is much higher than formerly. They have voted since about 1932, are well represented in the People's Council and are active in politics in general. The wife of Chin's cousin, a former Manchurian prince, is now in the Ministry of Justice of the Chinese government. Chin described the co-eds as being "much the same as Canadians down to bare

Sixteenth Century Collection Owned by Professor J. S. Will

Many Books Originally Bought at Fifty Cents would be Worth Thousands Now if Europe were at Peace.

UNEARTHED ON PARIS QUAYS

Professor J. S. Will of the French department of University College, is the proud possessor of one of the most unique libraries in the world. The collection, containing a great number of books of the sixteenth century and even some from the fifteenth, would be the delight of any scholar, especially one from France or Italy.

Prof. Will described to the Varsity several ways in which he obtains the books for his collection. Many are advertised in book catalogues from out-of-the-way places in England and other parts of Europe. In order to obtain the copies before others he procures the proof sheets of the catalogues before they are sent out and orders by cable. A more intriguing method of finding priceless first editions is that of browsing through the stands of book sellers along the quays of Paris.

"As professors are not always wealthy," Prof. Will said, "they can't buy books in auctions, but depend on obtaining them at moderate prices." Many of the books are now worth as much as a thousand dollars although he originally paid only fifty cents for them. "It would be a better business than stocks and bonds if one could sell the books in Europe again," he suggested.

Some of the books were owned by Voltaire himself, he related proudly. Others belonged to such men as Edmund Gosse and Spinoza.

There are books dealing with the rise of the Renaissance, pamphlets on Protestantism of the 16th century, also on the history of and edicts against Protestantism. Works of Latin, French poets are among the collection. Professor Will hopes to write about these himself.

"The bindings of the books are magnificent," he said. Some are bound in stamped parchment, rich with indented patterns. Four and five hundred year old books have whiter paper and better print than some ten years of age.

Prof. Will bought the books only as he needed them for use. It takes great patience and searching since he has waited as long as 25 years to obtain some copies. It has been more difficult to procure these in the last two years as people are becoming more aware of their value. Due to the war there is no possibility of obtaining any now.

MOIR, A.M. & D. CRITIC TO GIVE RECITAL

Donald S. Moir, I Vic, is to be guest artist today in the Tuesday noon hour series of informal piano recitals at Hart House. The concert will be given at 1.30 p.m. in the east common room.

When interviewed by The Varsity, Mr. Moir, who is a well-known member of The Varsity A.M. & D. staff, modestly refused to say much about himself. "I owe a very great deal to my teacher, with whom I studied two years—Mr. Lyell, Gustin of Saskatoon, Sask., one of Canada's leading teachers and a former secretary of the Canadian Music Teachers' Association," Don explained, by way of evading a personal interview.

The pianist, critic, once referred to by the Exchange Editor as a "rosy-checked cherub" when he obligingly Hithered and Yawmed for a whole column several weeks ago, will play under serious difficulty this afternoon, having suffered a dislocation of the shoulder recently in defending himself from some rufians. "Every time I strike a chord now, I not only hear it, but feel it," Don exclaimed ruefully, rubbing his shoulder from which he was allowed to remove the sling only last Saturday.

Lance MacDowell, III Vic, will play too, accompanying Don at the second piano for Mendelssohn's "Capriccio Brillante."

Proposals of Committee To be Formally Approved, Reveals President Cody

No Information can be Given Now but Results will be Favourable to the Soldier-Students Says the President

CONFERENCE AT OTTAWA

Government endorsement of resolutions drawn up by "a very successful" conference of Canadian university representatives and Ottawa military heads is expected shortly, President Cody declared yesterday on his return from his trip to the capital Monday in which he and other university leaders sought to settle the problems of student soldiers.

While no information can be divulged at present, the president hinted that the ultimate results of the conference would prove very favourable to the 2,700 men in the two campus military organizations.

"We expect to have formal approval of our resolutions passed in the course of a short time," the President stated (Continued on Page 4)

DR. E. A. CORBETT

Director of the Canadian Association for Adult Education, who will address the S.C.M. noon-hour audience at Hart House today on "Adult Education as a Democratic Process."

Druggists Swing To Mart Kenny At Grad Dance

Simpson's Arcadian Court will be the scene of the Annual Pharmacy Graduation Ball on Friday 28th from 9 p.m. to 3 a.m., to which all are invited. The Court is being newly decorated for this occasion and a special floorshow will be imported to be the highlight of the evening. Mart Kenny and his Western Gentlemen will beat the tempo as Druggists and their friends indulge in frolicsome revelry. An exception to the general rule of campus events this year, corsages WILL be sold at the door, proceeds thereof going to War Charities.

The patrons and patronesses are President and Mrs. Cody, Dr. and Mrs. P. L. Scott, Prof. and Mrs. C. C. Clark, Prof. and Mrs. F. N. Hughes, Prof. and Mrs. D. E. McKinlay.

NATIONAL CHAIRMAN TO ADDRESS RED CROSS

Mrs. Wallace Campbell, National Chairman of the Women's War Work of the Canadian Red Cross will speak at 3 p.m. today in the lecture room of the Household Science Building. She will address all those who have taken part in the workroom and also those who are connected with the Women's War Service Committee.

Victoria Produces New Act; Dr. Innis is Guest Contributor

By Michael O'Mara

Another issue of Acta Victoriana, Victoria College's undergraduate magazine, has rolled off the presses. It is the best issue that the Victorians have turned out this year. It is also a substantiation of the assertion recently made in these columns by our colleague, Mr. Simon, that students should be and are capable of producing, even during a trying examination period, a magazine worth reading.

The best thing in this Acta, however, is not by a student, but by a professor. Dr. H. A. Innis, Head of the Economics Department, has provided an article, "Notes on Politics since 1918," which sets forth Canada's political history for the last two decades in a scholarly and immensely readable manner.

Once more Rigmore Christopherson, the Satirical Sophomore, gallops off with the undergraduate honours. She combines whimsy and a touch of horror neatly in her "The Episode of the Good-natured Werewolf," a little thing that reads like a collaboration between A. A. Milne and a somewhat inebriated E. A. Poe. And her poem, "The Sphinx" left us—a phenomenal thing—speechless. We don't think it's an overstatement to say that Miss Christopherson's poetry at its best is not far short of Dorothy Parker's.

The other serious poem, S.G.B.'s "Wreath for the Valiant," is overshadowed by "The Sphinx," but is in its own right one of the best bits of undergraduate verse that the Acta has printed in quite a while, although its theme is becoming morbidly true.

Margaret Gould's story, "The Bailey Beareth," is also in the top flight, dis-

NEW SECTION FORMED FOR RED CROSS WORK IN FOOD MANAGEMENT

Food Administration Corps to Provide Trained Cooks, Dietitians; Graduate Members of W.S.T.D. May Join

COPE WITH WAR NEEDS

Mrs. Ernest Lee, a graduate of the University of Toronto of 219 in Household Science, has just been appointed National Commandant of the newly-organized Section 4 of the Women's Voluntary Service Corps. This section is known as the Food Administration Service, and its purpose is to provide a body of disciplined women trained as dietitians, nutritionists, volunteer assistants, cooks or helpers for the Red Cross society.

Mrs. Lee stated that the service was organized now primarily because of war needs, but that it is hoped that it will continue into peace time, so that the Red Cross will have a supply of these trained helpers in case of fire, flood or epidemic. She cited the case of the flu epidemic at the end of the last war, the Halleybury fire of a few years ago and the recent emergency in the Magdalen Islands where specially trained Red (Continued on Page 4)

TRINITY STUDENTS PROTEST CHANGE

As a protest against the break with tradition caused by holding the nominations of official Trinity College candidates for Hart House elections at night instead of at noon, an unofficial slate of candidates has been issued to contest the election.

"I strongly deprecated such radical and unprecedented action," said A. H. Crosbie, IV Trinity. "All supporters of traditional democratic process will rally to the support of these candidates."

Falconer Will be Speaker At U.C. Graduates Banquet

This year's University College graduating class will meet as a group for the last time February 28, at the annual Graduation Banquet, to be held in Eaton's Round Room.

Sir Robert A. Falconer, past president of the University of Toronto, is to be guest speaker at the banquet, Jack Gerby, fourth year president of the U.C. Literary and Athletic Society, stated yesterday. Sir Robert replaces Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, who was previously announced as the guest speaker. Col. Drew will be in New York on the evening of the banquet, Gerby said, in order to make a radio address.

From the Round Room the graduating class will adjourn to Eaton Auditorium where they will join other members

AULT EDUCATION IS TOPIC OF DR. CORBETT'S LECTURE

Today's S.C.M. noon hour audience will hear Dr. E. A. Corbett, M.A., LL.D., the director of the Canadian Association for Adult Education speak on "Adult Education as a Democratic Process."

Dr. Corbett has had wide experience in teaching as a university professor and a promoter of educational and other societies. He is the president of the Canadian Handicrafts Guild, a governor of the Dominion Drama Festival, the director and founder of the Banff School of Fine Arts, and a member of the board of directors of the Canadian Red Cross Society, and the Boy Scouts Association as well as several other Alberta organizations.

SIMCOE HALL STAFF SWINGS INTO ACTION WITH APPLICATIONS

System Used Has Grown Up Over Period of Years, Requires at Least Three Weeks to Complete Process

LAIOLAW IN CHARGE

From March 1st, the date on which exam applications are due, until the final examination time-table is published, the staff of the Registrar's office at Simcoe Hall will be involved in a race against time. Their situation is like that of the students during those final precious weeks—so much to do and so little time to do it in.

The system followed has grown up, with improvements, over a period of 40 or 50 years. First of all a check-up must be made on those who have neglected to apply. Aside from the fact that late applications slow up the office, it is to the student's advantage to apply on time so that if he inadvertently left out one of his subjects or put down 1c when he meant 1b, the mistake can be corrected. Then a record is made of the number trying each exam, and the papers each person plans to write are put down opposite his name in a large, flat, black book. This book, incidentally, (Continued on Page 4)

BRETT TO ADDRESS PHILOSOPHICAL SOCIETY

Dean G. S. Brett will address the Philosophical Society tonight at its regular meeting at the home of Barry Coutts, 17 Woodlawn Ave. E. The topic of Dean Brett's address will be "Problems of Modern Thought."

The speaker has announced that he intends to investigate the causes of modern irrationalism and to note briefly the various contemporary philosophical trends as well as the general tenor of modern thought.

Falconer Will be Speaker At U.C. Graduates Banquet

This year's University College graduating class will meet as a group for the last time February 28, at the annual Graduation Banquet, to be held in Eaton's Round Room.

Sir Robert A. Falconer, past president of the University of Toronto, is to be guest speaker at the banquet, Jack Gerby, fourth year president of the U.C. Literary and Athletic Society, stated yesterday. Sir Robert replaces Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, who was previously announced as the guest speaker. Col. Drew will be in New York on the evening of the banquet, Gerby said, in order to make a radio address.

From the Round Room the graduating class will adjourn to Eaton Auditorium where they will join other members of the college for the Junior-Senior Dance. This arrangement will enable the dance to start on time instead of necessitating a delay until the banquet is completed.

During the intermission of the dance results of the various college elections will be made public for the first time. The elections concerned are for next year's executives of the Lit. and W.U.A., for the Moss Scholarship and for the permanent executive of 471.

Richard Avondne's orchestra, which made a hit at the Arts Ball with its parodies of American big name orchestras, will provide the music for the dance, featuring several college songs. Dancing will be from nine until two o'clock.

Another in the series of Victoria College's Wednesday afternoon lectures is to be given today in Alumni Hall when the fourth of the group will be presented by Professor G. G. Coulton of the History Department. Topic of the lecture is to be "Artists' Life in the Middle Ages."

Professor Coulton, one of the world's top-ranking medievalists came to this campus from the History Department of Cambridge University. Here he became a special lecturer on the staff of the Department of History.

Since coming to the University of Toronto, Professor Coulton has presented a number of special lectures to various groups about the campus.

Law to Hold First Dance

Unprecedented in the history of the university's law course will be its dance tonight when all law students will gather at the Royal York Hotel for an evening of merry-making.

At this informal dance the jurists will get together for the first time as a body. The event is demonstrative of the unusual degree of friendliness and understanding which exists among the students of all the years. To the sybaritic strains of Horace Lapp's orchestra, the carefree lawyers will whirl and glide with never a thought of judicial decisions or legal codes.

On the committee arranging the Law Club dance which promises to become a permanent institution are Charles Dubin, Shirley Hill, Jack Kimber, Fred Fallis and Ruth Schwartz.

Forgotten Door Rediscovered Inside the Hart House Cloister

Just west of the Great Hall there is a little-used but very beautiful cloister and terrace, and inside the cloister is the door which was used for the original opening of Hart House on November 11, 1919. For some years afterward the door was used regularly and was found very convenient by the members of the House. But unfortunately non-members also found it useful, and finally it was necessary to restrict entrance to the two doors which can be supervised by the Hall Porter. As a result the door in the cloister was closed and has not been used since except once, as the exit when the king and queen visited

Appointment of University Governor to Washington Post Expected to Please President Roosevelt

GRADUATE OF OSGOODE

The appointment of Leighton McCarthy, K.C., 70, member of the Board of Governors of the University of Toronto, to the post of Canadian Minister to the United States was announced yesterday in the House of Commons by Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

The University Governor will succeed Loring Christie, who has not enjoyed the best of health for some months. The latter's son, Paul Christie, is the head of the student body at Trinity College.

Mr. McCarthy's appointment to the Washington post, it is generally believed, is one which will be especially pleasing to President Roosevelt. Well-liked in local circles, he is considered eminently suited for the position. A trustee of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis of the United States, he is also a trustee of the Georgia Warm Springs Foundation, of which President Roosevelt is the founder. His son, like President Roosevelt, is a victim of infantile paralysis.

The Toronto lawyer is a graduate of Osgoode Hall, and read law with the firm of McCarthy, Pepler and McCarthy of Barrie between 1887 and 1892, when he was admitted to the bar. (Continued on Page 4)

TRINITY WOMEN TO MEET SAINTS FOR FINAL ROUND

"Resolved that university students are indifferent to public opinion" will be the subject in question when teams from Trinity and St. Mike's compete in the final Women's Interfaculty debate of the season this afternoon at the Women's Union.

The winner will be the possessor of the debating trophy for the coming year; the title is now held by Trinity.

EDITOR'S NOTE

As graduation approaches, the problem of what to do next inevitably presents itself. For undergraduates in scientific and other professional courses the solution is provided; for many graduates in arts however the problem becomes one of great magnitude. Recognizing the existence of the problem, and realizing that a new profession is growing up which may provide an answer in many cases, we recently asked a staff member of the Department of Social Science to prepare a brief account of the work and opportunities in that field. We publish it in the editorial columns in the hope that it may prove of help to some students and of enlightenment to all.

A Loss to Mankind

There is little that we can say regarding the death of Sir Frederick Banting that needs to be said. His contributions to the welfare of humanity are known to all and need not be recounted here. What further scientific achievements are lost to us through his death we will probably never know, nor can we realize the magnitude of the loss to the university and to the nation.

In time of peace Sir Frederick's life was devoted to the relief of pain in the human body. In time of war he served his country, first on the field of battle, later in his laboratory. His last experiments were designed to solve the physical problems of airmen, and it was to experience these problems at first hand that he embarked on his fatal flight.

To Sir Frederick's wife and family and to his associates we extend our most heartfelt sympathy. The civilized world shares their loss.

Social Work-- A New Profession

In our rapidly changing world one false impression is undergoing fortunate extinction. It is the vague idea that social workers are people who tend babies while the mothers go to work—"or something like that". The social worker of 1941—male or female—is steadily assuming a more important role in our social economy. He or she is now a person of graduate standing, professional training, and a wealth of interesting and important work to do—work relating to people as individuals, in groups, or en masse. And never before have social workers been faced with larger and more challenging problems than at the present time.

Social work in America appeared in the latter decades of last century and pursued a mild and largely unnoticed course until the Great War. The social pressures of that period gave the embryo profession a powerful shove. During the 1920's private and public social work advanced steadily. The depression period of the 1930's intensified social problems and brought large extensions of its field. In the United States, the social services of the New Deal program, and the broad Social Security Act, quickly extended the range of the public social services and called for correspondingly large numbers of trained personnel. The membership of the professional group, the American Association of Social Workers, expanded from some three thousand in 1919 to eleven thousand in 1939. The number of Schools of Social Work increased from a dozen in 1929 to forty-two in 1941. There is now a close working relationship between the public social services, the Schools, and practising social workers, so that sound professional standards may be maintained and raised.

Social work development in Canada has been somewhat slower, but is proceeding steadily. For several reasons we are now at the beginning of a period of more rapid expansion. The new public services, starting with the National Employment Service and the Unemployment Insurance Act, are getting under way. We may shortly expect extension of social insurance into the fields of Old Age and Invalidity and Health. The exigencies of war are creating new problems in housing and child welfare. These new fields are additional to the constant natural growth as the profession becomes recognized and proves its worth.

The post-war period will present large problems of domestic statesmanship to our governments, and a professional challenge to social workers. Every available worker will be needed to meet the changing problems and to man the new services in which we will be engaged.

The practice of social work is increasingly coming into the hands of the trained worker. The knowledge and skills required are recognized to constitute the basis for professional training. There are now three training schools in Canada—smaller schools at McGill and University of British Columbia, and the larger Department of Social Science at Toronto. The course is a post-graduate one, calling for a B.A. degree for admission, consisting of two years of professional preparation in classroom and field work. At present a diploma is awarded, but plans for granting the Master's Degree are now completed and this standing will eventually replace the diploma. The professional association, the Canadian Association of Social Workers, is growing in numbers and significant activities.

Consistent with the changing social outlook, social workers are placing more emphasis on the treatment and prevention of social ills. The broader scope and larger size of its services also calls for an increasing number of men, and for them, as for women, a range of positions is available. With the stabilization of social work, salaries and working conditions are now comparable with related professional fields.

The personal requirements are simple—good average intelligence, good health, emotional stability, a sense of humour, and a fundamental interest in people. The opportunities for satisfying public service in this new profession are varied and rewarding. Our social problems grow apace, and their solution will continue to be a provocative and challenging occupation.

Students Make Music

For seven years the University Symphony Orchestra has given annual concerts on the campus, providing student-directed and student-performed readings of good music. Tomorrow, under the direction of Godfrey Ridout, the orchestra will present a program which includes a Haydn symphony and a Beethoven piano concerto—works which are featured on the programs of the best symphony orchestras on the continent.

Founded by John Weinzwieg, then a student at the university, now one of Canada's better-known young composers, the orchestra has consistently been under the direction of young men who have carried their musical reputations outside the university. The present conductor has had his music performed by several orchestras in Canada and the United States.

Music performed by young people who play for the sheer enjoyment of playing will be provided for those interested at Convocation Hall tomorrow night.

Charming

Lucille Manners at Massey Hall

It is a pleasure to discover a radio soprano who can sing, as well as look pretty. Quite often a voice which radio engineers can make sound quite passable and more (see Deems Taylor on the subject) in a concert hall becomes thin and timbreless. Not Lucille Manners, however, whose voice sounded infinitely better than it has ever seemed on the air.

Miss Manners has the all-important ability, so often absent among young singers, of almost faultless intonation. Her voice filled Massey Hall pleas-

STATISTICAL CATASTROPHE

Do you realize that 400 people out of 500 people? This may not seem astounding at first glance, but when you consider that fact that the ratio used to be 321 people to every 500 people, according to an eminent statistician.

It is not our intention to alarm the public unnecessarily, but we feel that under the circumstances, this thing should be brought to the public eye. Although drastic measures have already been taken to allay this frightening change in statistical ratio. This irrefragable force is altering the whole concept of our social structure, and hence must be fought. Tooth and nail.

Statisticians after laborious calculations, have estimated that by the end of twenty years. By this time the ratio will have been raised to the astounding figure of 453 out of every 500 people. WE MUST PREVENT THIS FIGURE REACHING 500 AT ALL COSTS. Most people do not realize, in fact, no one can predict, what would be the catastrophic and cataclysmic effects of this eventuality.

It may mean tragic self-sacrifice; it may mean incalculable hardships, but if we struggle long enough. Victory will be ours against these forces of evil. But to accomplish this, we must call for the cooperation of every citizen. Every man, woman, and child must unite in this great struggle. Otherwise, the shattering of the whole basis of our social structure. . . .

"Scatterbrain"

antly and her soft, passages were especially delicate. With a stage presence which was extremely enchanting, she presented an evening of light soprano music almost impeccably.

Her enunciation of her English selections surpassed beyond measure that of her French. In the latter, it was only the odd word that was intelligible. Three songs, "in the Holland language", were, with Miss Manners' explanations, not only intelligible, but also perhaps the highlight of the year. En Roden Dons, an old Dutch Folk Song, is another candidate for the title of "the most beautiful folk song".

For one of her encores, Miss Manners sang Oley Speaks' Morning (the fourth time it has been done this season in Toronto). It is too bad that various singers cannot get together on the choice of their programs: the first time it was funny, but it has gone through the mill too many times. The fact that last night was the best of the four attempts only makes one regret the more that such talents had to be wasted on something in itself so mediocre.

Another encore of which the gist seemed to be "Go to sleep little dolly" was so decadent in its Victorian bathos that comment on it would be ridiculous. Those who analysed it saw its shortcomings; everyone else appropriately wept.

Tuesday Organ Recital

From the midst of a mass of chairs and music stands and things, George Coutts gave this week's Tuesday organ recital. Though he was apparently not acquainted with the organ his registration was good and his command over the instrument not bad. He opened his program with the Bach Prelude and Fugue in A minor. I found it more dull than seemed necessary, heavy, and the fugue lacking in that brilliance which seems inherent in it. Yet here we saw a complete knowledge of the work and an adequate use of the organ which left us in no doubt as to the competence of the organist. Of the next group the Biggs arrangement of Bach's Sheep may safely graze was most easy to listen to, whether from general worth or not I don't know. The arrangement is a good one, though the accompanying figure is not as prominent as it might be.

Healey Willans' Introduction, Passacaglia and Fugue showed that contemporary organ composition is not as barren as the previous group might have led us to believe. It is a very complicated and detailed work—the program notes can give you more enlightenment as to its structure than I am able to—but it shows a very complete knowledge of technical music composition. Mr. Coutts was not very sure of himself in part of the Passacaglia but we are grateful to him for playing it for us. This series of organ recitals has left us to wonder if, after all, organ music does not need the background of church ritual to make it listenable. Is the organ too mechanical an instrument to warrant its use where the human element—its variability and excessive weakness—is present? I am sure there was not one who didn't leave the hall more drowsy than when he came in—even the fellow in the back row of the gallery who was quietly tending to his knitting.

Change of Masters

Conservatory Senior Orchestra

Hats off, ladies and gentlemen, to Mr. Mazzoleni and his musicians, for presenting to a crowded house in Convocation Hall last night, the most satisfying concert that this writer has had the pleasure of hearing on this campus. From first to last, the orchestra played as a unit, the entrances of various sections occurring precisely and smoothly, the strings, the winds and the brass sections carrying out their tasks most superbly. If anything, I wish only to criticize the actions of Mr. Mazzoleni which though meant to put expression into the playing, served frequently to tire the listener, if he watched him too intently. The program opened with the beautiful but mournful Choral Prelude, O man, lament thy grievous sin. Its majestic and broad sweeping line was carried throughout on a high plane of artistry. Next, there followed the major work on the program, the Cesar Franck Symphony in D minor, which like the former piece, is a great lament. It is a most tragic symphony throughout and its broad-sweeping lines and soul-searching themes, full of pathos, offered much emotional content for Mr. Mazzoleni, and the orchestra to partake of. All fiercely, dramatic, bravura passages were nobly carried out by the brass and frequently the strings would pour forth their inspiring and rich-textured themes in a most unforgettable manner. It was a notable triumph.

The second half of the program brought forth the highly-gifted 15-year-old Bobby Graham. He is most promising, handling his instrument with a facility which is astonishing. The Paganini concerto is a virtuoso show-piece and demanded every ounce of Bobby's physical and mental energy. All was admirable except his cantilena passages which did not sing broadly or melodiously enough, but this will improve with experience.

The last two numbers were program pieces: A Shropshire Lad by Butterworth and a March of Sibelius. The former was built on a pleasant theme, elaborately decorated in a pure and pleasant English style, while the Sibelius piece was very rhythmic and one in which all the orchestra seemed thoroughly at ease.

College of Education Loses by Score of 45-24 at Senior Indoor Track Meet; Trinity Comes Third

HIGH JUMP AND RELAY

Victoria College retained possession of the Toronto Cricket Club Cup by amassing nearly twice as many points as its nearest rival, O.C.E., in the Senior Indoor Track Meet which concluded yesterday afternoon.

The Scarlet and Gold had an unofficial total of 45 points against the Teachers' 24 and Trinity's 10-12.

One event, the Mile Relay, will be finished today at noon when O.C.E. will run against time in an endeavour to top Victoria A who stepped the distance in the fairly slow time of 4 min. 14.9-10 secs.

Ollie Brett of Dents, using the Western Roll, captured the high jump event with a leap of 5' 9 1/4". He was closely followed by Duncan, U.C., who employed the ancient scissors style of jumping. The efforts of both Brett and Duncan were exceptionally good considering the handicaps facing indoor jumpers on the gym floor.

Results:
High Jump: (5' 9 1/4") 1. Brett, Dents; 2. Duncan, U.C.; 3. McDougall, U.C.; 4. Lewis, Vic.

Mile Relay: 1. Victoria A (Miller, Proderick, Sully, Lewis); 2. Victoria B.

MEOS TOP ARMEN IN DIAMOND TOURNEY

A second inning slugfest gave Meos III softballers a 13-8 victory over Aerial Navigation. The Armen took an early lead when they shoved two runs across in the first inning but the Surgeons' second inning jackpot put the game on ice.

The Fliers came back with six runs in the last two innings but failed to overcome the Surgeons' lead.

Aerial Navigation: Wismer, Green-slade, Tuckak, Vanhuyse, McLaurin, Scott, Price, Lake.

Meos III: Hamilton, Goldenberg, Green, Newman, Herman, Rotenberg, Virtue, Jolly, Murray.

JR. MEOS OUST VIC IN FIRST INNING RUSH

A powerful Jr. Meos mushball crew shut out Jr. Vic 10-0 in a free-hitting tilt. A first inning rush netted four runs for the Doctors, who added six more in the final frame.

Jack Hill turned in a fine hitting and fielding display for the victors while Al Dixon, Meos' moundsman, allowed only three hits. Jimmy Carson starred for the Scarlet and Gold.

Jr. Meos: Elia, Brown, Dixon, Smith, Sterioff, Hill, Moss, Geleff, Ludwig. Jr. Vic: McKenzie, Johnson, Carson, Taylor, McDonald, Winter, Ketcheson, Kirkrow, Zurbrigg.

St. Hilda's hockey team, still undefeated, won another rose for her button-hole by outscoring the O.T. & P.'s 4-1 last night on Trinity rink.

The teams were more evenly matched than the score indicates and the play continually shifted up and down the ice. At the end of the first period the score read 2-0 for the Saints. When the teams took the ice for the second period the Therapys opened wide with a rush on goal which kept the Saints more than biting their knuckles for a spell, and provided most of the thrills of the game. Goalie Joey Wells handled the situation very capably and the period ended in two more goals by Joan Griffiths for the Saints and one for Therapy bagged by Marg Atkinson. In the last period the score stood still, the play speeded up and consequently outskating the puck and mix-ups in front of the goal were not uncommon.

Joan Griffiths carried off her team's scoring honours single-handed while Tibs Amesley gave valuable support. Marg Atkinson was the towering strength of the Therapy team.

As a result of last night's game St. Hilda's tops the league with all wins and one tie and U.C. is runner-up having won all but two, one tie and one loss.

ST. HILDA'S LINE-UP:
Goalie—Joey Wells.
Forwards—Pattie Langman, Betty Hungerford, Joan Griffiths, Kitty Story.

Defense—Tibs Amesley, Leahy Young, Marg Moffatt, Betty Pemberton.

O. T. & P. LINE-UP:
Goalie—Muriel Jamieson.

Forwards—Jean Allen, Thelma Dinsdale, Peggy Clement.

Defense—Marg Atkinson, Elsie Saunders, Marcia Heffernan, Eliza Manning, Ruby Hobbs.

Interfaculty badminton finally got underway yesterday on the St. Paul's courts and by this time tomorrow we hope to have the complete results of the first round. Today's results are:

Helen Harvey defeated Amy McNally (default).

Peggy Clement defeated Marion Toole 11-0, 11-2.

Peggy Park defeated Ann Nettleton, 11-4, 11-1.

Jean Sterling defeated Sue Mulcahey (default).

Virginia Rappell defeated Grace McFarlane (default).

The singles tournament is scheduled for this week and the doubles start next week.

Speaking of Sport

By Owen Prichard

YOU'RE ALL INVITED, BOYS!

The second evening of the combined interfaculty and intercollegiate Women's Swimming Meet will splash its merry way through a crowded aquatic program in Hart House Pool tonight. Elsewhere on this page there are detailed items of the competition.

The girls have frequently invited the masculine element to come and take a gander at their athletic contests, such as basketball and hockey, but this time the festivities are taking place in our own balliwick. A goodly throng turned out to the women's basketball play-offs, and the menu being dished up tonight will likely draw a sizeable audience to the gallery of the Pool. The time, seven-thirty.

COMING SATURDAY

The University Nights during the last few week-ends have been offering the customers everything but dinner-ware. This coming Saturday the Amazing Engineers plus the Occupational Therapy girls, are playing hosts, and the something-new-and-different movement is still going on, with badminton as the new feature. The little white birds are going to take a beating from a renowned pair of U.C. badminton stars, named Bud Porter and Bob Macaulay. The Macaulay-Porter duo have been prominent in the sport in Toronto and its environs. But Porter holds the Ontario Junior Championship on his racket, and he and his partner look like the pair to succeed the famous Snyder combination of recent years.

Ancient the Interfaculty Badminton Tournament, the entries have been limping in with shameful slowness. Lots of players have signified vaguely that they would like to enter the meet, but it is essential that they drop into the Athletic Office and sign the sheet before the draw can be made. So, instead of today as originally planned, the tourney will be held next Wednesday.

By four o'clock yesterday, University College and Victoria College had four entries apiece, School had three, and Knox had two. The U.C. outfit includes Lorne Clayton and Cliff Ballagh, of the Physical Ed course.

A MESS OF STATISTICS

At least once every year at nearly every university, some enterprising writer with a flair for data and loads of time sits down and prepares a report on the number of miles of tape and bandage used by the football squad. Well, the following figures are presented, not to make you gasp an astounded "Geece!" but to give you an idea of the way in which the Athletic Wing budgets its time during an ordinary week.

The Athletic Office prepares from week to week a monstrous chart, on which are listed allotments of hours for the Big and Upper Gyms. For this week, the following activities are crowding the place from 9 a.m. till the 10 p.m. closing: 16 basketball practices, 16 baseball practices, 16 basketball games, 11 baseball games, 27 hours of PT classes, five hours of classes in the Physical Ed course, a two-hour track meet, two hours of residence basketball, six hours of gym classes, graduate night for three hours on Wednesday, and the University Night for four hours on Saturday.

Add to this the instruction periods in the other rooms devoted to boxing, wrestling and fencing classes, plus the hours when the gyms are open for casual workouts in the evenings, and the total comes to well over 130 hours of athletics for the place in one week. The Pool is likewise a busy spot, with instruction classes, swimming meets, waterpolo games and the ordinary aquatic gambols of the students keeping the waters well-churned.

MEDS ICEMEN SCORE IN LAST MINUTE PLAY

Sr. Meds icemen came from behind in a last minute scoring drive to earn a 1-1 tie with Pharmacy in a thrilling hockey contest yesterday. The game sent the Druggists into a first place tie with Vic Seconds for the leadership of Group III.

Both teams went scoreless throughout most of the first period. With five minutes remaining Bill Russell whipped in a goal on a pass from Art Walther to put the Dispensers one up, but a thrilling last minute comeback by the Medicos tied the count. With less than two minutes till the final whistle Wilson scooped the puck away from a scramble in front of the Druggists' net and passed to Wasylenko, who deposited the rubber.

Jerry Casselman turned in a fine display between the pipes for the Druggists, with Russell, Walther and Jardine leading them on the attack.

Wasylenko, Wilson and Candwell starred for the Surgeons.

The Vic-Pharmacy game, which is still on deck will decide the winner of the group.

Pharmacy: Casselman, Boyes, Jeffers, Stevenson, Binning, Dunning, Elliott, Walther, Jardine, Quirk.

Sr. Meds: McBrien, MacMillan, Spence, Candwell, Wilson, Tulton, Wasylenko, Murray.

S.P.S. TROUNCES ARMEN 52-20 IN BASKETBALL TILT

The S.P.S. V basketball team trampled heedlessly over a struggling Aerial Navigation quintet to the tune of 53-20 yesterday afternoon in the upper gym.

School led all the way right from the first basket scored. At half time the score was 25-10 as the Fliers were having unusual bad luck around the baskets. High man in the game was George Frost of School who plunked in 14 points. Hudson and George Bell of School contributed 12 and 10 points respectively to the winners' total. John Reilly was head scorer for the Navigators with 8 points.

S.P.S. V: J. Bell 8, DePaul 7, Hudson 12, Moses, G. Bell 10, Frost 14, Seymour, Hibbard, Darling 2.

Aerial Navigation: Wagner 2, Rosenberg 6, Constant 4, Walker, Reilly 8.

PRESSURE OF WAR BARS FOREIGN TEXTS

One of the many changes the present war has brought about is the difficulty in securing books from abroad. Students of modern languages, particularly in honour courses, are the groups most affected in the university. It is now impossible to get books from Germany, Italy, France or any of the other occupied countries.

At the beginning of the war, all importation from Germany was prohibited, although books that were considered essential to the war effort could be obtained through neutral countries. But now, since the occupation of most of these neutrals, the fall of France, and Italy's entrance into the war, no books at all have been coming from continental Europe. When the Canadian, American and English supply of a foreign-published book is exhausted, the only remedy for the situation is to switch to an American or English edition.

The French departments are, for the most part, well supplied with all the texts they need and do not expect any trouble next year. Texts that they were not able to get from France before its capitulation they are buying from American and Quebec publishers. The university German department has found its choice of texts restricted in the case of books that are no longer obtainable. They too must depend on American and English editions, a course which tends to be more expensive for the student. Mimeographed copies have been made of some texts, and, if necessary, could be made of more.

If the war continues the Canadian government is considering the possibility of setting up facilities for publishing foreign language books. The part of Quebec in producing French books will be important.

Shipments of books from England are coming in regularly, although the January copy of a magazine may arrive at its destination after the February issue. W. S. Wallace, university librarian, stated that not a single book or periodical sent for had been lost on its way from England. The manager of the University Press, A. G. Burns, related how an English firm had its entire stock of three million volumes destroyed by fire during enemy action. Their only comment on the occurrence was that they "hoped soon to get going again."

PROPOSALS APPROVED REVEALS DR. CODY

"and at the end of that time, an announcement will be made. We believe the students will feel the conference as satisfactory as we did when they know the contents of the report."

President Cody, Lieut.-Col. H. H. Madill and Lieut.-Col. W. S. Wilson left for Ottawa Sunday bearing proposals to be presented to the government. There they met with representatives from 18 other Canadian universities and a number of high officials in an effort to clarify the position of the universities in Canada's military set-up.

Assembled in the Board Room of the National Research Council, the 40 representatives discussed the matter in an all-day session.

Any Old Town

New York is just like any other town—a little bigger, perhaps, but just like any other town.

But a few years ago in a Brooklyn tavern, a rabid Dodger fan overheard a stranger severely criticizing his favorite baseball team and shot him dead on the spot.

And a large department store hired Salvador Dali to design its window displays some time ago and when Dali saw the crass commercial uses to which his art was being put he heaved himself through the plate glass window.

Every day one missing person is reported to the Missing Persons' Bureau and never found, and every other day a murder is committed and never solved.

Walking down 145th St. in Harlem you can see a large red truck making deliveries, with huge yellow letters proclaiming, "Peace, Father," and smaller letters telling that the owner of the truck is "Blessed Thomas, Coal and Coke."

The mayor of this town is Fiorello H. LaGuardia, a furious, active little man with a squeak. He appointed H. F. O'Brien to the Court of Domestic Relations, and then Justice O'Brien took the stump for the anti-British, pro-fascist groups. Queried, the Mayor answered, "I have made some pretty good appointments in my time, but when I make a mistake, it's a beast."

When the beautiful fantasy of the World's Fair was torn down, no one said a word, but when the unbelievably ugly elevated structure on Sixth Avenue was razed, they bemoaned the passing of a landmark.

Every mid Saturday afternoon sees young artists selling their wares on the open square in Greenwich Village. They are quiet, mild folk like you and me, but on Saturdays they don smoke and berets, speak big words and look exotic, or else no one will buy.

New York has the highest standard of living in the world and the highest per capita crime rating, the largest buildings and the lowest slums, twelve or thirteen colleges and universities and universal ignorance.

Up around Columbia University and the Juilliard School of Music are huge apartment houses whence come the sounds of clarinets, trumpets, violins and flutes practising, and several pianos playing dissonances as young composers seek new modes of expressing the same old stuff.

A musical called Crazy with the Heat opened a while ago, and closed fast. Then the producers broadcast that they were remaking the whole show, new lines, new scenes, new artists. Three weeks later the same Crazy with the Heat reopened, without a significant change. The show is a huge success.

People go to the motion pictures to complete their dinner-set, get books, pay the rent, and on the one chance in a thousand of winning at bingo. They sit home one evening a week waiting for a call from the Pot of Gold.

You can get a good seat for a Town Hall recital by paying $3.30. You can get a better one by buying a fifty-five cent ticket and slipping the usher half a dollar.

Three hundred square miles and seven and a half million people—it's a pretty big town, but otherwise just like any other.

But the appetizer stores on Upper Broadway advertise, "All this and hering, too."

And the newspaper PM received a letter from one Niccolo Macchiavelli, setting forth the theory of the omnipotence of the state and dated 1513 A.D. PM replied, "Dear Mr. Macchiavelli: We have forwarded your letter to the Opinion Department. Naturally, we cannot publish all the letters we receive, but we appreciate the friendly spirit . . ."

Seven and a half million people have their budgets slashed, their schools investigated, their municipal reforms vetoed and their liberties circumscribed by six million upstate Republicans who control the State Legislature.

The stalls on the East Side sell second-hand pipes and the tobacco stores on the Bowery buy second-hand cigarettes.

The Department of Sanitation trounced the Police Department in their annual baseball game last summer, so the Police investigated and found at least five professional baseball players on the payroll of the garbage and streets office.

ASCAP and BMI are having a whale of a fight about songs on the radio while Milton Berle suggests the formation of ASPCASCAP, the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, and F.P.A. writes, "How doth the busy BMI improve each shining half-hour?"

On Herald Square they have erected a magnificent pedestal supporting the old clock that used to stand atop the old Herald Building. Each hour, two metal figures strike hammers on a huge bronze bell; the notes are rich and deep. And every hour, on the hour, a crowd gathers to hear the bell being struck. But the clock has been stopped at ten-thirty for the past two weeks.

On the Grand Concourse in the Bronx marriage brokers hang out shiny brass shingles, "Satisfaction Guaranteed."

Park Avenue apartments proclaim eleven rooms and five baths, and their tenants go to Florida to bathe in the ocean.

People read digests and book-reviews, eat out of a machine in the Automat, spend two hours a day in a crowded, noisy subway train, buy their newspapers according to scare headlines, and weep over sob-sister specials, never visit Grant's Tomb or buy the New Yorker, and ignore No Smoking signs.

Movie houses on 42d St. show old pictures under new titles, and always attract a crowd which comes out in a few minutes muttering that they have seen that ages ago, and go again next week.

The Woolworth Building, the Chrysler Building, the Empire State Building, fifty nationalities and a hundred languages, all-night crowds on Broadway and double-decker Fifth Avenue Buses . . .

The road running through the campus of Columbia University is blocked off with a sign: "Street Closed—Children Playing."

New York is just like any other town, a little bigger, perhaps, but just like any other town.

Athletes to Live In Formal Guise At Vic Frolic

Replacing Scarlet and Gold sweaters and socks for formal evening attire, the athletes of Victoria College will be sport themselves on the floors of Wymilwood instead of the various playing fields, ice sheets, and greenhouses of the campus. The event is the at-home of the Vic Athletic Union when the college's muscle-men and their admirers will mix at their yearly frolic.

Rhythm-makers for the occasion are the oft-engaged Mel Hamill and his swingsters, who have been favourites on most of the Ontario camp. Dancing is to begin at nine o'clock following the dinner to be served in Burwash Hall.

At the dinner, Principal Brown, Honorary President of the Athletic Union, will present the nineteen men of the college who have won athletic awards during the present year with their "V's". Ten graduating women who have been outstanding in sports will receive athletic pins.

Ticket-buyers have been asked not to send corsages in view of the fact that flowers will be sold at the door, proceeds of which will go to the war fund of the V.C.U.

MacCALLUM WILL BE GUEST OF S.C.M. NOON-HOUR GROUP

Professor MacCallum of the Philosophy Dept. will be questioned by Margaret Grant, prominent Victoria College student, and associate-president of the V.C.U. on the problem "Is Christianity 'Other-worldly'?" All women undergraduates are invited to attend the meeting in the Sunroom at Wymilwood on Wednesday at 1:30 p.m.

This will be the final meeting in the Women's S.C.M. Noon-hour Series.

"We feel that this question is particularly important in view of the present situation," said Miss Grant. "Many people are interested in determining whether or not the principles of Christianity are relevant to our present needs." The committee in charge invites all students attending the meeting to take part in the "quiz".

let's go places

Now entering its third week at the Eglington is the feature English picture "Spy in the Pantry." It is a hilarious tale which might easily happen in the England of today, but the picture is marred by little faults in the directing.

The plot is one of mistaken identity—a young aviator wakes up in a hospital after an air crash and is mistaken for a spy by foreign agents. He finds he is a butler to a beautiful heiress and is greeted on arrival at the house by (a) a beautiful maid kissing him and (b) a second beautiful maid telling him she will meet him in his room in an hour. From there on the story unravels until of course the butler marries the heiress. Rex Harrison acts as well as the young butler and Karen Verne does a fairly good job as the heiress.

Four shorts complete the bill, making the whole program a varied and funny evening's entertainment.—F.H.

playing insight and a nice touch of character delineation.

Patonics this month concerns itself with a parody of "The Ancient Mariner" which lampoons two of The Varsity's most effervescent and ubiquitous freshie reporters. The only trouble with it is that they will probably be flattered. Douglas Feaver's "On Modern Poetry" is also mildly amusing, as is the anonymous "Nursery Rhyme Special."

The Art, Music and Drama section is sound, especially Betty McRae's discussion of the problems arising from a consideration of Saroyan's "The Time of Your Life," and also guest-writer Mavor Moore's treatise on Thurbur's "The Male Animal."

Acta Victoriana is getting steadily better. In fact, it's hardly any fun to review it any more.

contains the fate of several thousand students, for in it term and year marks are entered and added up.

All this work takes at least three weeks. As soon as the number of candidates for each exam is known, the process of making out a time-table for from 500 to 600 papers can be begun. Although careful co-operation is given by the whole office staff in the preliminary work, the final task of distributing those papers so no clashes will occur is a one-man job. Mr. A. T. Laidlaw, assistant registrar, who has always taken care of this, says he would be glad to get rid of it to anyone ready to offer. His worries include the seating capacity of rooms and the students who think the time-table should be adjusted to suit themselves.

In assigning pseudonyms, words similar in sound are eliminated to avoid confusion. Students have sometimes asked to have pseudonyms changed; what they want to avoid is bad luck.

MCCARTHY TO REPRESENT CANADA AS ENVOY TO U.S.

In 1902 he was made a King's Counsel, and from 1898 to 1908 he held the traditionally conservative seat of North Simcoe although a liberal.

Besides his position on the Board of Governors of the University of Toronto Mr. McCarthy is the president of Canada Life, a trustee of the Toronto General Hospital and a member of the Board of Governors of Ridley College. NEW SECTION FORMED FOR RED CROSS WORK

Cross nurses were sent. The new Commandant told the Varsity that it would not be likely that women from the university would join this section as undergraduates, because the classes could not be arranged to avoid conflicts as in the case of the W.S.T.D. "It is expected," she said, "that when the girls of the W.S.T.D. graduate, they will naturally enter some branch of the Women's Voluntary Service Corps; especially those in Home Economics and Household Science are likely to be valuable to the Food Administration Service."

ART OF MIDDLE AGES WAS ARCHITECTURE DECLARES COULTON

Former Cambridge Professor Lectures to Victoria College
Students in Last of Current Wednesday Series

ARTISTS ENJOYED WORK

"Artist life in the Middle Ages" was the topic of the lecture delivered by Dr. G. G. Coulton yesterday, in the last of the current series of lectures sponsored by Victoria College.

"The art of the Middle Ages was architecture, and all the other forms of art were, for the most part, subordinate to that," stated Prof. Coulton. He explained that at the time of the Norman Conquest the architecture was under the direction of the monasteries.

In the sixteenth century, those people possessing humanitarian ideas were inclined to join the masons' guilds as they were the most free to develop their own ideas, the speaker said. He added that in this way the term "free mason" arose, but pointed out that it was possible to be a free mason without being an active mason.

The speaker stressed that the medieval artist lived in a state of real equilibrium, that he was doing work which everybody understood and was interested in. The medieval artist was doing his "bread work" and the work he enjoyed at the same time, he continued.

Cyclist Answers "Heil Hitler" With Flipant "Hi"

A bicycle trip through western Europe was the subject of an address in German by Margaret Moffat at the meeting of the Teutonic Club last night.

Miss Moffat with a party of Americans cycled through Germany during August of 1939, and sailed for home the day of the invasion of Poland. While in Germany to avoid difficulties the party was requested to answer the "Heil Hitler" greeting in like manner but usually managed to pass it off as "Hi".

At the time, an intense press campaign against England was being carried on and Miss Moffat was frequently asked if she enjoyed living in Canada and how she had been treated in England. In the restaurants they were given plenty to eat—even butter—but they were provided with a separate menu.

A play directed by Prof. Boeschstein and solos in German by Vera Argament and Peggy Evoy completed the program.

Girls Must Learn to Sacrifice Warns Red Cross War Worker

"We have not even learned the meaning of sacrifice in Canada but we have to learn it to help win the war," said Mrs. Wallace Campbell, National Chairman of the Women's War Work of the Canadian Red Cross, speaking to a meeting of the university Red Cross at the Household Science building yesterday. Mrs. Campbell was introduced by Mrs. Cody.

Mrs. Campbell outlined the activities in which the women connected with the Women's War Service Committee of the university could take part. "The recent reports from England indicate how important your work can be, especially the clothing you supply. The clothing, quilts and blankets are especially acceptable to the civilian population. Second only to these is the woolen goods for the sailors. We can't

Commander From Navy Will Grant Interviews To Potential Officers

Prior to Becoming Sub-Lieutenants, Selected Candidates will Undergo Training at Halifax or Esquimaux

WILL TRAIN THREE MONTHS

Commander (E) W. W. Porteous, R.C.N., will visit the University of Toronto on Saturday, March 1st, for the purpose of interviewing suitable applicants for commissions in the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve. Interviews will be held at the Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall, from 9.30 to 12 noon on Saturday.

The following are the qualifications:

1. Must be British subjects.
2. Must be between the ages of 20 and 26 years.
3. Must have graduated or be in the fourth academic year in Mechanical, Electrical or Mining Engineering.
4. Must be physically fit in accordance with R.C.N.V.R. standards.

Selected candidates will undergo a medical examination at the nearest R.C.N.V.R. Headquarters, and if fit will be enrolled on the Divisional Strength as Probationary Sub-Lieutenants (E) R.C.N.V.R. They will be required to wear the uniform of their rank when on duty unless in exceptional circumstances it is not intended to call up Probationary Sub-Lieutenants on active service until they have graduated, and they will therefore be free to continue their studies while serving on Divisional Strength.

When Probationary Sub-Lieutenants are called up they will be sent to a training establishment at Halifax or Esquimaux for a three months preliminary course of intensive training, during which period they will receive the pay and allowances of a Sub-Lieutenant (E) R.C.N.V.R.

TRINITY STUDENTS BALK AT PRECEDENT

An unofficial slate for Hart House elections has been announced from Trinity College in opposition to the official Trinity slate which had been selected at a college meeting last Tuesday.

According to Paul Christie, secretary of the Trinity Board of Stewards, the upholders of the "unofficial" candidates are actually attempting to bring before the voters a group of candidates more truly "representative" than those selected under the somewhat specialized conditions of the college meeting.

"The tradition of noon-hour meetings for the nomination of official Trinity candidates has become for many years a fixed idea in the minds of Trinity students and we must register a most definite protest against this sudden breach in tradition of practice," declared A. H. Crosbie, caucus leader of the "Unofficial" party. The meeting in question had been held at night.

"I have nothing against any of these students who have chosen to set forth their nominations in this fashion as a group," announced Lloyd Delaney, Head of Trinity College. "But it has been impressed upon me that it is my duty to see that the official candidates continue to receive the support that was accorded them at the college meeting."

"The nomination meeting was exceptionally well attended and well advertised," continued Delaney, "and at the close of the meeting I pointed out that others might run since many were worthy to represent Trinity and I urged that men of the college support them."

SPEAKER DISCUSSES ADULT EDUCATION AT S.C.M. NOON-HOUR

Thought Uppermost in Minds of the General Public Today is Determination to Win the War

DISCIPLINED MINDS NEEDED

"What are Canadians thinking about today?" This question was discussed at the S.C.M. noon-hour talk yesterday by Dr. E. A. Corbett, director of the Canadian Association for Adult Education.

The speaker asserted that determination to win the war is uppermost in the public mind; the second decision which people are making is that the new social and economic system will better represent the true ideals of democracy than the present administrations under which men are free, but too poor to develop their possibilities.

"Our working plan is based on the idea that new and permanent changes in the social system will not come through wishful thinking," the speaker said, referring to the adult education scheme. "If we are to have a country such as we dream of, it can only come through the long thought of disciplined minds, when education has become a dynamic force."

HONORABLE PETER HEENAN TO ADDRESS FORESTERS AT THEIR ANNUAL BANQUET

The Hon. Mr. Peter Heenan, Ontario Minister of Lands and Forests, will be the guest speaker March 4 when men of the Foresters' Club's Annual Banquet, it was announced last night by Graham Hadley, president of the club.

Other speakers will be President H. J. Cody, who will introduce the minister, and Dean C. D. Howe, head of the faculty. Foresters will meet in the East Common Room of Hart House at 6.45 p.m. and dinner will be held in the Great Hall.

U.C. LIT ELECTIONS DRAW NEAR CLIMAX

With election posters covering all available wall space in the Rotunda and Junior Common Room, and with candidates evincing more bonhomie and love of their fellow men than at any other time in the college year, the University College Literary and Athletic Society annual elections swing into their last 36 hours of frenzied campaigning this morning.

Although U.C. elections are traditionally devoid of the fanfare which marks those of some of the other colleges and faculties, enthusiasm is at a high pitch this year, C. L. Dubin, Literary Director, said yesterday.

"Many of the younger men are showing great interest in their college's welfare this year," he said. "The Lit executive is pleased by the large number of candidates for office, the majority of whom are well qualified for the positions they seek. It is essential that we have a strong executive next year, to guide the Lit. through the trying times which lie ahead. The electorate has before it an excellent selection of men. But it is essential that every man in the college casts a vote in the election, for it is only by having adequate representation of student opinion that we will elect the strongest possible executive."

Ballots will be cast in the Junior Common Room tomorrow from 11 a.m. to 2:15 p.m. Men must show a university registration card to vote.

President Cody to Confer Honorary Degrees At Special Convocation

SUNDAY CONCERT

Eighty single tickets which will admit men students only to the Sunday Evening Concert to be held on Sunday next 2nd March at 9 p.m. in the Great Hall of Hart House will be issued from the hall porter's desk after 1 p.m. today. This concert will be given by the Hart House Glee Club.

Hon. Albert Mathews, Hon. J. P. Moffat, Air Marshall Bishop and Sir Gerald Campbell to Receive Degrees

TO BE HELD MARCH 7

President Cody will confer the degree of Doctor of Laws (honoris causa) upon four dignitaries at a special convocation to be held in Convocation Hall on Friday, March the 7th.

Those who will receive the degree are The Honourable Albert Matthews, Lieutenant Governor of Ontario, The Honourable Jay Pierrepont Moffat, United States Minister to Canada, The Honourable Sir Gerald Campbell, Minister of the British Embassy, Washington and Air Marshall William Avery Bishop, Chairman of the Honorary Air Advisory Committee to the Minister of National Defence. Each of the recipients will address convocation.

Tickets admitting students to Convocation Hall may be obtained now from the S.A.C. office in Hart House. As accommodation is limited, students should obtain their tickets immediately. Any tickets remaining by Wednesday the 3rd of March will be turned back to admit the general public.

Library Night Brings Talk By English Actor

This month's guest speaker at the regular Hart House Library Evening, to be held in the Hart House library at 8:15 this evening, will be Robertson Davies, Literary Editor of Saturday Night, former actor on the London stage. His informal talk will be on "Play Reading as Related to the Theatre." After the talk there will be a discussion on any features of the drama that may interest the gathering.

Mrs. Davies' experience as an actor, critic and writer on topics concerning the theatre, make him well equipped to discuss the theatre. He has acted in the Old Victoria Theatre in London as well as in others taking roles covering a wide field in drama. Born in Canada, he received his university education at Oxford and returned to Canada only a year ago to take his present post with Saturday Night.

GLEE CLUB

Members of the Hart House Glee Club are asked to meet at 8.30 p.m. in the Music Room on Sunday next 2nd March, previous to the Sunday Evening Concert. Those who have not yet called at the Warden's office for their invitations to the concert are requested to do so immediately.

Young Composer Conducts Concert By Varsity's Symphony Orchestra

Under the distinguished patronage of President and Mrs. Cody, the University Symphony is to give its annual concert in Convocation Hall tonight at 8:15. Godfrey Ridout, young Toronto composer and conductor, will be on the conductor's stand with Gwendolyn Duchemin, pianist, as soloist.

The orchestra's annual concerts (this will be the seventh) have been a very popular feature on the campus. It is one of the two symphony orchestras in Canada whose membership is made up of university students. The programs have always in the past proved most interesting.

This year the orchestra has obtained the services of Godfrey Ridout after the resignation of the regular conductor, Don Ryerson. Ridout's works have been gaining recognition in both Canada and the United States. His duties on the podium have included engagements in Ottawa.

Besides Gwendolyn Duchemin at the piano in the Beethoven piano concerto No. 4, the program will feature a group of songs sung by Jean Letourneau, tenor. Other numbers on the program will be Mozart's overture to the "Marriage of Figaro", the ballet music from "Rosamunde" by Schubert, Beethoven's "Egmont" overture and Haydn's "London" symphony.

There will be a collection in aid of the British War Victims Fund.

Problems in Education

Strange things go on at meetings of home and school clubs, trustee meetings and the like. It has always seemed to us that a logical solution to school problems would be to let the people who know about those things decide what ought to be done. But instead the mothers and the trustees hold debates over them as if the correct solution can be arrived at by accepting the opinion of the majority. The opinion of the majority could not be expected to be any better than the opinion of one, in cases where no one actually knows the inside workings of the educational system, the enormous research that has gone on in that field in recent years, and the amazing contributions which psychology has made to improve education and to solve its problems. When there are people who do know these things, it seems foolish to allow these who themselves have no actual contact with education to settle its problems.

A minor case of what we consider lack of information on the subject took place at one such meeting a few days ago, where the proposal was put forth that advanced classes be established for gifted children in Toronto schools. It was explained by the advocate that it was not meant to advance children beyond their years, but rather to add more work to the general curriculum so that gifted children would be kept mentally activated, all of which would seem quite logical and in keeping with recent educational discoveries. The system has already been put into practice in many private schools.

It was objected to by another member, however, on the grounds that it might result in intellectual snobbery. "What's going to happen when these forward children get out into the world with the hoi-polloi?" he asked. Evidently the objector does not know that extremely intelligent pupils who are forced to idle along in their studies at a pace set for them by the duller pupils in the class are at a great disadvantage. Often they lose interest in their work and are the cause of trouble in their classes. It is only fair to them and to the others in their class that they should be allowed to advance at a fairly decent pace.

One Benefit

London has benefited in at least one respect from the war, according to the latest crime statistics issued from there. The crime curve has dropped approximately ten per cent.

A large number of circumstances have combined to produce this decrease, most of them fairly obvious. The transfer of large numbers of children from London to the country has reduced the number of crimes among the younger element. Hundreds of men who might normally have turned into criminals have been drafted into the army, instead of being left on the breadline until being tempted into crime.

Among the crimes that are committed, automobile thefts have dropped and bicycle thefts have risen—a circumstance attributed by police to the difficulty in obtaining gasoline. Smash and grab raids have almost died out because, as one officer explained, most of the shop windows are already smashed. The professional housebreaker seems to have disappeared from the London scene, and the vice squad has also had its work considerably reduced. There has been little serious crime, although one man took advantage of an air raid to murder his wife in a shelter.

An interesting feature of the report is the fact that crime increased by about five per cent in the few months preceding the war, attributed to the fact that the police were preoccupied with preparing for the war.

Youth Petition

Three hundred and fifty university students in the States have presented a petition to their government asking for full American support to the forces fighting nazism. The students represent many American colleges.

The plea, headed "Youth Petition to Congress," says: "Speaking as young Americans under thirty-six, we wish to urge upon Congress our deep conviction that it is vital to our own future that America give full support to the forces fighting nazism today.

"If nazism triumphs, we believe that we, and our future children, will spend our lives in a world of groaning armaments, enormous taxes and unleashed hate, a world in which every weapon of propaganda and economic pressure will be used in an attempt to rob us of our American way of life.

"Older people can buy a few years of comparative truce by appeasement. It is our generation that would pay for these years by living an impoverished life in an utterly hostile world, or by appeasing nazism more and more until we had completely surrendered our free heritage.

"We are not afraid of the consequences of giving the enemies of nazism everything they need to secure victory. We are desperately afraid of the consequences of giving too little and too late. We call upon Congress to give his quick, vigorous leadership that will prove to the world that democracy can move as fast as dictatorship and that the future lies in our hands."

Hitler's Weapons

Nearly six months have passed since Adolf Hitler told a wildly cheering crowd in Berlin's Sportpalast that an invasion of the British islands was imminent. "The people of England," he said with scorn, "are very curious and ask: 'Why in the world don't you come?' And his answer was: 'We are coming.'"

He did his best to come. On the day he spoke these words, an afternoon early last September, the German air force had just begun its series of furious daylight and day-long attacks on Britain—attacks in which, according to Germany's own claims, as many as 2,000 planes were used against a single objective. Those attacks were beaten back. The losses inflicted on the German air force by the R.A.F. were so heavy that Hitler halted his daylight raids. Not since last September has he made another attack by day with anything remotely like the numbers he then used.

Day before yesterday Hitler spoke again to the German people. This time there was no prediction in his speech of an early invasion of Britain. There was no repetition of his bitter joke at the expense of the British people: "Keep your shirts on—he is coming." There was no boast, as there was last September, that the Luftwaffe can "drop 150,000, 180,000, 300,000, 400,000 kilograms of bombs and more" on British cities in a single day whenever it chooses to do so. There was, instead, the promise of a new submarine campaign.

Hitler cannot be trusted in anything he says, or fails to say. It is quite possible that his failure now even to mention the possibility of an invasion and his failure to boast of German air power as the decisive factor in this war are intended deliberately to divert attention from plans he has in view. Nevertheless, for what his words are worth, from the point of view of the morale of the German people, it is at least significant that he now promises no early end of the war, to be achieved by a miraculous new weapon. His emphasis is back on the same old weapons of the same old regime that once before led the German people to complete disaster: the submarine and the slow war of attrition.—The New York Times.

(The Varsity hereby reprints a letter from the Department of National Defence to the Caput)

Dear 'Sirs:

It has been brought to our attention that you of the University have within your possession something which will be of immeasurable value to the defence of Canada and the British Empire. It was brought to our attention only last week when upon visiting your campus, we dropped into Hart House, and entered the Pool Room.

Imagine our amazement, when we walked into a smoke screen so perfect and so dense, that we couldn't see our cue in front of us. This smoke screen is far superior to the one we are at present using for coastal defence purposes, so we are asking for the formula. We predict that the Hart House Pool Room smoke screen (which will hereafter be known as Ch3Sch22) will revolutionize modern warfare and will someday replace gas. If the students who create this smoke screen are available, and we understand that Pass Arts students are usually available, we will immediately offer them commissions.

As soon as these men are commissioned, we intend to set up their tables and cue chalks upon the shores of Britain, and they can scratch on the pink ball to their heart's content while their only duty will be to make that unbelievable pool-room smoke screen.

Trusting to hear from you soon.

Dept. of Nat'l Defence.

Perfect Balance

Dr. Arnold Walter's Compositions

There is a composer in Toronto now, a man who has produced some really fine chamber music in the last two years. Dr. Arnold Walter, after his unsettled career of shuttling from Sudetenland to Germany whence in 1933 to Spain, later to England and finally to Canada, is now, in the relative peace of this country, bringing forth some real works of art.

Last night at the Art Gallery a recital was given of the works composed since his arrival in this country. The first item was a Sonata in B Minor for Violin and Piano, which was written for the most part during a motor trip down the St. Lawrence Valley and around the Gaspé Coast. It has already been played several times in Toronto and its balance of form and mood, which is a characteristic of all his music, makes it improve with every hearing, although last night's performance did not seem to be so smooth as others I have heard. Harry Adaskin seems to have a strident tone which lacks the liquid quality of more finished violinists. The four movements are in different moods with the added feature of balancing contrasts within each one, giving the listener a carefully planned and complete diet of melody against a vivid harmonic background.

The sonata is the earliest of the compositions on the program and though complete in its way it lacks the finish and balance between instruments that was developed in the later works.

Next played were three soprano songs with piano, violin and 'cello accompaniment. The first two, based on old English religious verse, were done in a beautifully plaintive mode, Frances James' smooth soft tones leading a glimmering cascade amid a maze of imitative instrumental melodies. The third one was an intensely dramatic modern setting of John Donne's Hymn to God

"How does it feel to be the lion of the party?"
"It's just like getting Sweet Caps from home!"

the Father, in which Miss James had to balance powerful dissonant counterpoint with equally powerful emotional melody. After the intermission Cornelius Ysselstyn played Dr. Walter's cello and piano sonata with the composer at the piano, as he was throughout the program. It is a delightful little work but in parts too much volume from the piano coincided with fast passages on the 'cello, which showed that the 'cello is really made for the powerful and expressive melody line at which Mr. Ysselstyn is so successful.

Then came the treat of the evening, the Trio in A Minor for violin, 'cello and piano. The composition gives a constant stream of melodies to each of the three instruments, and the three performers, Dr. Walter, Harry Adaskin and Cornelius Ysselstyn, were all thoroughly warmed up to it. In this work the piano ceases to be a mere painter of violent harmonic backgrounds, as it is in the earlier works, and becomes (Continued on Page 4)

Speaking OF SPORT

By Pro and Con

CAN THE ALL-STARS TAKE ST. MIKE'S?

Warren Stevens doffed his coat and went to work where he left off last winter—coaching the Big Blue eagles. We stood by, tearing hair out of the head in handfists at the thought of this bunch of fellows, who turned out in full force for their first drill yesterday in preparation for their impending clash with the St. Mike's City League hoopers, forced to the sidelines by the loss of intercollegiate sport. But hair-tearing aside, the question at hand concerning this major athletic event of the year is: Can the Galloping Geals stop this formidable aggregation of All-Stars?

Mac: My bid, boy? I'll take the All-Stars, by four baskets.

Quig: And from what mysterious oracle do you draw this sagacious information? It's a cinch for the Irish.

Mac: I admit you've got a case there. Quig, but all you need to do is look over the All-Star personnel. Shall I start naming them alphabetically?

Quig: Don't bother, Mac. They look good on paper, but it's team-work that counts and Coach Bill O'Brien has his Double-Blue in top form.

Mac: You've got the drop on me there. But for that matter a lot of the All-Stars have played together. Witness O.C.E., who had three representatives out last night, and one still to come, and Bill Fountain and Ken Hoyle, who have worked together all fall. Sammy Stellman, of the Y.M.H.A. squad, struck up quite a passing combination with Charlie Prince and Charlie Belchamber after only a couple of minutes. Steve will know how to pick his team when it comes down to who is going to combine the best.

Quig: But your strong point remains in uncertain individual performances. Jack Lavarnway, Bill Roberts, Fran Matthews have all starred for Warren Stevens. But there isn't a better ball player in Varsity than young Mike Padden. Jack Casey and Jack Luddy aren't far behind. They're born ball-dawgs.

Mac: There, boy, you've hit a tender spot. Mike's good, but in an All-Star aggregation such as this one, he'd be left out where the trade winds blow. Charlie Belchamber still gets my vote as Varsity's No. 1 ball-handler, but you would find as many different opinions on this point as there are candidates. Bill Fountain, Hal Axon, Don Findlayson, Sammy Stellman, or Ivor Wynne are no slouches. As individuals they can take care of any Gael, and as a team they'll do the same. And look at the reserves, boy. Did you notice those newcomers, Red Heinbuch, Bill Scott, Tetman, Parchello, and especially that willowy wonder, Gibson? Those boys are hot, and what's more, they've been playing all fall, mostly with city teams.

Quig: I can see that you'll be convinced only after Saturday's game. With Willie Roberts feeding a hot Lavarnway, Padden or Casey, Steve's stars will run out of steam before the final whistle.

Mac: Not Steve's boys. This is their one-and-only chance to peddle their wares before the university, and they don't intend to fall down. That scrimmage last night was a pleasure to watch. Running headlong into a red-hot bunch that has experience and stamina, St. Mike's is due for a scorching.

Quig: Speaking of stamina, Mac, O'Brien led his youngsters through a gruelling City League schedule and in their meeting with O.C.E. they out-distanced the Pedagogues. Condition is the least of O'Brien's worries.

Mac: Okay, so everybody has stamina; you have the edge in team-work, I'll stick by my individuals. Let's see how it turns out.

Quig: Okay, Mac. Let the players settle it themselves.

Spice Added to Competition By Elimination of Physical Education

School to Climax Present Series Of Varsity Nites

School plays host to the university Saturday night in Hart House as the curtain goes up on the last University Night. The Engineers are promising to provide a fitting climax to the series, which, judging from attendance figures, have been extremely successful.

A three-hour program for the pool has been arranged, and includes the triangular pre-school meet of U.T.S., U.C.C. and Ridley, a Varsity co-ed display of trick and ornamental swimming and diving, Varsity intercollegiate star handicap relay with Varsity girl stars, a canoe-tilting tournament, an important interfaculty water polo game and possibly comedy diving by a team now being selected by Varsity Coach Winst McCatty.

In the big gym St. Mike's City League basketballers will take on a Varsity all-star aggregation and Senior Meds meet Senior School in a crucial interfaculty set-to for the Group I leadership.

In the upper gym Bud Porter, ex-junior badminton champ of Ontario and his doubles partner Bob McAuley will compete in an exhibition bird match. School is planning a number of novelty events, and usually reliable sources report that one of these is to be chemical magic.

The girls of Occupational Therapy are acting as co-hosts and are bending their efforts to put across the square dancing; they promise experienced devotees of the barnyard boogie-woogie for each set, fiddlers with a couple of novelty numbers thrown in.

U.C. Team Wins Competition by One Point Margin Over St. Hilda's with Total of 43 to 42

VIC RUNS THIRO

By Marg Foulds

Last night certainly proved that the elimination of a Physical Education team from interfaculty swim competition was a move for the good, as far as adding spice and some real competition to the affair. That meet, last night, was the best staged in years and this may be why—

U.C. won, by one point. St. Hilda's took an early lead with Freddie Baxter and Helen Carthy ranking 1st and 2nd in the Ornamental, and Joan Griffith taking the diving by a wide margin. U.C. gained on relays and the breast-stroke event which went to Charlotte Hahn and Betty Mortimer. It was only on the last race, the 100 yard Relay, that U.C. overcame St. Hilda's one point lead and took the championship with 43 points to St. Hilda's 42.

Vic came next with 11 points, and O.T. & P. trailed with 3. Considering relative sizes of faculties, however, we think O.T. & P. did all right.

Individual honours go to Freddie Baxter of St. Hilda's. Joan Griffiths, also of St. Hilda's, ran up 11 points to trail Freddie by 4, and Bea Harrison of Vic was 3rd with 9.

Results—
Plunge: Betty Mortimer, U.C., 67' 1" (record 68'4"), Helen Franks, St. Hilda's, Doris Fenner, Vic.
Medley Relay: U.C., St. Hilda's, Vic.

Style: Freddie Baxter, St. Hilda's, Bea Harrison, Vic, Marg Stock, U.C. Diving: Joan Griffiths, St. Hilda's, Bea Harrison, Vic, Marg Stock, U.C. Free Style: Dot Hobson, U.C., Barb Bott, U.C., Joan Carthy, U.C.

50 yd. Backstroke: Bobbie McDonald, U.C., Marion Vanstone, U.C., Joan Franks, St. Hilda's.
50 yd. Breast stroke: Marion Hahn, U.C. 42.5 (Intercollegiate time), Betty Mortimer, U.C., Joan Griffiths, St. Hilda's.

100 yds. Relay: U.C., St. Hilda's, O.T. & P.

Ornamental (swum Monday): Freddie Baxter, St. Hilda's, Helen Carthy, St. Hilda's, Jackie Scott, O.T. & P. Intercollegiate competition champions will be declared when results have been exchanged between McMaster, McGill, Western, Queen's and Varsity.

Dates for Playoffs for Eckhardt Cup Announced Last Night; to be Completed by March 10

WINTERBURN TO REFEREE

St. Mike's and Vic waterpoloists face elimination today as they tangle in a replay of a protested game at five and a half balls in the mad scramble for second place in Group I, which means a play-off slot. A win for either assures the victor of at least one more game, with U.C., who also faces elimination when she hooks up with Senior Meds Saturday night.

Dates for all water polo play-offs were announced last night by Mac McCutcheon. On Monday, March 3, at five, Senior Meds meet Senior School in a sudden-death match, and at five-thirty the winner of the U.C.-St. Mike's-Vic tussle will run into Emmanuel, winners of Group II. In the event of a deadlock in Group I, the issue will be settled Monday at five-thirty, and the winner will engage Emmanuel on Tuesday in a sudden-death encounter. The final, for possession of the Eckhardt Cup, will be a two-out-of-three affair, staged on Wednesday and Friday, March 5 and 7. If a third game is necessary, it will be played on Monday, March 10.

Bill Winterburn was the unanimous choice of the team managers to referee all play-off games.

Freddie Baxter and U.C. had their day, last night as the Interfaculty Swim

Meet drew to a close. This year, the competition was one of the most keenly-fought affairs in recent years, and it was good. See elsewhere.

The Interfaculty Badminton Tournament closed the second round today.

Officials are hoping that the finals will be reached by next Tuesday. We are about to look into this slightly-delayed affair. See you tomorrow.

The hockey schedule came to a close yesterday, leaving St. Hilda's

2 points ahead of U.C. and U.C. but 1 point ahead of O.T. &amp; P. Ra-ther close.

Friday at 1 o'clock in the Varsity

The Canadian Campus

By Don Black

Staff Writer, Dalhousie Gazette

A Canadian University Press Feature

Comes mid-term and a wave of boredom sweeps across the country from Atlantic to Pacific with college news-papers outdoing each other in securing staffs from various societies, faculties, etc. The McGill Daily leads the Canadian papers with a special issue approximately every other day put out by some society or other. The players guild, the commerce men and the cads have each taken a shot at journalism.

The Silhouette from McMaster and Manitoba are throwing an edition at the co-eds soon. Not to be outdone, the Queen's Journal appears with a special section edition (engineers to you). Outstanding in the engineers effort were some humorous jokes that will shortly be appearing all across the country (see your local paper for time and station). A parody on a certain well-known C.U.P. columnist entitled Pie Eyed An Got 'Em by Raving Funk topped them all.

The discontented journalists not only are getting other people to do their work, they are doing other people's to relieve the monotony. Even Larry Smith of Varsity and President of C.U.P. has taken a shot at Hither and Yon in his paper. Some O'Mara guy writes it once a month when nobody else will do it for him.

Special editions bring to mind cuts of various Sadie Hawkins activities that appeared with St. Valentine's or thereabouts. Eastern girls are undoubtedly pugnacious, and we do mean pugnacious, when it comes to getting their men. Witness a picture of girls at Mount Allison chasing their loves with fixed bayonets on service rifles. At Acadia a good replica of a scalp party was in progress when the Athenaeum camera-man appeared on the scene. In any event the timid male was giving in to the gentle caressing of a hatchet. NICE GIRLS!!!

Drama is at its height across Canada. In the West it is Gilbert and Sullivan. In the East it is high comedy (in some cases we do mean high!) At Dalhousie it is Philip Barry's Spring Dance; Good Morning Bill, by P. G. Wodehouse went well at McGill; while Charley's Aunt was staged at Queen's.

War effort goes on all over the place. War Savings campaigns are being carried on on most campuses. The I.S.S. is making a nation-wide appeal for funds and this has met with good response nearly everywhere. At U.N.B. they are selling a flag pole bit by bit and making a nice thing out of it for war work.

Canada's college journals have now two of their number piloted by women. The Brunswickian recently passed into the hands of the fair sex while the Dalhousie was taken over by female co-ordinators at the beginning of the new year. Wars and rumors of wars are certainly making imprints on our journals.

We hate to think of anyone as being just slightly childish but the other day a full page display of DOLLS in the Gateway had us stopped. Was it a co-ed war effort, a class in child psychology or something? Apparently it was just an exhibit of dolls, with full wardrobes and everything (Gee we were touched) that were being given public showing to swell war funds.

Also from the Gateway comes the most morbid thought of the year — at the top of the front page "Nine Weeks to Examinations". And to think that they shoot clay pigeons.

"The Tower", an American paper from Catholic U., Washington, D.C., gives us a slant on the ASCAP/BMI fight. That's the legal battle which gives you the "I Hear a Rhapsody-Georgia-You're The One-Jennie With the Light Brown Hair" sequence every time you tune to an American radio station, in case you didn't know. The colleagues who like music, long hair or low brow, are getting just about enough of it, according to their comment which ranges from Boston to Nebraska. Constitutional rights will be invoked and everything else if these people don't soon start to settle their differences.

"L'Affaire de Bert Yates" at McGill is growing into quite an affair at that university if the reports emanating from Montreal are true. It seems that Bert was fired from his job in the McGill Union because he was inefficient. Union President MacDonald said so and union presidents should know. However, the deep sympathy that students have for the permanent staff of institutions of learning asserted itself and a demand became clear for Bert's reinstatement.

We have a feeling that McGill does not know the full significance of this. What if an alumnus just rolling in what it takes comes back and finds that Bert had been shoved out into the cold world by a bunch of young whipper-snappers? Requests to the college would fall, debts rise and then fees would go up and where would the students be? McGill Unionists or whatever they call themselves don't know what they are in for. Let's all pull for Bert because he's been there 14 years, and anyone that can stay in these madhouses that we call universities that long and do any work at all must be a great guy.

V.C.U. OPEN MEETING TO LEGISLATE TODAY ON ELECTRICITY

Nominations for Victoria College Societies Close Monday; Elections to be Held March 7th

CAMPAGNING CHANGED

The Victoria College Union will hold an open meeting today in Alumni Hall at 1 p.m., it was announced last night. The amendment to the Campaign Rules will be re-read at this meeting. Kirkland, vice-president of the V.C.U., said.

W.S.T.D. Hears Talk on Bomb Raids

Another in the series of A.R.P. lectures was given last night by Mr. West on "High Explosives and the Protection of Homes".

He discussed various types of explosives and their effectiveness at different ranges. His next topic was the designing of air raid shelters, their locations and the hazards that may be encountered.

Private houses suggest two or three locations. The basement is preferable if the enemy is attacking with high explosives, but if there is a danger of a gas attack the first floor is better. Choose the most strongly constructed room in the house. The windows should be few in number and protected by sandbags.

The size of the shelters depends on the number of occupants. Seventy-five square feet of surface area should be allowed per person for a period of six hours' enclosure. It is necessary that shelters should not be too near water mains, gas pipes and electric wires. Each shelter should have an emergency exit. Food, clothing, first aid kits and decontamination materials should be provided. Amusement and recreation are also very useful to people waiting for long hours under nervous strain.

The main thing for each individual to do in an air raid is to prevent himself from becoming a casualty. Mr. West gave several rules to be followed during emergencies. Then he finished by reading a letter an A.R.P. warden had sent to the citizens in a small town in England giving full instructions for duties in air raids.

All members of Hart House Committees are asked to report to the Comptroller's office as soon as possible regarding the elections.

Closing of Campus Coffee Shop Shocks Entire Student Body

By Elizabeth Serson

Today we mourn the passing of an institution. The "Campus" is no more. Last January, it closed its doors on shocked habitués and left the equipment was sold at auction.

The Campus Coffee Shop was a tradition. Three generations of students have gathered there to sit at the table of the opposite booth and argue philosophy at the top of their lungs. There they met their friends and had their phone messages left. They monopolized the morning for coffee at eleven, stayed free phone at the desk. They arrived in for lunch, talked away the afternoon until tea-time at five, and—if you went back at eleven at night—you might see the same people, still talking. Varsity night editors used to gather there to mull over a midnight milk shake.

A great deal of university life flowed through the Campus. Many a love affair blossomed and withered beneath its roof. And the Campus had a right to hold a central part in university life. It was the idea of a medical student, an idea that put him through college. He ran it in partnership with yesterday's night editors used to gather there to mull over a midnight milk shake.

Seventh Annual Concert Held in Convocation Hall By University Symphony

Disease is Topic Of R.C.I. Lecture By Col. Deadman

Hamilton Pathologist to Illustrate Talk with Movies on the Procedures of Clinical Laboratories

Lieut.-Col. W. J. Deadman, Pathologist at the Hamilton General Hospital, will deliver a lecture, illustrated by a motion picture demonstrating procedures in a clinical laboratory, to the Royal Canadian Institute in Convocation Hall on March 1. The subject of the address is to be "Scientific Aspects to the Diagnosis of Disease".

Col. Deadman, a graduate of the university and member of the senate, served during the last war in England, Egypt and Macedonia. For the first few months of the present war he acted as officer in charge of the Royal Canadian Air Force Medical Boards.

Y.C.L. Pamphlets Appear at U.B.C.

Vancouver, B.C., Feb. 27 (CUP)—The Young Communist League have circulated anti-war pamphlets in the University of British Columbia campus. Charging that the Student Council has done nothing to withstand "the March of Fascism", in the form of compulsory military training, the pamphlets state that many students are not in favour of an imperialist war. The pamphlets have been mailed to students' homes, and authorities have as yet been unable to trace the senders.

Glee Club Gives Sunday Concert

In the Great Hall of Hart House, at 9:00 Sunday evening, the Hart House Glee Club under the direction of its permanent conductor, Dr. Charles Peaker, F.R.C.O., will present the concluding concert in the Sunday evening series. This will be the third performance of the season for the Glee Club, concerts having previously been given at Christmas when the Glee Club broadcasted coast to coast, and last week in Hamilton when the same program was will be presented Sunday evening as given.

Between the first two and the last two groups of songs two piano solos will be played by the club's pianist, Howard Brown of Victoria College.

Student Orchestra, Directed by Godfrey Ridout, Drew Audience of Over Two Hundred Last Night

FEATURE HAYON SYMPHONY

The University Symphony Orchestra gave its seventh annual concert last night at Convocation Hall under Godfrey Ridout, young Canadian composer.

The audience numbered over 200, with a sprinkling of uniformed men and coeds doing their knitting.

First half of the program began with the "Marriage of Figaro" overture by Mozart, followed by the first movement of the Beethoven fourth piano concerto with Gwendolyn Duchemin as soloist. Schubert's Rosamunde Ballet Music rounded out this portion.

After intermission the orchestra played the Egmont overture of Beethoven. Jean Letourneau, student at the Conservatory, sang a group of songs by Lully, Lortournau, and Massenet. Mr. Letourneau encored with Angèle by Debussy.

The Haydn "London Symphony" finished the program, with the last movement repeated by request.

HART HOUSE RECITAL

Clifford Poole, of the well-known piano team of Hallett and Poole, will be guest artist at the Recital at 8 p.m. today in the Music Room, Hart House. This will be the last recital of this year's series and the program will be as follows:

Intermezzo in C Major ..... Brahms
Intermezzo in E Flat Minor
Rhapsody in G Minor

Claire de Lune ..... Debussy
Waltz in G Flat ..... Chopin
Prelude in A Major ..... Chopin
The Arkansas Traveller ..... Guion

Three Two-part Inventions .... Bach Choral Prelude
Chromatic Fantasy and Fugue

LAYTEX COATED CRAYFISH ARE LATEST NOVELTY

In answer to the maiden's eternal prayer for novelty, Tom Stovell and D'Arcy Lay, down at the Biology Building, have designed something new in the way of a novelty pin. A real, honest-to-goodness crayfish!

Ridiculous? No. Too fragile? No. You see, these crayfish are dipped in laytex (liquid rubber), in fact they receive 3 or 4 dippings and are really quite durable. To demonstrate just how durable, Mr. Stovell (universally known as "Tommy" around the Biology Building) took one of the "fish" that had received extra dipping and bounced it off the wall as one would a rubber ball, apparently making no impression on the crayfish, and tweaked another's leg, just to show the curious Varsity reporter how it snapped back into place.

Not only were these pins one real, live crayfish, but, if you don't like the natural colour of late crayfish, or if it doesn't "go" with your costume, why you can have it in any colour you please, blue, lobster, red, green, purple, they have them all. The most popular, however, according to Mr. Stovell, are red and natural. If so desired, the pins could be done in varied colours, but it hasn't been attempted yet, he admitted. The eyes of the pins are artificial, yellow and blue for the red ones, and yellow and red for the others.

Preferences are expressed and humoured not only in the colour of the pins but also in the attitude of the little animals. Most girls prefer the "fish" in combat position, declaring that they look more real, but the more timid ones prefer something less ferocious looking. The "fish" have to be pinned out with 15 or 20 pins in whatever position is desired and dried like this before the laytex is put on. The first coat of laytex contains the colour, the additional ones are transparent and the finished product is shockproof to ensure durability. The young men are selling these pins and up to now well 25 or 30 have been sold. They keep night 50 in stock, including their whole repertoire of col-

SOCIAL YEAR ENOS AS ROYAL COLLEGIANS HOLD LAST DANCE

Last Big-Scale Dance of U.C. Juniors, Seniors to be Held at Eaton's Auditorium Tonight

AVONDE TO SUPPLY MUSIC

Tonight in Eaton's Auditorium University College students will indulge in their final large-scale dance of the season as the Junior-Senior climaxes the current social year.

Swinging in mad tempo, the revelers in the Royal Collegians will make one final attempt to forget the cares of academic existence before swinging down the home stretch for the examining period.

Results of the Lit and W.U.A. elections will be announced at the dance. Tickets will be on sale in U.C. today and may also be obtained at the door tonight.

Trinity Split Over Elections

"Resolved that the Trinity College Literary Institute should support the unofficial Trinity candidates in the Hart House elections" is to be the topic of a debate to be staged at 7:15 tonight in the west common room of Trinity House.

The debate arises out of the current controversy over the "schism" between two parties in the college, one of which is supporting an "official" slate of candidates, and the other the "unofficial" candidates.

The officialists' stand was summed up by J. H. Martin, II, Trinity, who said, "I think it is outrageous that the least responsible members of the college should so set themselves up to represent it. The 'rebels', headed by A. H. Crosbie, ATL, and M. A. Clarkson, 474, claim that the official list is not truly representative of Trinity."

Feminine disinterest in the split was evident in the remark of Marg Hogarth, I, Trinity, who remarked, as is her wont when interviewed by The Varsity, "Tell me what it's all about, and I'll make a bright remark."

ours and ranging from an inch and a half long to 4 inches long (including claws). The natural ones are more expensive because they have to be specially selected, for, as in many other cases, a little bit of colouring hides a multitude of sins. If the demand increases the producers of these novelties may print slogans on the backs of the "fish". Something appropriate, like "Don't be a crab: There'll always be an England" suggested Mr. Stovell.

REGISTRAR'S NOTICE

Students registered in the Faculty of Arts are reminded that tomorrow, Saturday, March 1st, is the last day for filing applications for the annual examinations.

Forms of application may be obtained at the Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall, or at the offices of the College Registrars.

ST. MICHAEL'S CHOOSES AMERICAN REPRESENTATIVE AS SCHOLARSHIP CANDIDATE

An American student has been chosen as the St. Michael's College representative for the Moss Scholarship. Thomas C. McDermott, of Rochester, N.Y., who has been chosen as the representative, is very active in sport circles and in the drama society.

McDermott lately directed and portrayed the title role in the "Bishop of Castile". He has also been elected to the permanent executive of 471 for St. Michael's. Edward Crawford has been elected president, Glenn O'Gorman secretary, Larry O'Brien vice-president, Evelyn Gore treasurer.

Plans for a graduation party, which is to be held at the Brant Inn if it is repaired by that time, have been made. The party is to take place the night following the Graduation Ball.

U.C. Athletes To Receive Awards At Annual Dinner

First Colours and Trophies to be Presented at Athletic Banquet Next Thursday Night

The annual University College Athletic Banquet is to take place Thursday, March 6, in the U.C. Junior Common Room. The dinner, which is given to honour holders of First U.C.'s and those who are presented with their colours this year, will be attended by President H. J. Cody of the university, Dean S. Beatty of the Faculty of Arts, Principal M. W. Wallace of University College, and other campus notables.

First colours will be presented to this year's winners, and also several individual trophies, chief of which is the Cody Trophy, awarded annually to the graduating man who has done most for athletics in the college during his undergraduate career. It will be presented by H. J. Cody.

The Staff Prize will go to the athlete who has won most T. A. Reed points for U.C. Prizes will also go to the outstanding freshman athlete, and the outstanding swimmer, golfer, boxer, wrestler and fencer.

After the banquet, admission to which is only by invitation, the athletes will move to the Hotel Embassy for an athletic dance. The dance is the first of its kind in U.C. history. All U.C. athletes may attend.

Nomination Lists Released Monday

A complete list of all nominations for Hart House committee elections will be released on Monday, it was announced yesterday. Nominations closed last Wednesday.

Candidates are reminded by E. A. Wilkinson, assistant secretary of Hart House, that posters are welcome, but it is pointed out that the minimum size is 24 by 36 inches. The best posters each year are chosen for the permanent collection, but to qualify they must be painted by either the candidate or some other undergraduate and not by a professional.

Voters must bring their registration cards to the polls or they will not be permitted to vote. There will be no voting by proxy, it was stated.

VIC ATHLETIC AT-HOME TO BE HELD TONIGHT AT WYMLWOOD, BURWASH

With Mel Hamill calling the plays Vic athletes will swing out tonight at their annual Athletic At-Home following a banquet at Burwash Hall. At the banquet which begins at 6:30 athletic awards for the year will be made.

Dancing will take place at Wymilwood from 9 to 12:30. Tickets went on sale yesterday in Alumni Hall.

Election Posters Cause Laughs But Fail to Affect Results

"The poster hung in mid-air in the rounds is the only startling innovation in the U.C. election campaign this year," Gray Cowan, present secretary of the Lit, said, as he tucked up the lengthy nominations list yesterday afternoon. When asked if he thought the posters had any effect on the final outcome of the elections, Cowan, who has been elected by acclamation, replied, "No, you voted for the man you know best or the one who claps you on the back last on your way to the polls."

It is the general opinion, the Varsity learned, that posters are not more numerous than in the last few years, but that they are more professional. One man who has formerly made his own, remarked that this year military training forced him to rely on a commercial artist for his publicity.

On Leave of Absence Since Nov. 1939, Dr. Wallace Retires Prematurely Owing to Ill Health

CHANCELLOR FOR 10 YEARS

The Board of Regents of Victoria University meeting yesterday afternoon accepted the resignation of the Reverend E. W. Wallace, Chancellor and President of Victoria University, and appointed as his successor Principal W. T. Brown of Victoria College.

Since November 1939 Chancellor Wallace has been on leave of absence because of ill health, which is the cause of his premature retirement. Principal Brown has been acting Chancellor during that period. He will continue as principal of Victoria College, while assuming the administrative duties connected with Victoria University.

Since 1928 Victoria University has consisted of two colleges, Victoria College (Arts), one of the four federated colleges comprising the Faculty of Arts of the University of Toronto, and Emmanuel College (Theology), the largest training college for ministers of the United Church of Canada.

Dr. Wallace succeeded Dr. R. P. Bowles as chancellor and president of Victoria University in January 1930. The Board of Regents placed on record its profound regret that illness has forced his early termination of the services of Chancellor Wallace to his Alma Mater and its sincere appreciation of his work.

President Brown, who assumes office exactly a century after the appointment of Egerton Ryerson as the first head of Victoria College (successor to Upper Canada Academy in 1841), has been principal of Victoria College since 1932. Except for a four-year period, 1928 to 1932, during which he was a member of the staff of Yale University, his entire academic career since 1913 has been connected with Victoria University.

Edward Wilson Wallace, the elder son of the late Reverend F. H. Wallace, D.D., former Dean of the Faculty of Theology of Victoria University, spent his boyhood in Guelph, Ontario, but from 1892 was resident in Toronto. He was educated in Huron Street Public School, Harbord Collegiate Institute, and Victoria College, graduating in (Continued on Page 2)

MARCH 7 IS DATE SET FOR O.T. & PHYSIO FORMAL AT ROYAL YORK HOTEL

Friday, March 7 is the date set for the O.T. & Physio Formal, when the therapists will put aside their studies and prescribe a little recreational therapy for themselves and friends at the Crystal Ballroom at the Royal York. The music will be provided by the Modernaires.

The O.T.'s will demonstrate their ingenuity and craft skill by the small leather books they are making for combined favour and programs. The Physios will have skulls as favours to symbolize the alliance with Meds.

Something absolutely new and different is promised for the novelty dances. The prizes in themselves should be an attraction including tickets to the supper dance, free passes for food at Diana's and Princess Pat make-up kits.

The committee in charge requests that no corsages be sent, and that those in the W.S.T.D. will not come in uniform.

Co-eds interviewed on their reactions to the display registered almost all the emotions from merriment to rapture. Horror arises when a coed is suddenly confronted with the totality, and rapture when she singles out the truly artistic colour displays of the three Lit secretaries' endeavours.

For the most part, the humor is agreed to be good, though a trifle grim as in the high flown banner at the entrance. The large poster on the north wall, no corsages be sent, "but then it takes longest to read," a freshe suggested.

The Varsity found that the patriotic note of "Buy War Savings Stamps" on one of the posters had been overlooked by many, but those who have seen it commend it.

We Proudly Announce . . .

At last we feel that we can release the news which has been bursting within us for so long. With feelings of pride and joy, not unmixed with considerable trepidation, we take the final plunge from which there is no return and announce that we are celebrating our sixtieth birthday with a special forty-eight page Jubilee Issue.

Recovering from the intoxication of such a world-shaking announcement, we proceed to more routine details. According to present schedule, the Jubilee Issue will hit the streets, neatly bound with clips, on Friday, March 14. This date is not final, however, and due to mechanical problems, the publication may be postponed until March 17. The Varsity will cease regular publication one week from today, March 7, and the following week will be spent in a mad rush trying to get the unprecedented number of forty-eight pages together all at once.

This issue, unique in the history of The Varsity, will be distributed without charge to students, with extra copies available for ten cents. They will also be distributed to alumni and sold on certain city newsstands. Campus distribution points for various faculties will be announced later. Details of the issue itself are not, of course, to be divulged, but a comprehensive story of the university, past and present, in all its phases, is our aim.

With that off our chests, we retire to our sanctum to continue working on "The Great Project."

Mr. McCarthy Goes to Washington

The appointment of Leighton McCarthy, a member of the Board of Governors of this university, to the position of Canadian minister to Washington is one which has met with universal acclaim. Through a distinguished career in law, business and politics, he has gained the experience and qualifications to fit him for this most important post.

There is considerable interest for the University of Toronto in the appointment. The new minister, himself connected with the university, will have with him on his staff, Hume Wrong, son of Professor Emeritus George M. Wrong, former head of the history department. The retiring minister, Loring Christie, who has been forced to quit his post through illness, is the father of Paul Christie, secretary of the Trinity College Board of Stewards and a prominent undergraduate.

Mr. McCarthy has been appointed to a post the importance of which is increasing constantly. Canadian ministers abroad are a fairly new development in the external relations of this country. At an early date in the nation's history, however, the north-south pull of economic and geographic interests made itself felt, and the establishing of the post of Canadian minister to the United States was the result. It is a token of the national growth of Canada, and of her acceptance in the family of nations as an important member. The war has accentuated the seriousness of the position and the responsibilities attached to it. More than ever, just as in British-American relations, it is important that a qualified man be in charge of Canadian affairs at Washington to ensure smooth co-operation. We feel that Mr.

McCarthy is such a man, and we extend to him the congratulations of the university.

Conferring of Degrees

An important event in the university's history will occur next Friday when the special convocation, postponed last December out of respect for the late Lord Lathian who died several days before he was to receive an honorary degree, will be held in Convocation Hall. An imposing group of distinguished men in diplomatic, military and government fields will be conferred honorary degrees of Doctor of Laws.

The Honorable Albert Matthews, lieutenant-governor of Ontario, will pay an official visit to the provincial seat of higher learning to receive a degree. In the diplomatic sphere there will be three representatives—the newly-appointed Canadian minister to the United States, the United States minister to Canada, and the Minister of the British Embassy in Washington. The fifth dignitary will be Air Marshal Bishop.

The university in honoring these men is herself honored. At this time we can only repeat the sentiments expressed last December when the original convocation, so tragically postponed, was to be held. Those sentiments are that as many students as possible turn out next Friday afternoon as a demonstration of the fact that the honors being conferred come from the university as a whole.

They Had Fun

University Symphony Orchestra

It is impossible in tonight's confined space to do justice to the annual concert of the University Symphony Orchestra. When space permits, it will receive more attention.

The program was an interesting one—the individual numbers might have been played by any major orchestra—and it overcame to a large extent the difficulty of building a program from a very limited, simple, repertoire. But even this program was too ambitious. From too few rehearsals, lack of consistent ability among its members, and, I am afraid, too little enthusiasm, it failed to achieve that degree of perfection that might have been expected from a good amateur organization.

The strings on the whole were good but there were too few violins. First violins saved the day in the Ballet Music, the seconds were a bit ragged, and I can find no fault with the cellos. But the wind section! Pitch was so bad in the Egmont Overture that I could almost imagine that the oboe was out of tune. It is really surprising that the various Varsity swing bands couldn't have provided a better brass section. Since none were consistently off pitch, it must have been lack of care. Flutes were good in the Marriage of Figaro overture but the trumpets were off; trumpets had improved for the Ballet Music but the flutes failed; everyone was off in the Egmont.

The program opened very promisingly with the overture to Mozart's Marriage of Figaro. Taken at a nice tempo, the strings were able to carry it through in spite of uncertainties in the middle. In fact they (the strings) almost achieved brilliancy. Gwendolyn Duchernin gave a competent performance of the Beethoven G major piano concerto even with the fears the inexperienced orchestra must have given her. Conductor Ridout is in line for praise for the way he held the orchestra together here. Miss Duchernin's playing, however, was inclined to be muddy and at times a bit inaccurate, and in the solo part was much too quiet (this largely the fault of the piano). The Ballet Music from Schubert's Rosamunde was uninspired, dull, but there were no major slips. The one uncertainty as to repetition was nicely covered up. It is difficult, though, to excuse either the conductor or individual members for allowing any such uncertainty to exist.

The attempt at interpretation in the Beethoven Egmont Overture resulted in disaster among the winds. Jean Letourneau's group of songs were an enjoyable relief. He has a pleasing voice with the ability to use it and something to use it for. His Je suis seul from Massenet's Manon was very dramatic, and still, under control. Particularly notable were Miss Jessie Instone's accompaniments. Bad pitch was always present to mar the Haydn London symphony. Eight times they tried the trill in the minuet and just to prove it could be done they finally triumphed on the last trill of the encore!

Engineers and O.T. Unite On Last University Night

Basketball Tilt Between St. Mike's and All-Stars to Feature Last Get-Together of Year

CANOE-TILTING IN POOL

The Engineers are taking over the direction of the final University Night of the present series, and the Saturday athletic and social jam session the Schoolmen have planned threatens to be even bigger than those of the preceding weekends.

Everything from square-dancing to canoe-tilting is being staged by the boys from the Little Red Schoolhouse. They are being assisted in their jobs of hosts by a number of members of the Occupational Therapy course. There will be a large committee of the Engineers and of the O.T. gals to look after the various duties of the night.

The main athletic treat of the evening is expected to be the basketball game between the university all-star team and the St. Michael's College team which was entered this year in the city league. In the second cage fixture, Senior School meets Senior Meds in a game which will determine the group title.

Part of the badminton tournament has reached the third round. Proxy Bryans, Tibs Annesley, Betty Allan, are now in the third round. In the second round some of the games yet to be played include Shirley Geldert, U.C., number one player, against Helen Harvey, St. Hilda's, and Jean Wallace, U.C. vs Barbara Conway, St. Hilda's. It is hoped that the semi-finals will be played Monday and the finals probably on Tuesday. If you are very optimistic you can also count on the double tournament starting Tuesday as well.

Today at 1 o'clock, St. Hilda's hockey team meets U.C. in the first game of the finals, to be played at the Arena. These gals deserve your support, so how about cutting your dinner hour short, and come out and cheer them on to victory.

Tomorrow night at Hart House, the victorious Varsity mermaids fresh from the interfaculty-intercollegiate meet this week, will give a demonstration of their swimming ability.

ST. MIKE'S WHIP THEOLOGS 5-1 AT VARSITY ARENA

The St. Michael's B hockey squad administered a 5-1 drubbing to Emmanuel yesterday at Varsity Arena.

The Irish goals were evenly distributed among five of the Double B pucksters. Bradford of the Theologs bulged the twine once for the losers, robbing goalie Jack Ronayne of a shut-out.

St. Mike's B: Ronayne, Driscoll, Knowlton (1), Tierney (1), Jacob (1), Reads, Mamczarz (1), Carberry, Marois (1).

Emmanuel: Bradford (1), Stevenson, Norgedy, Jull, Clugston, Smith, Zibright, Henderson, Oliver, Hill, Rutherford.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Owen Prichard

EVERYTHING BUT FORTY BEERS

Yes, literally everything but the above mentioned unmentionable beverage will be dished up by the School of Science lads at tomorrow's University Night, the final jamboree of the present series.

We were chatting yesterday with Don Grosskurth, vice-president of the School Athletic Association, and Don was all enthused about the card of events being prepared by the Engineers. The femmes from Occupational Therapy are co-operating with the SPers in hosting and hostessing the affair.

CANOE IN THE POOL YET!

That's right, canoes are going to be bobbing about on the hitherto boastless waters of the Hart House Pool as the energetic Engineers stage a novel bit of pole-tilting. The Hazen Company have come across with a generous loan of a pair of canoes, and Frank Di Marco has been busy organizing practices in preparation for this aquatic jousting.

A mixed swimming meet will be held in the Pool on Saturday for the first time in Varsity history, we believe. Some capable water-churners are expected to be on deck for these races, which will be run on a handicap basis.

BIG-TIME HOOPSTERS

Tomorrow night you will see some of the classiest cagers in the city as the Varsity All-Stars tangle with St. Mike's city league squad. In yesterday's column sportscoopers Quigley and MacIntosh ably presented the merits of the contending teams. The two outfits will be working out again tonight as a tune-up for the classic encounter.

Another important cage game is slated for the Big Gym, the teams being Senior Meds and Senior School. This struggle can be termed "cross-hal", inasmuch as it will decide the winner of Group 1 in the interfaculty basketball loop.

SIDE-MEAT

To supply still further fancy fare for your athletic appetites, the Schoolmen have arranged the following: All the usual games which hold the spotlight on Saturday nights along Muske Midway; a number of skits by the Occupational Therapy damsels; an amusing chemistry display; square-dancing under the direction of two exceedingly hip callers-off; dancing in the Big Gym from ten till twelve.

MEOS III CAGERS AHEAD TROUNCE O.C. III 50-11

The Meds III basketers made a clean sweep of their group schedule yesterday by swamping the winless University College III squad by a score of 50-11.

Nearly every Medico got his name on the scoresheet with Wilson and Morehart coping 12 and 10 points each. Jim Bitove was once again the class of the Collegians, his two field goals making him the top scorer of the luckless Artsmen.

U.C. III: Bitove (4), White, Hall, Lichtig (2), Brown, Kelter, Simpson (1), Campbell (2), Berris, Duncan (2).

Meds III: Wilson (12), McClure (8), Murray (5), Bryce, Morehart (10), Kling (5), Barootes (9), Kolin (1).

CAMP QUESTIONNAIRE

The following questionnaire will be distributed during the week March 3rd to 8th, on special Company parades to be arranged later. Members of the U. of T. Training Centre Battalion, will consider the questions, in order that they may be answered accurately.

QUESTIONNAIRE

Each member of the Training Centre Battalion is required to answer one of the questions below, applicable to his age group.

1. Age 21 years.

To be answered by those who have reached, or will reach the age of 21 years, between 1st July, 1940, and 30th June, 1941, both inclusive.

Camp is essential in order to complete the 30 day period of this age group.

If Camps can be arranged during the first two weeks of May, and during the first two weeks in June, which would be more convenient for you?

I would prefer to attend Camp in May, June. (Strike out month not desired.)

2. Age over 21 years.

To be answered by those who were 21 years of age, or over, on 1st July, 1940.

Question: If Camp is not compulsory in this age group, do you wish to attend Camp, voluntarily?—likely first two weeks of June.

Answer, Yes or No.

CANADIAN NICKEL

QUICKENS THE DRIVE TO VICTORY!

THOUSANDS of tons of Nickel ore each day are now being treated in the Copper Cliff smelter. Crushed, roasted, smelted, it is speeded from one important process to another.

The British Empire will be adequately supplied with Canadian Nickel through the efforts of International Nickel's 20,000 employees. They are putting their shoulders to the wheel in the mines, smelters and refineries in Canada and in the Company's refineries, foundries and rolling mills in Great Britain and the United States. For Nickel, used to toughen the steel and harden the gears in your automobile, is used in every aeroplane engine as well as in trucks and other mechanized equipment.

It is just as universally used in the machinery, tools and equipment being produced to speed the Empire's war effort.

In peace, Canadian Nickel provides employment, brings wealth and prosperity to Canada. Now in time of war it is of vital help in speeding Empire victory.

Nary a nook or a cranny have I missed in my ceaseless search through this daily sheet of pulp in quest of a medium to suit my elusive and illusory natural bent. And here is my last stand, my final despairing bid for fame, this time as a substitute on the C.U.P. team.

EVEN TRINITY FRESHMEN can be amusing in their own quiet way. A corsage, according to one of them, is a species of female underwear. . . . WHAT WILL THEY BAN NEXT?

A SIGNIFICANT INSCRIPTION decks the pavement in front of the Phi Phi house: writ large in the cement that is trampled on by so many beautiful feet are the letters Theta Delta Chi. . . . Fools' names and fools' faces. . . .

WAY OUT WEST at the University of Washington they seem to go in for eccentric novelties in the social line. Idea number 1 is a mass beard-growing contest. Sophomore co-eds spent a pleasant afternoon judging the biggest, blackest, reddest, whitest beards and the best all-round beard, and awarding prizes to the he-men ranging from electric razors to corsages, with a few canoe-rides thrown in. Idea number 2 is an even better one: 600 luscious occupants of Stephens women's college chartered a train and rolled into Seattle all set to take on financially and otherwise any 600 male blind dates for a dinner dance. Female natives of Seattle thought of picking the hotel chosen for the celebration, but it seems that originally gets the man.

INEVITABLY at the first of the year there is the odd dazzled freshman who tries to settle down and work conscientiously in the Women's Reading Room of the University Library. But the other day half way through February a women's presence disturbed the studious serenity of the men's room. . . . And everybody went on studying!

EAVESDROPPING DEPARTMENT. . . . heres a coed's hypocritical remark as heard without context: "When I'm happy I'm very quiet." From a masculine standpoint I just don't believe it. But even when wasting time in the Hart House news office one's smoke screen is set aquivering by such sentiments from the hallway as "Leatherhead, Leatherhead, That's Milk!"

THE LAW OF GRAVITY doesn't seem to bother an eminent lecturer who imparts knowledge up in the Economics Building. "The co-operative," he announced, "was suspended from the floor of the exchange." It can't happen here dept.

WHATEVER YOU THINK of the Varsity's humorists it won't outlast this little dialogue from the McGill Daily. Waitress: Hawaii, Gentlemen? You look Hungry.

1st Stogie: Yes, Siam; and we can't Rumania long. Venice tea ready?

Waitress: I'll Russia to a table. Will you Havana now?

And when this sort of thing goes on through four inches of type WE GIVE UP WRITING THE HITHER (and yon).

Visitor Talks On Transport

At five o'clock on Friday Dr. Cody introduced Professor Dougall of Northwestern University, speaking in the first of the new series of lectures being held in the Economics Building on Transportation. The series is marking the retirement this year of Professor Jackman of this university. Transportation was Professor Jackman's favourite subject.

Professor Dougall, who was formerly a pupil of Professor Jackman, began by commenting on the high esteem and great affection that he had for his friend and teacher. "It was no coincidence that my own academic interest lay in finance and transportation," he said.

Then followed a review of the development of railroads in Canada and (Continued on Page 2)

Sport Directorate Will Hold Election At Friday Meeting

All Clubs and Associations Are Entitled to Send Representatives to Elect Student Members of Directorate

The Electoral Meeting of the University of Toronto Athletic Association to elect student representatives to the Directorate for 1941-42, will be held on Friday, March 14th, 1941, at 4:15 p.m. sharp, in the Debates Room, Hart House (south side, upstairs).

Under the Constitution of the Athletic Association (Article IX, Sec. 4) all clubs and associations are entitled to send representatives to this meeting. These representatives must be male undergraduates of the University of Toronto or one of the affiliated colleges who are proceeding to a degree, are in actual attendance upon lectures and who have paid the annual fee required (By-law I). Please call your executive to appoint and have these representatives appointed at an early date and supplied with credentials. On presentation of these forms on the morning of March 14th, they will be given voting tickets. No substitution or proxies will be allowed.

A student to be elected to the Directorate must, at the time of his nomination be in the second, or a higher year of his course at the university, but not in his final year. The nomination must be made in writing on the form provided for the purpose, signed by two male undergraduate members of the Athletic Association in good standing and filed with the Secretary of the Association not later than 5 p.m. Monday, March 10th. Forms can be obtained at the office of the Association.

Annual Elections for Women's Sports Clubs will be Held on Wednesday, March 19 in Household Science Building

The annual elections for the women's Basketball, Hockey, Swimming, Tennis, Baseball, Badminton, Bowling and Skiing Club executives will be held in the Lecture Room, Household Science Building, on Wednesday, March 19 at 5 p.m. sharp. Preferential voting for candidates will determine the office to be held.

Nominations for each club should be signed by two voting members of the club in question and filed with the secretary of the Athletic Association, Room 82, U.C. Voting members for each club are restricted to those who have been registered with the secretary of the W.A.A. as members of the university or intramural teams in that particular sport during the academic year, or who are certified by a team manager to have attained at least 50 per cent of the practices of that team; members of the club executive and managers of all teams playing under the club.

Grads Hear Ex-President At Banquet

Sir Robert Falconer Points Out that Human Spirit Underlying Mechanistic Improvement is Basis of Civilization

SMITH MOSS CANDIDATE

It is to this continent that "humanity in your lifetime will look for leadership in the enrichment of cultural life," Sir Robert Falconer, former president of the university, told members of the graduating year of University College at the annual Graduation Banquet Friday evening.

Sir Robert's address came as the climax to a series of toasts and responses through which a decided note of seriousness ran. Tommy Jarvis, president of the Lit, presided as toastmaster. The toast to the university was proposed by Larry Smith, responded to by President Cody. Mary Bruck, president of the W.U.A., proposed the toast to the college which was replied to by Principal Wallace. Sheila Scott and Jack Gerby, fourth year presidents, responded to the toast to the graduating year, proposed by Professor W. J. McAndrew.

During the banquet it was announced that Larry Smith, editor of The Varsity, had been elected U.C. candidate for the Moss Scholarship. Elected to the permanent executive of the class of 4T1 were Bill Cowan, president; Sheila Scott, vice-president; Bruce Williams, treasurer; and Mary Gow, secretary. Pointing out that Europe may cease to be the home of culture after the war, Sir Robert stressed the important role to be played by the people of this continent in the future. Universities are faced with the tremendous task of keeping (Continued on Page 4)

Unity Restored In Trinity Split Over Candidates

Opposition Crosses Floor to End Debate at Friday Lit Meeting; Unity Achieved through Compromise

UNANIMOUS AGREEMENT

The Trinity College Lit in its debate on Friday evening unanimously upheld the motion: "Resolved that the T.C. L.I. should support the unofficial nominees for the Hart House elections." A tense packed house, the fullest of the year, gave evidence of the interest aroused. Jim Stuart, 4T2, the first speaker for the government, supporting the unofficial slate, accused the Head of College of "pulling the wool over the freshmen's eyes." He said, "The college is divided into cliques and Bob the Porter is all that holds it together."

Ken Cowan, the first opposition speaker, began by distributing sample ballots to "teach the honourable members how to vote." He said that the motion before the house was undebatable, urged all men of college to support the unofficial as well as the official candidates and ended by crossing the house to sit beside his "government colleagues", amid roars of applause which had been hisses when he first got up to speak.

H. L. Aboud of 4T2 spoke next for the government, accusing the anti-schismists of railroad. Stan Arthur, 4T2, Bing Crosbie, 4T1, and Gord Mercer, 4T2, though in opposite camps all stressed the necessity of unity in a college. This sentiment was endorsed by the house in its uproarious and unanimous approval of the motion.

SYMPHONY TICKETS

A limited number of tickets to the concert of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra on Tuesday night will be available to undergraduate members of Hart House at the Warden's office today.

Hart House Decked By Election Posters

The corridor to the right from the main entrance of Hart House is the big campaigning ground for candidates in the forthcoming committee elections. There are already about 10 variegated posters put up by individuals in addition to the lists put up by the House. An innovation, according to Pat the Hall Porter, is the poster that a certain faculty has put up listing all its own men who are running.

The House has put up string along the two walls of this corridor so that campaigners will have something to hang their posters from. Most of the ones already there are done on various colours of cardboard but one ambitious person has used a sheet of masonite with raised letters on it.

President Cody Announces Reduction in Number of Teaching and Laboratory Hours; Committee Recommendation

AT ENGINEERING SOCIETY

Announcement of a number of changes in the curriculum of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering featuring a substantial reduction of the number of teaching and laboratory hours was made by President Cody at the Engineering Alumni Association dinner Saturday night. These changes will be effective next fall.

The president explained that the reduction from 38 to 33 hours weekly in the curriculum was intended to give students more time to read, think and experiment on their own. Changes in the course of study are being made on the recommendation of a committee of the faculty which has been studying the results of the survey of S.P.S. made by Dr. Dugald C. Jackson, eminent engineering educationalist.

More emphasis on such subjects as English and economics and closer relationship of the faculty with industry are among the changes to be made.

Varsity Staff Delve in Past

A project greater than any yet to engage the attention of the Varsity staff has been causing them to neglect their ordinary work more than usual diligence this term. Last spring, the Editor-in-Chief decided that Vol. LX of the Varsity should be capped with an issue worthy of a Diamond Jubilee. All this fateful term diligent newshounds have turned historians to record all that's quaint, curious and significant in the history of the undergraduate paper. The hallowed dust has been stirred from the oldest files of the paper and the yellowed pages of many another campus publication have been disturbed in the search.

The masthead have foregathered almost daily for some weeks in a cozy nook under the eaves in a remote part of the university library where they pore over the early issues of the Varsity. The iron stairs up to this nook have rung to the crashing tread of a staggering cub reporter carrying ten (count 'em) volumes of Torontensis.

Demon campus canvassers have been diverted from their usual campus surveys to such jobs as running to earth details of the early life and present activity of the college and faculty publications about Queen's Park, and canvassing old, old grads for reminiscences.

College librarians have been buried for peeks at as yet unclassified archives, and eyes have been strained over mellowed parchments to produce a monument to the history and progress of not only the campus daily, but also the university.

In short, everyone has been mighty busy—even the sport staff.

Collection from Concert Sent to War Relief Fund

A cheque for $35.22 addressed to "The Evening Telegram's British War Victims' Fund" is the latest contribution to the war effort by university students, it was announced Saturday by E. A. Macdonald, S.A.C. secretary. The amount was collected from patrons at the Concert given by the University Symphony Orchestra at Convocation Hall last week.

Varsity Health Services

That the medical and health services provided for students of the University of Toronto are on the whole inadequate for a community such as is contained on this campus has long been the opinion held by most of the student body and by many members of the staff, especially in the Faculty of Medicine. From time to time interested groups or individuals have undertaken surveys of the services provided and have submitted reports, along with recommendations, through the S.A.C. to the Board of Governors. Most of the reports have come back with a polite suggestion that the time was inappropriate; on one occasion results were partially achieved when intracutaneous tuberculin tests for women were made compulsory, but no action was taken in applying the tests to men.

The latest report to appear is a very complete and comprehensive document prepared by a committee of the Campus Co-operative Residence, Inc., a group which has inaugurated with much success a health insurance scheme within its own confines. Feeling that something should be done about the inadequacy of Varsity medical services, particularly so for men, this group has gathered pertinent information from twenty-seven American and Canadian universities. After discussing its findings, the committee makes recommendations for desired changes which it, and many others, believe to be of the highest importance.

No Tuberculin Test for Men

The situation at Toronto compares favorably in some respects and most unfavorably in others. We have a physical examination which is compulsory in the first two years for men and later in sports, and in first year for women. Only in first year, however, does it in any way approach thoroughness, and in later years the men's test is reduced to a farce. A physician is available for consultation and first aid, but there is no ambulatory medical treatment provided by university physicians. Every student must be vaccinated for smallpox, but only for women and for medical students is there provided a tuberculin skin test. This latter test is considered to be of very great importance today, but up to the present every attempt to make it compulsory for men has failed. Medical students who in the course of clinical work are in contact with tuberculin cases are given the test annually, and X-ray service at special rates is provided for positive reactions. But dental students, who are in almost as great a contact, have no tuberculin test at all.

Not Enough Infirmary Service

As far as infirmary services are concerned, University of Toronto is below average but only because of its federated nature, for many of the college residences provide such services. For women, who are well provided for in general, the Vic residences charge $15 for an annual exam, plus infirmary, medical and nursing care. At St. Hilda's and Whitney Hall, infirmary, medical and nursing care is provided. In Burwash Hall a $7 fee brings infirmary, medical and nursing care, and the same services are provided at St. Michael's College and Trinity College. However, in the University College residence, and in North, South and East houses of the university residences, housing several hundred men, no services whatsoever are provided, and not even meals can be procured in the residence. Fraternities often have their own arrangements with doctors, but in boarding houses where a great number of male students live, no services can be obtained.

In the light of the above conditions (concerning which opinions expressed here have been those of The Varsity and not directly of the Committee), the members of the Campus Co-operative Residence have requested the S.A.C. to recommend to the Board of Governors an expansion of medical services to students, both of a preventative and therapeutic nature, and if necessary, urge a special fee to cover it. (Ed. As far as can be learned, the present compulsory $5 fee in the first two years goes to the Athletic Association to cover the medical exam and physical training; the $3 athletic fee also goes to the Association for recreational services, although it is also used to keep Hart House gyms open at night which thus provides physical training; the $12 Hart House fee gives members the privileges of the building, including gymnasium, pool, locker rooms, and showers, which seems to duplicate part of the expenditure of the $3 athletic fee.)

Seven-Point Recommendation

The Committee's recommended steps are as follows:

"1. Every man or woman entering the University for the first time (regardless of what year) should have a complete physical examination and an intracutaneous tuberculin test. For negative reactors the test should be repeated annually until it becomes positive. For a positive reactor a flat X-ray plate of the chest should be repeated annually and supplied free.

2. The offices of the University physician should supply without charge for undergraduates any ordinary ambulatory treatment; a physician should be available at all times, night and day, for emergency care.

3. Hospitalization in a city hospital of up to 15 days without charge, in a public ward, should be supplied for any student who enters hospital upon the recommendation of the University physician.

The following services (4) and (5) should be provided for all out-of-town students and any others who wish to pay an additional fee:

4. The University physician should make calls, primarily for the sake of diagnosis, on students prevented by illness from visiting the offices.

5. An infirmary should be supplied to which students could be sent for minor illnesses at the direction of the University physician. This infirmary should be of such a size as to be commensurate with the expected amount of illness among the students at any time during the academic year.

6. The above provisions should hold only during the academic year.

7. The fee for the academic year, if designed to cover the total cost, should not exceed: $10.00 for students having permanent Toronto addresses; and $15.00 for out-of-town students, and others wishing to obtain physician's house calls and infirmary services.

In addition to the seven points an investigation should be made of possible exemptions for students using existing college residence infirmary and medical services, or of suitable arrangements to take over or use these services."

Deserving of Serious Attention

The guarding of health at this particular time of life, when the student is exposed to the strain of a new life away from home, is extremely vital. In wartime the necessity for preserving high health standards becomes even more imperative. It is apparent that in many respects the health and medical services of the university are inadequate. An institution of this size should certainly take the lead in providing a high average of health services; and although the proposed system of a medical pool or insurance is sweeping in scope and demanding of great effort, it could be worked if sufficient co-operation were forthcoming. Certainly the other proposals for compulsory tuberculin tests and increased physician's facilities should be implemented. It is to be hoped the Board of Governors recognizes student opinion and gives the matter the serious attention it deserves.

Hart House Glee Club

It is difficult, after such an excellent concert as that given by the Hart House Glee Club last night, to avoid the temptation of sitting back in an attitude of idle enjoyment. I envy the audience for being able to. But to be worth while, criticism must praise constructively as it must condemn constructively. There is much to be praised in the Glee Club. First

Bedtime Story For the Kiddies

Is it a storm? Is it a plane? Is it a bird? No, it's Superman. These words having been spoken, in comes little Lulu. "Pardon me," they said, "but you look like Margie. To their surprise it was Margie. "Ah, good little," they said. But the yolk was on them.

Suffice to say, this pleased Margie immensely, and she continued to call for more. But More was nowhere to be found. "Are you an antidisestablishmentarianist?" chirped Margie. "You can say that again!" Gad gasped. Whereupon Margie repeated. Are you an antidisestablishmentarianist and promptly fainted. "Good Gad!" said By Jabers, "this sort of thing must STOP!" Which, of course, all agreed that it should. Which of course, it did. So it stopped.

"People have more fun than anybody!" sighed Margie, looking for More more. Suffice to say, having had enough of More, the boys said, to Margie. "What's the difference between a chicken?" Screaming in mortal fear, Margie shrieked, "Sometimes I think that I shall go mad!" Whereupon she did.

And Margie, by this time sadly dejected, began muttering half to herself, "What was that ladie I saw you out with last night?—That was no ladie; that was my knife."

And so the boys kicked Margie harder and harder, until there was blood running out of her mouth, and blood running out of her ears, and blood running out of her eyes. And now we end our little bedtime story. Goodnite kiddies.

"Scatterbrain"

must see his conductor, Dr. Charles Peaker. To him we owe its splendid tone and sense of pitch, foundations so many amateur organizations neglect. Only once (in the Houlers of the Volga) in all that a capella singing did the choir become flat, a truly remarkable achievement for a group which has been together for only six months. I am sure that this would not have been possible without very regular attendance of individual members. This attendance is almost wholly attributable to Dr. Peaker's leadership. Yet I wondered if this leadership was not carried to the point of domination. One could not help noticing the lack of spontaneity which is expected from those who sing for enjoyment alone.

The thoroughness of the rehearsing is to be praised. While enunciation was poor there had been considerable care taken with individual words. Much attention was paid to rhythm and this is for a large part responsible for the audience's enjoyment. What appeared to be the correct tempo was always maintained in all selections. Many knew their parts so well that they referred to their music only occasionally and concentrated their attention, as a good choir should, on the conductor.

As might be expected the club has its share of technical imperfections. Most notable is the lack of a large enough or capable enough first tenor section. Naturally first tenors are scarce and they take a great deal of tracking down. Enunciation was never good but it got much better towards the end. Frowzy entrances were in part responsible for this poor enunciation. They too got better towards the end and were excellent in the tricky Hey Robin, Jolly Robin. What fagged towards the end was the general quality of interpretation. It was as though the group was a little tired. A peak was reached with A Capital Ship where they were really spirited but Greig's Olof Trygvason was most disappointing. It just didn't arrive. There was a considerable revival in The Swazi Warrior.

One cannot help but mention both the shortness of their repertoire and its lack of one real classic. My only quarrel with Howard Brown is that he almost stole the show. His accompaniments were excellent and his solo group superb. His slight nervous-

Recital in Reverse

Clifford Pool in Recital

The final Hart House Friday afternoon recital of the season brought the gifted and brilliant young pianist Clifford Pool, in a program that ran the gamut of pianoforte literature. Mr. Pool possesses a genuine musical feeling and though at times the pieces suffered from memory lapses and mechanical defects, still his innate musicianship shone through all and made the mechanical errors appear as nothing.

The program opened in a rather unconventional fashion with Brahms and closed still more unconventionally with Bach, but oddly enough it was both exciting and satisfying. The two Brahms Intermezzi that opened the program were of contrasting mood and character; the intermezzo in C major, well-known among pianists, has broad-sweeping melodies, interrupted by dramatic passionate utterances. Its strong rhythmic character is irresistible and its demands are grand. It was a thorough and pure musical treat.

The second part of the program opened with Debussy's beautiful Claire de Lune; the overtones and the luscious harmonies are most cleverly combined in this most realistic of tone pictures. Two pieces of Chopin followed next, the Waltz in G Flat and the Prelude in A Major. Mr. Pool's feeling for some of the finer delicacies of the tonal art was revealed in the middle section of the Waltz and in the little Prelude.

In the final group by Bach, the three two-part inventions require little comment for Mr. Pool's interpretations were perfect. The Choral Prelude was a little out of place in this group and really should not have been chosen. The final number—the chromatic Fantasy and Fugue—was a masterpiece.

the United States and the difficulties they have encountered. In both countries railway companies entered the depression years carrying a heavy load of debt. In the United States debt and interest payments are being cut down reducing stock holders to the position of spectators, while new issues of securities contain provisions with sinking funds for the repayment of debts.

In Canada on the other hand the writing off of C.N.R. debts has eliminated those figures from the debt total, but it has not done away with losses. "The only solution," he said, "is unified management and an end to costly rivalry. There must be scientific reconstruction of railroad companies and their debts must be written off. Only after a financial house-cleaning can we hope to get the capital necessary to go on from private purses rather than the public one."

let's go places

The Loew's Theatre is rapidly getting into the long-run habit. First it was "Gone With the Wind", and now we figure "Philadelphia Story" ought to stay around our fair city for a few weeks.

PHILLY Here's the reason for this prediction: "Philadelphia Story" has everything that the intelligent theatre-goer could ask for. It has a story concerning an aristocratic family of the Quaker City, whose daughter frequently gets muddled up in marriage, until finally straightened out by a couple of scandal reporters. James Stewart and Ruth Hussey do neat jobs of the reporters, and we see by the papers that the former has topped an Oscar by his work in this show.

Cary Grant plays perfectly straight as the first husband, and plays competently as usual, but top honors go to Katharine Hepburn who finally returns to the wars, and manages to give the best performance of her career. Hepburn, who had this part written for her, has never been more impressive in a role. We figure the Box-Office Poison tag will be removed from La Hepburn after this show has made the rounds.

Entire cast including Ruth Hussey, Roland Young and not forgetting that irrepressible youngster, Virginia Weidler, are excellent.

Philip Barry's play has been faithfully transferred to the screen, losing none of its sharp witty dialogue, and none of its pointed philosophy and humor. It's a good show.—F.S.

S.P.S. II Win Skiing Finals Trinity I's 2nd

Insufficient Turnout Causes Wide Differences in Percentage Ratings of Teams Even in Finals

SKI CLUB ENDS YEAR

S.P.S. II ran away with the intramural ski championships last week, followed by Trinity in a fair second place, and two more S.P.S. teams which got much lower percentages. There were good skiers on all four of the teams but the bottom three did not get their men out for every event. S.P.S. II was consistently good in every event so the percentages drop very suddenly as you go down the list.

The meet marked the end of ski competition for the year on the campus, but in the absence of intercollegiate meets it is worth while mentioning that Russ Smart set a new record when he won the Toronto Ski Club downhill championship this winter.

The ski club has been officially finished operation for the year although of course the club terrain will be in use as long as there is snow. Bill Kingmill was elected president for next year, with Alex Cruickshank and Fred Connor as vice-presidents, and Vernon Lang as secretary.

On Saturday night, the last Athletic Night for the year finished up the season with a bang. The program was the best yet and the crowd better than that. We venture to observe that next year these nights will be off in a cloud of spray before you know it. Them's fightin' words, eh?

Our small portion of the program took place in the pool as boys and girls competed in mixed relay teams and solo efforts. The balconies were so crowded that one superfluous soul—the one too many—found himself hurled into the pool by willing hands from School. And that was that, and those in the balcony from which he was ejected breathed a sigh of relief and spread themselves a bit. On the whole, surprises were the keynote of the evening and we want more of these sort of things!

The first game of the hockey finals produced a surprise last night when U.C. upset the apple orchard by defeating the hitherto undefeated St. Hilda's squad. The next game, to be played a week from today, same time, same place, will be a lulu or we wonder. Starting the game behind 4-2, St. Hilda's will have a healthy job coming into their own but they're far from beaten. What we'd like to see is two lines from U.C. vs two lines from St. Hilda's in preference to the two lines from U.C. vs the same line puffing up and down for the Saints for the whole game—pardon us, with the exception of about two minutes—but what do we know about it, anyway? It should be a fight to the finish.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Owen Prichard

School of Science put on a commendable evening last Saturday as the Engineers played hosts at the final University Night of the present series.

These fun fiestas have been the most constructive thing accomplished this year in the athletic life of the campus. The absence of intercollegiate competition has left a void which no substitution could adequately fill but the inauguration of the Saturday jamborees has supplied a punch to the athletic and social interests of the student body in general and particular.

The idea of having different faculties act as hosts for a Saturday each has brought out a lot of eds and co-eds who otherwise would have been reticent about attending. There is something that appeals to the shy guys and gals in knowing that on the evening their faculty is sponsoring they will be greeted by committee members whom they know.

Now that the University Nights have proved to be such an outstanding innovation there is little that need be said about the reasons for their popularity. But the increasing numbers of people attending the Hart House Athletic Wing for these sessions brings up another angle which could bear some serious consideration with regard to the future development of the University Nights. To state the case in short, beginning with about 800 students on the initial evening, the audiences have grown to such record-shattering crowds as 1,100 on the St. Michael's night, and a top mark of 1,200 last Saturday. The problem will be a pressing one when the attendance reaches the vicinity of 1,500.

The crux of the matter is this, that while the Athletic Wing is crowded to the doors, the other side of Hart House preserves its usual weekend calm, undisturbed except for the occasional tread of a departing member who has just awakened from a quiet snooze in the library.

Now we realize that there are all sorts of rules and regulations governing the uses to which Hart House may be put, and we are respectfully aware of and considerate of the aims of the Foundation which brought the House into being; but at the same time we feel that some central meeting place, such as Hart House could provide, should be available to the male and female students of the university on at least one night in the week. Most students are human enough to enjoy the opportunity of having fun and fellowship with their lecture mates at some function like a University Night in preference to a steady diet of mulling over a beaker of brew or standing for hours in crowded theatre lobbies.

We feel that we are not far wrong in measuring the general student opinion as being heartily in favour of more opportunities to get to know one another, to foster the growth of campus spirit which will continue long after their graduation, and at the same time have loads of what our elders have (discouragingly) labelled "good clean fun".

O.C.E. WINS V CHAMPIONSHIP FROM S.P.S. IN SLOPPY GAME

O.C.E. clinched the Group V hockey championship Friday night with a scrappy 5-3 victory over S.P.S. III. His team down one goal but with a few minutes remaining, Rosie Stantland came through with the tying and winning counters.

Wendorf opened the scoring for the Teachers, but Boa offset the goal on a break-away. Gallagher sent O. C. E. into the lead once more but School came back to knot the count at 2-2 and then go into the lead on a tally by Seymour. Rosie then pulled a couple of tricks out of the bag to win the game and Wendorf added the finishing touch in the last minute.

St. Mike's Basketeers Lose

Brilliant Early Offensive Smashes St. Michael's Senior Basketball Team in Game of Year

BILL ROBERTS HIGHEST

By Bill Quigley

On the strength of a brilliant first-half offensive, Varsity All-Stars defeated St. Mike's Seniors 32-21 Saturday night in the Hart House gym.

Shaken by their opponents' quick-breaking attack, the Irish trailed at one point by 20-4, but led by Bill Roberts they staged a counter-assault to leave the half-time score at 22-11 for Warren Stevens' stars.

The Double Blue tried desperately to close the gap after the rest period but could do no better than to match their opponents, basket for basket.

Roberts Leads Scorers

Bill Roberts, with 8 points, topped Harold Brown and Ken Hoyle by two for scoring honours. Charlie Belchamber a marked man throughout the game, tallied 5 points.

The All-Stars scored in the first 30 seconds as Charlie Prince sank a beautiful shot, followed by Harold Brown's two-pointer. St. Mike's counted on two foul shots, only to have Prince sink another and Harold Brown tallied again. Jack Casey then looped a long shot through the twine.

Hoyle Is Hot

Ken Hoyle entered the game for the All-Stars and proceeded to chalk up three baskets before the half whistle. Brown and Tettmar also contributed a basket apiece to bring the score to 20-4 before St. Mike's started a rally.

Mike Padden scored on a one-handed flip from a pivot and Roberts sank a corner shot. Roberts faked a shot, passed to P. Donnelly who dropped it in off the back-board. Jack LaVarnway was awarded two fouls but dicked only on one. Just before the whistle Jimmie Hurst scored on a long shot to make the score 22-11 for the All-Stars. Clayton opened the final session to score on a long shot but Roberts nullified this by batting in a rebound. Referee Allen then decided to take a hand in proceedings by handing out a number of fouls.

Scott scored on a free throw, as did LaVarnway once and Jack Luddy twice. Belchamber made another gift shot good. This brought the score to 26-16 with Steve's boys still in front.

Belchamber Hits Bullseye

Roberts executed a brilliant one-handed push shot but Charlie Belchamber came through with a couple of fine tallies, the first a single-handed pivot toss. Don Finlayson, who had played a fine defensive game, scored on a foul. This seemed to put a stop to any victory aspirations of the Irish.

Luddy and Mike Rodden, however, added 3 points to the Bay St. boys' total before Tettmar scored one point as the whistle blew.

St. Mike's: Roberts (8), Padden (4), LaVarnway (2), Luddy (3), Casey (2), Foley, Matthews, Butler, P. Donnelly (2), Fox, Zeino, Doran, E. Donnelly.

All-Stars: Prince (4), Fountain, Belchamber (5), Heinbuck, Gibson, Scott (1), Stellman (1), H. Brown (6), Hoyle (6), Finlayson (1), Lake, Weir, Clayton (2), Tettmar (4), Hurst (2).

Employees Plan Varied Fun For Gala Party

As the student body goes into hibernation for the last grim grind, our behind-the-scenes men and women will kick over the traces for the 21st annual at-home sponsored by the University of Toronto Employees' Association. Hart House will be given over to the errant employees for this gala event. There will be features galore at this coming-of-age party.

First comes dancing to the mincing music of the Commodores, those jaspers of jazz. Then there will be motion pictures of the Royal Visit and ornamental swimming by the notable natures of the "Mermaids". For others craving more mercenary merriment, euchre will be provided for our euchre enthusiasts, together with attractive prizes for the lucky ones. One must not forget either the date, the 21 of March or more important still, the buffet supper.

And for those puritans who fear fun, remember it is in a good cause, for 25 cents of every $1.25 admission will go to the British War Victims' Fund.

DISPLAY USEFUL GARMENTS AT RED CROSS WORKSHOP

That clothing for war victims can be attractive as well as utilitarian is being proved at a display in the National Workshop of the Red Cross at 621 Jarvis St.

Containing only exhibition garments and perfected samples, the National Workshop also displays the traditional knitted goods and hospital supplies.

A rack of well-made, stylish garments greets the eye upon entering the workshop. There is a ladies' stylish dark-green wool suit with its long-sleeved blouse and coat lining of a green and brown plaid. "These jumper dresses are ideal for girls," The Varsity was told.

We were shown a dark blue jumper. To us it just looked like a smartly-tailored dress but when the seams were indicated we could see how cleverly small pieces of material had been used. A dusky blue blouse and a wooden ornament completed the costume.

A large cape of brown and blue plaid was designated as "granny's air-raid special". For young women there are neat grey slacks, shirt, and jacket or cape. This outfit is easily kept up and is adaptable to the unusual living conditions. Among the many attractive articles on the rack were warm capes with hoods, college-girl reversible coats, tiny bright-coloured dresses, and maternity dresses.

The "laboratory" is the name given to the workshop where all the experiments to produce new useful articles for any phase of war work are made. At the time of our visit the Junior League were busy, each on a different sample. One lady was ironing a tiny, blue-striped boy's shirt, one was cutting out flannel shorts, one was reinforcing wool mitts with leather, and one was sewing soft hospital slippers.

The grey flannel shorts along with matching jacket and two blouses will be sent to the little boys overseas. The suit pattern, when perfected, will be forwarded to branches of the Red Cross, and it is planned to ship 2,500 of the completed suits to England in the near future.

The tour of the National Workshop ended in the parcelling room where an average of 45 parcels of samples are sent out each day, six days a week to branches of the Red Cross all across Canada.

NAVAL OFFICERS' TRAINING COURSE

A class of Naval Officers for a two months preparatory course for highly specialized scientific work with the Naval Forces was begun at the Department of Physics, University of Toronto this morning. These officers are on active service with full pay and living allowances. The course is being given under the direction of the Canadian Naval Service. At present a few more applicants may be considered. A candidate should be in the senior year at his university or a graduate, with a good knowledge of mathematics and physics. Any immediate applications should be made in the first instance to Professor E. F. Burton, Department of Physics, University of Toronto.

Dr. Agnew is Optimistic Concerning China's Future

Dr. R. G. Agnew, D.D.S., M.Sc., Professor of Dental Pathology at the West China Union University, Doing Post Graduate Work Here, Discusses Chinese Situation and American and Canadian Attitudes in Varsity Interview

ONE OF FEW CANADIANS TO TRAVEL IN TIBET

"China has a good chance of pulling through and eventually of ridding herself of the Japanese," Dr. R. G. Agnew, D.D.S., M.Sc., informed The Varsity. The doctor is one of the few Canadians who have travelled through Tibet, having made three trips into Tibet proper and three into the aboriginal Tibetan territory. He is professor of Dental Pathology at the West China Union University at Chengtu. At the present time he is doing post graduate work at the Faculty of Dentistry and lecturing in many cities of Canada and the United States.

The Chinese have the upper hand now, Dr. Agnew declared, and their position will continue to improve if the United States and Great Britain stand behind them and prevent further expansion of Japan to the south, especially the Dutch East Indies. The Japanese are badly in need of raw materials that these islands can supply; without them their military machine will bog down. China is much more united now than she ever has been in the past.

The doctor finds Americans and many Canadians to be insensitive and too complacent to the tremendous issues in the east and west. Not only must victory be secured over the totalitarian states but the democratic countries must become more functionally democratic if they are to continue to exist.

The first trip to Tibet required 12 days of travelling by horse and sedan chair to cover the 300 to 400 miles from his home at Chengtu to the Tibetan border. More recently the Chinese have built fairly good roads to the border. Once within Tibet the horse and mule are the only means of travel. The Tibetans, who are the dirtiest of people, as they never take a bath, resent the penetration of western ideas. They have little understanding of the outside world as their education, in fact their whole life, is controlled by the Lamaistic religious system, thus superstition is rampant. The purpose of Dr. Agnew's trips was to do some research among the natives, particularly in regard to environment, nutrition, and dental health, etc. Their food consists of "dsamba", a potent mixture of rancid butter and strong west china tea which is strong enough to knock one's head off. Besides 30 or 40 cups of this a day, they add parched ground barley flour to it, thus making a sort of gruel which they eat with their fingers.

Tibet is a mountainous country with the most wonderful scenic beauty in the world. The mountains act as natural barriers to the influx of foreigners. The Tibetans have always feared that they might lose their sovereignty to China or the other neighbouring countries and so they have discouraged and prevented foreigners from visiting their country. One may travel for weeks and never see a white man, declared Dr. Agnew, and even Chinese are very scarce. The Chinese and Tibetans do not travel nor mix with each other.

The farmer, who lives in stone houses that shelter the animals in the ground floor, grows barley in the valleys, which are about 9 to 13,000 feet above sea level, while the nomads live in tents on the mountain slopes and tend flocks of sheep and yaks.

Dr. Agnew has experienced civil wars, banditry, and bombings by the Japs. His home has been bombed and his children nearly killed. In spite of all this he expects to return to China next October with his family,

Last Rites for Dr. Banting To be Performed To-Day In Convocation Ceremony

OBJECTIVE

C.O.T.C. Guard of Honour will be Over the Bier from 10 to 12:30 Preceding the Semi-Military Funeral

SERVICE AT 12:30

The late Sir Frederick Banting will be accorded a semi-military funeral in Convocation Hall at 2:30 this afternoon. The ceremony will be conducted by combined arrangements between the University of Toronto and Headquarters of Military District No. 2.

The body will lie in state from 10 to 12:30 o'clock in Convocation Hall where Sir Frederick received his medical degree. A guard of honour of four will be posted over the bier by officers of the C.O.T.C.

Out of respect for Sir Frederick, lectures, laboratories, and clinics in the Faculty of Medicine will be withdrawn after one o'clock.

Principal mourners will include representatives of the university, the Banting Research Foundation, the Defence Medical Association of Canada, the National Research Council, the armed forces, the municipality, the Provincial Legislature, the Federal Parliament, (Continued on Page 4)

Sigrid Undset Will be Guest At Newman Tea

Madame Sigrid Undset, the great Norwegian novelist and Nobel Prize winner, has accepted an invitation extended by the undergraduate members of Newman Club to be their guest of honour at an afternoon tea. She will arrive at the club-house this Thursday afternoon for an informal tea which has been arranged from four until six o'clock.

Madame Undset came to this continent some months ago and has been engaged on a lecture tour in connection with both literary matters and the war, which has so grievously affected her native land. It was her novel "Kristin Lavransdatter" that earned her the recognition of a Nobel Prize.

Foresters' Club To Hear Heenan

About 80 guests are expected to attend the Foresters' Club Annual Banquet in the Great Hall tonight, it was announced last night by Graham Hadley, president of the club.

About 19 District Foresters, of whom 10 will be graduates of the Faculty of Forestry, will add to the total attending. Guest speaker of the evening will be the Hon. Peter Heenan, Ontario Minister of Lands and Forests, who will be introduced by President Cody, Dean C. D. Howe will also address the club.

NOVEL ELECTION POSTERS DECK HART HOUSE WALLS

As Hart House election time draws near the grey stone walls of the main corridor are again enlivened with the colourful propaganda of the candidates. The cardboard posters many of which would grace an art gallery better than a bill board try by novelty, comedy, and straight artistic beauty to catch the passing voter's eye.

By artistry and by all around effectiveness there are two especially which attract the eye. One of these has a well proportioned and accurate sketch of the Peace Tower of Hart House in dark blue on a light blue field. This forms the background for the red lettering proclaiming a candidate for House which does not do justice to the rest of the work. The other poster supporting a prospective Music Committeeman is especially notable for its printing which is sprayed on in white paint so that the script-like letters appear as clouds floating in the air. The background in dark blue consists of a pianist sitting at a grand piano before a large moonlit window.

A timely feature is presented on the poster of an aspirant for the House Committee which gives the recent words of Prime Minister Churchill. "We shall not fail or falter, we shall not weaken or tire, give us the tools and we will finish the job". This quotation surmounts the silhouette of a hart, the emblem of Hart House.

Another poster plugs a nominee for the Library Committee with a portrait of the candidate's head and shoulders in front of a shelf of books. An element of mystery is used by another would-be representative whose poster displays a masked visage topped by the query, "Who for library?" and answered below with his name in large letters.

Up till yesterday the wall space set aside for Art Committee campaigning where one would expect to find artistic ability lavished was only graced by one name. This one, however, was made distinctive from all the rest by setting forth the individual's name in raised letters upon a masonic card.

Most of this work is done by commercial artists, but some of the less ambitious posters are the result of the students' own industry.

Historical Angle Featured In Giant Diamond Jubilee Issue

Black Coffee — aspirins and black coffee.

That's the steady diet of The Varsity's masthead men and reporters during these trying times. For night and day they are struggling with the mightiest task which they have ever undertaken — the production of a 48-page Diamond Jubilee Issue.

Frantically covering the campus for stories with "the historical angle", spending long hours of drudgery in the library scaling hoary volumes of The Varsity; pounding out roaring maws and feeding them to the little wonder that staff members are even more absent than usual from their regular classes.

Actual make-up work on the massive issue is due to begin down at the Press Thursday night. Type will be fitted into frames, and the frames set aside for a day or two until the presses are ready to receive them.

But actual high-pressure work cannot be commenced until the regular issues of the year, of which there are three more, are safely printed and in the hands of the students. Once Friday's issue is out, however, the staff will virtually move down to the press for about ten days, as the usual last-minute strain of producing an issue of The Varsity is magnified ten-fold.

Editor-in-Chief Larry Smith hopes the Jubilee Issue will be on the campus by the morning of Friday 14. Technical difficulties, in connection with the binding of the mammoth publication may delay its appearance until the following Monday, however.

CLASSES CANCELLED

All classes, lectures, laboratories and clinics in the Faculty of Medicine will be withdrawn after 1 p.m. on Tuesday, March 4th, out of respect for the late Sir Frederick Banting.

So Much For So Little

With the situation in the Far East becoming steadily more critical, the United States is concentrating its efforts on relief and rehabilitation for China as a means of keeping up its morale.

There have always been many agencies and societies for Chinese relief throughout the United States and Canada, but now that the need is so urgent the seven largest of these agencies in the States have combined and are staging a drive for $5,000,000 by the end of July. Probably the most impressive part of any drive for funds for such countries as China is the list of uses to which the agency intends to put the money. They plan to do such an incredible amount of good for such a comparatively small sum. Students have probably noticed the same things in campus campaigns for funds for students over there. As the director of the present drive said, there is no country in the world where a dollar will go so far and do so much good. This will probably be an important factor in bringing in the smaller donations.

According to the directors, "The $5,000,000 campaign will permit the agencies to continue and enlarge their work in supplying medical aid to the wounded and sick; it will provide relief and rehabilitation for multitudes; it will aid in the establishment of additional industrial cooperatives; it will strengthen the efforts of Chinese colleges and universities in education and research despite their enforced retreat before the invader. The campaign in short, will reduce the sum total of human misery among the 450,000,000 Chinese, and aid in laying the foundations for the reconstruction and rehabilitation of the new China which will come out of the war."

To brighten their serious account of what needs to be done in China, the agencies added a list of unusual donations received. Included were a portrait in oils of Mme. Chiang Kai-Shek, donated by Robert Bauer, an American artist; an eighteenth century Chinese embroidered bedspread; and a sapphire and diamond ring. Edna St. Vincent Millay donated all rights to her poem "To Pao-Chin, a Boatman on the Yellow Sea," and a retired surgeon handed in his case of fine surgical instruments.

Fashion Shows by Gouts

Propaganda is a peculiar thing. You can usually detect it fairly easily when you come in contact with it, but it is a totally different matter to attempt to plan any of it yourself with any degree of originality. But no field seems to be safe from it today and often the more incongruous the setting, the more successful it is likely to be.

Witness the latest travelling fashion show. We had always thought of fashion shows as exclusively frivolous feminine pastimes, but not this one. It has a definite and serious purpose, other than displaying what the fashionable female must have for spring wear. Eighteen British mannequins have sailed from England to South America to tour the country modelling the latest London fashions, including designs from such famous houses as Worth, Paquin, Molyneux, and Norman Hartnell, who designs many of the Queen's clothes.

The models have been given special instructions on what to say about the war, and will compete with similar shows sponsored by the Nazis, displaying Parisian models which have been flown across the ocean. As further proof that the exhibit is more than a fashion show, none of the clothes on display will be for sale. Instead, South American dress companies will be permitted to copy them, providing they agree to do so exclusively in British-made materials.

The show, by the way, was organized and sponsored by the Marquess of Willingdon, former Governor General of Canada, whose niece is one of the models. Evidently the trend is to more attractive forms of propaganda!

Anti-Hitler Germans

Loyal French, Norwegian, Dutch — even loyal Italian groups — are common enough on this side of the Atlantic today, but the first group, so far as we know, of Germans loyal to America has been organized in New York. It calls itself the German-American Congress for democracy, and its purpose is to uncover Hitler agents in this country and to counteract their propaganda.

The newly-organized society held its first meeting the other day in New York and received messages of congratulation from Wendell Willkie and other important politicians. The chairman, Dr. Frank Bohn, is a lecturer in political economy at the University of Southern California, and associate of the Crel Committee of Public Information in the first World War.

Addressing the meeting, Dr. Bohn said that Hitler was spending millions in an attempt to capture the support of the German-American working population in this country, and that the Hitler philosophy had already made considerable inroads in the German language newspapers and churches in the Middle West.

He was followed by a series of prominent German-American speakers, representatives of various industries, all of whom thoroughly criticized the Nazi system and stressed the superiority of business conditions over here. The speakers included a woman who was a former Socialist deputy in the German Reichstag — she spoke of the unenviable position of women in Germany — and a former publisher of a Berlin newspaper.

Religion Goes To College

You have to be original and right on your toes to get ahead in any business these days but ingenuity in a minister, in order to maintain a hold on his college-age congregation, is something you don't expect. However, the rector of a church in a small town in New York state has employed a little with evidently the greatest success.

The rector discovered that there were 260 boys and girls from his parish away at school and college, and he decided to pay each of them a personal visit, after making sure that it met with their approval. It did more than that. It met with the enthusiastic approval of college officials and faculties as well. He visited twenty-five schools and colleges — mostly in New England — in eight days and, of course, gathered a few religious attitudes of college students.

On his return home he reported, among other things, that he had not met a single conscientious objector; that students were definitely not enthusiastic for the United States to enter the war; that campus religious activity is increasing and many students are active in social and church work; most students attend some church services.

AR MUSIC

Drama

How They Could Have More Fun

University Symphony Orchestra

The idea behind the inception of the University Symphony was and is excellent — students playing good music for the enjoyment of it all. The actuality, however, is far from the ideal and it is necessary, if the organization is to continue its existence, that it should change drastically from its present form.

Last Thursday evening, to a paltry two hundred faithful in Convocation Hall, the orchestra presented a concert which might have been excellent, which in fact should have been excellent, but which actually

R.C.M.P. Finds German Measles Rampant

All Students Discovered with Enemy Measles to be Interned and Ostracized without Trial

NO FUN OR FAVOURS

It has been brought to the attention of the university authorities that various forms of fifth-column activity are rife right here in the heart of the university. What with the Y.C.L. distributing pamphlets to join their club (membership for free) and the Hart House Pool Room using red and even pink balls the R.C.M.P. have found it necessary to guard the entire university grounds.

Besides these activities, there has recently been discovered a great number of students that have in their possession various forms of German measles. It is known as a fact that these students go quietly about their tasks pausing only now and again to spread the scourge in different class-rooms.

However, the R.C.M.P. are pleased to announce that they have rounded up most of these enemies of the state.

Special treatment has been accorded these traitors and they will be quarantined as well as interned. The authorities have prepared a beautiful little concentration camp in the Dark Room of the Camera Club, and what with the examinations coming on, it sounds like a mighty good idea.

Many of the students who have been interned insist that it is through no fault of their own that they have acquired these German measles, but the authorities insist that there is definite proof which shows an allegiance to the fatherland.

The German press makes no official comment.

Hank Rooster.

must have been painfully disillusioning to those who attended. The orchestra played good music, music which was not beyond its potentialities, but which unfortunately suffered from a host of annoying, easily-correctable faults. An orchestra cannot be said to exist when it cannot play in tune; an orchestra which does not know whether to take a repeat or not is little better; and an orchestra which is as timid and uncertain as the aggregation of last Thursday night should not inflict itself on the public. Still more deplorable in a university orchestra was the fact that players had to be imported at the last moment from groups outside the university, mostly because students never show enough interest.

Throughout the evening many of these deplorable mistakes were made by individuals. The flutes, especially the second, were often off pitch; the whole orchestra was out of tune with the oboe after the piano concerto (because no one had thought to suggest a return to oboe pitch); the trumpets did not take sufficient care to keep in tune all evening. The flute could not get a certain solo passage in the first movement of the Haydn symphony, in fact never got it all year, but no serious attempt was made to correct this mistake until the pre-concert rehearsal in Convocation Hall. The attempt was a failure. Allowances must be made because of the disrupting change of conductors in January. It is unfair to ask a conductor to give an orchestra his interpretation of a program in a month of weekly practices. And this orchestra needed more than corrections of interpretation.

The poor conductor of this crowd of pleasure-seeking individuals has a terrible time. He has no real authority, (Continued on Page 4)

Meds And Emmanuel Reach Waterpolo Finals

Defeat School and Victoria In Semi-Finals Yesterday

Jim Baldwin, Former Intercollegiate, Gets Three Goals to Lead Medmen to 4-1 Victory Over Traditional Rivals

DE MARCO PACES SCHOOL

Sr. Meds clambered over their bitter rivals from School into the water-polo finals yesterday afternoon as they dunked the Engineers 4-1 in the Hart House pool. The victors tangle with Emmanuel on Wednesday for the Eckhart Cup.

The Doctors played fast and hard throughout the contest to outspeed and outplay their opponents. School, sparked by De Marco made the occasional sally into enemy territory but their efforts were blocked by the starry goal-keeping of Art Boyd.

Jim Baldwin of last year's intercollegiate team, was the scoring hero of the game, whamming home three of the Meds four goals. Murray added the final counter.

The Medics jumped into an early lead as Baldwin hurled a hard shot into the top right corner of the net. Shortly after Frankie De Marco, the Engineers' leading light, whipped the ball past Boyd to even the count. That was all for the losers.

Baldwin added another goal before the first period closed. In the second half Murray and Baldwin completed the score without a murmur in reply from the Engineers.

Sr. Meds: Best D, Best S, Turner, Baldwin, Boyd, Park, Cram, Murray, Culiner.

Sr. S.P.S.: Turner, Allan, Idenden, Reeves, Rogers, De Marco, Staples, Mees.

ARTS PREDOMINATES BADMINTON ENTRIES

The interfaculty badminton championship matches will get under way tomorrow night in both the upper and lower gym of Hart House at seven o'clock.

Although there are fewer faculties represented this year than usual there are just as many men on the entry lists. 28 players will compete for the crown won last year by Ford of Meds. Meds also won the team championship last year. Not one Doctor is on the line-up this time, however.

The Arts colleges have a large percentage of the entries as 20 of the total number of combatants are from Vic or U.C. The Scarlet and Gold have entered 12 candidates, and the Royal College 8. School has only 3 representatives.

Powerful Bearcats Led by Jackson, Fennell, Green, and Morewood Shut Out Vic 2-0

HOFFMAN STARS FOR VIC

Emmanuel's scrappy bearcats clawed Victoria into submission yesterday afternoon as they came from behind with a second half assault to drop the Scarlet and Gold out of the waterpolo playoffs by a 2-1 win. The Theologs now enter the finals against Sr. Meds on Wednesday.

The winners fought savagely to overcome a 1-goal lead which Vic had gained in the opening period, and scored two goals in quick succession as the game faded.

The outstanding star of the game was Frank Hoffman the Vic goalie who turned shot after shot away in miraculous fashion. He foiled MacRae three times in the first half on close shots. Pete Quentin picked up the ball at his own "blue-line" and bobbed it up the pool around his check. Young took a lovely set-up pass and heaved it into the Emmanuel nets to give Vic a one-goal first session lead.

Emmanuel struggled back and had play after play turned aside by an alert Vic defence, but eventually Old Faithful Doug Knott knotted the count. Shortly afterward Norwood took a pass from Green to win the game.

Jackson, Fennell, Green and Morewood stood out in the Emmanuel triumph. Quentin led the Vic attack assisted notably by Nixon and Landell.

Emmanuel: McRae, Jackson, Kallgren, Hamilton, Morewood, Green, Eagle, Fennell.

Victoria I: Nixon, Hoffman, MacDonald, Bryce, Quentin, Birkinshaw, Young, Landell, Taylor.

HAROLD AXON

Tall, quiet, likeable and a brilliant all-round athlete, that's U.C.'s Hal Axon.

Hal landed at Varsity in 1937 and immediately commenced his athletic career by making the Intermediate Intercollegiate Basketball championship team of that season. During the same year, he performed in interfaculty swimming, waterpolo and baseball.

Next year, Harold was a member of the championship Intercollegiate Intermediate Swimming team. The same year, he was the mainstay and playing coach of U.C.'s good junior basketball team, and also played on baseball, waterpolo, and swimming interfaculty teams.

During his third year, Harold played on the joint-champion Intercollegiate Senior Basketball team. He also starred for U.C. in interfaculty rugby, and baseball and coached the U.C. junior basketball squad.

This year Hal has participated in interfaculty rugby, volleyball, baseball, waterpolo and in the swimming meets. He is a valuable member of this year's champion U.C. swimming team, and is again coach of the Royal College basketball squad. Then to fill in his spare time, he has played for Simpson Grads in the City Senior Basketball League and is in no small way one of the reasons why Simpson's seem headed for the championship.

Thus, this year's graduation exercises will see Varsity lose one of its greatest all-round athletes. He leaves with the admirable record of three championship intercollegiate teams in three years, and this year would have been a member of the Senior Intercollegiate Basketball and Swimming teams.

ABOUT ARBITERS

This is a little late to be harping back to Saturday's basketball tussle between St. Michael's and the Varsity All-Stars, but this aimless train of thought about refereeing was intended for Monday's issue but lack of space kept it from the eyes of our breathlessly-expectant reader.

Fraser Allen was on the receiving end of a choice assortment of verbal brickbats, emanating chiefly from the more vociferous members of the St. Michael's roster. The general consensus of opinion seemed to be that Allen was not calling the plays with a careful eye. We were sitting there beside the St. Mike's lads, and would like to interpret the situation as it appears to us.

First of all, the Irish were naturally excited, and anybody is whacky who thinks that the boys would harbour any grudges about the result of the game or the way in which it was handled. The final whistle almost invariably means the end of all chatter about the traditional blindness of referees. Moreover, in all the cracks sent Allen-ward there was no malice.

Now that we've cleared up one point, let's deal with Fraser Allen himself. Just as it is true that the Irish were not grousing in their barracking of the referee, so we can impute no sinister motives to Allen. We think he called them as he saw them. And after all, why shouldn't he? There is never any danger of there being a frame-up in these contests, particularly in an exhibition affair where nothing is at stake. On the other hand, there were a lot of decisions called on both which would have done with a closer look.

The official in charge of a game simply cannot call every play with the same amount of correctness; inevitably some of the decisions will be a trifle ragged around the edges. That was the case on a little too many of the plays called on Saturday night. Consequently the game lacked a lot of the neatness and zip which are usually associated with big-time basketball. Referees have their off-nights, as well as off-moments in the games, when they are not right on top of the play, but there is one faculty which is the happy possession of some refs, without which even the most conscientious referee may allow the game to degenerate into a scrappy affair.

That all-too-rare quality is authority, by which we mean the ability to call the plays briskly, impersonally, and clearly, so that there is no hint of doubt in the minds of any as to the referee's confidence in the decision he has made. In the more inexperienced groups of the interfaculty circuit, a chummy style of refereeing is not only acceptable but is advisable where some of the fellows are not well-versed in the rules of the game. However, a big-time game needs a big-time performance on the part of the officials as well. The best example we can think of as illustrating this point is Alfie Pearson, who has officiated in hundreds of cage games. The hard-working Alfie keeps the play moving at a quick and smooth pace throughout, because all his decisions are crisp and sure enough to allow the players little time in which to start stalling or questioning his rulings.

The personable Allen did his best on Saturday night, but the slickest official could not have made that tussle look like a grade-A display of basketball. The All-Stars were as good as everyone expected them to be, and showed us what cage talent there is around the campus at present, which combined with the St. Mike's squad would have made up a formidable intercollegiate outfit. But the Irish were simply not good enough on Saturday to make it much of a game. The tilt was far from being as impressive as the joust between the same Double Blue team and O.C.E. a few weeks ago. Bill Roberts turned in his customary earnest effort for the Irish, and deserved more than his eight points. LaVarnway made dozens of shots during the course of the game, but just couldn't get the apple through the hoop. The other ace snipers of the Double Blue eagles were also missing by miles. We think that if anybody had an off-night on Saturday, it was St. Mike's. We know they are capable of a much better brand of basketball than they displayed against the All-Stars, but on Saturday they simply could not get "control" of the game.

Before the issues of this journal complete their course for another year, we would like to hand a journalistic orchid to St. Michael's College for the great contribution which has been made by the Double Blue to the growth of basketball on this campus. The entry this year of the St. Mike's team into the city league, as well as five interfaculty teams in the intramural loop deserves and receives this corner's unstinted praise.

IRISH BEAT TRINITY IN HOCKEY STRUGGLE

St. Mike's A hockey team fighting savagely against elimination pulled themselves back into the playoff picture by trouncing the group-leading and last year's champions from Trinity 4-0 at Varsity Arena yesterday afternoon.

As the Irish went into the game, the last on their schedule, they were two points down to the Anglicans in Group 2. They had to win to remain a contender. And they did with a grand display of concerted power. They are now tied with Trinity for the group leadership and will play off with them on Thursday afternoon at 6 o'clock for the right to continue in the Jennings Cup hunt.

The Irish scored three goals in the opening period to take a commanding lead over their rivals, and added a fourth late in the final session.

Bennett led the scoring parade with two goals. Buckley opened the game with an early goal, and Hector completed the count.

St. Mike's A: O'Brien, Callahan, Buckley, MacKenzie, Bennett, Hector, Morrison, Egan, O'Sullivan, Fyfe.

Extensive Tract For Forestry Is Acquired

Dr. Cody Thanks Hon. Peter Heenan and Deputy Minister W. Cain for Aiding University to Obtain Land

6000 ACRES

A "University Forest," of between 5,000 and 6,000 acres in Haliburton county has been acquired by the University Faculty of Forestry for use as a "practice camp" by its undergraduates. President Cody announced last night at the annual banquet of the Foresters' Club in Hart House.

The President expressed "profound thanks" to the Hon. Peter Heenan, Ontario Minister of Lands and Forests, and Deputy Minister Walter Cain, guest speakers of the evening, as being largely responsible for making the tract available to the university.

Title to the land will still remain vested in the crown, Dr. Cody pointed out, and the university will hold the tract on a basis whereby it will pay a percentage on lumber removed. While the university had been able to acquire some of the land by itself, most of the present tract was made available through the co-operation of the Ontario Government.

Described by the President as a "helper and benefactor who had rendered a great public service," in making the University Forest possible, Mr. Heenan declared that the Forestry Faculty had hitherto been handicapped in lacking a practice camp, and hoped that the foresters would make use of the new facilities to carry on research in reforestation.

Nestled in the north country lakes north east of Lake Simcoe, the new tract is about 150 miles from Toronto, and contains pure stands of white pine and hardwoods and mixed stands of hardwood and softwood timber, all of various ages. It meets the requirements of the faculty in the nature of the forest and in accessibility to Toronto, and is the culmination of many years' effort on the part of authorities.

Every student in the woodmen's faculty has to spend 11 weeks in outdoor work of this kind; this includes three periods of three weeks each following each academic session at the St. George Street building. Formerly it made use (Continued on Page 4)

VARSITY'S SIXTIETH BIRTHDAY MARKED BY MAMMOTH ISSUE

It's The Varsity's 60th birthday — and since January, the staff has been celebrating by taking a busmen's holiday and turning on the biggest effort in the entire history of the paper.

A good deal of the printer's ink in the veins of local campus journalists is flowing into the 48 pages of the Diamond Jubilee Publication of the undergraduate newspaper. Newsounds, still faced with a good many sleepless nights before the mammoth edition can appear on the street, continue to browse through the yellowed pages of the 60 dust-covered tomes.

For the bulky big issue is expected to be the crowning triumph of the paper's history; something never attempted before on the U. of T. campus — something which may never be attempted again.

College Heads Pay Tribute To Scientist

Messages Have Been Received by the University of Toronto from McGill, Queen's, Laval, Harvard, and Johns Hopkins

EXPRESSIONS OF RESPECT

During the last few days many messages of tribute to the late Sir Frederick Banting have been received by the University of Toronto, officials announced yesterday.

Principal James of McGill University wrote: "McGill University grieves with you in the loss of Sir Frederick Banting, whose personality and attainment gained for him a unique place in Canadian life."

From Principal Wallace of Queen's University came the message: "I had learned not only to respect and admire, but to love him. He was so unassuming and so real, completely unspoiled by fame and unflinching in his devotion to duty. May I offer our sympathy to the whole university at this time?"

Dean Chase of Harvard University said: "How shocked all of us here were at the tragic death of Professor Banting! It is a tremendous loss not only to the University of Toronto but to the world of science. It must come as an especially hard blow in this time when universities need every good man who is available."

Monsieur Camille Roy, Rector of Laval University, sent the message: "Universite Laval a appris avec tres vives douleurs la mort de Sir Frederick Banting, gloire de l'universite de Toronto et de la science Canadienne."

Dr. Thomas S. Cullen of Johns Hopkins University wrote: "Distressed to learn of the death of Sir Frederick, who has brought so much renown to the University of Toronto."

Hart House Committees To be Elected To-Day

Varsity Bandsmen End 1940-41 Season

A note of sorrow rang out among the bandmen last week, as Sergeant Dent announced that it was the last meeting of the band for this year.

The elections for the academic year 1941-42 were held; Lionel Dent was elected president for the third term and George Lark was again elected secretary. The bandmen expressed a hearty vote of thanks to Lt.-Col. H. H. Madill, Lt.-Col. W. S. Wilson and Lt. E. A. MacDonald for their encouragement.

The season will officially close with an informal party at which Lieut. E. A. MacDonald will be the guest of honour. Absentees desiring information about this party may call Sgt. Dent or G. M. Lark.

No, it isn't double talk. This sort of thing has been standard journalists' conversation for the past two months and more.

The issue is scheduled to hit the campus in another week or two. Presses begin rolling tomorrow night, and the entire copy will be distributed, neatly fastened together, free to every student on the campus. The issue will be limited to one copy per person, and extra copies will be obtainable for 10 cents a copy, to students who wish to send copies home or mail them to friends, relatives, and chance acquaintances.

Sir Frederick Banting Honoured by Thousands At Funeral Yesterday

Funeral Services for the Co-discoverer of Insulin were Conducted in Convocation Hall by the Rev. H. J. Cody, in the Presence of Academic Dignitaries, State Officials, Military Representatives and Students

GUARDED BY CANADIAN OFFICERS' TRAINING CORPS

The nation paid its last tribute to Canada's greatest scientist yesterday. Attended by academic dignitaries, state officials and representatives of the fighting forces, Sir Frederick Banting, famed as the discoverer of insulin, was laid to rest yesterday afternoon following funeral services in Convocation Hall by the Rev. H. J. Cody, President of the University of Toronto.

All morning prior to the ceremony, thousands of mourning citizens had filed through Convocation Hall where the body of Sir Frederick lay in state, guarded by four officers of the Canadian Officers' Training Corps.

The Hall was completely filled and hundreds of the general public were standing outside on the steps of the building and on the campus across the roadway when the funeral services began at 2:30.

President Cody paid the late scientist a moving tribute in his funeral address. Speaking of the untimely death of Sir Frederick, he said, "Soon or late we all must die; it is not given to every one to die for his country, for freedom and for justice, to die in the path of duty, to die on a mission fraught with deep significance to science and to the success of the great cause for which we fight. Such was the earthly end of Frederick Grant Banting. Tragic? Yes, but also triumphant. Was it not a noble passing?"

The President traced Sir Frederick's career, relating details of his pre-undergraduate and graduate life and telling how he had enlisted for overseas service in 1917, serving as medical officer with the 44th Canadian Infantry. He told how the then Dr. Banting had practised for a time in London, Ontario, at the close of hostilities, and had later returned to the University of Toronto to carry on scientific research.

"He won his first victory in the discovery of insulin," said President Cody. "His was the creative in the whole investigation; without that idea no progress could have been made. By Banting's discovery and the various subsequent developments of insulin the disease of diabetes has been robbed of its ancient terror."

"The discovery of insulin, epoch-making as it was, was only the beginning of a long series of investigations. He (Continued on Page 4)

FORESTRY PROFESSOR PRESENTS OIL PAINTING TO WOODMEN'S FACULTY

An oil painting, portraying a group of second growth white pines on the edge of a field in the diffused light of an evening afterglow, is the gift to the Faculty of Forestry of Professor E. M. Walker, Dean C. D. Howe announced Saturday.

Outranking the faculty's photographic portraits, the picture will serve as a reminder to the school of Professor Walker's valuable contribution during his years as a teacher of forest entomology, the Dean stated.

Age! Old Chestnut of Exams Cracked Open Again by Students

Should term exams be abolished? That's what the S.P.S. Debate Club will attempt to decide today, and that is what the Varsity is still wondering after its survey of student opinion on the subject yesterday.

"Abolish the whole works," John Cameron, II C. & F., says, "while you are concentrating on the subject you're being examined on, you let the rest slide — for weeks sometimes."

"Do away with them? No," said Jean Christie, II O.T. "You'd never know where you're at. — By the way, we have lots of them in O.T."

Marg Avison, an English Lang. and Lit. grad of last year, thinks term exams should certainly be done away with. "The examination system gives education the wrong slant. Finals are too much," she says.

Bill Bryce, I S.P.S., declares them a nuisance. He thinks "most of the fellows agree that cramming half the year's work into an hour doesn't give you enough time to think."

Turn Out And Vote!

Today the men of the university will go to the polls to choose, from a long list of candidates, members of next year's Hart House committees. As polling time draws nigh we can only repeat our previously expressed hope that an intelligent franchise be exercised by each and every individual.

Qualifications, after all, should be the basic criterion for voting a particular person into a particular office. Under the present system of electing Hart House committees, qualifications scarcely enter into the picture, and it is not untrue to say that many of the present committees contain members who know very little about the service they were called upon to administer.

This is not the time for a discussion of committee elections with a view to revising them in order to get better men. The candidates, qualified or not, have been put up by the various colleges and faculties, some of them after internal splits in the faculty ranks. To get the right men—good men—into the right office, it is up to the voter to think about his vote and to consider qualifications as a primary factor. Allied to this is the need for a complete turnout of the electorate. A large number of voters and an intelligent interest in voting will do much to ensure successful elections and capable committee representation.

For The Future

The press has been hot these days with controversy over the League of Nations Society in Canada. It is astonishing the amount of uproar with which the not at all startling views of this group are greeted.

Aside from a pair pun—"The Toronto Branch of the League of Nations Society has not hesitated to go where even Sir Norman Angell fears to tread"—the editorial which appeared recently in the Globe and Mail had little to recommend it. Rather than being concerned with issues, the editorial is merely an expression of an attitude of distaste towards any constructive thinking about the future. There seems to be a rather moronic adherence to that good old adage, "Take care of the present, and let the future take care of itself." It is intimated that Churchill believes this. Why then, it is queried, should this presumptuous group, the League of Nations Society, dare to do otherwise.

But the problem is there. Only a blind man could fail to perceive it in all its enormity. Efforts to solve it will never, of course, provide a complete answer at the present time. But constructive suggestions are surely not to be sneered at as attempt to have "the future of the world cut out and placed on a hot griddle to be done to a turn."

No one can deny the truth of the statement of the president of the society, Mr. Clifford Sifton, when he says "Merely to defeat our enemies is not enough; we must understand how the present struggle arose, realize what is at stake, and see as the reward of victory a better world for all peace-loving people."

We must know and be determined to use the means capable of successfully dealing with world problems."

To transform these abstractions into concrete plans is what the League of Nations Society is endeavouring to do. It is inconceivable that Churchill and his colleagues would regard work of this type as unnecessary. The society wants to ensure that what happened once, will not happen again; that delegates will not carry with them to the Peace Conference bitter animosities and no rational preconception of what their peace aims should be.

Specifically, the organization proposes a League of Free Nations, which would be determined to keep the world a peaceful one. For those who think that such an arrangement would not be practicable, the society reminds us that it was not the League of Nations who failed the countries who participated in it, when action was not taken against Japan and Italy for violating its principles, but the countries who failed the League. As a measure of preparedness against possible aggressors, the society suggests also the federal union of peoples with similar racial ideological and economic backgrounds.

Their proposal of a central Colonial Administrative Commission seems on the face of it a very practical one. "Governing countries should not be permitted to obtain economic advantages for their nationals not available to the nationals of other countries on equitable terms," reads their manifesto. The absence of such a principle was one of the First Causes of the great conflict which confronts us today. By the adoption of this principle and a body to see that it was properly carried out, economic rivalry would be lessened and nations could live in greater harmony with one another.

It cannot be over-emphasized that what the League of Nations Society presents in its manifesto is by way of suggestion only. It is offered not as a hard and fast plan of procedure, but as a stimulus to public discussion.

This is an organization with worthy aims and one which deserves the whole-hearted support of the students of this university. As is stated in the manifesto, "It is to your interests, to Canada's, to the world's, to study now every practicable means of maintaining peace so that when victory is won, the Government, supported, not by blind hatred, but by informed and determined public opinion, may take an intelligent lead in establishing a world order in which all nations may achieve civilization in an ever-ascending scale."

The Magic Of Frost

Frost is brother to the cold. Where they walk a crystal path seals the hour fold on fold. On the gray and lonely stone they carve the imprint of a leaf. On the empty window-glass suddenly a garden grown lifts its tracery of flowers in a summer white and brief. On the thin and brittle twigs traceries of jewels appear, and the trees that lift on high empty branches to the sky, bend in the wind that brings this way cold and his quiet brother, frost . . . bend in the wind and suddenly bloom with buds of light, with beauty lost until this white, this radiant day.

ARTEMUS

Beethoven's Best

Toronto Symphony Orchestra

Last night, the Toronto Symphony Orchestra performed its second and last Beethoven symphony of the season. This time it was the Seventh, the symphony which is only just coming into its recognition—perhaps because of Stokowski's inroads on the Fifth? The orchestra was generally very good, and succeeded in making the performance enjoyable in the extreme. Unfortunately, the rhythm, especially in the pounding last movement, was uncertain at times. That is about the worst thing that could have happened to this symphony. The bridge passage in the first movement between the flutes and violins was eminently satisfactory. Sir Ernest took the second movement fast enough to make its Allegretto tempo marking evident. The whole attitude of the movement was one of tremendous restraint, and because of that it gained in power. It was the highlight

Co-eds Lament

Tsk, Tsk! Goodness, Gracious! And a Pish Tosh!

Somebody just told me (may the demons treat his departed soul with due respect) that next month is the time appointed for all the little butterflies butterfles of the campus to reap their retribution. Examinations! How absolutely awful!

So—betrinking myself of all the aunts, cousins, grand-parents, sisters, brothers, not to mention parents, who are expectantly waiting to proudly display my graduation picture to all the long-suffering neighbours within a 50-mile radius and to send duplicates, with calendars attached, to all acquaintances fortunate enough to live out of direct range and therefore relieved of the responsibility of offering polite comments. So—I decided to betake myself home for a change and spend a profitable evening in deep concentration. (The best laid plans of mice and men . . .)

So—I got home and settled down for some profound thinking—oh—but wait a minute! To study you have to have a book.

So—I went upstairs and approached my desk with some little trepidation. Now, I wonder where Mom put that French book? I distinctly remember using it to hold up my bedroom window open, but where is it now? Hmm-m-m, this drawer is already partly open, I'll try it.

By the prophet's seven beards! Now where, between heaven and earth did this, could this collection emanate from? Varsity, Varsity, everywhere. Well, they'll always do to start a fire in the kitchen range. Hmmm, looks like an essay. Essay? Did I write an essay? Oh, no, it says "Molira O'Toole" on it, "Religious Knowledge". Wonder how it got here? Oh well, it probably isn't of any use to any one, might as well throw it out.

Now what? . . . A book. That's funny. Doesn't look like a school book. "Pansy, Pride of Pembroke". There's a book mark in page 187, wonder why? "And the fair maiden threw herself on the mossy bank beside the murmuring stream and even the birds in the trees hushed their singing at the sight of such profound misery in one so young and beautiful." Gosh! Poor kid! I wonder what happens? I can't leave her just lying there, that would be heartless, I wouldn't sleep a wink. I'd better find out.

Study? Who said anything about studying? There's lots of time. I'll do it tomorrow. Don't bother me.

"Far away the handsome hero, unmindful of his beloved-one's plight . . . squeak . . ."

IS THIS FAIR?

A week ago Torontonensis called for all outstanding write-ups, pictures and name lists to be handed in. Some of these are still missing. We repeat, is this fair?

Where, for example, are the following:

- U.C. Swimming Team picture and name list?
- University Symphony Orchestra write-up?
- Victoria Hockey Team picture and name list?
- St. Hilda's II Basketball Team picture and name list?
- St. Hilda's Badminton Team picture and name list?
- North House picture?

WARNING: If material scheduled to appear in Torontonensis is not in by to-day, our final deadline, Torontonensis will be published without it, and the space will be charged for.

Be fair—Co-operate—Get this material in!!!

FLIERS TROUCE U.C. TO GAIN FIRST PLACE

Aerial Navigation's hockey team leaped into first place in their group by trouncing U.C. II 10-3 in their final scheduled game at Varsity Arena yesterday afternoon.

The Fliers were tied for the lead with S.P.S. IV who now have a game in hand. If the Engineers defeat Knox they will force a group playoff.

Aerial Navigation were far superior to their rivals and had little difficulty in scoring. Hall, Duff and Lake led the parade with 3 goals apiece.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Stan Westcott

SPRING ROUND-UP

The time has come, as it does occasionally, for this department to cease meandering around amid the least pertinent of topics imaginable and to talk of something intimately connected with Varsity Sport. This catalytic reversal of policy is made in order to bring the student body, every man, woman and child, up to date regarding the interfaculty athletic situation.

The playoffs are about ready to squint around the corner at us, so it seems fitting that you should know who is going to win the various sport titles, who is going to come second, and the answers to other questions of a similar nature. These perplexing and complicated problems will be solved in the following paragraphs. Forget the irritating monotony of your prof. as he drones on through the lecture and lend an attentive ear.

HOOPS MY DEAR

There are seven basketball teams at the University of Toronto which have not as yet endured the suffering and dark despair of defeat. Knox A, Meds III, S.P.S. IV, and Aerial Navigation's A team have completed the six-game schedule without a loss. O.C.E. A, Emmanuel A, and Vic IV have won 5 consecutive struggles and have 1 game yet to go.

Sr. School have dropped 1 of their 6 contests but are the winners of Group 1. The junior members of the Faculty of Applied Science clinched the title in Group 2 by downing Meds yesterday afternoon. St. Mike's D and Emmanuel B are locked in a life and death struggle with 8 points apiece in Group 9 and both have a game left on their agenda.

If you have traced the train of logic slowly and carefully through the above, you will no doubt have concluded that O.C.E.'s high scoring band of cagers will win the Sifton Cup. This is correct. Hal Brown dined heartily at Burwash Hall Monday evening and promptly suffered an attack of measles. This does not necessarily mean that Harold got them directly from Miss Falconbridge's delectably burned potatoes and leathery steak. Nevertheless he got them and will be out for the playoffs. All the same the Teachers will triumph.

They will meet a team of Engineers in the finals. For homework you may figure out whether it will be the Seniors, Juniors, or last year's champs, the Fourths. Knox's A team will also make the semi-finals but will be rudely pushed into the ashcan at this juncture.

PUCK PARADE

Knox A lead the hockey warriors with 6 straight wins in Group IV. Jr. School have 5 triumphs to head Group 1, and have one game left to play. O.C.E. cleaned out its league with 5 victories and 1 tie for eleven points. St. Mike's A bombarded the Trinity citadel Monday afternoon to take a 4-0 victory and tie last year's title-holders for the top rung in Group 2. There will be a playoff Thursday between these two outfits to decide which of them will continue into the Jennings Cup hunt. Trinity will have to be on their toes to hold the Irish.

Pharmacy have a slim 1-point edge over Vic Seconds in Group III, and the final clash between these two squads tomorrow will settle their argument. Aerial Navigation and S.P.S. IV are knotted in Group 6, each having lost a game to the other. Another playoff will have to be staged to settle their private feud. It is a simple matter now to see that Jr. School will waltz home with the Jennings Cup. To accomplish this feat they will scuttle St. Mike's in the finals. Knox A and S.P.S. Fourth are the other teams that will be serious contenders.

Four of the six leaders in the mushball leagues have gone through the season undefeated, namely Sr. Meds, Jr. U.C., St. Mike's B and O.C.E. Emmanuel and Pharmacy are deadlocked in Group 4 with four wins and a loss each. S.P.S. IV are 2 points up on Meds III in Group 5.

Obviously the swashbuckling Teachers from O.C.E. will snaffle their second trophy by edging Sr. Meds in two games out of three. Jr. U.C. is the only other band of ball-sluggers to have even an outside chance at the Spalding Platter. So mutters the crystal ball.

PONYLESS POLO

If Emmanuel desire to earn their sole championship of the year they will have to play much more adroitly and skillfully than they did on Monday to liquidate Meds in the waterpolo finals this afternoon. Your irritator doubts if they can do it.

You will now no doubt feel that you can lay your bets with the utmost confidence.

Schoolmen Down Meds To Clinch Top Rung

Hoopsters' 38-33 Triumph Prevents Either U.C. or Vic from Gaining a First Place Tie in Group 2

Jr. School clinched first place in Group 2 by downing Jr. Meds 38-33 yesterday afternoon in an upper gym basketball attraction. By conquering in this game the Engineers prevented either U.C. or Vic from catching a first place tie.

The victors led 23-16 at the half, but were outscored 17-15 in the final period. Johnny Lucas led the Engineers with 10 points and Wilson ran him a close second, scoring 8 points. Davies of Meds was the game's high scorer, picking up a total of 7 field goals. Weinbaum had 10 points.

Jr. S.P.S.: Kellam 6, Wilson 8, Workman, Potchello 5, Brooks, Shorter 4, Lucas 10, Anderson 3, Ciglan 2.

Jr. Meds: Kyle 4, Kucherepa 4, Weinbaum 10, Arnap 1, Davies 14, Bryans, Wells.

ing memory loss, which he at least covered up. The other two movements were much more satisfactory. The soloist's pedalling was excellent, once he got started. And his octaves were perfect always.

A Nocturne written by the Toronto composer, Gerald Bates, at the age of eighteen, showed the general characteristics of the Toronto school of young composers. It contains a very interesting series of chord progressions, played by the strings, with oboe and flute solos superimposed. This one also contained passages inserted at random for piano, celeste, and harp. It would be difficult to imagine an instrument which he did not at some time or another use.

An arrangement of the Weber Perpetuum Mobile by the Czech-Slovakian George Szell was the champagne of the evening. It wasn't very heady though.

CURLING ADVOCATED AS VARSITY SPORT

Universities of the West Are Acclaiming This Sport which, without too Strenuous Effort, Has Carry-Over Value

One sport which has not yet made an appearance on the crowded stage of the Varsity sports scene is the game of curling.

The growth of such annual tournaments as the Macdonald Brier competition has placed the ancient sport in the public eye more of late than in any previous year.

As a college sport, curling has caught on with amazing popularity out in the West. For instance, at the University of Manitoba there are sixteen rinks of four men each, a fair representation from the student body of the size of that university. These college teams have entered play-offs outside their own campus, and have made creditable showings.

One of the merits of curling besides the healthy exercise of the game is the fact that it has a definite carry-over value. It is a sport which can be continued after the student curlier has graduated.

Moreover, it is a sport at which young men can become quite proficient. This has been demonstrated by the fact that youthful curlers have been prominent on dominion championship teams of the last few seasons.

Thirdly, the sport of curling is one which, though calling for practised coordination on the part of the player, does not demand strenuous effort such as is needed for some sports.

Anyone interested in talking over the possibilities of curling as a sport in this university are invited to drop into the Athletic Office of Hart House and have a chat with Athletic Director Warren Stevens.

History repeats and once more Betty Allen and Shirley Geldert of U.C. face each other in the interfaculty badminton finals. This Friday is the day — St. Paul's Church gym the place. It will be a battle royal between these two who are teamed together in the doubles and are a bit of a good pair.

Yesterday Kitty Storey of St. Hilda's bowed to Shirley by scores of 11-2 and 11-3, while Prox Bryans withered the day previous before Betty's onslaught, 11-0, 11-3. Shirley and Betty combined have reached the finals of the U.C. tournament and will probably go great guns in the interfaculty event which will get under way this week. Both these two are badminton players of no mean merit as their records prove. Shirley is last year's interfaculty champ and was a very active member of the intercollegiate team. Betty was an intercollegiate star last year too, and winner of the Ontario Ladies' Junior Championship, as well as runner-up for the Varsity interfaculty crown.

So you see this final match will be good, and we'd like to see more of this sort of thing, or these sorts of things — a correction for the benefit of a dear professor who has done us the honour of reading and even criticizing our column in class. Thank you, a thousand times, dear professor,

Victors Over Senior School and the Victoria Squad Meet in the Final for Interfaculty Honours

FIRST GAME TODAY

This afternoon in Hart House Pool, Sr. Meds and Emmanuel will meet in the opening game of a best two-out-of-three series to decide the winner of the Eckardt Cup and the interfaculty waterpolo crown.

The Purple and Gold's roster includes such classy players as Doug Green and Tom Jackson, who starred on last year's championship intercollegiate team, Ben Morewood who would have been an intercollegiate this year as well as Bill Fennell and Art Hamilton.

Although the Theologs have been playing in the weakest group in the league all year they have shown plenty of power whenever they have run into real competition. Top form shown by them this year was when they downed a powerful Scarlet and Gold squad 2-1 in the semi-finals Monday.

The Sealp-Swingers still have most of their last year's championship team. Sparked by intercollegiate star Jim Baldwin and fortified by Stan and Don Best and Art Boyd in goal they have an aggregation that would make any prospective opponents lose lots of sleep.

The Medmen reached the finals by winding up on top of Group I and defeating Sr. School the Group II representatives in the semi-finals.

VARSITY NETTERS STAGE LAST MATCH

The last tournament in Varsity interfaculty competition for the year gets under way tonight in the upper gym of Hart House.

Despite the increasing pressure of other activities this year, the 1941 entry list is as large as that of a year ago, with 28 of the bird-whorls in the line-up for this tourney.

The Faculty of Medicine is due to surrender its crown to some rival this year, inasmuch as no Medico has entered to attempt a defence of the championship won last year by Ford of Meds. With the individual honours the Men in White will also say goodbye to the team title.

Victoria College leads the parade of starters, with an even dozen men entered. In second place comes the Red and White of U.C., which colours will be worn by eight representatives of the Royal College.

University's Dr. Hanna, Lectures

Dr. Hanna, Director of University Medical Service Lectures on Health Insurance to Medical Students

"INSURANCE COMING"

Dr. J. A. Hanna, Director of University Medical Services for the past four years, addressed a gathering of medical students yesterday afternoon on the subject of "Health Insurance." He told them that the time is coming when health insurance will become prevalent.

"Before the war 32 countries had health insurance and Canada, too, was considering it," said Dr. Hanna. "The medical profession will have to give up the lone wolf idea," explained the director, pointing to the fact that the present average of doctors in Canada is $3,500 per annum and that over 200 doctors are now in relief in Toronto alone during the depression.

Dr. Hanna, speaking of his long connection with the Associated Medical Services of Ontario, of which he was one of the founders, said that the organization was now acquiring approximately 1000 to 1200 new subscribers a month.

"Health insurance may take a while in coming in Canada, as it did in Great Britain," he concluded.

Student Camps During Summer Planned by S.C.M.

The S.C.M. summer vacation program this year includes two events, the Spring Camp for Varsity students only to be held in May following the examinations, and the annual Central Area Conference in September at Geneva Park on Lake Couchiching.

John Coleman, secretary of the S.C.M., emphasized that anyone who desires may attend these whether they have had any previous connection with the Movement or not. He stated that it was "a good opportunity to do some serious thinking about religion and society" and in the case of the Couchiching Conference to meet students from other universities, and assured that there is always lots of fun.

The exam-weary students who attend the Spring Camp will spend the week commencing May 18, recuperating at some camp in the northland which has not as yet been chosen. Last year it was held at Camp Onawa near Huntsville in the Lake of Bays district. A program of talks, focus, and worship will make their vacation worth while and the holiday spirit will be created by (Continued on Page 4)

Spring Brings Examination Fears As Students Commence Studying

By Eleanor Moorhouse

The horrible fact is just beginning to dawn on the majority of students that the exams are less than eight weeks away. Such things as spring elections, and the final meetings of many societies foretell the approaching doom.

Spring is not greeted so warmly on the campus as elsewhere. As one professor gloomily told a class of freshmen, "for four years there will be no spring for you."

Thus the cold spell of the last few days was welcomed back by the students for warmer weather means that May is approaching and most people are trying to forget this. "I get scared when it's spring-like outside," said Marg Scott, III U.C.

The fact that The Varsity will produce its last regular issue tomorrow has an ominous sound. Elizabeth Proctor from Vic says, "When The Varsity stops for the year, I know it's time to start worrying."

Presentation of Degrees At Special Convocation Will Honour Notables

Jubilee Issue To be Allotted By Faculties

When the 48-page Jubilee Issue of The Varsity is distributed about the campus, students will not find copies in the usual places. Distribution of the issue, which marks the 60th Anniversary of the paper will be in charge of the offices of the various faculties and the issue may be obtained there. A fleet of trucks will replace the usual struggling cyclist as the destined copies are rushed to their destination.

Undergraduates are entitled to one copy of this issue free of charge on presentation of their registration cards. Extra copies may be bought at the S.A.C. offices in Hart House and University College and will also be available at several news stands. Graduates who have ordered copies will receive them by mail.

Although the monster publication will roll off the presses a week Friday, binding difficulties will probably hold up distribution until the following Monday or Tuesday afternoon.

Cook Discusses Atom-Smashing

"I believe that our civilization has reached its peak in the development of atom smashing," said Leslie Y. Cook, D.Sc., who spoke at the last meeting of the Chemistry Seminar yesterday. Dr. Cook graduated from the University of Toronto five years ago.

"Each civilization excels in one thing, ours in science, which is the art of transforming energy from one form into another," Dr. Cook said at the smashing of the uranium atom, finally completed in 1938, was discovered what he believes to be the greatest transformation of energy that will ever take place. Dr. Cook said that an atom is either smashed or changed to an atom of another substance by bombarding it with neutrons. An aluminum atom may change to a silicon atom, or it may explode, depending on the rate of speed of the neutron. He said that by means of the Wilson Chamber it is possible to photograph the track of a neutron breaking up the nucleus of an atom.

Dr. Cook stated that when one atom of uranium is split up, 10,000,000,000 calories of energy are released. However, since in using uranium salts only one atom is smashed at one time, and this takes a great deal of electricity, it is not yet a practical source of energy. He mentioned the electron microscope as an indirect development of experiments in atom-smashing, by which it is possible to see things 10 times smaller than those we now see with the present microscope. He said that within the next few years we would probably be able to photograph organic molecules by means of it.

There has been a steady increase in library slips in the last few weeks but the stage has not been reached when seats are at a premium in the library and one hardly leaves it to eat or sleep. The filling out of the exam application form seems to have had little effect on the masses: as one said, "It's not until the exam time-table comes out that I really get hep."

If, however, you want to see a desperate look come into the eyes of your best friend, just mention the rumour going around that the exams may be a few weeks—just a few weeks. He'll love you for it.

Right now—the calm before the storm. "I'm not worried because I haven't done any work, it's only when I do some work and realize how little I know that I begin to worry," says Dorothy Avis, from Vic.

Well, forewarned is forearmed—don't say I didn't warn you.

Sir William Mulock to Confer Doctor of Laws Degree on Moffat, Campbell, McCarthy, Matthews and Bishop

CONVOCATION FRIDAY

A number of honorary degrees are to be conferred tomorrow at a special convocation of the University of Toronto. The ceremony will take place at 3 o'clock in Convocation Hall.

The degree of Doctor of Laws, honoris causa, is to be conferred by Chancellor Sir William Mulock upon the Hon. J. Pierpont Moffat, United States Minister to Canada; Sir Gerald Campbell, British Minister to Washington; the Hon. Leighton McCarthy, Canadian Minister to the United States; the Hon. Albert Matthews, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario; and Air Marshal William A. Bishop.

The degrees were to have been conferred at a Special Convocation in December, but the date of the Convocation was advanced out of respect to the late Lord Lothian, who was also to have received a degree at that time. Each of those honoured is to make a short address. In attendance will be the American Consul, representatives of the Federal and Provincial Legislatures, Mayor Conboy of Toronto, and officials from Military District No. 2 Headquarters.

The Students' Administrative Council has reserved 1000 seats in Convocation Hall for the student body. Tickets may be obtained by students at the S.A.C. office in Hart House.

SENIOR SHOW

Faculty and graduate members of Hart House are invited to contribute their work to the annual exhibition of drawings and paintings by senior members which will open in the Art Gallery on March 15. All entries must be in the Warden's office by 6:00 p.m. on Wednesday, March 12.

Trinity Club To Present Final Play

Hart House Theatre to be Scene of Trinity Dramatic Club's Major Production, "Symphony in Two Flats"

STUART PARKER DIRECTS

Tonight marks the dress rehearsal of Trinity's major production of the year, "Symphony in Two Flats" by Ivor Novello, to be presented in Hart House Theatre on Friday and Saturday evenings. This production, having already surmounted a number of tribulations in the stormy course of its preparation, is pulling into the home stretch to the traditional accompaniment of temperamental outbursts and jangled nerves. In fact, it displays all the usually accepted indications of an evening of rousingly enjoyable entertainment on the opening night.

The harassed director, Stuart Parker, is spending his almost non-existent free time in coping with the innumerable petty details which somehow just never get attended to—including everything from made-up uniforms to noisily off stage. Various members of the cast haven't found out yet whether it's really "flu" or only premature stage-fright. Others, it goes without saying, are still learning lines.

But the play as a whole is surpassing all expectations in its wit, its subtleties, its nuances of feeling—in fact in all the qualities which go to make up a first-rate dramatic presentation. "Symphony in Two Flats" will be one of the final campus productions of the year in Hart House. It looks as if it will provide a not unworthy wind-up to the season.

TRINITY-WESTERN DEBATE TO BE HELD ON FRIDAY

London, Ont., March 5—(CUP)—Austin Smith and Craig Mellish are to represent the University of Western Ontario at an intercollegiate debate to be staged Friday at 4 o'clock in Trinity College, Toronto.

Both are members of the executive of the Western Debating Society. Mellish is business manager of the Western Gazette, and Smith is a member of its editorial board.

Topic of the debate will concern the St. Lawrence Seaway and its effect on Canada.

CALL FOR BLOOD DONORS RECEIVES FINE RESPONSE

About 400 university men already have offered their services to the Toronto Red Cross Blood Donors Clinic. The Varsity learned yesterday.

"The response has been marvellous. I am very pleased," said G. R. Sproat, director of the service.

It is felt that as spring advances the need for blood serum overseas will increase. Men who would like to contribute may fill out cards at the Hall Porter's desk in Hart House. The blood clinic is situated at 410 Sherbourne Street and the Red Cross provides free transportation to and from the clinic.

Det. Gray, president of the Victoria College Union, has posted a list for volunteers which filled up rapidly. Fifty-one men signed and the president felt that a new list could also soon be filled. So far the men who have signed the list have not been called upon for blood donations. Persons who have made a contribution say that they felt no effects except perhaps a little sleepier than usual.

PLAN STUDENT PROGRAM FOR WYMLWOOD MUSICALS

The final musicale of the Wymilwood series will be held at 9 p.m. on Sunday, 9th March. It will feature a program presented by students of the university. The two guest artists of the evening will be Eunice MacDonald, mezzo-soprano, I U.C., and Blyth Ingham, pianist, II Vic. Two choirs will also contribute toward the program, the Vic Chapel Choir and the Vic Women's Residence Choir, both under the direction of Miss Jessie Macpherson, Vic's Dean of Women. Students of all faculties are invited to attend.

S.P.S. Professor To Give Lecture

Professor C. R. Young, B.A.Sc., C.E., Professor of Civil Engineering and Head of the Department of Civil Engineering in this university, will deliver a lecture on "The Achievements of Engineering" on Saturday, March 8, in Convocation Hall at 8:15 p.m. This is one of a series of lectures sponsored by the Royal Canadian Institute and is a joint meeting with the Engineering Institute of Canada (Toronto Branch).

Professor Young intends to give his address in a manner which will appeal to the general public as well as to the engineer. He will refer to engineering from its early beginnings to the present time, by giving historical references and comparing the accomplishments of the present to modern beginnings in the past.

American Colleges Aid War Work By Contributions and Knitting

By Lois Brodley

"Young America Wants to Help" is the name of the college branch of the British War Relief Society in the United States. Young America does not "want to help," but actually does—at least at Columbia University.

There are three separate committees working for the benefit of Britain here at Columbia. Each has its own work room where wool is distributed, and where instruction is given to inexperienced knitters. Each also has its own financial committee.

Undergraduate activity on behalf of Britain is concentrated at Barnard College. Under the leadership of Dean Virginia Gildersleeve, Barnard girls decided last September that America's first line of defense was on the English Channel. Since then three hundred knitters have been recruited. They have transformed several hundred pounds of brown, blue and grey wool into the articles so familiar to Canadians: Ar Christmas, Barnard College played Santa Claus and presented a cheque for $2000 to Britain for the purchase of a fully equipped mobile feeding unit, or "rolling kitchen." And they sent many boxes of worn clothing to

Small Vote Fails to Dampen Campaigners' Ardour as Next Year's Committees Are Elected

1126 VOTE

Hearty handshakes, powerful backslapping, bounty in blotters and incessant din accompanied the business of electing the members of next year's Hart House Committees yesterday. From 11 to 3 and from 4:30 to 6 the corridor running past the East Common Room was passable at the risk of one's ear-drums, while all the time up until nearly 9:00 p.m. Mr. Wilkinson and his assistants were upstairs counting the ballots as they came in.

The fact that only 1126 undergraduates registered their votes, compared with 1509 last year, did not seem to dampen the campaigners' ardour at molesting the passer-by. Most people managed to collect enough blotters to keep them in stock for the rest of the year, but they had to pay for it by forcing their way through a veritable mob of clamouring humanity, all rapidly developing sore throats, whether through just yelling out names, or through vociferously explaining the whole voting system and its way of giving every faculty representation regardless of how many votes. That was not quite accurate of course but they seemed to get away with it.

Numbers of candidates paraded around carrying their own posters. This made it possible for them to save their voices but they didn't. Many of the assorted barkers were not running at all but were just enthusiastic friends giving up their time to aid their faculty or candidate.

McGill Students Train Two Weeks During Summer

Montreal, March 5—(CUP)—McGill students who have taken the military training course this winter will not be required to take four months of training in the summer, it was officially stated Monday night.

An announcement signed by Principal James said that subject to the approval of the ministers concerned, students in the 21-year-old class who have taken the full training course during the present session will have satisfied the requirements of the government's original proclamation after serving two weeks in camp and will not be called under the new four-month plan.

Students over 21 years of age will not be called up for training but may be admitted to the camp for a two-week period if training facilities permit.

American Colleges Aid War Work By Contributions and Knitting

keep Britishers warm this winter. The faculty of Columbia University works for Britain through a Staff Committee. Women professors and wives of faculty members have used up nearly three hundred pounds of wool. More important, the faculty has donated four "rolling kitchens" and is working for a fifth.

The third committee is composed of students from Columbia's graduate and professional schools. Through the sale of red, white and blue "Aid Britain" emblems, and through membership fees, this group has raised nearly a thousand dollars. Graduate students have accounted for 250 pounds of wool.

Women knitters work in lectures, on the subway, anywhere. Some of the most diligent workers on the knitting front are elevator operators and maids in the women's dormitories. The men of Columbia just supply the money—and plenty of it.

Columbia remembers her British origin, and the royal standard of George II which waves today from the crown-topped flag pole on the campus of what was King's College in the Province of New York.

Future Of The W.S.T.D.

A few more weeks and the attractive blue and grey uniforms of the Women's Service Training Detachment will disappear from the campus, for this year at least. The work of the W.S.T.D. is almost completed, and the success of the lecture courses will soon be tested when members write the A.R.P. examination set by the government—probably by the Ontario Civil Defense Authorities—and certificates are issued to those who pass. It is also hoped that an inspection can be arranged before the end of training.

Now that the W.S.T.D. is successfully completing its first year, the question arises as to what lies ahead for it, and for the members who will graduate from the university this year. The future activities of the Detachment depend to a large extent on word from Ottawa, which is expected to be forthcoming. However it is assumed that it will continue next year, giving to newcomers basic courses in St. John's Ambulance and A.R.P.—both of which are required by the government—and also military training and certain types of basic instruction. For this year's members who return to the Detachment next year, advanced courses along certain specialized lines will be offered. The requirements of the government will determine just what the specialized lines will be.

As for members who are graduating this spring, if they wish to make use of their training and to continue in war work or war work training, they must sign up with another branch since, although the W.S.T.D. is a unit of the Women's Voluntary Service Corps, it is a separate unit and thus its members are obligated only to it. Membership in it does not bind them to any other organization, although many are expected to offer their services along the lines in which they have been trained.

There is a possibility, for instance, that the Civilian Defense Authorities will be in need of instructors, and that W.S.T.D. graduates, with a little more training, might be used. For Household Economics girls in the Detachment the new food administration section of the Red Cross will be of importance, for it is reasonable to expect that they will be taken into it. W.S.T.D. members in Occupational Therapy and Physiotherapy are most likely to benefit from their work in the Detachment since their services are so much in demand. Already Britain has sent for several Occupational Therapy and Physiotherapy students, whose passage was financed by the Red Cross. In such a case W.S.T.D. training would prove extremely useful.

Along more general lines, it is very probable that some form of a women's army will soon be organized in Canada. A large number of women are now working in connection with some branch of the army, and the question is now being debated at Ottawa. Until it is decided, of course, the full value of any training now in progress will not be known. However it is quite reasonable to assume that the government will make use of the new food administration section and the office administration group. Of interest to those who plan to enter the Women's Voluntary Service Corps—of which the W.S.T.D. is a unit—is the fact that the Red Cross hopes to maintain it, probably on a smaller scale, as a peacetime organization. It would then have a body of trained women who could take over in times of emergency or great need.

The Women's Service Training Detachment was organized in the university last October under the sponsorship of the Red Cross and as an undertaking of the Women's Athletic Association. Consisting of approximately 170 girls, it is divided into platoons, three of which are from University College and ten or eleven from the smaller faculties. There is one large platoon from Victoria, one from Trinity and one from Occupational Therapy and Physiotherapy, all of which have an almost one hundred per cent attendance record.

The course has consisted of one hour per week of drill and two hours of lectures. The girls have made a great deal of progress in their drill, but as for the lectures—the test is yet to come. However they will probably be even more successful in that field, since the greatest interest was evinced in the A.R.P. lectures on gas, high explosives, incendiary bombs and the like. A few more weeks and their knowledge will be tested, and it is hoped that approximately 170 girls at the University of Toronto will then be the proud possessors of certificates as proof of their preparedness.

To The Men Of School!

There can be no doubt that engineers are one of the most important groups of trained men in the world today. In this war of mechanism and technical skill, trained engineers are vitally important to the preservation of our whole civilization, even though arts students may look down upon their engineering compatriots as "uncivilized."

The United States, swinging into a high-powered industrial program for defense, is discovering the importance of the engineer in war. It is estimated that for the defense industries of the New York metropolitan area alone about 7500 engineers will be needed between now and next October. Of these, 6000 will be required for aircraft plants alone while the remainder will be used in the other seventeen principal types of defense industry in that area.

In Canada, of course, the need was recognized with the outbreak of war a year and a half ago. Engineers who graduated last June were snapped up for industry immediately. This year the university is co-operating with the government by cutting the third and fourth year courses short in order to turn a supply of university-trained men into the various branches of war industry. Varsity engineers have a vital service to perform for their country, and they are both equipped and willing to perform it.

The Women

Hart House Gallery

Three women combined their talents to produce the exhibition of oil paintings now on display in the Art Gallery in Hart House. Each of the artists—Mabel Lockerby, Kathleen Morris, and Marion Scott—has a style different from the others, but that does not prevent one from comparing and contrasting their efforts.

In Descent from bus, and Hairdresser, by Mabel Lockerby, it is difficult to refrain from thinking of a burlesque from stained glass windows in a cathedral. The heads of the figures represented are egg-like in shape, the noses are long, and the features are continually reminiscent of madonnas.

Whereas the faces and figures almost follow geometrical precision and lack of life, the animals, dogs and cats seem animated, though the proportion is sometimes not all that it could be.

The landscapes convey little—there is no mood, or particular composition—just plain barns or houses. One snow scene is quite disappointing, where the large flakes of snow are falling like wads of cotton.

The paintings of Kathleen Morris are perhaps the most pleasing in the exhibition. Two of the distinctly attractive ones are Beaver Hall Hill and Dorchester Street, both scenes from Montreal. In the former, the feeling of a dull wintry day creeps into one's bones, and the composition leads to the striking yellow splash of a street car in the centre. A different type of day—clearer atmosphere, and likely colder—is indicated in the latter: building lines are not blurred but are stronger and clearer.

The French-Canadian Habitant snow scenes are pleasing in the treatment of the snow shadows, but too many similar ones have already appeared on Christmas cards.

Marion Scott's studies in blue certainly give fine exercises to the eyes. They spiral up a fire escape, and down a circular stairway. Up they travel on a

By Betty Collapses

Well, girls! Here we are again!! You know what today is? It's the day of the Big Game!!

Today that super team of St. Hilda's Freshies tackle Physiotherapy C in the finals for Group VII of the field hockey League. The game will be played on Little Vic's Little Greenward. Isn't that exciting!!! And that's nothing, yet, girls, you all realize that this game is for the Little Bronze Baby which is now resting firmly in the arms of Merle Bullock and her wizards of the willow wisps.

You all remember last week, so we don't need to go over that. But some of you may have forgotten about two weeks ago. So girls, listen to this!! You will recall that the Physiotherapy girls were down 2 to 1 in the final period when somebody broke a straw. Will we ever forget the excitement!!!!

So let's get back to this week. (Shall we?) Headed by their outstanding players, "Ribs" Whitney and Joan William Griffin, the St. Hilda's, fresh from their victory over St. Havergal, are just "rarin' to go!!!"

The Physios main claim to fame is a trouncing administered to the Ukrainian Babushka Temple F. B. Parcin, after which three of the Bathurst Street Babes were admitted to hospital.

It should be a lulu!!! So come on, you guys and gals. How about missing breakfast just once more? Rally round today and give your favourite team a big hand. And remember!! The winners meet U.C. III for the league semifinals!!!

We'll be seeing you!

Correspondence

The Editor, The Varsity.
Dear Sir:

This is a personal reply to a personal criticism by the A.M. & D. editor in his editorial of Tuesday.

The time to make the university really orchestra-conscious was his before the concert, not after. Members of the orchestra agree that from the beginning of rehearsals there was a great need for editorials and articles to create interest and bring out new players. Who could have done this better than our own A.M. & D. editor, himself a member. Instead, he even neglected to supervise the insertion of weekly notices.

The aim of the University Symphony is not to create a professional organization whose sole aim is to perform in public. Students come out to get a much-needed relaxation and enjoyment by playing good music in an ensemble. Plus members who lack technical skill in their playing are not considered as dead weights.

The players who were most faithful in attending rehearsals were those in the heavy courses, such as Meds and S.P.S. Many of these had military training as an extra burden this year. They deserve praise not censure.

Why criticize faithful members who helped to carry the concert through to completion? It was the absent players that should be censured. We suggest making a charge next year for each time a member is absent. Could you pay up, A.M. & D. editor?

Inside information should not be used by the A.M. & D. editor to single out one of his fellow-musicians for derision by the public.

May we correct one point at issue? The oboe did sound the note after the piano concerto — was the A.M. & D. editor asleep at his 'cello'?

It is time the editor changed his tune. If the new conductor hadn't so willingly given of his time and talent during February to bring a comparative unity to a rather loosely-knit body of players there would have been no concert. Could our honorable editor then have boasted about having a rival to the Manitoba Symphony?

Yours truly,

A Final Plea for the Critic

It is advisable at this, the end of the university music season to offer our views on what music criticism should do and what we have tried to do this year. Criticism, to be worth while must praise constructively as it must condemn constructively. ## BADMINTON TOURNAMENT GETS UNDER WAY

The interfaculty badminton tournament got under way last night with thirty-two men competing for the individual championship and four faculties for team honours. Meds are the present team champions while Hugh Ford of that faculty is the individual title-holder.

Victoria College boasted the largest number of entries, twelve men representing the Scarlet and Gold. U.C. was next with eight.

In the preliminaries Porter of U.C. and Muir of School survived in Flight 1; Ford of Meds and McCauley of U.C. are still in the running in Flight 2; Mulholland and Falls, both of Vic, will meet to decide the winner of Flight 3 while Flight 4 has Johnson of U.C. and Wright of Meds fighting it out.

Meds, U.C. and School are leading the race for the team championship. The finals, to decide the individual and team champions will be held next week, probably Wednesday. According to "Mac" McCutcheon, intramural athletics director, the tournament was a much bigger success than he had anticipated.

FORESTER CAGERS FELLED BY EMMAUEL ONSLAUGHT

Forestry cagers put up their best game of the season in yesterday's sole basketball tilt, but their best wasn't enough to beat Johnny Whallons' Emmanuel Bearcats, who came off on the long end of a 61-42 score. Emmanuel are winners of Group VI.

Emmanuel A: Hall 25, Green 6, Hamilton 3, Oliver 12, Patterson, Whallons 15.

Forestry: Bentley 12, Day, Purdy 20, Allan 4, Ball 6.

ENGINEERS UPSET KNOX TO TIE FOR FIRST PLACE

Knox B was sent reeling by a landslide of S.P.S. IV goals yesterday afternoon as the Engineers sauntered into a first-place tie with Aerial Navigation in Group VI, forcing a play-off. The score was 14-0.

S.P.S. IV: Gries, Bennett, Mooser, Quinton, Cummings, Boa, Kelly, McDonough, Maughn.

Knox B: Hood, Swallow, Chambers, Hamilton, Morrison, Barr, Weir, Mills, Crocker.

FORESTRY PUCKSTERS TIE LAST GAME WITH TRINITY

Trinity B and Forestry bid the hockey season farewell yesterday as they battled each other to a 2-2 deadlock. Both teams are out of the running. Knight got both Anglican goals, Puttock and McKay Forestry's.

Trinity B: Turner, Hull, Laidlaw, Garrett, Knight, Livingstone, Mercer, Stinson.

Forestry: Ballantyne, McBride, Puttock, Campbell, Monaghan, McKay, Taylor, Eccles.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Dave Macintosh

LOOKING BACK

We have done well without intercollegiate sport this year. The intramural system has gone over the top more successfully than anyone could have hoped for at the first of the year. The increase in men taking part and teams entered speak for themselves. Witness new intramural competitions, such as skiing, four-man basketball, four-down rugby, swimming and that event which ranks by itself, University Night. The Athletic Office asked us to extend its appreciation to the C.O.T.C. and the Training Centre for their co-operation. In spite of the long hours of military drill, the intramural system has functioned smoothly.

We've seen some surprisingly good sport over the past year, and there's more on deck as the sport season goes under the wire. Let's take a look back.

Golf: Individual championship won by Bob Spence of School, team championship by School.

Tennis: Singles won by Bruce Hall, doubles by Ian McCallum and Jack Mullett in the year's thriller, team championship by School.

Senior Track: O.C.E.'s by a wide margin, featuring, of course, the Brown Twins.

Novice Harrier: Gord Lorimer, of School, by a couple of yards; team championship to School.

Senior Harrier: Won by stocky, plucky Geoff Goodwin of School. Team championship went the same way.

Lacrosse: School again, by spanking U.C. in sound fashion.

Soccer: Jack Frost made it a tie between Knox and Meds.

Rugby: The same fellow made Junior and Senior School joint champions.

Volleyball: Dents by a long shot, though Emmanuel tried hard.

Swimming Meets: Junior School, the year's biggest upset.

Novice B. W. and F.: School again, featuring Bill Ramore as a rasser of no mean ability.

Senior B. W. and F.: Guess who, featuring Bill Ramore again, this time with the gloves on. Vic won the fencing.

Indoor Track: Vic, per usual, in spite of the Brown Bros., and thanks to Gerry Proderick.

Skiing: School, although Trinity deserves a pat on the head for a determined bid.

Gymnastics: Vic again, led by that great boss-rider, Jack Toye.

Senior Swimming: U.C., refusing to allow School to upset them a second time; a new record set by Meds' Stu Robinson.

Squash: St. Mike's, their first title of the year, but not a very important one.

The general impression would seem to be, after this brief survey, that School is predominant. Which is rather a mild understatement. It remains for School to win only one remaining title, the hockey gonfalon. Meds will take the water polo as predicted by Tuesday's regular inhabitant of this space, although the only other championship he called correctly was the rugby—Stan picked School. O.C.E. of course takes the basketball, and with a pitching staff including Johnny Eccles and Jeff Jeffries, her baseball nine can't miss either. That about sums up the year's activities around and about the athletic wing.

In closing, we wish to express our thanks to Warren Stevens and Mac McCutcheon, the entire staff of instructors, and Misses Lea and Boyd in the Athletic Office, for their immeasurable help in providing us with the daily stint.

A good year, yes. But it does not in any way excuse the loss of intercollegiate sport.

DRUGGISTS BEAT VIC CLINCH HOCKEY LEAD

brand of hockey they have exhibited to date, ejected Vic Seconds from the Group II running and clinched the leadership with a 6-2 victory over the Scarlets and Gold yesterday afternoon. The Druggists now meet O.C.E. in the first round of the ice play-downs.

The score was tied 2-2 at the end of the first period. Bill Russell put Pharmacy one up and Paton drew Vic even a minute later. Don Bothwell then sent Vic ahead as he scored a nice goal on a breakaway. Grant Jeffers tied it all up again with Bothwell sitting one out in the coop.

Pharmacy skated Vic off their feet in the last period, and when Vic did manage to break away, which was quite often, the furiously back-checking Druggists overhauled their opponents every time. Al Elliott and Jimmie Jardine scored a single each while Captain Ralph Dunning banded in two. Cam MacKenzie was a standout for Vic both offensively and defensively.

Pharmacy: Casselman, Boyes, Stevenson, Jeffers, Binning, Russell, Jardine, Walther, Elliott, Dunning, Quirk.

Vic II: Paisley, Pallett, Flewelling, Bothwell, MacKenzie, Paton, Boyle, Cass, Livingstone, Cumming, Wolfgram.

Senior Meds Defeat Emmanuel in First Game of Best-of-Three Series for Waterpolo Championship

SCORE 3-0

Senior Meds got the jump on Emmanuel yesterday afternoon by winning the first leg of the best-of-three series for the interfaculty water polo championship and the Eckhardt Trophy that goes with it. The score was 3-0.

Pete Turner made a lightning-like thrust midway through the first period to shove the pill behind Art Hamilton. Emmanuel, by the law of averages, should have had a 3-1 lead at the end of the first period, but Billy Fennell was turned back three times at the goalmouth by Meds' sensational net-minder, Art Boyd.

Bob Murray featured an otherwise ragged second half with a neat backhand shot that caught Hamilton completely unawares. Jim Baldwin, member of last year's champion intercollegiate team, matched the last goal. In the meantime Art Boyd reigned supreme in his cord guardhouse. Ben Morwood played a strong defensive game for the Bearcats; Doug Green went well up front. The second game will be played tomorrow night.

Sr. Meds: D. Best, S. Best, Turner, Boyd, Baldwin, Murray, Park, Crum, and Culmer.

Emmanuel: Fennell, MacRae, Morwood, Eagle, Kallgren, Jackson, Jones, Hamilton and Green.

U.C. OPERATES ON DOCTORS IN ROUSING BALL JOUST

Junior U.C.'s sensational moundsman, Saul Fox, hurled the Artisans to their sixth straight baseball win yesterday afternoon over Junior Meds. The score was 8-7.

canoeing, sailing, dancing, music, and general relaxation.

The camp is managed by the students themselves who do their own cooking so that all the expenses of the week including transportation are only ten dollars for each camper. Last year forty men and women, over half of them new to the Movement, attended the Spring Camp.

The Couching Conference which will be held during the week of September 13 to September 20, is for Toronto, Queens, McGill, Western, and McMaster Universities, and O.A.C., and will include as well one or two representatives from nearly all the remaining Canadian universities.

The Canadian Campus

By Michael O'Mara

Staff Writer, The Varsity

A Canadian University Press Feature

The publishing year of 1940-1941 is drawing to a close for the newspapers of the Canadian Campus from Halifax to Vancouver. The college dailies, bi-weeklies and weeklies have been functioning under severe handicaps during the past six months. The mounting strain of war, and the growing pressure of military drill for the men and Red Cross sock deadlines for the women have played a certain amount of havoc with the organizations of the collegiate fourth estate. But the undergraduate press has carried on, with most of the labour devolving upon the already over-worked shoulders of editors-in-chief and their immediate aides.

It has not been a notable year for important news-breaks in university circles. Gone is last year's wordy alphabetical feud between the N.F.C.U.S. and the C.S.A. of sainted memory. Gone is the excitement of intercollegiate sport. No more do the Western Mustangs and Varsity Blues flash across the gridirons and arenas of the sports world. Even intercollegiate drama festivals are things of the temporary past.

With their sources of outside news gone, collegiate papers were forced to give more important spots to news of relatively minor functions on their own campuses. More miles of advance copy on dances, plays and operettas were written in the offices of the uptown press than ever before.

Campus activities have centred about the "University War Effort", and nearly every function that could boast any income at all has devoted most of it to the Canadian Red Cross, the Lord Mayor's Fund and kindred charitable organizations.

Running throughout all the publicity for the various formal dances on the Canadian Campus has been the "No Cossages" motif. The co-eds of the Pacific coast, the Prairies, the east and the Maritimes have forgone their age-old prerogative of flaunting a flaming orchid, symbol of after-dark gaiety wherever collegians cut a sophisticated rug, in order that the male animal might devote his surplus lustre to buying War Savings Stamps.

Another method of encouraging the buying of Stamps has been the practice of attaching them to dance tickets. The cost of the stamp is added to that of the ticket. The tickets are collected at the door, and the stamps are usually burnt in a ceremonial bonfire later in the evening.

Another way in which campus newspapers whiled away the idle hours when the flow of vital copy had dwindled to a mere trickle of advance notices on fraternity dances was in producing Special Issues, dedicated to one or another of the college's faculties, or to the never-failing source of interest, the co-eds. McGill's Daily appeared in a grim shade of pink; Mount St. Anthony was blood red; other papers which should have known better succumbed to one-issue apron-string rule and also flashed forth from the press in shades too nauseous to mention.

The Sheet indulged in a mammoth anniversary issue; the Daily and the Ubbesey ran Plumbers' Issues. Special issues all over the lot.

But in the field of special issues, we feel little fear of contradiction when we climb out on our favourite limb to predict that our favourite paper, The Varsity (at this point we rise, and doff our caps) will turn out a Special Issue to end all Special Issues. For this year is the sixtieth year of publication for Toronto's Undergraduate Newspaper. And the staff is busily preparing a 48-page Diamond Jubilee issue replete with histories of the university.

Up in a closely sequestered seminar in the University Library they have been tolling through dusty archives for months, working on the largest publication ever attempted by Toronto undergraduates in the newspaper field. In fact, it strikes us that we should bury away from this nasty old typewriter and join them... right now.

GOENTS TO ENO TERM EARLY IF CHOSEN FOR ARMY WORK

More than a dozen fifth year Dental students will leave within a month to join the Canadian Dental Corps. The Varsity learned last night. These graduating students will replace officers in the corps who are expected to be sent overseas. It is believed that arrangements will be made to have the men write tests in place of their final exams.

More students will follow later until at least half the graduating class will have entered the Corps. They will be attached to various armed units in Canada of the Army, Air Force, and Navy. The Council of the Faculty of Dentistry have agreed to the request of the Dental Corps that these students be allowed to join before the end of the term. Permission from the senate of the university will be sought before final arrangements are made. The students selected will be those men who are considered to be well up in their work and have already submitted applications for entrance into the Corps.

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

enough. If a performance is good, it is worth the time to make it better and it is the purpose of criticism to point out ways in which this improvement may be made — always assuming the critic knows more than the artist. This is the case, I believe, for most amateur campus activities. When it is not, the critic serves as the formal means of communication between the artist and his public, for the artist must find out if he is communicating his ideas to others — his prime purpose.

We, as students of criticism, are offered a unique opportunity in criticizing campus activities. Their faults and virtues are usually obvious, we may practise on them as much as do the artists — our only job being that of staying one jump ahead. The criticism of a professional is another thing. The review really doesn't matter since we are not yet equipped to condemn, though we may quarrel with their performance. But it is thoroughly enjoyable, for we may let our enthusiasm or our dislike go as far as we wish, favouring only to act as publicity agent, favourable or otherwise, for the readers.

The fore-going always assumes the artist is good. When he is not, the critic's position is to decide whether that artist or group is justified to inflict itself upon the public — a task requiring such discernment as to justify our many failures. There remains the problem of disagreement among critics. It is only natural since we are more human than many of us or you like to believe. Many critics assume an attitude of medieval condemnation and persecution of other sets. To them we say: "grow up". The critic must rather learn to distinguish and appreciate the honest and clever among interpretations and be broad-minded enough to disagree without condemning.

A final plea to the artist: read and act upon our criticisms — we try to combine honesty and frankness with kindness. D.S.M.

Noted Dignitaries Flock To Convocation Hall For Degrees To-Day

Ceremony Postponed Last Fall Due to Lord Lothian's Death will Honour Five Well-known Figures

MULOCK TO ATTEND

A special convocation of the university is to be held in Convocation Hall at three o'clock this afternoon for the presentation of honorary degrees to several distinguished public figures.

After the national anthem and a special prayer the president of the university will present the following persons for the degree of Doctor of Laws (Honoris causa): Hon. Albert Matthews, Lieutenant Governor of Ontario; Hon. Jay Pierrepont Moffat, United States Minister to Canada; Sir Gerald Campbell, K.C.M.G., F.R.G.S., Minister of the British Embassy, Washington; Hon. Leighton G. McCarthy, K.C., Canadian Minister to the United States; Air Marshall William Avery Bishop, V.C., D.S.O., M.C., D.F.C., Director of Recruiting for the Royal Canadian Air Force.

The chancellor will request each of those honoured to address convocation. Then the chancellor will dismiss convocation. The audience will sing the first verse and chorus of "Old Toronto," the university song, after which the procession will retire, the audience remaining standing.

The degrees were to have been conferred at a special convocation in December, but the date was advanced out of respect to the late Lord Lothian who was also to have been honoured at that time.

Students may obtain tickets for the convocation this afternoon from the S.A.C. office in Hart House, 1000 seats have been reserved. Also present will be the American Consul, representatives of the Dominion and Provincial Legislatures, Mayor Conboy of Toronto, and officials from Military District No. 2 Headquarters.

Ketchum, Lewis To be Guests Of C.C.F. Club

Prof. J. D. Ketchum of the Department of Psychology and David Lewis, National Secretary of the C.C.F. party, will address the two final meetings of the local C.C.F. Club, to be held today and next Thursday, respectively, in the Women's Union.

Prof. Ketchum, this afternoon at 3 o'clock will discuss the possibility that the individual can adapt himself to socialism.

David Lewis, who will be heard on Thursday, March 13 at 5 p.m., is a former Rhodes scholar from McGill. He will discuss the immediate future and policy of the C.C.F. Students of all faculties are invited to hear these outstanding speakers.

Medical Office Assistant Was British Navy Boxing Champ

By George Porter

An interested spectator at all local boxing meets and an avid follower of the fight game is Jack Thomas, assistant in the Hart House Medical Office, and for three years 145 pound champion of the British Navy.

Jack did his fighting in the bare-knuckle days of John L. Sullivan when pugilism was fighting, not boxing. He fought all over the world from Portsmouth to Gibraltar and never once tasted defeat, although he claims he was lucky.

Navy boxing matches before the war were fought under the old rules, when a fight might go as many as twenty or thirty rounds. There was no such thing as a decision and the fight went on until one of the men was unable to stand.

The fight Jack likes to remember is the one he almost lost. As champion of the Navy, he met the champion of the Army in a grudge squabble between the two services. For ten bloody rounds the battle continued until the bout was finally halted and Jack declared the winner. Then the defeated army starfighter asked the referee to leave the ring,

Exam Rumours False Says Registrar

Despite rumours that the date of the final exams would be advanced this year, final examinations in Arts will start Friday, April 25, it was stated last night by the Registrar, and will be finished by Friday, May 16. It was stated that these dates are definite as far as possible at the present time.

Gala Annual S.C.M. Meeting Set For March 12

The Annual Open Meeting of the S.C.M. is scheduled for 7.30 p.m. on Wednesday, March 12th at Wynmwood. Miss Helen Morton, General Secretary of the Student Division of the National Y.W.C.A. of U.S. and now temporarily a visiting speaker for the World's Student Christian Federation will be present, and will deliver a short talk.

The yearly reports of the various units, groups, and committees of the Movement will be presented, and the names of the student executive for the year 1941-2 will be announced. President Stanley Best, Associate President Margaret Grant, and perhaps other members of this year's executive will give their final addresses, and the newly appointed executives will present their inaugural addresses.

The program will be completed with some humorous skits, refreshments, and probably dancing. The meeting is open to anyone and everyone, and it is one of the few occasions when parents are invited to attend.

Miss Morton has recently made a speaking tour of China, Japan, and India on behalf of the W.S.C.F. At present she is engaged in the same work on this continent, and has come to Toronto to confer with Robert Macdonald, W.S.C.F. head.

U.C. GLEEWOMEN TO GIVE CONCERT SUNDAY IN WOMEN'S UNION

The U.C. Women's Glee Club will give their annual concert on Sunday evening at 9 o'clock in the Women's Union.

Usually, the Glee Club make 2 public appearances during the year, but this year, because of the Christmas party had to be cancelled unexpectedly. However, they have been practicing regularly under the direction of Mr. George Lambert, distinguished Toronto baritone, and Lois Lloyd, president of the club, promises an interestingly varied program.

The Glee Club is a comparatively young organization on the campus, but every year more interest in it is shown by increased membership and larger audiences. A cordial invitation is extended to all students to attend the concert on Sunday.

Training Schedule Complete But 150 Members Still Short on Hours

By Maurice Schwarzmann

On Feb. 24 the Auxiliary Battalion officially ceased its trampings and wanderings, and all foot-weary foot-soldiers breathed a sigh of relief as they prepared to take it easy by becoming regular street-car addicts. That is, all except an odd 150 hapless students, who for reasons valid or otherwise have not completed their 110 hours of compulsory training.

The average of hours yet to be done ranges from four to five, but as in all things here too there are extremes; one person still has 46 hours of training to accomplish, another, 76 hours. Another breaks all records with 91 hours out of the required total of 110. Late-drillers have till March 15 to complete their training and this they can do every day from 1615 to 2000 hrs. at the University Avenue Armouries, but what with this being the period when all true men start to study, and all that sort of thing, it is probable that some of those with only a few hours already to their credit, will be unable to reach the appointed mark. In this case, such people will be liable for call by the government for regular training; however, Adjutant E. A. Mc said that this is only theoretical and that it may well be that no drastic measures will be enforced.

Meanwhile, all students are eagerly awaiting the decisions of the authorities at Ottawa regarding summer camp.

THINGS TO REMEMBER ABOUT YOUR JUBILEE ISSUE

1. Every undergraduate is entitled free of charge to one copy of the 48-page Sixtieth Anniversary Issue of The Varsity.
2. You may obtain your issue at your faculty office on presentation of your university registration card.
3. The issue will be available on Monday or Tuesday afternoon, March 17 or 18.
4. Extra copies may be bought for ten cents at the S.A.C. Offices, Hart House and University College, or at various news stands.
5. Graduates who have ordered copies will receive them by mail.
6. Any further information regarding the Anniversary Issue will be posted on the Bulletin Board in your faculty.

O.T.'s and Physios School Grads Formal To-Night Will Celebrate

Students in Therapy will not be doing any homework tonight. For tonight is the night of the Occupational and Physiotherapy dance. The place is the Royal York; the music is by the Modernaires.

Committees have been cooking up new ideas for weeks and weeks in preparation for this, their courses' gala event of the season. Featured during the evening will be a Candlelight Waltz, the same waltz which caused so much comment in the picture "Waterloo Bridge". Favourites for the Physiotherapists will take the form of skits, while those for students in Occupational Therapy are to be little leather-bound books.

The committee asked that it be made clear again that there will be no cosques.

Whitney Freshie Relates Dunkirk Experiences

Joy Taplin Enjoyed Nursing Soldiers During Dangerous Channel Crossings. Would Like to Return

By Mary Cleaver

"I would go back again any time," was the assertion of Joy Taplin, brunette freshie from Whitney Hall, who acted as nurse on a boat evacuating troops from Dunkirk. Joy, who was only 16 at the time, made five trips back and across in three days, "although I didn't know it was three days until I got back to England," she told the Varsity.

Joy, who is now a first year Commerce and Finance student, went to England in September, 1939, to study singing at the Royal Academy of Music. While in London she did canteen work at the Beaver Club, and through it got to the south-east coast.

"I went down one day when the rescue ships were coming in from Dunkirk," Joy continued her story. "The nurse on one of the boats said, 'See, here, so I volunteered to take her place.' The boat was about the size of the lake ferries here.

During the passage, the enemy planes swooped right down over the ship, 'so that you felt you had to duck,' she told us. Bombs fell all around their ship, they saw many sunk, but they them-

There will be sounds of revelry issuing from the Concert Hall of the Royal York Hotel tonight when fourth year S.P.S. hold their annual Grads Ball.

The dance is being arranged in ballroom style with a number of small tables placed around the floor. A full course meal will be served at 11.15 and entertainment will be provided in the form of a dance team, and several other acts. The music is to be provided by Bob Shuttlesworth and dancing will continue until 3 a.m.

Dean Mitchell will be present and also the heads of the various engineering departments, accompanied by their wives.

"It's our biggest night of the term; we've been looking forward to it for four years," said J. S. Munro, president of the 471 year executive.

VARSLITY STAFF MEETING

Final Staff Meeting of the year, at which the Editor-in-Chief will be elected and plans will be drafted for the Varsity Yearbook, will be held at 4.30 p.m. in the Women's Union on Tuesday, March 11. Full staff attendance is compulsory.

Just possibly a change in plans may prove necessary, and all staff members are requested to check The Varsity office Monday.

selfes were not hit.

The decks of the vessel were crowded with French and English soldiers, many of them picked up from the water, she continued. Many of the evacuees had been on ships that were sunk and had been in the water several times. "German dive-bombers machine-gunned the decks when we were near the French coast, and many on our boat were killed," she related.

Joy described how the ship was divided into sections as a precaution against damage from incendiary bombs. Each person was assigned a section to watch, and was given a tin shovel to make short work of them.

Joy admitted that it was all very exciting, but not frightening. "There is no time to be thinking about being afraid when you are in it."

News Editor Reviews "Biggest Year of Events In Varsity's History"

Summer Training Still Indefinite

The university can make no announcement regarding summer military training of university students, President Cody said yesterday. Questioned as to the length of the summer session of camp, the president said, "It is not for us to say. Any statement regarding military training arrangements will have to come from Ottawa."

An announcement from McGill University regarding military training was regarded by the president as "premature."

Law Banquet To Feature Talk By McGill Prof.

Climaxing its activities this season, the Law Club will hold its 11th annual banquet Saturday, March 15, it was announced last night by an official of the club.

Guest speaker for the banquet will be Warwick F. Chipman, K.C., one of the leading counsel of Canada on industrial property and a past president of the League of Nations Society of Canada.

Mr. Chipman, a graduate of the McGill University Law School where he is now a professor, is also known as a poet and essayist. He will speak on a non-technical topic.

Among the guests at the head table will be Chief Justice Robertson and other justices of the Ontario bench, President Cody and leading members of the bar.

Guest speakers at Law Club banquets of former years have included Lord Tweedsmuir, Sir Edward Beatty, J. S. Woodsworth, and Dean Pound of the Harvard Law School.

U.C. Players Hold Elections Wednesday

The University College Players' Guild will hold elections for next year's executive next Wednesday, March 12, it was announced last night. The election will take place at a meeting and at 5 o'clock in the Women's Union.

"We will be particularly glad to hear at this meeting any suggestions which members have as to next year's program, as well as their nominations and votes for the officers of the Guild, including that of honorary president," stated the executive.

A special guest on Wednesday afternoon will be Professor Finch of the University College French department, and the first president of the Guild when it was founded in 1922. He will discuss informally with the members the early activities of the society.

Also on the program will be the reading and discussion of a play, under the supervision of Elizabeth Stone.

Original Tweedsmuir Manuscript Presented to Hart House

The manuscript of one of John Buchan's best works, together with a copy of the published book, will be placed on display in the Hart House library on Friday, March 14, the day the book is to be put on sale.

Entitled "Pride's Purge," it is the story of a man who was presented to Hart House by Lady Tweedsmuir last summer in the late Baron Tweedsmuir's mer. The Board of Stewards and the Library Committee have both expressed great appreciation at being made the guardians of an original manuscript of Lord Tweedsmuir's.

Though the paper is titled "Pride's Purge" it is not being published under that name. In Canada and England the book is to be called "Sick Heart River," a name Buchan himself said he preferred to the one appearing at the head of the manuscript in the United States, where it is being published on

The University's War Effort Seen as Main Feature of News During the 1940-41 Session

ALL SHARED IN WORK

By H. Dent Hodgson

Slowly, as the fateful days have rolled by since last September, the pages of The Varsity have piled up to make a now nearly complete Volume LX. During the past year, more stories than there "big news" have rolled out of the typewriter, the campus journalists than in any single year before.

The story of the "ten biggest news stories of the year" is the account of a great university at war, an effort which was shared by almost every individual on the campus. From the day of the opening address of the president, in which he declared: "It is no easy task that lies before us . . ." the 1940-41 academic session has been a story of graduates, undergraduates and staff members alike shared in the war effort.

The Varsity was weeks late in the first story of the year, for it began publication two months after hundreds of British Guest Children had been cared for by the university, which made most of the facilities offered by Hart House and the residences. During the summer months, the usually peaceful campus was a busy-busy of activity, while the youngsters were waiting to find new Ontario homes.

The war was even closer to the campus when Pat Strathy, Trinity graduate and brilliant mathematician who had joined the British Navy as a radio operator the previous spring, was killed in action on board H.M.S. Ajax, in a Mediterranean naval battle with the Italian fleet.

First public demonstration of the university's war effort came in October, when the 3,000 students in the combined C.O.T.C. and Training Centre Battalion bodies staged a mile-long parade through downtown Toronto. Following this, the new "Auxiliary Battalion" had formed up 1500 strong, on the front campus, under the watchful eye of Honorary Colonel H. J. Cody. The president had presided over the commissioning of the unit, and during the summer, had drafted the arrangements under which students were enabled to take their military training without leaving college.

On the same day, the social event of the year, the All-University Dance, President Cody burned $250 worth of War Savings Stamps which had been bought by dancegoers. This started a year of social events that featured patriotic angles, by various methods of diminishing the conventional cosques.

The largest medical examination in campus history occurred in November, when sections of Hart House were turned over to a medical examining board who investigated the health of 2,000 students in one week.

In mid-January, entirely on its own volition, the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering announced that its fourth year course would end March 15 and its third year course April 1, to free its much-needed technical students for work in important Canadian war industries.

Other stories of war work, too plentiful to enumerate, included the forming of the Women's Service Training Detachment, the training of naval recruits for work in the Navy.

The End Of The Trail

Impossible either of classification or description are the sentiments felt and the thoughts vaguely expressed as you sit down at the typewriter to compose your last editorial as a college newspaper editor. Compose is possible not le mot juste, for there are so many things which come tumbling out onto the paper that composition is soon forgotten.

There is, before anything else, a feeling of surprise, wonderment, amazement, that the flight of time could be so swift; that the days and weeks and months could have piled up so rapidly until they have passed from the world of reality to the realm of memory. There is, too, the feeling that so many many things have been left undone. Many of the ideas and plans which filled our brain as we took up the task last September have never materialized. There are many times when we could have done better. But the extra pressures created by the exceptional activities on the campus this year in the way of military training have placed a limit on time and ambitions and capabilities. Further, and deeper, there is a sense of sadness, —sadness that these days will be no more, —sadness that the columns on page two of The Varsity are being closed to us, sadness that we will no longer be a part of The Varsity and the university. Here at the Press, late in the night, memories come crowding over us as we write. Memories of friendship and fun, of work and worry, of big stories and all-night sessions. It is one of the intangibles, this feeling one gets through work on The Varsity; but it runs deep and it brings fellow workers together into a common bond. It will not soon die away.

THINGS WE'D LIKE

In our editorials this year we have tried to serve the students and the university. Here are some of the things we have sought and which we hope to see achieved in the university before long:

There should be, we feel, a separate Department of Publicity set up to handle all university public relations, and to devote most of its time to placing the university in a favourable light with its constituents, the people of Ontario. The press, the movies and the radio should all be utilized; a University Week should be held each year for the people of Toronto and Ontario.

There should be an expansion of the health and medical services of the university, and an investigation into the physical examination now given men students. A strict exam should be compulsory every year, and tuberculin tests should be given every student each fall, with X-rays for positive reactors, no matter what the cost. Infirmary services for men in U.C. residence and North, South and East houses should be provided, and some system of house calls by university physicians should be introduced for people in these residences and in boarding houses. The Board of Governors should give a recent report on medical services careful consideration, realizing the general demand and feeling behind it.

The teaching of certain language subjects in the colleges should be investigated, for a system under which students in one college are forced to leave their own professor because of inadequate instruction and go to lectures in another college has something wrong somewhere.

University students should organize some kind of fund for war contributions, either purely financial or in the shape of a Spitfire Fund, at the beginning of next year, in order to show that sacrifice is not merely a topic of conversation at the University of Toronto. There should be a channel for university contributions as a whole.

The Varsity should have a few new chairs at the Press and possibly a new typewriter, and the members of its staff should be considered sufficiently grown up and responsible for university authorities to dispense with having a chaperone or nightwatchman at the Press every night.

OUR DREAM—THE BIG ISSUE

Having aired a few of our pet projects and peevs, we succumb to that sad feeling again as we look at the tiny number 99 up in the right hand top corner of the front page. But the year isn't over yet, nor is our work completed, for there is yet to come the biggest edition of all—the special Diamond Jubilee Issue of The Varsity. We on the staff are very proud of our "Big" issue; in fact we have been noticeably self-congratulatory in advance. It is without a doubt the greatest journalistic undertaking ever assumed by The Varsity in its sixty years of publication. It will be the culmination of several months of planning, research and writing by many members of the staff, with the staff members taking the load. Facts and little items taken entirely for granted by the reader of an historical story on some aspect of the university really mean a huge amount of laborious digging through old books and pamphlets and files of The Varsity. It is with pride that we present the Jubilee Issue on March 17, and we feel that it will be of real worth to the university and of interest to students and graduates alike.

OUR STAFF—IT'S SWELL!

It is difficult to express adequately our appreciation of the work done by the staff of The Varsity this year. The year has been a difficult one with military training periods slicing into time ordinarily devoted to extra-curricular activities. However, the staff has done an admirable job, even though it has been greatly reduced in numbers from time to time as people drop out through pressure of work. The utmost in co-operation has been forthcoming, and every member has devoted himself unstintingly to whatever had to be done at the moment. Without their help, we could never have carried on.

THANKS TO THE S.A.C.

Our thanks are also due to the business manager, E. A. Macdonald, and the members of the staff in the S.A.C. office where all our advertising and business is handled. To Miss Frances Evans and to Art Maloney we voice our appreciation for their co-operation in publishing The Varsity. Likewise, to Ken Buckley, the linotypist, and Jimmy Taylor, the compositor, we extend our sincere thanks.

LOOKING TO NEXT YEAR

Because publication has been stopped earlier this year due to a longer first term, we are unable to follow precedent by announcing the new editor in this issue. He will be chosen next week, however, and the announcement will be made in the Jubilee Issue. There is a capable staff from whose ranks the new editor will be chosen, and we feel certain that The Varsity will be in good hands next year. There will be few graduations from the staff this year (for age, not academic, reasons) and there will thus be a large number of experienced people from whom to choose a staffhead for next year.

AND SO FAREWELL

There is little more to say other than that we have endeavored to make The Varsity a servant of the students and of the university in these days of crisis for the civilization we are studying to carry on and fighting to preserve. We hope that we have in some measure succeeded; we hope that inspiration may have been brought to some through these columns; we hope that the good resulting from The Varsity may far outweigh any evil. As we wrote in our first editorial last autumn, on September 26, 1940, "We believe in The Varsity and in its function in the university." We have had many varied experiences and we have learned much, but those words still ring true. And so—the pen runs dry, and 'tis farewell!

Shades of the Masters!

Simon Barer, pianist

A colossus is visiting Toronto this week, a colossus of intellect, technique, musicianship. Simon Barer amazed the Eaton Auditorium audience last night with his virtuosity and held them spellbound with his interpretations, though only the plain-clothed gallery appreciated his musicianship. His infallible memory, his unerring accuracy, his tremendous technique, and above all his prowess as a musician make him the pianistic figure to visit Toronto this year.

Barer did not play to his audience last night, but to the phantoms of Bach, Scarlatti, Liszt, Chopin and Scriabin gathered round him. Surely Bach smiled over his shoulder with approval at the organ-like tone in his Chromatic Fantasy and Fugue played as it should be — an intricate and scholarly work — not a show piece. The Fantasy was reflective, but without weak lapses in tone; the Fugue, with each theme crystal-clear, was built up to a powerfully dignified conclusion. Scarlatti may have frowned on the excessive speed of his sonatas but he could not help but be pleased at the lightness and delicacy. Liszt guided his hand in the B minor sonata through amazing octaves, distant leaps, incredible scales, crashing chords and retired to the background at his flawless taste. And Chopin, Chopin the poet — impulsive, delicate and full of pathos — Chopin the technician. (Continued on page 3)

Badminton Finals On Wednesday

The finals in the interfaculty badminton tournament will be held on Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the upper gym. It was announced yesterday by "Mac" McCutcheon. The preliminaries were run off Wednesday night.

U.C. I are at present leading the race for the team championship. They have picked up six points in the preliminaries and can get a possible three more. MeDs, last year's champions, are in second place with four points and can get a possible two more.

GOTTIEB DOWNS HUDSON TO CAPTURE CHESS CROWN

Morris Gottlieb, I.S.P.S., was crowned interfaculty chess champion yesterday when he defeated A. C. Hudson, IV S.P.S., in the final.

A round robin series was played by 18 contestants of all faculties during the year, each man playing all of his competitors once. At the end of the series both Gottlieb and Hudson had won 15 games and lost 2. A sudden-death game gave Gottlieb the championship.

In Retrospect

Drama on the Campus

University drama was working under heavy handicaps this year. The students who played in the productions had a number of more pressing duties to perform than those connected with the stage. In addition to the usual lectures and labs, C.O.T.C. and Training Centre drills, W.S.T.D. work and the omnipresent click of knitting needles were continuously reminding the actors that their hobby was for the moment a thing of secondary importance.

Under these circumstances, it is not surprising that the campus has not witnessed an outstanding dramatic year. Practically without exception student productions revealed a painful insufficiency of rehearsal, and, in a few cases, even of enthusiasm. The Wednesday afternoon series in the fall term dragged painfully along, without ever gaining momentum or drive. And the recent University Theatre Night was little better.

Only once this year have the undergraduate actors of the university properly shaken themselves loose from their invisible impedimenta and shown the sort of work they can do. That was on the night of the University Drama Festival, when the Victoria Dramatic Society scored so heavily with The Valiant. U.C.'s ace comedians, Bud Milnes and Jane Hughes, were right on the beam with their Morley skit, and the Trinity production, although not up to the other two, was fairly sound also. And graduates Fran Halpenny and Evelyn Cook were superb in their rendering of one of Dorothy Parker's more pungent one-acters.

We didn't see St. Michael's College production of The Marriage of St. Francis, or the Vic presentation of Family Portrait, so we can't offer a particularly brilliant criticism of them. Nor were we at the University College Theatre Night. Here we apparently missed a Good Thing, for colleague E. S. assures us that Bury the Dead was "the finest and most living piece of drama presented on the campus this season."

Trinity's major production of the year hasn't hit the boards yet, so we can't criticize that either.

In general, the University Drama Committee, as last year, has not done a great deal to further the development of campus theatre. The one sound thing it has accomplished is to bring St. Mike's into the fold, and the Irish will probably prove an important addition to the group in a year or two. But the committee's member clubs still go on in their old unintegrated way, rarely profiting from the mistakes of preceding productions. The committee still needs leadership and cohesion.

One piece of campus theatre which does not fit into the above outline, but which should be mentioned, is the Beta Sigma Rho show, headlined by Weingarten and Shuster. The fraternity boys put on a really entertaining evening, paced rapidly with professional punch and timing. Personally we thought it was the best night's entertainment we had all year. M.O'M.

By Beryl Pollock

Three cheers! U.C. has finally finished its badminton tournament. Yesterday afternoon, Shirley Gelder defeated Betty Allen 13-11, 11-6 in two exciting games. In the first game, Betty led at one time, 10-2, but was unable to maintain her lead. The tilt was characterized by long rallies. Today, these same two play off for the interfaculty singles title at 2.30.

Looking over the winners for this year, we note that Vic got away to a good start by capturing all three championships played in the fall, tennis, basketball and baseball, but it looks as if U.C. is out to get the other three titles. They already have the swimming after a close fight with St. Hilda's, and are favourites to take the hockey and the badminton.

We are unable to announce the winner of the intercollegiate telegraphic swimming meet, because the results have not been published yet.

After their singles match, Betty and Shirley combined to defeat Jean Wallace and Emily Hodgins, 15-9, 18-16, in two close games, to capture the U.C.

Cody Athletic Trophy Copped by Trio--- Meen, Clawson, Jarvis

For the first time in its history, the Cody Trophy, awarded annually to the man adjudged to have contributed the most to the athletic life of University College during his undergraduate career, is to be held jointly by three men.

God Clawson, Athletic Director of the Lit, and former Olympic swimming star, George Meen, all-round interfaculty athlete, member of the Varsity rugby team and this year a member of Argonauts, and Tommy Jarvis, President of the Lit, are to be co-holders of the trophy this year.

Replicas of the trophy were presented to the winners by the donor, H. J. Cody, president of the university, at the annual U.C. Athletic Banquet, held last night in the U.C. Junior Common Room.

doubles title.

Today the same four meet in the semi-finals of the interfaculty tournament at 10 a.m. The other semi-final game has Tibs Amesley and Kitty Storey of St. Hilda's, scheduled to play Betty Kirby and Joan Hughes of St. Mike's, at 12. The doubles final will be run off at 3.30 p.m. after the singles.

Somewhere is going to be playing a lot of badminton today. Hope no one is stiff after it all.

Monday at one o'clock at Varsity Arena, is the time set for the last of the hockey finals. U.C. go into the game with a 4-2 lead over St. Hilda's. Trinity gave its team some good support last week, but it was difficult to locate any U.C. followers.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Owen Prichard

The last regular issue of the year is generally looked upon as the columnist's time to become as mellow as he wishes, yet we hesitate to dip the typewriter-ribbon in the time-worn valedictory phrases lest we be suspected of insincerity. It would be simple to toss off a line about the old Alma Mater, and loyalty to the university colours and so forth, but when it is a question of stating the things one feels should go into a last column we confess to being journalistically tongue-tied.

We have been fortunate in taking a six-year course, so that the memories which crowd in at a time like this are many and varied. In our freshman year of 1935 the athletes who composed the Blue and White teams were people who are merely honoured names from long ago to most students of today. But the character of their exploits has always been of the same high standard. To anyone who looks more closely at a game itself than at the figures on the scoreboard, there is discernible in the contests which take place in college athletics a quality of living which deserves the name of nobility.

We have forgotten the score by which Varsity won the intercollegiate football from Queen's in 1936, but the glories of the victory parade down Yonge Street are not yet dimmed in the remembrance of those who gleefully lamented the downfall of "Poor Old Queen's!" We couldn't come close to telling you the margin by which Western's basketball squad defeated Varsity in London, or the tally by which Stevens' lads vanquished Queen's the following Friday, but the fun of the trips is one of those things we enjoy remembering.

Most pleasing experience of all has been the job of writing Varsity sports for the last three years. The fellows who have taken part in games we have covered have been as co-operative as anyone could desire, and the coaches and the people in the Athletic Office have been extremely helpful in supplying us with news and suggestions.

There are occasions, when one is brooding over a typewriter at two or three in the morning, when the sensible person would question the good of spending nights at the Press trying to think of something bright to put in the next day's column, but practical wisdom was never the strong point of this scribe, who always found it fun to write about sport.

Covering the sports scene is more than trips and big stories and the cosiness of the Press Box on the mere flashing of a pass; it is trekking up to the Arena for an interfaculty hockey tilt, it is watching interminable schedules of volleyball during which you wrack your brains for a lead which can say "Yesterday in the upper gym" in a more interesting way.

But the interest we have felt in all these has not been qualified by the magnitude of the game being reported. The intercollegiate sphere of athletics naturally is the more glamorous, but to us the life-blood of sport on this campus has been (this year especially) the vast intramural program wherein every fellow has been given the chance to wear his college colours on the playing field.

In all these aspects of sports-writing we have been assisted by the most loyal and hard-working assistants and reporters that anyone could wish. The friendship of these lads and of the rest of the gang on the paper is something to treasure.

Perspectives change when viewed retrospectively, which probably explains why this feeble recounting of what our association with all this has meant to us includes nothing which can be termed a tangible heretofore. But as we warned you when you began to read this last column, this is our turn to be sentimental as we please, and since the intangible things of the university, The Varsity, and sport, have been the things which touched us most permanently—therefore they are the things which cannot be shaken from our affections. These intangible qualities, impractical though they be, will be the things which will be recalled in grateful recollection whenever we think of this university and the place of honour it holds in our esteem.

Hither and yon

with michael o'mara

WITH TEARS IN OUR EYES we take typewriter in hand to beat out the last regular Hither of the year. . . . Our tears of office are all but over; there is practically nothing left to do except to thank a few people here and there, and shuffle off to the library.

THANKS to our guest writers, that gallant band of mad wags who helped us in our struggle to keep the Hither Up to Snuff. . . . In order of their appearance, they were: Edgar Simon, Owen Friedrich, H. Dent Hodgson, Neil MacDonald, Renshaw Frazer, Sammy Kelter, Heather Bruce Hill, Bruce Smith, Bill Armstrong, Freddy Hall, Rex Wilson, Larry Smith, Don Moir, Don Moore, Marie Adford, Vernon Lang and Dorothy Northwood.

THANKS to our vast army of spies who have covered the campus for us more efficiently than any previous Hither's organization had ever managed to do. . . . They include most of the above-mentioned characters and many millions more, notable among whom are ex-staff members Lloyd G. McDonald, Herbert Cowan and Norman Alister; staff members Irma Thompson, Marg Parks, Melba Lent, Mary Cleaver, Elizabeth Stone, Win Hillier, Elizabeth Arthur, Eleanor Moorhouse, Marion Salter, Elizabeth Serson, Barbara Ander, Dave McIntosh, Keith Jackson, John Griffin, George Forster, John Robson, Earl Brown, Edward Dorrity, Frank Genovese and Geoff Johnston; and non-staff members Bob Smith, Bob Manton, Jack Bauckham, Jim Goodson, Bob Latimer and John Gilley.

THANKS to all the people whom we have mentioned either by name or implication in this column during the year.

THANKS to our favourite composer, Jimmy Taylor, and our favourite limping, Ken Buckley, for setting up our ineffable trash and throwing it into place night after night. . . .

THANKS to all the faithful who have deigned to read Hither and Yon this year. . . .

Reveals Plans

For Summer Weeks

This summer, the Campus Co-operative Residence plans to make its accommodations available to students and graduates working in the city. Bruce Newman, general manager of the Co-op revealed yesterday.

"This plan, Newman said, is hoped to profit a wider circle of students than the Co-op has previously been able to reach with its valuable experiences in co-operative living.

"We members," John Fornataro, III said, "feel that its obvious economic advantages are but secondary to the healthy sense of democratic responsibility and co-operation fostered by life in the house."

"Because students make application for membership in the Co-op early in the spring," the manager said, "we have to disappoint tardy applicants because of our room limitations. This year,"

The university had also its more one of the world's leading medievalists, came to the U. of T. to teach.

Fred Conboy, Dental professor of long standing, contested the mayoralty elec-

The tragic story of the death of Sir

Local stories which set the C.U.P.

Headquarters: 119 St. George Street, Telephone Mi. 7006
Officer Commanding: Lieutenant-Colonel H. H. Madill, V.D., (m.s.c.)

Chief Instructor: Major M. B. Watson, (m.s.c.)
Acting Adjutant: Captain H. C. H. Miller

PRESENT MEMBERS

Present members of the Canadian Officers' Training Corps who wish to continue their membership in the Corps will report to the Orderly Room, 119 St. George Street, and select the arm of the service in which they wish to qualify, and will complete their registration at Headquarters on the coloured registration cards.

NEW MEMBERS

Applications for membership in the Canadian Officers' Training Corps will be received only from students who are registered in the final year of their course (Medicine and Dentistry, in the final two years of their course), and who agree to accept a commission if the same is offered after the completion of the course.

New members of the corps will apply for membership at Headquarters by completing a white registration card. These application forms will be obtained at Headquarters, 119 St. George Street, from September 24th to October 1st, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily except Saturday and Sunday. An appointment will be made at the time of application for each applicant to be interviewed by officers of the arm of the service which he wishes to join. Those selected will be notified when to report for medical examination and attestation.

No fees are charged. Each member will be required to sign a waiver of pay, but it is the intention to pay each member during his attendance at camp, likely 13 days next June, if pay is received from the Government. A member may be struck off at any time if in the opinion of the officers he is unlikely to become an efficient officer.

The following examinations will be conducted by National Defence Headquarters:

First paper (Common to All Arms)—middle of December.
Second paper (special to the arm)—middle of March.
Practical examinations—in the spring, likely at camp.

INFORMATION REGARDING ARMS OF THE SERVICE

For the guidance of members of the Canadian Officers' Training Corps in choosing the arm of the service in which they wish to qualify, the following information should be noted. Percentages show the probable demand for officers in the various arms, and thus indicate the relative likelihood of obtaining early appointments.

Artillery 17%

An officer in the Artillery should preferably be one who is accurate and skilled in the use of empirical mathematics, such as tables of trigonometric functions, slide-rules, application of formulae, etc. The actual understanding of the higher mathematics on which the work is based is necessary only in the Coast Defence branch.

Engineers 15%

The greater part of the work of Engineer Officers is the design, survey, construction or demolition of works such as roads, railways, water supply systems, bridges, and defensive works. They should be graduate or undergraduate engineers, Registered Professional Engineers, or should belong to the Engineering Institute of Canada.

Signals 4%

Officers must be skilled in communications work, should have completed at least two years in Electrical Engineering, or be licensed radio amateurs, etc.

Infantry (Rifle) 30%

Open to all faculties. This is the arm of the service in which the greatest number is required. Good physical condition and stamina are essential. All other arms are essentially auxiliary to the infantry.

A Message from the President

I welcome to this university those who are returning to pursue their studies in the different faculties and departments, and those who for the first time are entering its halls to begin their advanced preparation for the various activities of life. The objectives which lie before each are to build a life, to make a living, and to help mould a world.

THE BACKGROUND OF WAR

We meet this year, after twelve months of war, at the very crisis of our fate. Those who are battling in the Motherland and elsewhere against the ruthless assaults of the enemy are the champions of those spiritual values which alone make life worth living. This grim struggle must be the background of all our academic work this year. Many of our staff and students have enlisted for active service. War researches are being carried on in many of our laboratories. Military Training for all male students, 18 years of age and over and physically fit, will be required by order of the Board of Governors in accordance with an agreement made by the Conference of Canadian Universities with the Departments of National Defence and of War Services.

THE UNIVERSITIES CARRY ON

The present world situation emphasizes the value of that training of intellect and character which universities are equipped to offer to their students. Trained men and women are essential to Canada if its war effort is to be prosecuted with highest effectiveness; they will be sorely needed, when after victory by God's help we face the problems of reconstruction. A special responsibility is laid upon Canadian universities, since in the nature of the case the British universities are prevented from carrying on their normal activities. By the advice of scientists in Britain, as well as by the general demands of the Canadian situation, our universities within the Dominion will strive during the coming year to undertake a full programme of instruction and research. The universities must "carry on."

THE SPIRIT IN WHICH WE WORK

Students will make the best use of their immediate opportunities. Let us face our tasks with serious determination; let us get the utmost out of our mental disciplines; let us waste no time; let us remember the responsibilities which go with our privileges and discharge those responsibilities in the right spirit. Even in connection with our recreations and social activities, let there be simplicity and modesty of expenditure. Our country will need and will demand the fullest measure of our devotion and our sacrifice.

COMPULSORY MILITARY TRAINING

In response to the present grave emergency, Canadian universities, through their governing bodies, after consultation with the military and war service authorities, require the military training of all male undergraduates who are physically fit and are 18 years of age and over at the time of registration in the university. This requirement our own Board of Governors hereby announces and enforces. The details of this training are given elsewhere in this issue of Varsity. The Canadian Officers' Training Corps will function as usual in preparing men who will become efficient officers and leaders. It will probably number 1,200 or more. Those students outside the C.O.T.C. who will be 21 or over on 1st July, 1941, will receive a course of training equivalent to the military training demanded under the National Resources Mobilization Act, followed by two weeks in camp. This auxiliary Battalion, under the C.O.T.C., will number nearly 1,500. The other students over 18 years of age will form another group, who will receive both physical training and a measure of military drill—determined by the time and instructors available. This group will probably contain another 1,500. There will thus be under some form of military training over 4,000 students—more than a whole brigade! The universities of Canada have thus given a fine lead in preparing the youth of Canada to bear their part in the defence of their country. We all realize that today our first line of defence is in Great Britain. The Prime Minister of Canada sent a message on September 11th to Mr. Churchill, stating Canada's attitude and determination: "Canada was never more proud of the privilege of having her forces on sea, on land and in the air closely associated with

University of Toronto Contingent C. O. T. C. Auxiliary Battalion

Orderly Room: Reading Room, Hart House, Telephone Mi 7454
Acting Officer Commanding: Major W. S. Wilson
Acting Second in Command: Major W. S. Wallace
Acting Adjutant: Lieutenant E. A. Macdonald

It has been agreed by the Conference of Canadian Universities, after consultation with the Hon. C. G. Power, Associate Minister of National Defence, and the Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Minister of War Service, that all physically fit male undergraduates who are 18 years of age and over at the time of registration in the University are required to take military training.

It is the intention that male undergraduates coming within the age groups to be called up under the National Resources Mobilization Act, 1940, viz., those 20 years of age or over on July 1st, 1940, will receive their compulsory training during the University session, with an additional two weeks at camp at the end of the session, instead of having their University courses interrupted by a call to a training centre for one month. These persons will be formed into an Auxiliary Battalion of the Canadian Officers' Training Corps.

AGE GROUP 24 AND OVER

Students over the age of 24 on July 1st, 1940, will not be required to take compulsory military training, but they may, if they so desire, take such training.

AGE GROUP 20 TO 24

All students between the ages of 20 and 24 inclusive on July 1st, 1940, must report to the Orderly Room of the Auxiliary Battalion, Hart House, and complete their registration cards (yellow) for military training, between 9 a.m. and 6 p.m. from Monday, September 23rd, to Friday, September 27th, inclusive, and on Saturday, September 28th, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Registration must be completed by the age group 20 to 24 by Saturday, September 28th, at 3 p.m.

The training to be carried out by this group will be in accordance with the syllabus authorized by the Department of National Defence and will be the same as that given those who are required under the National Resources Mobilization Act, 1940, to report to training centres for a 30-day period.

AGE GROUP 18 AND 19

All students who are 18 years of age at the date of registration and were not 20 years of age on July 1st, 1940, must register at the Auxiliary Battalion Orderly Room in Hart House from Monday, September 30th, to Friday, October 4th, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., and Saturday, October 5th, from 9 a.m. to 12 noon. It will not be possible to register for military training after the dates mentioned, as full returns of registration will then be made to the Government.

The training to be carried out by this group will consist of physical training and elementary military training and will be conducted in so far as possible during the Physical Training periods. Special periods will be arranged for those for whom physical training periods are not provided in the time tables.

MEMBERS OF R.C.N.V.R. OR N.P.A.M.

All students who are now members of the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve (R.C.N.V.R.) or the Non-Permanent Active Militia (N.P.A.M.) must send written evidence of such membership to the Registrar of the University by October 5th. Such students are not required to register.

ORDERLY ROOM

The Orderly Room, located in the Reading Room in Hart House, will be for the use of the Auxiliary Battalion of the Canadian Officers' Training Corps, where complete information may be obtained. There will be no occasion for such members to use the Headquarters of the Canadian Officers' Training Corps at 119 St. George Street.

Those completing their training in the C.O.T.C. will not register with the Auxiliary Battalion.

helping it to attain its objective. Training in the use of rifle, Bren gun, Lewis gun and anti-gas precautions is given.

Infantry (Machine Gun) 16%

This arm is an important combatant branch of the service, working in close co-operation with all arms, particularly with Infantry Rifle. An applicant should have an aptitude for mechanical subjects and be in good physical condition.

Army Service Corps 5%

This arm is employed in the transporting, storing and distribution of the food, ammunition, fuel and other supplies of the Army. The Officers should thus be experienced in the control, operation and maintenance of motor trucks or fleets; or in the distribution, packing, shipping or storage of food stuffs, etc.

Army Dental Corps 3%

Open only to graduates and undergraduates in Dentistry.

Army Medical Corps 7%

Open only to graduates and undergraduates in Medicine.

Ordnance (O.M.E.) 3%

Officers must be graduate mechanical or electrical engineers, preferably skilled or experienced in motor vehicle or general machinery maintenance and shop practice.

Note—Please note that the Headquarters at 119 St. George Street are for the use of members of the Canadian Officers' Training Corps only. Other students required to take military training under the National Resources Mobilization Act, 1940, or University requirements, should read carefully the statement concerning the Auxiliary Battalion The Orderly Room of which is in Hart House.

A MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

those of the United Kingdom and other parts of the Commonwealth in the magnificent stand in the world's citadel of freedom against ruthless aggression and for the preservation of the liberties of free men". . . . Britain "may count on our continuing support to the utmost of our strength." In that spirit this university is seeking to serve.

This permission by the Government to continue academic work and military training during the college year enables a student to use his time to the best advantage; it is a concession which we gratefully acknowledge.

INTER-COLLEGIATE ATHLETICS

At the Conference of Canadian Universities held in Ottawa on July 5th, to consult with the Minister of National Defence, the athletic authorities of the various universities decided to recommend to their respective Athletic Boards that senior inter-collegiate competitions should be discontinued for the coming academic year. The reason for this decision was that the energy and available time of male students should be given to military training (Saturday afternoons will of necessity be used for this purpose). It was felt that students would gladly sacrifice their usual interests and recreations in order to fulfil their duty to their country in this grave phase of the struggle for the freedom, decency and lasting peace of the world. Competitive sport within each university will continue, and may well be developed in conjunction with military training. Physical fitness is basic for national service as well as for academic studies. These recommendations of the athletic representatives have been confirmed, I believe, by the various athletic boards of the universities and by the governing bodies of the universities of Canada. They have certainly been adopted by our own university.

WOMEN UNDERGRADUATES

At the moment specific duties in connection with our national war effort have not been laid upon the women undergraduates. I know how eager they are to do their utmost for the great Cause. They always have a chief share in maintaining morale, and I have no doubt they will consider and devise methods of sharing in the various war efforts of the community within the limits of opportunity imposed by their university studies.

A GREAT YEAR

This year of your university life will be unlike any you have spent in the past. You are living in a great time; I trust that you will have the greatness of soul with which to meet it. Have pride in the past of the world-girdling empire of which we are free members; have that courage in the present which bids us to defend our heritage; have confidence in the future victory of those ideals of life, individual and national, which are the reflections of the character of God Himself.

I close with the recently uttered words of a great British soldier, General Lord Gort: "Let us all dedicate ourselves to this new crusade which shall rid the world of this scourge, strong in the support of our faith and of that armour of God, of which St. Paul speaks in his Epistle to the Ephesians. In this spirit let us all go forward together."

This exhortation I venture to repeat to the staff and students of this honourable and loyal University of Toronto.

H. J. CODY,
President.

The President hopes to address all members of the staff and the student body in Convocation Hall on Wednesday afternoon, the 25th of September, at 4.15 o'clock.

Intercollegiate Athletics

President H. J. Cody of the University of Toronto, who is also President of the Canadian Universities' Conference, announces that the problem of intercollegiate games was discussed at a meeting held in Ottawa on September 9th. Representatives of the Universities of Canada met at that time to discuss with the Honourable J. G. Gardiner and the Honourable C. G. Power the problem of military training in Universities during the coming session. At this meeting, after a satisfactory interview with the two Ministers, a short discussion took place on intercollegiate athletics and the Conference unanimously approved of the decision made at its previous meeting on July 5th.

At that meeting, Dr. J. C. Simpson of McGill University, speaking on behalf of the athletic authorities of Toronto, Queen's, Western, and McGill, stated that they all felt that, while athletics must be an integral part of military training, it must be a secondary objective in wartime. They felt that it was unwise to continue Senior Inter-collegiate competition during the coming academic year. The reasons for this decision, he said, were that the time and energy of male students should now be devoted to military training and that students would gladly sacrifice some of their usual interests in order to fulfil their duty to their country. Competitive sport, within each University, produces self-discipline and physical fitness and such sport may well be developed in conjunction with military training. The representatives of the four Universities had, therefore, agreed unanimously that Senior Intercollegiate competition be discontinued for the Session, 1940-41. Dr. Simpson's report was unanimously approved by the Conference which represents all the Universities in Canada and the governing bodies of the various Universities have since confirmed this agreement.

(Revised)

UNIVERSITY AND COLLEGE STUDENTS

16. (1) The Minister shall furnish the Board with a list of universities and colleges at which there are duly authorised contingents of the Canadian Officers' Training Corps or which require their students to undergo compulsory military training which is in the opinion of the Representatives of the Department of National Defence, at least equivalent to the military training to be given men called out under these regulations, (such training to be at least 110 hours training as specified in H.Q. 54-27-35-60 dated September 3, 1940 and to include two weeks' training in camp or at a training centre), and the Minister may from time to time add to or remove from such list of universities and colleges and, if any university or college is removed from such list by the Minister on the ground that the military training at such university or college or by the contingent of the Canadian Officers' Training Corps is not or has not been equivalent to that given to men called out under these regulations, the Board shall cancel any postponement order hereinafter provided for in respect of students attending such university or college.

(2) The Board shall order the postponement of the military training under these regulations until the end of the scholastic year or session of bona fide students of a class called out for military training under these regulations who are attending throughout the session regular courses leading to a degree or diploma in such universities and colleges and who are members of and training with contingents of the Canadian Officers' Training Corps or are undergoing such compulsory military training of or at such universities and colleges, but the Board shall cancel the postponement of any such student who does not undergo and complete the full military training. After the end of the scholastic year or session any student whose training hereunder has been postponed until such time shall be liable if so determined by the Minister of National Defence, to be enrolled in and taken on the strength of an appropriate unit of the Non-Permanent Active Militia upon the same terms as a person called up for training under these regulations and who reports for such purpose to a training centre.

(3) Each such university or college shall furnish to the Divisional Registrar in the Administrative Division in which the university or college is located a full and complete list of the men registered as students indicating which of them are undergoing or intend to undergo the course of military training or C.O.T.C. training aforesaid and, in the case of students not undergoing such military training, the reasons why they are excepted therefrom.

(4) Such compulsory military training or C.O.T.C. training in the case of university students before mentioned shall, subject to the approval of the Minister of National Defence, be considered equivalent to the first training period for which persons are called out under these regulations and shall except such students therefrom.

Faculty of Arts Department of Military Studies

The courses offered in Military Studies are:

(a) A course of three lectures per week open to the Pass and Commerce and Finance Courses for the first, second and third years, and in the third year of the General Course.

(b) A course of one lecture per week open to the Honour Course in all years, and General Course in the fourth year.

Due to war conditions, the content of these courses is in a state of transition, and they will not be given strictly as laid down in the Calendar of the Faculty.

Enrolment is permitted in the second, third or fourth years only to those who have taken the course in the previous year.

Military and Physical Training

MILITARY TRAINING

By order of the Board of Governors, each physically fit male undergraduate who is eighteen years of age or over at the time of registration in the University is required to take military training.

PHYSICAL TRAINING

Each male undergraduate is required to take physical training during the First and Second Years of his attendance. An undergraduate will be debarred from registering in the Third and Fourth Years who has not completed satisfactorily the prescribed course in physical training in the First or Second Year respectively, and will be required to pay a supplemental fee of $10.00 if he does not complete in a session the course in physical training compulsory upon him during that session. The prescribed military training will be accepted in lieu of the compulsory physical training in any year.

MEDICAL EXAMINATION

Each male undergraduate who is required to take military training or physical training, must apply at the opening of the session for a medical examination as follows:

- undergraduates who have not completed two years of compulsory physical training are to apply to the Medical Director, Hart House;
- instructions for all other undergraduates regarding the medical examination will be published in later editions of The Varsity.

or physical exercise, must first undergo a medical examination by the Director.

President's Opening Address

The opening address by President Cody to the students of all faculties will be held in Convocation Hall, Wednesday, September 25th, at 4.15 p.m.

National War Service Board Requirements

Several students have informed the University Registrar that they have been notified by the National War Service Board to report for medical examination under the terms of the Proclamation issued on September 13th, 1940. The Registrar has accordingly communicated with an official of the National War Service Board, and has learned that University students will not be required to comply with the notices which they have received, provided they submit to the Registrar of the Board certificates signed by the University Registrar to the effect that they have enrolled in the University for the session 1940-1941, and will, if found to be physically fit, be required to take military training at the University.

Consequently, each undergraduate who has received a notice from the War Service Board should apply at the Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall, for the necessary certificate. Before this certificate can be issued, however, the undergraduate must submit his card of admission to lectures for the session 1940-1941.

September 21st, 1940.

TEN CENTS

"The Varsity" Celebrates Sixty Years of Growth

Not to any particular moment or event, nor to anything material, but rather to the University of Toronto which is itself timeless, embracing those many moments and events which create Varsity's traditions and spirits and ideals, do we dedicate this issue of The Varsity.

To the springs of knowledge from which we may drink deeply; to the warm comfort of college friendship; to the peaceful beauty of the campus as dusk slowly settles; to its freshness in spring; to the cheers rolling down from the crowded stands; to the peal of the carillon; to the indelible memories of college days;—to these things we have loved, we dedicate this issue.

To her sons who served and died a quarter-century ago, watched over by Soldier's Tower; to her sons who are serving and dying today; to the stream of trained men and women filling the ranks of Canadian life; to the research from the labs which is improving that life;—to these things which Varsity pours forth to the world, we dedicate this issue.

To the men of vision who once dreamed the dream; to the men of vigour who carried it through; to the men of knowledge who hand on the torch; to the thirsty young minds who are seeking the truth;—to these who have made, and are continually making, the Varsity we know, we dedicate this issue.

Sixty Years Old, "The Varsity" Still Serves

Time's march is swift; its rapid pace diminishes not. One by one the twinkling years fly past, all seeming as brief as this one just closing, and as their tide surges irresistibly onward, many a landmark is dropped along the way, sometimes with due recognition, oftentimes silently and unknown. If the landmark has a particular significance for a particular individual or group, it is met with acclaim; if not, it goes unnoticed. This year, being the sixtieth anniversary of the founding of The Varsity, constitutes a landmark of real significance to us.

Sixty years ago when it bravely poked its nose onto the Toronto campus, The Varsity had a meaning. Today, despite the changes wrought by time and progress, it still has a meaning, one that is still much the same. Then, as now and always, The Varsity was designed to be a medium for the free expression of student thought and ideas, and although it has developed through many stages from a weekly literary magazine into a thriving daily newspaper, that purpose is still a fundamental. To give a lead to student opinion, to allow the broadcast of opinion through its columns, to direct, if possible, that opinion into worthwhile channels—these functions The Varsity has always endeavoured to perform.

Others of its present functions have arisen with the development of the paper and the university. The spread of the university over a large area and its division into numerous federated colleges and faculties have made The Varsity one of the few unifying, centralizing institutions on the campus. In its columns the news from all parts of the campus is sifted and distributed and all sections are thus more closely knit into a cohesive whole. The very fact, of course, that it is now a newspaper presenting daily and immediate news, marks it off from its original form.

An increasingly important function of The Varsity is its position as a training school for journalists. In the absence of any such course in Canadian universities, the college papers must serve in that capacity, and it is the considered opinion of many leading newspapers and of the Canadian Press that it is serving well. Evidence of this is seen in the number of former editors and reporters now holding positions in the fields of Canadian, British and American journalism.

The Varsity has become an integral part of the University of Toronto; into the fabric of its pages has been woven the very life of this great institution. It has earned its rightful place here on the campus, and it will keep it, growing from strength to strength in the next sixty years. Those many men of varying opinions and abilities who have guided The Varsity for the first glorious sixty years hand on in confidence the torch to those who will guide it in the future.

Graduates Have a Duty Toward Their Alma Mater

As undergraduates and graduates of the University of Toronto, we must of necessity have her welfare constantly in our hearts. With keen interest and pride we follow her growth, and glory in the honours heaped upon her; with deep regret we deplore anything that does her harm or injures her fair name. Therefore, means whereby good may be done for our alma mater are constantly sought out.

Graduates have often mentioned the existence of a general anti-university attitude in parts of the province and nation, and anxious requests for some counter-balancing action have been received. In this connection criticism of the existing university publicity department has been broached. Much serious thought has been given to methods which will help to publicize the worthwhile rather than the derogatory aspects of the university and to place the university in a better light with the general public who perhaps have had no opportunity of discovering the value of the institution to the city of Toronto, the Province of Ontario, and the Dominion of Canada.

Without a doubt the techniques of university publicity could be greatly improved, but to graduates and those leaving college this year it might be well to ask: Are not the graduates of a university themselves its best publicity agents? Can they not, through their actions, their attitude toward life, and their co-operation in the community, do far more good in proving the worth of the university than can the artificial techniques of publicity?

There can be little doubt as to the answer. We who are leaving its walls must take as one of our guiding principles the vow to live so that we reflect nothing but respect upon our alma mater. Our university training has in most cases been hard won. It has been a training for a vocation and also a training for citizenship in the communal life upon which our world is organized and within which we must find our place. That training must be used, and it can only be used if we assume our proper responsibilities in the community. We must prove to the world that university training is worthwhile from a community as well as a material standpoint.

Each and every graduate, past, present or future, owes a duty to the University of Toronto, and by discharging that duty properly he can do her much good. If, however, we fail to apply our training to the problems of the community, if we fail to assume our responsibilities in that community, then we are failing ourselves and, far above that, we are failing our alma mater. The university has confidence in her sons and daughters as she sends them out into new fields; may they live up to that confidence.

As World Faces Crisis Britain Still Stands

Britain still stands! With those triumphant words we were able to open our editorial columns six months ago, and with those same words, ringing even more triumphantly after six months of world-wide war, we can begin our final editorial for the year 1940-41.

A year ago the stale-mate war suddenly flamed into lightning blitzkrieg as Hitler's iron-clad legions swept all before them in a seemingly irresistible wave of mechanized force. New techniques of war, long-cloaked in secrecy, brought terror to civilians and a hopeless feeling of inadequacy to soldiers. Denmark and Norway were over-run, the Netherlands, Belgium, once mighty France—all fell beneath the conqueror's heel. Turning defeat into glorious victory, remnants of the Flanders' armies crossed the twenty-miles of water to England, there to await the certain coming of the madman. The isle was fortified as never before, but at times the narrow moat seemed insecure. Death rained from the sky by day and by night, killing people, ruining property and reducing morale.

But the expected blow was never struck. In the air the R.A.F. performed heroic deeds; on the sea silent ships protected Britain on every front; on the land men stood waiting, prepared. In North Africa, after a strategic retreat, British forces swept the Italian armies out of existence, and the Navy cleaned the Mediterranean.

In Canada, the nation has been geared to a war economy although the machinery was put into operation only after many delays and, to use an American defense production term, "bottlenecks". As American neutrality laws have one by one been lifted, more and more has American production been geared to the British war effort, and Canadian production has to some extent been co-ordinated with the output from below the border. Canadian-American relations have grown steadily better, and the latest move came recently when a Governor of this university, Leighton McCarthy, was appointed Minister to Washington.

Last July Canada made limited military training compulsory, and the period has been lengthened from the original thirty days to four months. Canada's men are serving wherever they can in a multitude of capacities as the Commonwealth of which she is a partner faces its supreme crisis.

The war has spread; new tension spots have developed; new alliances have been struck; and no one can foretell with accuracy the future. But one sure omen for victory remains. . . . Britain still stands!

"Wheeee," said the Cat, dashing into the Press, sliding up the banister and crashing into the inner sanctum where the Editor was frenziedly chewing his typewriter ribbon. "Listen," said the Cat. "I've got an idea that will kill the readers—they'll panic! 'em—it will tear their hearts out. It's a whumph of an idea. In fact it's good."

"Hello Cat," said the Editor.
"What do you mean, hello, Cat," said the Cat. "I bring you an idea that's colossal, dynamic, it's even printable, and you have the nerve to sit there chewing your typewriter ribbon and say 'hello Cat!'"

"Well, what's up?" said the Editor. "Why are you so excited?"

"Why am I excited?" he cried. "I got a new idea for the column . . ."

The Editor stopped chewing on his typewriter ribbon and sat up and took notice. "A new idea," he exclaimed. He wrung the Cat's paw.

"Lots of new ideas," the Cat said. "Lots and lots and lots of new ideas." "You amaze me!" said the Editor, "name one. Just one."

The Cat settled into its box of catnip and munched an arrowroot benignly.

"Now here's the angle. 'Communism in the Pool Room!' Red billiard balls!"

"Do you get it? . . . lots and lots and lots of red billiard balls."

"Go peddle your arrowroot biscuits," said the Editor, picking at his teeth with a detached typewriter key. "We used that gag when Abe Lincoln was news editor. . . . Go away and write a good column like a good Cat. It's the Big Issue and you've got a whole galley to fill."

"The Big Issue? You mean an eight-pager?" the Cat queried, its whiskers twitching with anticipation.

"Forty-eight, you milk-sot."

The Cat hit the ceiling, and bounced back neatly into a neutral corner. "Pulling my leg, eh?" he said, counting all four of them to be sure.

"No," said the Editor, "forty-eight (count 'em) forty-eight glorious pages, and the staff is counting on you to come through with the finest column of your career."

The Cat drew himself up to his full height and struck a dramatic pose. "You've come to the right Cat, chief, and I want you to know that the column I write tonight will be the funniest in the history of The Varsity. Your faith in me will not go unrewarded."

Striding purposefully to his corner, he spat on his typewriter finger. And away he went. There was no stopping the Cat. He wrote and wrote and wrote. Before you could say Jack Robinson, he returned to the Editor waving eighteen pages of copy paper.

"Look," he said, "this stuff is so good, I could sell it to Toike Oike, but I'm giving it to you."

The Editor scanned it briefly and flung it on the floor. "Can't use it," he said. "Here we're putting out our Jubilee Issue, and you come along with tripe about the Pool Room and the Tuck Shop. The stuff ain't got dignity."

"Dignity!" screamed the Cat. "After all these years you've been living in the Pool Room, and you talk of dignity. Ain't you got no shame?" The Cat was almost in tears.

"Stop whimpering," said the Editor. "Do your work or get out."

The Cat controlled himself with an effort, but when he spoke his voice seemed to quiver with emotion.

"I worked for you," he said quietly. "Yes, I slaved for you, year after year. I poured out my life's blood and what's my reward?"

The Editor raised his head as if to speak. The Cat silenced him with a gesture.

"No—let me go on," he said. "For years and years I've been writing about the Pool Room and the Tuck Shop and it's always been good enough for me."

"I'm sorry," said the Editor.

"It's too late to be sorry now," said the Cat. "This is your last issue. But I'll be here when you're in your grave."

"But I do hope you turn out a good issue," he added, softening. "No hard feelings. . . . Well, I better get back home now. Mrs. Champus is expecting me."

And he left the sanctum and padded down the stairway into the night.

Lectures and News Keep Student Journalists Busy

Newspaper Played Role In Fiery Student Strike Which Raged in 'Nineties

Fighting Editor-in-Chief, Jim Tucker, and Bill King, Future Liberal Prime Minister of Canada, Were Leading Figures in Movement which Upset Campus Life and Resulted in a Government Investigation of University Management

LECTURES WERE BOYCOTTED BY STUDENTS

During the winter of 1894-1895 raged the Students' Strike, led by three of the most fiery figures in the history of the university. They were Jim Tucker, Editor-in-Chief of The Varsity, Tom Greenwood, later Sir Hamar Greenwood, prominent in British politics, and Bill King, now Prime Minister of Canada.

Capping a period of unrest among the students, and of friction between staff and undergraduates, the strike lasted for a week during which hardly anyone attended lectures. It finally led to appointment of a Royal Commission to investigate the problems of university administration.

Psychological Background Stressed

The Strike itself was perhaps an inevitable outcome of the attitude of the student mind at the time. In discussing the background of the occurrence, Hector Charlesworth has written: "In considering the events which led up to the famous University strike or boycott of February, 1895, it should be recalled that the early nineties were a period of great unrest throughout the English-speaking world. The revolt against Victorianism had begun within the lifetime of Queen Victoria herself. Socialism was popular everywhere. In London, George Bernard Shaw was attacking existing institutions. In America, books like Henry George's "Progress and Poverty" and Edward Bellamy's "Looking Backward" were in everybody's hands. Reactions from this intellectual condition were active in universities all over North America, and the young man of student years everywhere was passively or actively in opposition to authority. The elders were, on the other hand, driven to greater lengths of conservatism and were fearful of the 'anarchistic' leaven that was supposed to be at work. This was the psychological background of the crisis at the University of Toronto in the academic year of 1894-5."

Wrong's Appointment Disputed

In 1894, Hon. Edward Blake was Chancellor of the University, and the former Professor James Loudon was President. The death of President Wilson in 1892 had left vacant a lectureship in English History. When Rev. George M. Wrong, lecturer on the staff, was appointed to the chair at an annual salary of $1500 instead of the usual beginning rate of $800 a year, charges of nepotism were made against the university heads, for Wrong was a son-in-law of the Chancellor.

The reputation which Professor Wrong now enjoys would seem to substantiate the statement made by authorities that the appointee was granted a larger stipend than usual because he was a man of greater experience and ability than the usual run of new professors, who were nearly always very recent graduates.

The promotion of Wrong to the position of Professor of English History in 1894, aroused further controversy, and many charged that the University Council had considered only Wrong's application for the chair, and had appointed him at the behest of the Mowat administration. Heated discussion in the downtown dailies and encouragement by staff members when he was opposed to the Loudon regime fanned the flame of student discontent, and when the academic year opened, discord was rife.

Tucker a Fighting Editor

Editor of The Varsity for the three months of the Michaelmas term was James A. Tucker, a slim, 22-year-old senior from Owen Sound. Mild in speech, he was known even before he came to Toronto for his scathing pen. In his first editorial of the year he refused charges made by the Toronto Star against the management and staff of the university and branded them "extravagant, misleading and ill-timed," but admitted that as long as staff appointments were under government control there would always be room for suspicion that political motives were being considered. He promised that The Varsity would treat such questions without fear or favour.

In subsequent editorials, he aired all the innuendoes in connection with the Wrong appointment, and criticized the appointment method. "Soft-headed people might regard it as a delightful system of distributing charity on a large scale," he wrote.

Labour Speakers Banned

In this super-charged atmosphere occurred the "Thompson-Jury" incident. The Political Science Club invited two labour leaders, Phillips Thompson, a journalist, and Alfred Jury, a Liberal politician, to address the club during the course of the year. The University Council, objecting to certain of the religious and political beliefs of the two, ruled that revision of the program be made by Professor James Mavor, head of the Department of Political Science.

The Varsity promptly attacked Mavor, and branded the men who had banned Thompson and Jury as "bigots and persecutors." Tucker's final editorial of the term continued in like vein, and spoke at great length against "Intolerance." The Political Science Club was denied the use of the Students' Union Hall for its meetings, but hired a private hall, in defiance of the Council, and listened to a blameless enough address from each of the labourites. Students and outside citizens flocked to the meeting.

Change of Editors

When the students reassembled after Christmas, Joseph Montgomery replaced Tucker as Editor of The Varsity. Any hope that faculty members may have held that the undergraduate paper's attacks would diminish in violence were short-lived, for Montgomery's first editorial re-opened the Thompson-Jury question and enjoined "How could the present Council object to a man's economics on account of his religious views when the Council is composed partly of professor Christians, partly of professed skeptics and partly of those who are assuredly neither one thing nor the other?"

The Council informed Montgomery that unless The Varsity ceased its attacks he would be expelled. He withdrew from the editorship and Tucker returned, upon re-appointment by the student body. The Literary and Scientific Society guaranteed to pay his expenses at some other university, should he meet with expulsion.

Petition for Investigation

Twelve hundred students signed a petition that a Royal Commission be set up to investigate the affairs of the university.

Late in January, 1895, Tucker made his first attack on President Loudon, denouncing a statement that the president had made to the downtown papers that "the agitation was the work of a few malcontents" as false, and demanding a public apology. He held the Thompson-Jury incident to be a side issue, and said the real question was "whether the undergraduates and The Varsity as representing them have a right to express an opinion on the action of the Council."

The Council of University College and the university at large summoned Tucker to appear before them, and when he did so and admitted the authorship of the editorial, he was barred from attending lectures. His reply was that

Jottings from Files Reveal Human Highlights

1880-1881

Published by the Varsity Stock Co., a modest group of men anonymously "started the Varsity on its career unattended by malevolence and amid the hearty 'God-speed-you' of friends."

The 500-odd Varsity students called for their weekly issue of the new paper at "Mr. Wilkinson's, Corner of Adelaide and Toronto Sts." and paid five cents for it. During the year it rolled off the presses of three different downtown printing firms without suffering noticeable change.

Generally approved by exchange papers and claiming to be "already one of the largest of University papers," the Varsity discussed such topics as co-education, university endowment, possibility of U. of T. representation in the Ontario legislature, featured translations of Latin, German and French poetry, and carried literary articles by staff, students and exchanges.

1881-1882

As Oxford defeated Cambridge for the third consecutive year in the annual rowing classic, by finishing the four-and-a-quarter-mile course in 20 minutes and 12 seconds, the Canadian Presbyterian was attacking the Toronto student as "Son of Belial, clothed with infamy and wine." The editorial columns discussed university affiliation, and hazed, pleaded for free public libraries and hailed the production of "Sophocles' Antigone" (directed by Professor Maurice Hutton), the law firm of "Mulock, Tilt, McArthur and Crowder" ran weekly advertisements in The Varsity.

1882-1883

"There was sufficient rhythm and 'tune' to make the performance palatable," ran a review of an all-Wagner concert performed in Toronto in March—less than a month after the composer's death. "Wagnerian music is a taste that must be acquired, like that for tomatoes."

The Varsity got constructive and laid extensive plans on paper for the extension of University College to include a Convocation Hall in the present quad, and to close the quad by extending the residences along the north side, and J. Squair won the Graduating Class French prize.

At a Thanksgiving Day inspection of the Queen's Own, the full 55 men of "K" Company drew a rousing cheer as they marched past the reviewing post.

They're Off!

Six thousand issues of The Varsity are printed daily and are distributed as fast as they roll off the machine. The presses begin to roll at 8.00 a.m. and continue to produce sheaves of Varsities until 11.30. Every faculty and residence has received its quota of the daily edition by noon.

Handcart and Horse-Drawn Trolley Distributed "The Varsity" Years Ago

A hand-cart piled high with Varsities and tearing madly along Bay Street to keep an appointment with a horse-drawn street car could hardly fail to create a sensation now, but it was a familiar sight of sixty years ago.

Once a week, the usual quota of Varsities was trundled over to the Pulp Tower where it was dumped in picturesque confusion on the straw-strewn floor of Street Car 28, to be sorted for distribution to the various parts of call: Wycliff, Knox, Moss Hall, St. Michael's, School of Science and the University Residence. The car, especially designed in Schenectady for heavy work (such as carrying Varsities), proudly displayed on each side the legend:

VARSITY SPECIAL

King Street 3:30 p.m.

Moss Hall 4 p.m.

A wild burst of speed usually brought the Special to Osgoode Hall, around 3:45, and five minutes later, to the corner of McCaul Street where it paused to give the horses a breathing space. By 3:55 it had jolted to a stop at Baldwin Street to make connections with a car going south. The home stretch was covered in roughly five minutes, bringing the car to the Wycliff Siding by 4 p.m. and to the hands of anxious readers a few minutes later.

Students should be duly grateful for the fact that they now waste only part of the morning waiting for their favourite newspaper, instead of most of the afternoon too.

In the past sixty years, the horses and hand cart have given way to the bicycle as a more streamlined means of distribution, but delivering the Varsities is still far from being a simple undertaking, as Art Gibson, whose job it is, will tell you.

Soon after 9 a.m., the Science Building must be provided with papers, and then follow the buildings on the front campus. A second trip is necessary for the Victoria, Medical and Science areas. Finally, about noon, half an hour after the last sheet rolls off the presses, the Druggists pick up their bundle from the doorstep.

The Meds apparently have other things on their minds, for Varsity-less students are always sure of finding extra copies in the Medical Building. A second unfailing source of supply is the U.C. junior common room.

In future years this situation may be remedied by transferring some of these extra papers to such places as the Economics Building where none are delivered at present. This would also help decrease the number of tons of paper wasted a year.

And the bicycle may give place to an aeroplane. Who knows? . . .

The Varsity Has Become Its Own School Of Modern Journalism

Many Well-Known Reporters in Journalistic World Today Received Tutelage on The Varsity

LEARN FUNDAMENTALS

Although its editorials have burst forth repeatedly ever since its beginning with storming pleas for a School of Journalism at the University of Toronto, The Varsity has been, for the past 15 years and more, a training-ground for newspapermen.

Many a well-known reporter of today got his first taste of printer's ink on The Varsity Staff. One Canadian Press staff writer, now working in England, began his military writing by covering the notorious University Residence "Bed Race," as it looked from one of the combatant's camps. Another, who handled the Sioux report conferences, came to grips with first principles of writing in covering Hart House Debates. Numbers of Press Gallery writers in Ottawa and in the Provincial Legislatures learned how to navigate in political circles while covering Mock Parliaments for The Varsity.

In addition to the custom which has sprung up on the undergraduate newspaper of holding lectures in the basics of news writing by the News Editor and on makeup by the Managing Editor, The Varsity cub reporter gets constant training as he works his way through a year of publication.

Mathead men, disciplined during the summer by work on big newspapers and in The Canadian Press, put their experience to work in training the staff. Any time of the day or night is time to help a staffer become more efficient, or to discuss a nice point in journalistic principles with a colleague.

Not merely do students get sound training in how to write a news lead, but they learn a lot about what happens to the news before it appears in newspaper form. Nearly every reporter and mathead man is a night editor or an assistant night editor, who spends one night every three or four weeks "putting the paper to bed." This includes writing the headlines, plotting the placement of stories, feeding the copy to the linotypist, putting the lead into the frames like a jigsaw puzzle, and finally watching the printed sheets roll off the presses at 8.00 a.m.

The final product often is far from perfection, but the slip-ups and mistakes of the careless reporter or night editor bring the ire of the mathead upon him, and he gradually learns the musts and mustn'ts of being out a newspaper. Meanwhile the editors learn the difficulties of an administrative position—learn to recognize the reporter who can be trusted to bring back "the goods," and the one who will return with "no story." A knowledge of the responsibilities of the publication, which lie entirely on their shoulders, is carried back to their summer job which eventually becomes their steady livelihood.

For the campus, complex organizations, exciting happenings, important speeches, human interest and its own peculiar politics, is a world within itself. It has become a community in which most of its 7,100 students can live happily for weeks on end without venturing into the outer world—a pattern of Canada as a whole, in which reporters can glean news of particular interest to its inhabitants.

And just as the University is a small-scale pattern of a nation, so The Varsity is a small edition of the press of a Dominion; its reporters, with a four-year span of life, cover the varied campus activities, rise rapidly to administrative offices, and disappear—with something a little more than mere enthusiasm under their belts.

1883-1884

Having shown a profit on the previous year, the "Varsity Stock Company held shareholders' meetings in their editorial offices in Moss Hall, where they discussed "important matters pertaining to a systematic arrangement of the various news departments," and raised the cost of the publication to 10 cents.

Harvard hadn't won a football game from the big blue Yale team (who averaged 173 lbs.) yet '75.

1884-1885

After two years of developing the last of its functions as "A Weekly Review of EDUCATION, UNIVERSITY POLITICS AND EVENTS," the Varsity began to become less a newspaper and more a literary magazine. For the first time the publication carried a mathead, Editor-in-Chief was Fred H. Sykes. First special Varsity supplement, a green-covered Christmas Issue of 20 pages, appeared this year.

1885-1886

Changing its subtitle to "A Weekly Journal of LITERATURE, UNIVERSITY THOUGHT AND EVENTS," the Varsity's trend was more than ever toward essays and poetry and often less than a page was devoted to news items. Typical of the style of reporting is the account of the football match between Varsity and McGill in which the fact that Varsity won 17-1 was not mentioned until the second-last paragraph.

1886-1887

Continuing to feature Swinburne-influenced love lyrics, the Varsity announced that it aimed at being "The exponent of the views of the university public," and added that "The literary department will, as heretofore, be a main feature."

The Toronto World advertised as the only one-cent paper in Canada, The Telegram advertised "Room and board for Gentleman or Student" and the Toronto year book was available at Rowell and Hutchison's for 75 cents.

The Varsity Book—"Containing the choicest selections from the columns of The Varsity since its first year"—was published.

Balance-sheet of The Varsity Publishing Co., for the previous year's publication, showed a profit of $118.91. Publishing costs were $821.40, and total expenditure for the year was $1075.00.

1887-1888

Showing a little more enterprise, the issue of this year published a large Christmas number highlighted by a dialogue between Socrates ("as usual") and the Bursar. A special commencement edition was also published.

This was the year that, out at Cobourg, two editors of the Acta Victoriana were suspended for expressing criticisms of college government. The Varsity and The Acta exchanged sympathetic telegrams concerning "the rights of college journalists."

Editor-in-Chief F. B. Hodgins reopened the hazing controversy. H. J. Cody, leading his third year Classics class, was elected vice-president of the U.C. Lit and was active in Y.M.C.A. debating circles.

The Engineering Society marvelled to hear that pictures could be taken of trains moving at 60 m.p.h., so clear that even the wheel-spokes of the train were not blurred. The rugby team edged Queen's 10-8 and trounced McGill 27-7.

1888-1889

At the beginning of the year, the Joint Stock Company dropped its subscription rates from two dollars to one dollar annually, hoping to increase circulation. Graduates, shaking their heads at the ravages of time and the inevitable spread of university buildings, sang praises to "es-Taddle or quondam-Taddle," bemoaning the fact that "what was once a purring brook is now a burnt-clay conduit."

J. H. Moss succeeded F. B. Hodgins as Editor, and S. B. Leacock and Jas. Brebner, a library assistant, joined the editorial staff. Late in the year The Varsity admitted that it had suffered considerable financial loss through its new policy of lower subscription rates but "neither expected nor feared that the ultimate results of this change would be in any way injurious to the permanent financial basis of the paper."

Women Play Big Part in Day-to-Day Publication

Since Early Eighties Women Have Flooded Newspaper with Copy

"Lady Undergraduates" Began Taking an Interest in News 12 Years after Varsity Inception. Have Fought Sternly for Co-journalistic Rights and Privileges Ever Since and Now Play an Important Part in Publications

NOW OUTNUMBER MEN ON STAFF

The sprinkling of lipstick-tinged cigarette butts, and the comparative purification of the conventional newspaper oaths which add colour to the Press as the Undergraduate newspaper is whipped into shape denote a new day of journalism, contrasting with the virile days of the early Varsity of 1880, when almost all careers, particularly newspaper work, were strictly stag affairs.

From the very beginning, however, "lady undergraduates," as they were called then, undoubtedly provided a large amount of copy. Early editorials thunder on the question of whether or not they should be at university at all. Subsequent ones deal exhaustively with the burning problem of their position on the paper relative to the men's staff. Accusations and counter-accusations are hurled in both directions; both snarls and sobs seem to be suggested. Later on, however, especially since the last war, less and less of this sort of thing is found; where have the women of The Varsity disappeared to?

They have disappeared into The Varsity itself. They are writing editorials, rather than appearing in them as objects of controversy. They are out getting news and sports stories, though the fact that they are doing so is no longer news. They are down at the Press night-editing, or concocting Cats, or gathering items for the Hither and Yon. In short, they are now part of The Varsity's organization, no more remarkable than any other part.

No Women for Twelve Years

For the first 12 years of its existence The Varsity had no women among its editors, probably partly because they were rather scarce, and also because their official society, the Women's Literary, took no action in the matter. However, according to a lady undergraduate of the time, "Since the women always took what positions were offered to them, as a matter of policy," in 1892 Miss Evelyn Durand, who published a good deal of verse in the literary journal that The Varsity then was, accepted the position of an Associate Editor.

During the next few years, an arrangement was made whereby the Women's Literary Society appointed two and later four representatives to The Varsity's Editorial and Business Boards. "All I can remember is collecting a few subscriptions, but the duties of all the staff members were very vague and disorganized at that time," one of the first of these representatives told The Varsity.

"The College Girl" appeared in The Varsity as a new department in 1897, with the acknowledgement that "in our university at least . . . (she) . . . is here to stay." Its editors described women's activities on the campus: "I might add that the Hallow'en Taffy Pull was enjoyed by a goodly number of the girls." They also advised their readers, and discussed university happenings, though in reference to editorial policy, one writer affirms " . . . it is not with affairs of state that the College Girl is expected to deal . . . And so, leaving all perplexing public questions to the masculine mind, let us concern ourselves with matters more in keeping with woman's sportive nature."

"College Girl" Vanished—1908 When The Varsity became a newspaper, rather than a literary journal, in 1908, "College Girl" vanished. Women continued to serve as Associate Editors and to cover women's activities. Special members were sent in by such groups as the University College Ladies' Society, Amesley, and the University Settlement.

About 1913, the women began to feel dissatisfied because of what they considered poor representation on the paper to which they subscribed. Lack of interest on their own part, however, seemed to be at the root of the matter. An editorial of 1913, in reply to a feminine correspondent's complaint, declares, "It is the hardest thing in the world to get the women members to write up any of their happenings . . . As to the question of women having more share in the management of The Varsity, they can certainly have it if they want it . . . anything that women set out to get they get, even as they are going to get the vote . . . let them . . . present their demands to the Undergraduates' Parliament, the body which controls the destinies of this paper . . . Some day a Co-ed will occupy the seat of the Editor-in-Chief and the men will be mere reporters."

More Numerous During War

During the war years, women became more numerous and more important on the staff, and a woman was made an Assistant News Editor. At a staff banquet in 1915 the women expressed their appreciation for "the amount of space and flourishing headlines which always fell to the share of the fair sex."

"It is with much trepidation that the women of The Varsity staff present to the undergraduates of the University the first women's issue in the 35 years' history of the paper . . ." read an editorial in 1916, in an issue brought out by the women alone, in aid of the Patriotic Fund.

In 1917, the increased activity of the women was rewarded by a complete reorganization of the staff, in such a way as to provide, it was hoped, for equal editorial responsibility of men and women. A Women's Editor and Women's Managing Editor were appointed, to be responsible for the organization of women members of the staff, and to have three columns, and more if necessary, at their disposal. " . . . thus the students of the University will know exactly from where the women's news matter will come in the future," says the writer of an editorial entitled "The New Order," and goes on to hope for "a close spirit of co-operation."

Rift Between Man and Co-eds

Apparently it was not forthcoming. The next year there were complaints of "underhand forces" working against the women's staff, "flat refusal" to help them, and "many weeks of strenuous effort and nerve-straining work." This unsatisfactory state of affairs was due to unequal financial responsibility; men students paid a compulsory fee to the Students' Administrative Council, part of which went to The Varsity's upkeep; women still subscribed to The Varsity or not, as they chose, and they often did not choose.

Responsibility Grew in 20's

During the 1920's the women began to take a far greater share in night-editing. In the first part of the decade they brought out "special issues," three or four times a year; otherwise they were not allowed at the Press. In 1924 the office of Women's Managing Editor was abolished, but the women began to take out a regular weekly issue, later increased to two. By the 1930's " . . . the women knew how to do good work, frequent night-editing, editorials, and had equal responsibility with the men," according to the contemporary Women's Editor. This is a far cry from the days when Miss Dorothy Ferrier, chief of the women's staff in 1913, was severely lectured on immorality by the chaplaine of University College for venturing down among the monotype machines in the basement of the Library

Just Jottings From the Files

1889-1890

At the end of its ninth year of publication, the Joint Stock Company succumbed to financial stress and discontinued activities, thus missing the scoop of the century, when an up-turned oil-lamp started the blaze that razed U.C.

1890-1891

When it next appeared on the campus, with some trepidation, The Varsity was under the management of the University College Literary and Scientific Society, therefore becoming "The Undergraduate Paper." Business Manager G. Howard Ferguson secured advance payments of nearly 75 per cent of student subscriptions. W. S. McLeay was Editor, and S. B. Leacock and C. H. Mitchell Associate Editors.

With its publishing date shifted to Tuesday, The Varsity gained in reportorial acumen what it lost in literary endeavour. So vigorous were its editorials that a professor was quoted as saying: "One would think that the affairs of the university could be best managed by handing their control over to The Varsity."

The corner-stone of the new Victoria College was laid. Third year science students blossomed forth in Tam O'Shanter. There were 68 lady undergraduates in the university and Harvard finally beat Yale.

1891-1892

Peter McArthur was flooding Editor-in-Chief J. A. McLean with pastoral poetry. The Toronto Cricket Club offered $500 for a ten-year summer lease on the front campus. Varsity defeated Queen's 25-17 'mid shouts of V-A-R-S-I-T-Y, blasts of fish-horns and waving of umbrellas. Prominent among the crowd was an august member of the faculty who jumped fiercely into his own umbrella and then waved the tattered weed wildly in the air.

1892-1893

Students came back from their holidays to mourn the passing of Sir Daniel Wilson, president of the university. President London succeeded him. In suggesting that a fives court be built, in connection with the new gymnasium, Professor Maurice Hutton found it necessary to explain to the audience what a fives court was. When the court was finally built at Victoria, students found the explanation of small-boy on-lookers "wonderfully instructive." James Brebner was permanently appointed to the office of registrar at an annual salary of $1000. There were 150 ladies enrolled by this time and K Company, at a farewell banquet at Webb's Parlours, severed connection with the university.

1893-1894

In this year W. L. M. King, '95, was on the directorate of The Varsity, under the Editorship of J. H. Brown. The Wednesday weekly then ran a large Xmas number on glossy paper, and liked the improvement so much they kept it up for the rest of the year, resulting in various announcements later about necessity for immediate payment of subscriptions.

G. W. Orton, Varsity '93, became America's champ miler at the Chicago World's Fair beating Coniff of New York, so badly the latter dropped out of the race. Lord and Lady Aberdeen visited the campus, and the governor-general told the students how much more important the development of the brain was than the development of the muscles.

and there working on an issue till 3 o'clock in the morning.

For many years the only "office" of the women's staff was a table in the room allotted to the Women's Students' Administrative Council, and shared by the other women's societies. On the table stood a "Keep Off" sign, quite disregarded. In 1927 the Women's Varsity Office became a separate room, which change was greeted with enthusiasm, dampened somewhat when the new abode was found to be phoneless. The reporters met the crisis by organizing a hot-dog sale along a line of students waiting to buy tickets, and raised money for "a new and sparkling telephone."

"Phone President Cody And - - -"

The Varsity's day begins with the assigning of stories to reporters by the news editor. Reporters check their assignments at the news office, and then cover their stories, handing them in during the afternoon unless the story breaks late, in which case the stories are written at the Press.

Prof. Hutton tried another production of "Antigone," and Miss E. Durand, first woman ever to venture into official association with The Varsity editors, played Ismene.

The Lit Society decided it was time to make The Varsity more representative and revised its constitution to admit representatives of Victoria, Medicine, S.P.S. and the Women's Lit Society.

1894-1895

As the year opened, The Varsity was bickering with The Star, which, it claimed, was "ill-advised, however fearless," in criticizing university appointments. Before the bettle session was over, The Varsity had broken a lance with everyone this side of Hogg's Hollow, and led its own vehement reform campaign against President London in an attempt to overcome nepotism in staff appointments.

Before the year was over, the Editor-in-Chief, James A. Tucker, was barred from lectures, students went on strike, and The Varsity fought on, finally bringing about a Royal Commission investigation. Assistant Editor King took an active part in the student rebellion. The Varsity also had its lighter moments, quoting Shakespeare as exclaiming: "Saw my leg off!" Housed in the Gymnasium building in the Student Union, the first news cuts made their appearance.

1895-1896

Thoroughly chastened by the report of the Royal Commission, The Varsity let its editorial policy lapse into polite avoidance of the controversial. From exile at Stanford University, James A. Tucker provided plaintive poetry and wrote letters saying, "Not the least delightful feature here is the perfect harmony and the good understanding that exists between students and professors. The former respect and trust the latter. There is no breath of ill-will or sedition."

B. K. Sandwell was on the editorial board, wrecked his bicycle 17 miles from town, wrote a lot of amorous sonnets, and "went over to the gym for exercise after the match."

The M. and P. Society heard a paper on "Recurrent geometry as applied to the circumcircle," a new electric clock, governed by the observatory, was installed in the U.C. rotunda, and The Varsity had a $200 surplus.

Advertising Technique Changes with the Years

Just Like A Big Typewriter

When the copy has been checked it is placed on the table (BOTTOM LEFT) to be set up by the linotypist. Through the intricate maze of machinery a mass of molten lead is transformed into neat slugs of type from which the day's news is printed. Every word of the issue is tapped out on the linotypist's keyboard with the exception of some of the headlines which are set by hand.

freedom from lectures would give him time to get his work up properly.

Downtown Papers Active

During this period, the petition for the establishment of a Royal Commission was being circulated and signed among the graduates of the university. The question of university affairs was now one of wide public interest, and the old charges concerning the appointment of Wrong were once more aired by the Toronto Globe. The journal's insinuation drew forth a letter from one of the trustees, denying that Blake had been influential in the appointment and citing a list of testimonials by leading educational authorities concerning Professor Wrong's abilities.

Professor William Dale, one of the more popular of the younger staff members, presented to the Globe a lengthy reply to the letter, which he wished to be run anonymously, but which the editor persuaded him to sign. The reply was printed on the Globe's front page on February 9, ridiculing the trustee's letter, and charging that favouritism had been shown in the Wrong appointment. It cast reflections on the men who had testified to Wrong's ability, a group who included Principal Cavan of Knox, Chancellor Burwash of Victoria, and Principal Sheraton of Wycliffe.

Professor Dale Dismissed

Though there was much of value and truth in some of Dale's bitter remarks, it incensed the Council, who dismissed him five days later for "conduct subversive to all discipline and in violation of the amenities that should prevail between members of the same faculty."

A staff member, junior to Dale, F. B. R. Helms, Fellow in Latin, immediately resigned in protest, and The Varsity seized upon the affair to run a "Mourning Issue" bordered with heavy black and bearing pictures of Dale and Helms, captioned "The Heroes of the Hour."

With the publication of the news, the student body virtually ceased attending lectures. The students of University College met in picturesque Wardell's Hall on Spadina Avenue, in one of the most tumultuous gatherings in university history. From the mob emerged three leaders — Editor Jim Tucker, Tom Greenwood, president of the Political Science Club, and William Lyon Mackenzie King.

King Proposes Lecture Boycott

King moved that all lectures be boycotted, and the movement was seconded by Greenwood; all students taking part-time courses in U.C. were urged to join in the demonstration of disapproval. With few exceptions the students agreed upon the gesture. For a week professors lectured to classrooms containing one or two students, or else called off classes when no students at all appeared. One of the few undergraduates not to join in the Strike was Arthur Meighan.

The Ontario Legislature assembled during the Strike's progress, and during the first day's session M.P.P. Whitney of Dundas rose to ask the government whether it intended to appoint the Commission sought by the students' petition. Hon. G. W. Ross replied that the Commission would be set up as soon as possible, and that President Lounsbury had also requested its appointment. The government had yielded to the demands of the student body, as expressed by The Varsity.

Strike Called Off

The strike was called off when the government made this announcement, largely through the efforts of its instigators, Tucker, Greenwood and King. It was obvious to the students now that the Dale dismissal was not the true reason for the strike as they had believed, and King and Greenwood lost some prestige when the strike was called off. But Tucker pointed out that the Dale incident, as had been the Thompson-Jury incident, was a side issue. The main question was that of university management, and at last a Royal Commission was to be appointed to investigate it.

Commission of Inquiry

The Mowat administration instructed the Commission to inquire—

- (1) into student complaints in respect to the discipline or exercise of authorities by university officials;
- (2) into all causes of the friction alleged to exist between students and officials;
- (3) into the qualifications, conduct, teaching and efficiency of any member of the faculty against whom any charge

Stirring Evolution Seen In Style of Ads Defraying "Varsity" Costs

Varied Techniques Have Been Employed by Toronto Advertisers in an Effort to Catch the Trade of University Students through Their Own Newspaper Columns. Poetry, "Snob Appeal", Limericks and Other Devices Used

AD STYLES REFLECT SPIRIT OF ERAS

Even as the principles of student journalism have had a stirring evolution since The Varsity was born in 1880, the technique used by Toronto firms making their product look attractive and catching the public eye has developed tremendously during the past sixty years. During all this time, The Varsity advertisers, whose revenue now provides more than half the cost of publishing the newspaper, have been racking their brains for years to make up ads that the student can't help noticing.

Three score years of Varsitys provide an interesting history of the Art of Advertising, reflecting, from the yellowed pages of the files, a sweeping panorama of the changing moods and tastes, the vagaries and vicissitudes of students through more than half a century.

Starting back among the weeklies of the last century you find advertisements confined to the back page or two, strictly segregated from the rest of the reading matter. They looked more like a block of visiting cards than anything else, the majority being notices of local tailors, hatters and haberdashers, with a sprinkling of barbers, baths and eating houses, everything much cheaper than at any time since. Also more or less regular were ads for books and other school supplies, and, for some reason, lawyers.

"Snob Appeal" Technique

The technique employed was usually a sort of snob appeal, telling the student what the "best people" do; for example the ad for the Queen's Hotel: "A quiet hotel, patronized by royalty and the best families"; and in haberdashers' notices remarks such as "Every gentleman can tie his own tie."

There were occasional more blatant ones such as this open endorsement: "A professor in University College says: 'The Post is the best fountain pen I ever used.' And I have tried almost all of them." One unusual specimen was about "The Temperance and General Life Assurance Company, which is the total abstinence company in Canada."

There were few, if any, illustrations, examples being one of a top hat with "Hats that R Hats" written on it, and another of the "Climax Skate, the very latest and best constructed on scientific principles, together with sound work and materials," the illustration showing one of the archaic gliders which you clamped onto your ordinary shoes back in the '90's.

Mass Production Clothes Begin

In the first decade of this century there was great to-do about "Semi-Ready" suits. The age of buying mass-produced clothes ready made in a department store had not yet come, but the transition was being made by degrees. The prize remark of this period was that in a Beauchamp and How ad of 1909: "Because you are a student is no reason why you should not be well dressed."

By this time advertisements were emerging from their back-page seclusion to fill important positions on the news pages, and growing in size and conspicuousness accordingly. Such things appeared as a "Twice weekly flyer to students only—Hose 45 cents, the new shot effect in black with blue, white and red. 0 per cent off your purchase if you mention this ad," and from then on "Weekly Flyers," "Specials to Varsity men," and "Students, Attention," were regular features of the advertising technique.

Gems Gleaned from Ads

A casual glance through the issues just before the war reveals the following gems:

"Rah, rah, rah! Pink shoe store for students' footwear . . ."

"For your own benefit—Eat Shredded Wheat for breakfast for the next ten days and note how different you feel."

"Avery's tooth paste, mint or winter-green."

"She wants to go—to the Glee Club Concert."!!

Doggerel made its appearance during the war, and has remained a constant feature ever since, especially when certain firms, (Coca-Cola and Wallace Clothes), started to offer weekly prizes for the best ad-copy written by a student. Here is an early example:

"If you wish to attract some fair Hebes,
Walk along College West, Call at Beebe's,

He is open daily from eight till ten,
And carries fixin's for stylish men."
During the war advertisements grew to unheard-of sizes: there were full back pages for the Red Cross, Tamblins' Drugs, Prohibition, Union Government, with only slightly smaller ones for the Laurier Government, and Victory bonds.

Women's Clothes Appear

The coeducation controversy is reflected by the absence of any ads for women's clothes until the first issue of 1917-18, when some furs and other outer garments were displayed. At first appearing only spasmodically, they have gradually become more and more frequent until now they occupy more space than do men's clothes. The styles from 1920 to 1930 sent most of the Varsity staff perusing the files in the library into howls of mirth.

In 1921 a new cleaners' firm created a sensation by running a mysterious page-wide streamer for several days announcing first: "Great Preparations being made to initiate 1,000 Varsity Students"; then a few days later: "The red paint is ready for the great Initiation"; then "Harvard, Yale, Cornell and Purdie have all had it—Varsity next!" Finally after a week's build-up in this style it was revealed that a new cleaning contract was on the market. The mysterious serial build-up had us eagerly following as we fingered through the issues 20 years later, so it certainly must have created a sensation at the time.

The early twenties provide fun galore, for example: "Hell! tell you she likes to go alongside such clothes as these."

"Rewrite That Lead!"

Every story is checked and rewritten if necessary by a battery of rewrite men, who correct everything from misrepresentations of the facts to slips of the typewriter. After receiving a final check-up from the managing editor, the story is ready to be set up in type.

1896-1897

Under the aegis of Cecil H. Clegg, and A. B. Watt, Mr. Sandwell continued his researches of the previous year and compiled them in a thesis entitled, "The Influence of the Bicycle upon Poetry."

Typical of this era of progress, the University Banjo and Guitar Club, of long standing on the campus, became the "Banjo, Guitar and Mandolin Club."

From Chicago, the Daily Record wrote of its new post-graduate student, that "The latest welcome addition is W. L. M. King of Toronto University, who runs in the half-mile King has been out for a couple of days. He has a long stride, and seems to have lots of endurance. . ."

Several decades later, Mr. Sandwell joined the staff of Toronto Saturday Night, and young Varsity cub reporters began to discover that he had once been a young Varsity cub reporter too, an exciting point which they have been discovering every year ever since.

1897-1898

Arthur Meighan was teaching Maths and Bookkeeping at Caledonia High and "Eddie" Beatty was languishing at home with a sprained ankle received in football practice. A new student publication appeared on the campus — a neat newspaper bearing on its first page the title College Topics, and on its editorial page the name of F. D. McEntee, Editor. The Varsity extended to it "the glad hand of fellowship." The first women's copy went into The Varsity under the head "The College Girl."

1898-1899

In this year the blow which had been dealt earlier by the Royal Commission report drove the undergraduate newspaper to its lowest ebb since the early '80s. While a number of interesting illustrated articles, written by professors, appeared, there was little or no news, and columnists and editors alike reached a stalemate. The result was a much less pretentious little magazine, which kept out of trouble by not doing anything at all.

1899-1900

Leading article of the first, or Thanksgiving, issue, was a book review of a new, semi-historical novel named "Richard Carvell." A cut of the author showed a slight, youthful man whose name was Winston Churchill.

The advertisements lacked a new fountain pen as "the triumph of modern science," and everybody in the graduating class had an '00 after their name which looked like an exclamation. Ambitious, the editors managed a Christmas Literary number of 40 pages, filled with unique cuts of the architecture around the college.

1900-1901

In October students staged enthusiastic demonstrations when Sir Wilfrid Laurier stepped off the train for a visit to Toronto. There were torches, flags, and fireworks, and a procession of 1,200 cheering undergrads which took over Massey Hall when the leader spoke. The band which welcomed the Prime Minister to town was under the capable hands of its new bandmaster — John Slater.

or complaint may be laid;

S. H. Blake, Q.C., acted as counsel for President Loudon and the Councils of the university while H. J. Scott, Q.C., represented faculty members under attack. Representing the students was W. R. Riddell, now Mr. Justice Riddell, of the Supreme Court of Ontario. Assisting Riddell was a committee of students consisting of James A. Tucker, Edward Gillis, business manager of the Varsity for the year, Charles G. Paterson and C. P. Megan, members of the editorial board, and Thomas Hamar Greenwood.

Blake, the brother of the former Chancellor, was already an established courtroom tactician; Riddell was a comparatively unknown lawyer.

Faculty-Student Breach Widens
Blake, actively resentful of the insinuations against his brother, treated the student suggestion that grown youths could not be dealt with as little boys with utter contempt, thereby widening the breach between faculty and students.

Charlesworth gives a vivid account of proceedings: "Mr. Blake's cross-examination of Jim Tucker, which lasted many hours, was one of the most memorable that I have ever listened to. Here was the lion of the bar, with the prestige of a great name behind him, emotionally convinced that youthful enthusiasms must be checked and suppressed, battling with a frail youth, who but two or three years previously had come from a small town; trying to break him down, and trap him into some foolish utterance. He failed at every point, because Tucker had his facts well marshalled. There came a moment when Blake himself was touched. Suddenly the face flushed and weak, who had been standing on his feet for five hours under a deluge of questions, asked if he might have a chair. Blake, who had a warm heart at bottom, suddenly softened and said, 'Why, of course, my boy,' and handed him one himself. Thereafter his questioning was gentler, though quite as intent in the object of discrediting the whole student rebellion.

Savage Cross-examinations
"Another savage episode was the cross-examination of Professor Dale, by H. J. Scott, Q.C. Dale was regarded, not without reason, by President Loudon as the author of the existing discontents, in part at least, and the aim of the cross-examiner was to show that his course had been dictated not by his educational ideals, but by jealousy of certain colleagues, including the president. To outward appearance, Professor Dale was of a most unaggressive character, a quiet being with the old-fashioned side-chop whiskers, and his nickname among the students had been 'Lady' Dale. He was almost reduced to an emotional breakdown in his efforts to explain to the relentless lawyer that his course had been dictated by his principles, and not by dislike and envy of his academic associates.

"Abominable Impertinence" Charged

Blake, in his examination of Greenwood, termed the attitude of the Political Science Club executive in insisting on hearing Thompson and Jury as "abominable impertinence." He accused Greenwood, whom he called an agitator by nature, of participating in a great Chicago railroad strike two years earlier. Greenwood emphatically denied both the general and the specific charges.

Both Tucker and Greenwood testified that the students' strike was due to the government's previous refusal to appoint a Royal Commission and that Professor Dale's dismissal was merely a culminating incident. In addition, Greenwood testified strongly to lack of student confidence in the President.

An important outside witness, Professor Ashley of Harvard, gave as his opinion that Professor Mavor, in whom the students had also evinced distrust, was "certainly among the ten or twelve most distinguished British economists." Ashley also testified to Wrong's ability, but strongly urged that officials be more tactful in dealing with the student body.

Professor Goldwin Smith of Toronto, a noted historian, urged university officials not to interfere with campus publications and societies, and supported the establishment of a new council consisting of the joint professoriates of the university and the colleges. He also recommended that university administration be divorced from provincial government.

Findings Against Students
As was a foregone conclusion, the

Jottings from Files Reveal Human Highlights

1901-1902

The year opened with the presentation of an honorary degree to the Governor-General, Lord Minto, and the elevation of Prof. Hutton to the Principalship of University College.

"We regret exceedingly," ran an obituary, "to announce the death of Miss Martin, '04 Classics, who succumbed to typhoid fever at her Chatham home on Saturday, Jan. 4." The Varsity was even more regretful when Miss Martin turned up, bright and cheerful, the following week.

The volume displayed the first evidences of a standardized makeup, ran its first sport headlines and suggested editorially that the two major campus publications amalgamate. The union with College Topics was accomplished at the spring's last meeting of the Lit Society, which had already distinguished itself by issuing the first Students' Directory.

As the campus cleared off for the summer, the new medical building began to rear itself on the southeast corner, and C. N. Cochrane proposed a toast to "The Ladies."

1902-1903

The Varsity editors moved into a new home—the present women's office in University College, with "an easy chair, a roller-top desk, and luxurious rug and a steam coil. A gas lamp is expected later when the beadle has time to put in the fixtures," they proudly announced.

J. E. Atkinson, even then editor of the Toronto Star, wrote an article on journalism; another feature was an article on Edison's new storage battery. Varsity trounced the Argos 30-5, and Woodrow Wilson gave his inaugural address as president of Princeton University.

1903-1904

The new Medical Building was opened October 1; "it marked not only the completion of the first university building in the world to fully exemplify the unit system of laboratories... but also the amalgamation of Trinity Medical School with the Faculty of Medicine of the University of Toronto."

It was a banner year in athletics for the university. The Varsity lacrosse team went on a seven-game tour of the eastern States, returning undefeated, being extended only by the New York Crescent Athletic Club. Their 9-6 victory over Johns Hopkins retained for them the international intercollegiate lacrosse crown.

The football team won the Canadian Intercollegiate Rugby Football Union championship, winning three games and drawing one. The hockey team also gained intercollegiate honours by winning three and losing one. In addition the Varsity team whipped McGill in the annual track meet.

1904-1905

President Loudon's beard was 43½ inches long; the virtues of Laurier and Borden (then Mr. R. L.) were discussed, and W. S. Wallace, present librarian, wrote an article on the "Political Economy of the Doughboys." The mining building went up, and apart from this it was as dull a year as ever dragged itself through eight weary months.

1905-1906

The Varsity had a mild set-to with the Trinity University Review over the findings of the Royal Commission were decidedly against the students; the conduct of The Varsity was termed "offensive and beyond the line of fair comment." On the other hand, it was suggested that the course of the Council with regard to its publication should have been more consistent. There had been want of tact, it was decided, in dealing with the students, although the general dissatisfaction with President Loudon's regime was declared unjustified.

Though the Commission's report was a superficial vindication of university administration, the student rebellion had far-reaching consequences. The recommendations of Professor Goldwin Smith were adopted for the most part in modified form in the course of the next 15 years. Hon. G. W. Ross urged the president in plain terms to cultivate more tactful relations with the students and question of the Reorganization Commission. School of Science attended the Princess Theatre in a body for the night of Hallowe'en. Correspondents questioned the propriety of certain of the college songs which the students sang at football games.

In spite of the possibly impure sounds pouring down at them from the stands, the Varsity gridders won a Dominion championship, taking the final 11-9 from Ottawa City.

Ralph Connor greeted all students and graduates of the university through the pages of The Varsity and Professor Baker of Harvard went on record to the effect that undergraduate orators suffered from a characteristic "inability to think."

1906-1907

Big event of the year was the meeting of the British Medical Association, held in Convocation Hall in August. But once the actual session got under way, nothing much seemed to happen, and The Varsity was reduced to printing long short stories which ended in the following manner:

"I lit a lantern. And then, carefully, I opened the coffin and saw... Oh, my God! She must have been dead for weeks!"

Poetry by Duncan Campbell Scott and Marjorie L. C. Pickett made its appearance in the pages of The Varsity, and the Toronto hockey team went to New York to whip the Crescents of Brooklyn, 15-5.

1907-1908

A young cleric called Robert Alexander Falconer succeeded Loudon as president of the university. The campus was favoured by a visit from William Jennings Bryan, prospective Democratic candidate for the American presidency. He spoke in Convocation Hall on "The Prince of Peace" and won The Varsity's editorial admiration.

The hockey team had a fair season, winning every game by ten goals or so to take another intercollegiate championship.

Literary efforts grew even more voluminous, the longest being a six-page spread on "Sir Sirowac and the Damsel Mellicande."

1908-1909

Now published by the University of Toronto Union, The Varsity first assumed newspaper status with a four-column format and screaming headlines. In its new form the paper appeared twice a week for the first time. A. D. LePan was business manager and H. C. Hindmarsh one of the editors of this new project which the editors themselves declared to be a transitional phase leading to the establishment of a campus daily.

The golden age of university football began, the blue team sweeping through its regular season undefeated and dropping an Olympian battle to Hamilton Tigers for the dominion title. Stars of the team were Hugh Gall and Smirle Lawson.

The University Orchestra was formed and played works by von Suppe, Kinawak and Wieniawski. The Forestry Building was officially opened and T. A. Russell was unanimously chosen president of the U.C. Lit.

1909-1910

Now filling five columns, The Varsity regretfully reported that a mob of cowardly freshmen disgraced the uni-to treat their requests with greater sympathy.

In later years, Loudon, acting upon Ross's advice, became a more popular figure; old grievances were forgotten; and gradually relationship between staff and students became more and more cordial.

Tucker Expelled

Tucker, of course, was expelled. His expenses were paid by the students at Leland Stanford University, from where he was a frequent contributor to the pages of his old journal. He returned from California with his degree and took up journalistic work in Toronto.

And so the great student strike of 1894-1895 came to an end. It accomplished for the university what the Rebellion of 1837 did for the nation. On the surface, it failed; actually it paved the way for present day student democracy.

"Chop Off Seven Lines"

With the type proofed and headlines written, the night editor supervises the actual making up of the paper, tailoring his columns to fit the space provided between back-page advertisements. Fighting off attacks of early-morning stupor he submits a stone-proof of the entire issue to close and critical scrutiny, checking any errors which have not yet been corrected. Only in the morning hours, when the issue is placed on the press and ready to roll is his task complete.

versity on the evening of the Alumnae dance by jostling and insulting the celebrants and smearing the faces of most of the male escorts with shoe paste.

Led by Gall's terrific punting, the rugby squad swept to a dominion championship.

The final issue of the year contained a sketch of a building to be erected thanks to the generous action of the Massey estate. Among the features of the projected building were a new gymnasium and a swimming pool.

1910-1911

The ladies had a paper chase that wound up with a tea in Annesley Hall, and President Falconer took drastic steps when a North House man threw a tomato through an East House window.

The Varsity discussed the need and the cost of a pipe organ for Convocation Hall, and Jack Maynard was elected captain of the rugby team as it won its second consecutive Dominion Championship.

1911-1912

Printed at the University of Toronto Press, The Varsity became a tri-weekly under the editorship of Roy L. Campbell. The paper was published by the Parliament of the Undergraduates of the University of Toronto.

The Mighty Men of Maynard won their third consecutive Grey Cup, whipping Toronto Argonauts 14-7 in the final struggle, after edging out Ottawa by a narrow margin in intercollegiate competition.

1912-1913

A turbulent year opened peaceably enough with the laying of the cornerstone of the new Knox College building. Shortly afterwards The Varsity waged its annual campaign against "police brutality" on occasions of student celebration by summoning witnesses to the trial of a constable under the banner headline, "Were You Kicked in the Back?"

Later in the season the paper became embroiled with Principal Hagarty of Harbord Collegiate. A group of campus celebrants rounded out their evening by breaking into the collegiate in an attempt to crash a dance and Hagarty wrote a violent letter of denunciation to the daily press. An equally violent denial, which the editor refused to retract despite threat of a lawsuit, was printed in The Varsity's correspondence columns. The matter finally died down amicably despite journalistic jitters.

After four consecutive intercollegiate championships, the Blues finally dropped a final to McGill. An editorial debated the question, "Should an undergraduate carry a cane?" The dominion government offered the university a drill hall for the training of officers, but the idea was dismissed in the editorial columns as "incomprehensible."

1913-1914

The Varsity went into competition with the daily press by obtaining sole publishing rights to a serial, "Dyed in the Blood" by Jack London, Rex Beach and Robert Service.

Ex-President William Howard Taft and Ex-Prime Minister Sir Wilfrid Laurier visited the campus, the former addressing a packed house in Convocation Hall and the latter being the guest of honour at the Lit dinner.

Students were refused admission to the Princess feature because of alleged disorderly conduct, but the Royal Alexandra held two Student Theatre Nights which were termed "orderly and successful."

The opening of the new General Hospital was hailed as a boon to the Faculty of Medicine.

A Varsity editorial aroused considerable controversy by making the categorical statement that all women are barbarians.

Where Varsities Are Born

Every night at 7.00 p.m. the managing editor takes all material to the Press. It is in the squat College Street building that the assorted stories go through the varied stages of transformation which ultimately produce tomorrow's newspaper. On the second floor of the building there are Varsity staff members on duty continuously for a 12-hour period taking care of the many mechanical details connected with the paper's production.

1914-1915

With its first issue coming just six weeks after the declaration of war, The Varsity revealed that a Canadian Officers' Training Corps was to be formed on the campus, its nucleus being drawn from the Rifle Association. When Ottawa gave official sanction to the corps a large number of students had already joined it. At the first meeting of the Engineering Society 100 Schoolmen enlisted in the corps in one afternoon. The corps reached a high enough degree of efficiency to pass in review before the Governor-General. Ernest MacMillan, university organizer, who was studying in Germany at the outbreak of the war, was imprisoned. In a Convocation Hall lecture Archdeacon Cody made a call for self-sacrifice on the part of students.

Three professors of German nationality were given leave of absence for a year, thereby arousing the ire of The Evening Telegram which traded caustic comments with The Varsity for several days.

Every Major Campus Paper From Halifax to Vancouver Linked By C.U.P. Machine

College Editors Organized Country-Wide News-Coverage System in 1938; C.U.P. Wires Supply Member Papers with Syndicated Features and Late-Breaking News as Deadlines Are Beaten from Coast to Coast

C.U.P. EDITORS WORK AT NIGHT

The Canadian University Press, an organization linking every major campus newspaper in the Dominion, is a news-gathering agency similar in purpose and method to the universal wire services which supply news coverage to metropolitan dailies throughout the world.

Organized by a group of collegiate editors who met in Winnipeg in January of 1938, the C.U.P. has become in the three and a half years

Member Papers Govern C. U. P.

The Canadian University Press is administered not by men but by its member newspapers themselves. In other words, the Queen's Journal, the McGill Daily, The Varsity and so on are appointed to the offices of president, secretary, etc. in annual editorial conventions, and the administrative duties of the offices are carried out by the editors-in-chief of the papers. Since its inception in 1938, presidents of the C.U.P. have been: 1938: McGill Daily (John H. MacDonald); 1938-1939: McGill Daily (Gerald Clark); 1939-1940: The Varsity (Seaborn W. Albright); 1940-1941: The Varsity (Larry N. Smith).

Since December, 1939, each of the member papers has had on its masthead a C.U.P. Editor, whose duty is to handle all C.U.P. business for his own paper. There are times when things move tranquilly for the C.U.P. Editor, periods in which he has little to do but oversee routine matters and sit back comfortably. But suddenly he will find a big story breaking on his own campus, one which will be of interest to other papers, and, at the same time, with the perverseness peculiar to news, big stories boiling over at other universities.

Here is an actual case of one hectic evening for the C.U.P. Editors of The Varsity and the McGill Daily. Late in the afternoon of January 22, this year, the tragic death of George Morley, third-year science student, took place during an intercollegiate hockey game in Varsity Arena. An assistant sports editor who had been covering the game returned briefly to The Varsity office, on his way to interview the coroner and relatives of the dead youth, to report the story and set the C.U.P. machinery in motion. Shocked at the sudden news, the little group of reporters and masthead men in the office, reacting instinctively, went about the business of "getting the story". The usual bantering of the staff members was strangely hushed as sports reporters were dispatched to obtain the details of the late Schoolman's career, and the C.U.P. Editor went almost automatically to the telephone to wire his colleagues at McGill and Queen's.

He dispatched two telegrams, one to Edward Joseph in Montreal, the other to Doug Wilson in Kingston. The wires read: "Hockey player dies during game. Stop. State requirements. O'Mara. The Varsity." Wires were not sent to the Western or Maritime papers or to London or Hamilton, for the deadlines of the next issues of all papers but the Daily and the Journal were such that they could clip the issue of next morning's Varsity sent them through the regular mail exchange system in time to run the story in their next issue.

As those familiar with newspaper work know, one of the most difficult assignments is the obtaining of information about one who dies suddenly. Handicapped by the fact that several masthead members had to attend an evening C.O.T.C. lecture, The Varsity did not have the full story on the Morley death until nearly midnight. In the meantime, two wires arrived in the night office. One read: "Hundred and fifty words skeleton. Wilson. Queen's Journal." The other ran: "Send 200 on hockey player. Stop. Clip Winnipeg story from Daily. Stop. Have story on Senate action releasing students from war work. How many. Stop. Refle query. Joseph. McGill Daily."

Interpreted, these wires meant that the Journal wanted a story on Morley written in telegraphic style, which would run about 150 words, and that the Daily wanted a similar story somewhat longer. In addition, Joseph of the Daily was advising O'Mara that his paper would carry next morning a story on John G. Winant, recently-appointed

United States envoy to Great Britain. Containing a "McGill angle", the story was not of sufficient interest to Toronto students to merit wiring it, but would be worth clipping from the Daily when it arrived by mail. And still more important, the Daily had a story on the release of McGill students for war work, sure to be of interest in Toronto, where a similar step had been taken a week or so before. The request to "refile" meant that Joseph wanted news of the Senate story to be relayed to the western papers.

The Varsity's C.U.P. Editor therefore wired Val Sommerfeld of the Manitoba's office in Winnipeg, telling him of Joseph's news-break and requesting him to refile the query once more to The Sheaf, The Gateway and The Ubysey, and wired back to Montreal: "Hockey player to come. Stop. Shoot 150 Senate. O'Mara. The Varsity."

By twelve o'clock the sports staff had finished the Morley story. O'Mara re-wrote it in telegraphic style and sent it to Montreal shortly after midnight. Later still, the Senate story reached the Toronto office. Both these major stories had to be re-written once more when they had reached their destinations, and it was well into the early hours of the morning when two weary C.U.P. Editors in cities hundreds of miles apart left their offices to try to catch a little sleep before the morning round of classes began. And as they relaxed, linotype machines thundered and western wires hummed while the machinery they had set in motion rolled on its way.

Ambassadorial appointments — students' work — death — Kingston — Montreal — Toronto — Winnipeg — and the Canadian University Press functions.

1915-1916

The Varsity moved to spacious quarters on the second floor of the old Faculty Union and spread over an additional column of type. The new Knox College was finally opened two years after its cornerstone was laid.

Students were recruited for several Universities Overseas Companies; C.O.T.C. Orders began to appear, signed by Provisional Lieutenant A. A. Reed; officers' uniforms were advertised by the picture of a nattily clad captain who looked exactly like a German corporal called Schickelgruber; the C.O.T.C. band was formed by Lieut. Slater and The Varsity launched a wartime drive against booze.

1916-1917

During the summer 85 St. George Street had been converted into a Women's Union which was officially opened in October, its tasteful decorations and splendid facilities arousing the enthusiastic admiration of the co-eds, who were particularly taken by the ruling that they might bring men to tea on Sundays.

Largest mass-enlistment on the campus was that of the entire Dental freshman class who unanimously voted to join the Canadian Army Dental Corps. The C.O.T.C. was open only to those who had not previously taken the course, graduates being drafted as candidates for Imperial Army commissions and sent overseas. A graduate in Applied Science by the name of Col. C. H. Mitchell was appointed First Staff Officer of the 2nd British Army in France. Among officers in charge of C.O.T.C. instruction were Capt. M. W. Wallace and Major H. H. Maill.

University buildings were closed for over two weeks and even The Varsity was blacked out for 12 days by a coal shortage. Lectures were held at various emergency shelters independent of the central heating system which was left unsupplied by a coal tie-up at Buffalo. The Varsity ran a third of its annual war supplements.

1917-1918

Military service was again the keynote of Varsity activities during the fourth year of the war. Students contributed $14,000 to the Red Cross and Patriotic Funds, and Hart House, as yet incomplete, was used for training purposes. The Varsity printed another magazine supplement.

President Falconer was created a Knight Commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George. Christmas exams were postponed until January in order that students might vote in the Dominion elections. Connaught Laboratories were opened and formed an important source for Canada's supply of anti-tetanus vaccine.

Women took an added responsibility in the publication of The Varsity, as a Women's Editor (Miss B. Corrigan, B.A.) and a Women's Managing Editor (Miss M. H. McCoy) were added to the masthead.

Lieut.-Col. John McCrea, U.C. '94, famed as the writer of "In Flanders Fields," died on active service on January 23, 1918.

1918-1919

The year opened with greater optimism, as the Allied Forces pushed back the Hun horde in the last major action of the war. Sir Robert Falconer addressed the student body on his trip overseas in the epidemic just past.

The influenza epidemic closed lecture halls and halted Varsity publication from October 18 to November 5, and when students returned the war was all but won. The Varsity ran no screaming headlines to announce the Armistice, but concentrated on urging students to attend a mass meeting in Convocation Hall which was held to boost the sale of Victory Bonds.

Returned men flocked in hundreds back to the campus which they had deserted for the mud of French fields. But many did not return; and to commemorate their gallantry it was decided to erect a memorial Gothic tower with a carillon.

1919-1920

The Memorial Fund topped a quarter of a million dollars, and work began on the Memorial Tower, when the Duke of Devonshire, Governor-General of Canada, laid the corner stone. The viceroy also officially opened Hart House, which became The Varsity's new editorial home.

Cardinal Mercier, heroic Belgian prelate, was honoured at a special Convocation of the University of Toronto. The Varsity Veterans' Association decided, after a heated debate, to give a dinner in honour of Sir Arthur Currie. A "vaccination parade" was staged as students indulged in a mass anti-smallpox measure.

Meds played Ring-Around-A-Street-Car and brought official ire upon their heads for holding up downtown traffic.

Dean Mitchell of School gave his inaugural address in October. Later in the year, William Butler Yeats, Irish poet and alleged Sinn Féiner was in town long enough to provoke an old-fashioned editorial brawl between the Telegram and The Varsity.

Varsity athletes had a huge year, winning the hockey title from McGill, the junior hockey title from Queen's, the basketball crown from McGill and whipping the three other major colleges in the annual Assault-at-Arms.

1920-1921

Guaranteeing the filling of at least half a column of each issue of The Varsity, front page, a Canadian branch of the Students' Christian Movement was formed with headquarters in Hart House.

A building boom was in progress, the university receiving grants totalling $5,500,000 for the erection of buildings, Trinity laying plans for their new college and buying an apartment for their men's residence. A gleamingly verdant St. Patrick's Day issue was published in aid of the U.C. Women's Building Fund, which was later to produce Whitney Hall.

The Boys in Blue captured the two big titles, winning the Dominion Rugby Championship from Argos with the aid of "Laddie" Cassels as coach and Joe Breen as captain, and beating Kitchener for O.H.A. honours by pushing six pucks past a young goalie called George Hainsworth. And the staid old presses groaned as they rolled out the highly irregular contents of the first Jazz Issue.

Thousands Benefit Educationally by Extension Work

Great Provincial University Serves Ontario People Via Extension Branch

Men and Women, Young and Old, from Every Walk of Life Flock to Campus on Week Nights and Saturdays to Slake Thirst for Knowledge by Attending the Numerous Interesting Courses Given by Department of University Extension

As dusk descends upon the university any evening through the week, labs and classrooms are closed, students and professors wend their way home, and quiet reigns on the darkened campus. But before long the lights are twinkling on again in most of the buildings and the campus is alive once more. Those lights shining through the darkness are burning symbols of a great provincial university performing its service to the people of Ontario.

The students who stream to the campus in the evening are not undergraduates. They are young and old, representing all walks of life,—businessmen and mechanics, teachers and salesmen, artists and accountants, miners and musicians. One and all they are filled with a thirst for knowledge and for improvement in their preparation for life's work, and five thousand strong they find that thirst slaked by the services offered by Varsity through the Department of University Extension.

Extension Does Everything

What does University Extension mean? What does it do? These questions are on many lips, and the answer, laughs genial W. J. Dunlop, director of university extension and publicity, is "just about everything." Going on the principle that "the function of University Extension is to serve the University's constituency and to comply with the requests received," he has in the course of his twenty-year tenure of the Extension post met the new and changing demands of the age by introducing a list of activities that is staggering to comprehend. Like "Topsy," University Extension "just grow'd," but there is something more to it. Behind that growth there is more than nature taking its course; there is a guiding hand directed by a keen, interested, practical mind.

When Mr. Dunlop took over the infant Extension department in 1920 no one predicted a future for it. In fact, most people regarded it as a rather sickly child, and few would agree with the new director's prediction that one day it would grow into a lusty adult whose voice could be heard throughout the province, and with the coming of a new war, even reach across the seas to bring educational benefits to Canadian troops in England. When he first sat down at his desk Mr. Dunlop found some fifty persons enrolled in Extension. Thirty were teachers taking the "pass course for teachers" course, while twenty others were enrolled in an evening tutorial class in English Literature. Today there are over five thousand actually enrolled in University Extension, and if one were to take into account all those who are reached through correspondence or who attend Extension lectures here and in centres throughout the province, the total figure would be well over ten thousand.

Back in 1894 the start was made when the first lecturers from the University

SIGNIFICANT DATES IN UNIVERSITY EXTENSION

- 1894—first extension lecturer sent out from university.
- 1909—first summer session held.
- 1916—revival of summer session; institution of Pass Course for Teachers.
- 1918—first evening tutorial class (in English Literature).
- 1920—W. J. Dunlop took charge of Extension; 50 people enrolled.
- 1920—first short extension course held. Attended by 279 farmers.
- 1939—war brings new activities.
- 1941—over 5,000 enrolled; about 10,000 are reached with University Extension.

went out to give lectures in various Ontario towns in response to letters from literary societies and church and school organizations. The professor, travelling by train and often by horse and buggy or sleigh in the more remote sections, received his travelling expenses. With the passing of the years this phase of Extension education has been overshadowed by newer developments, but it still continues. Last year lecturers drawn from nearly every college and faculty gave 136 lectures in 23 different Ontario cities and towns from North Bay to Niagara Falls and from Sarnia to Picton. One lecture was delivered in Niagara Falls, New York.

Evening Tutorials Popular

From a numerical standpoint, the evening tutorial classes form the bulk of the registration in University Extension and they also provide much of the variety. "Novelty is one of the characteristics of our work," Mr. Dunlop explained, "for we must always be on the alert to meet new requests with new courses of instruction." Through the growth and changes in the list of evening tutorial courses one can very easily see the growth and changes of our modern world. In 1918 one evening course was being offered—English Literature. Today forty different courses are being held every weekday evening either in University College or the Mining Building, and the topics run the gamut from the scientific to the academic and artistic. ## University Extension

Sixty years ago, when the first issue of The Varsity was published, there was no such word as University Extension; nor were there any thought of Summer Sessions, Evening Classes, Extension Lectures, or correspondence courses. The Department of University Extension is very little more than twenty years old (certainly it is not half the age of The Varsity), but it is in reality a large faculty as well as a little Arts College. This session its enrolment will be approximately 6,000 students.

The graduating class in the Pass Course for Teachers numbers forty or more. These teachers, and others, complete the work for the degree of Bachelor of Arts by attending lectures in the evenings or during the Summer Session.

There is a large graduating class in Occupational Therapy. These young women will be prepared to serve their country in a very practical manner. Six of the graduates of this course left for the Old Land a few days ago. Three of them will serve under the British War Office in England and three will work for the Department of Health in Scotland.

In the course in Physiotherapy there will be in June the largest graduating class in the history of the course. Seven Physiotherapists, graduates of former years, have gone overseas to serve in the British Isles.

The Course in Aerial Navigation will furnish young men who are thoroughly qualified to undertake work as instructors in the R.C.A.F., where most of their predecessors are now doing their part.

On behalf of the graduates of these four Courses, as well as on behalf of the thousands of students taking courses which do not lead to any certificate, diploma, or degree within the University, I tender the most cordial congratulations to The Varsity on the completion of sixty years of excellent service to the undergraduates of the University of Toronto.

W. J. DUNLOP,
Director, University Extension.

Dr. Cody Daily Guides Destiny of Seven Thousand

President of University, at Age of Seventy-Three, is Now Approaching Completion of Ninth Year in Office after a Strenuous Life in the Fields of Education, Religion and Public Service

Drawing upon a reservoir of experience gained through a long life in the fields of the church, education and public service, and naturally endowed with a sympathetic insight into human problems, Henry John Cody daily guides the destinies of over seven thousand students.

From the presidential chair in his simply yet tastefully appointed office in Simcoe Hall, President Cody discharges the heavy duty of administering the largest university in the British Commonwealth. Over his desk flows the multitude of problems which inevitably present themselves for solution, piling up into a burden resting heavily on shoulders which have carried many weights through a long career of service.

Finishing Ninth Year

At the age of seventy-three, Dr. Cody is approaching the completion of his ninth year as President of the University of Toronto with which he has long been intimately connected as student, professor, governor and finally administrator. He is the seventh president of the university, but he is unique in his long connection with the institution over which he was placed in charge on July 1, 1932. Fitting was the editorial tribute paid him by the Mail and Empire upon his appointment—"To crown a life of outstanding service as head of his alma mater, where his personality, energy, and culture will leave a lasting imprint, is probably as great an honour as could be bestowed."

Dr. Cody was born on December 6, 1868, at Embro, Ontario, and received his early education at Galt Collegiate Institute. Early showing academic promise, he entered University College on the Prince of Wales Scholarship, graduating in 1889 with first class honours in classics and philosophy. During his course he won the McCaul gold medal in classics and the Wyld prize in English. He received his theological training at Wycliffe College and later became a lecturer in that college.

Rector of St. Paul's Toronto

The present President was ordained a deacon in 1893 and priest in the following year, and in 1899, at the age of thirty-one, he was appointed acting rector of St. Paul's Church, Bloor street. He has maintained his connection with that church through his whole life. In 1907 he was appointed rector and held the pulpit until 1932 when he resigned to accept the presidency of the university.

His fame as a preacher and a gifted organizer became world wide. In 1904 he was offered the Bishopric of Nova Scotia but declined. Another great honour was paid him when, in 1921, he was elected Archbishop of Melbourne, Australia, but again he declined, preferring to remain in his native land.

Preached to King George V

One of the greatest honours of his ecclesiastical career came in 1922 when Dr. Cody preached a sermon before Their Majesties, the late King George V, and Queen Mary, in Buckingham Palace. He has represented his denomination at many distinguished ecclesiastical gatherings, and in 1926 he preached the English sermon in the cathedral at Geneva, Switzerland, in connection with the 7th Assembly of the League of Nations.

Dr. Cody has also been active in political circles, serving as Minister of Education for Ontario in the government of Sir William Hearst. He accepted the post in 1918 and served until the defeat of the Hearst administration at the 1919 general election. During his regime he introduced numerous reforms in the elementary and secondary schools, and extended the compulsory school attendance age from 14 to 16 years. He also enlarged the opportunities for technical and industrial training for both youth and adults.

President Cody served as a member of the Royal Commission which investigated university affairs in 1905-6 and had a share in drawing up the plan upon which the university is at present built. He was a member of the Royal Commission on unemployment in 1914, and was chairman of the Royal Commission on university finances in 1920-21.

Many honours have come his way, but one of the most unique came when he was made a member of the Order of the Golden Grain of China. He is also a Chevalier of the Legion d'Honneur of France. In 1935 he was made a Fellow of the Royal Society of Canada.

President Sends Message Relating Toronto Progress

The Editor has asked me to write an article on some aspects of the life of the University during my tenure of the presidency. In attempting to do this my mind naturally goes back by way of contrast to the outward aspects of our academic life 55 years ago. In those days University College and an ancient white brick building, called Moss Hall (standing where now the Biological Building is placed) comprised our equipment of accommodation. Today about 60 buildings (apart from the fine groups of the Federated colleges) are under the supervision of the Board of Governors. In my graduating year, 1889, there were 86 students (including 5 ladies); last year 1,628 degrees were conferred, and diplomas and certificates were granted to 332. In 1889 in addition to the President, Sir Daniel Wilson, there were 17 professors and lecturers; last year the total staff of the University and University College numbered 958, to which should be added 79 in the federated colleges—a total complete staff of 1,937.

One institution has survived all the changes and chances of these years; it is the university paper—The Varsity. It was in its early youth in my day and appeared only once a week. It did not serve as a college newspaper but as a vehicle for literary articles in prose and poetry from the pens of men who became noteworthy figures in the Canadian world of letters. The Varsity has evolved into a daily newspaper, giving the happenings in all departments of the university, some glimpse of the doings of other institutions, musical and artistic criticisms, and editorials on university problems, student activities and general world events. A university paper may become a great factor in unifying or in dividing the members of the institution. Everything depends on the spirit and aim of the Editor and his staff. I am glad to say that during my time as President, The Varsity, while freely discussing whatever problems it chose, has been a factor making for unity, progress and good will. My hearty thanks go to its Editor and his colleagues. Service on the editorial or reportorial staff has proved an excellent apprenticeship to varied journalistic careers in Canada and beyond its borders. It is a real school of journalism. I wish to congratulate the present Editor and staff particularly on the high standard of literary excellence maintained in the Editorial columns.

During the years of my presidency, the university has been confronted with the financial difficulties caused by a severe world-wide depression and by a world-war. It has been hard, and sometimes impossible, to balance our budget. We have practised all possible economies and yet have tried to maintain the essential services. The number of students in attendance has been about 8,000, sometimes more, sometimes less. There will certainly be a decrease of male students on account of the War. It has been impossible to erect new buildings. But we have celebrated the opening of important buildings begun earlier—the Royal Ontario Museum enlargement, and the Dunlop Observatory at Richmond Hill—(the magnificent gift of Mrs. D. A. Dunlop in memory of her husband). Additions have been made to the Hygiene Building and to the buildings at the Connaught Farm Laboratories.

We have been able to establish some new departments, such as Geography (by the help of the Department of Education), and Fine Art (by the generosity of the Carnegie Corporation). The School of Nursing has been placed on a reasonably firm foundation on a grant for endowment from the Rockefeller Foundation. Chinese Archaeology has been fostered by the appointment of Dr. W. C. White as keeper of the Eastern Asiatic Collections in the Museum and by the acquisition of the famous Mu Library of 51,000 volumes (for which accommodation was provided by the joint contributions of the Government, Dr. Sigmund Samuel and the late Sir Robert Mond).

One of the most difficult of our problems is that of equalizing educational opportunities for able students. "Equalization" in this connection means the position of such educational facilities as will enable each man or woman to make the best of such gifts as God has bestowed. The inevitable increase in the cost of education—which has paralleled the general increase in the cost of living—has made it harder to meet the expenses of a university education. Talent must not be lost to the country. It must be sought for and given a chance. As tuition fees have increased we have tried to meet the additional costs by more scholarships, loan funds and bursaries. Those should be increased in number and in value. A large percentage of our students, at least 60 per cent, could not continue their courses without earning money in (Continued on Page 9)

Postman is Popular With "Mail" Students

The postman is usually a pretty popular fellow with most people. But for a certain seven hundred citizens of Ontario he has an even added importance. Those are the people who are taking correspondence courses from the University of Toronto.

Last year there were 776 of them, and this year the registration for these "learn by letter" courses is about the same. Correspondence courses are offered in arts subjects for those who are preparing for the Summer Sessions; in Upper School subjects for teachers who are working for higher certificates; in commercial subjects for teachers desirous of becoming commercial specialists; and in the subjects of the courses given by the Canadian Credit Institute, the Chartered Life Underwriter's Association, the Certified Public Accountants' and Executives' Corporation. They keep the postman plenty busy.

Firemen Get Knowledge Now Come to College

Firemen come to college? It sounds funny but that's exactly what they did for three days last autumn, and they will probably be doing it every year from now on.

Two years ago, in co-operation with the Fire Marshal of Ontario and the Dominion Association of Fire Chiefs, the Department of University Extension established a course of training for fire-fighters. Similar courses were also held in St. Catharines and Kirkland Lake, with 192 attending the three.

Taught by experts, the fire-fighters studied scientific methods which have been introduced into their business. Discussions followed the lectures—and to make it all very nice, there were no examinations!

Local Training Corps Serves as Feeder For Officer Personnel

Local Contingent of C.O.T.C. was Established in First Few Months of the First World War and is Now Proving Its Adulthood by Preparing Youth of the University for Active Service Duty

COMBINE THEORY AND PRACTICE

The child of the last war, the University of Toronto contingent of the C.O.T.C. is today proving its attainment of adult status by serving as the training ground for officers now in demand due to a new war. With a strength of 1361, officers and cadets, it is training officers for every arm of the service and is constantly sending reinforcements out to active service units.

The coming of war in September, 1939, found the C.O.T.C. well-prepared for training of men for a new drill hall had just been built on St. George Street. Accommodation in other university buildings was also placed at the disposal of the Corps. Within two weeks of registration, 1300 undergraduates and 500 graduates had joined. Authority for increasing the four-company establishment to twelve was granted, and cadets started out on a new system of training marked by very unfamiliar "form three's" instead of the old "form fours."

New Syllabus Used

Training for War Office certificates was discontinued, and a training syllabus as laid down for promotion to Lieutenant in the N.P.A.M. of Canada was introduced. Most of the cadets took the course in two years, although some tried both exams in one year. Two weeks of practical work were spent at Niagara in June where many earned their final qualifications.

Last fall there was a great rush to join the C.O.T.C. as the war entered its second year. The Corps had on strength about 750 men who would be finishing the second year of their two-year course. These selected the particular arm in which they wished to specialize after doing the common to all arms work in the preceding term. Also accepted into the Corps were many students in their final year who were willing to take the two years' work in one year, and who expressed a desire to take active service appointments if such were available at the conclusion of their training. After interviews with a board of officers from the particular arm chosen, about 450 graduates and 250 undergraduates were accepted for the one year course.

Theory and Practice

The Corps was of course organized into companies by arms. Artillery was divided into "A" Company under Major G. G. Bryson for graduates, and "B" Company for undergraduates under Major G. F. Davies. Training in all arms was a combination of lecture and practical lessons. Artillery cadets listened to lectures, did practical gun drill on 18-pounders and howitzers, figured angles and aiming points on directors, laid guns on imaginary targets, and did all the things which produce

Students, Grads, Staff Contribute to Output

When the record of Canada's effort in the Second Great War is written, no small part will be devoted to achievements directly concerned with the University of Toronto. In the annals of the university, the past two years will loom perhaps larger than any others. Never in its history has the university so transformed and adapted itself to meet the needs of its country.

Greatest contribution has been in the fields of science, for the university is best equipped to serve the needs of modern scientific warfare. Some research workers laboured in secret over vital government problems in university laboratories; others moved to headquarters at Ottawa to carry on their work. All scientific departments were mobilized into Army, Navy and Air Force work, and numbers of undergraduates shared. Notable among these were students in the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering, who were released early for work in Canada's war industries.

All the resources of the campus were moulded into a common effort in which all had a part. Staff members served in both military and civilian capacities, undergraduates trained in the C.O.T.C., the Training Centre Battalion, or the W.S.T.D. The Students' Administrative Council led the student body in many new duties, from collecting reading-matter for soldiers abroad to selling war savings stamps. Every organization on the campus contributed to the war effort, either in labour, in spirit, or in dollars and cents.

Sensational extra-curricular activities—Soph-Frosh battles, bed-races, pyjama parades—were soft-pedalled, but students clung to the worth-while diversions—Sunday Evening Concerts, college magazines, and dances. And although the peacetime effort was doubled, although the campus became flooded with uniforms of all ranks and all arms, it still remained a pretty good place in which to live.

Answer to Military Plan Given by Training Centre

Following Introduction of National Compulsory Military Training Scheme, University Conference with Government Results in Establishment of Battalion to Allow Students to Postpone Period in Camp

OVER 2,000 ENROLLED IN ONE WEEK

When, during the summer of 1940, vacationing students read of the passage of the National Mobilization Resources Act requiring every male citizen aged 20 or over to take a 30-day training period in camp, they began to wonder what their position would be, especially if they were not members of the Officers' Training Corps. Would their school year be broken up by a 30-day period in camp? Or would they be exempt until graduation?

All their answers were supplied in a special military supplement of The Varsity, published on the first day of registration last fall. Students in the 18th 24 age group, who were not members of the C.O.T.C., discovered that they must take compulsory military training and that a new organization, the Training Centre Battalion, had been whipped into shape to take care of them.

Conference With Government

The new arrangements stemmed from a conference of university presidents and government officials held with Dr. Cody as chairman during the summer. The government exempted students from the 30-day training period scheme with the understanding that the universities would make military training compulsory for all physically fit male students 20 and over. Thus it was that all students coming under the National Mobilization Resources Act (that is, 20 years of age or over on July 1, 1940), were incorporated into the Training Centre Battalion to receive 110 hours of training through the year with two weeks at camp in the summer, thereby making the equivalent of a 30-day period at a regular training centre.

The universities, of their own accord in return for the government's grant of privilege, made military training compulsory for all men 18 years of age and over at the time of registration. The group from 18 to 20 was to be given physical training and elementary squad drill primarily, while those over 20 would receive more advanced instruction.

Over 2,000 Enrolled

Directed by The Varsity's military supplement, over two thousand students flocked to Hart House, which had kindly extended its facilities to the hastily-organized battalion. During the hectic week of registration, Monday, September 23, to Saturday, September 28, the whole male undergraduate body, excluding the C.O.T.C., was enrolled in the Battalion orderly room in the old the vacations. Their indomitable spirit, their sacrifices, their serious determination, will enable them to win through and to become citizens of character and usefulness to their country.

We look forward with a blending of anxiety and confidence. Our united national energies must be directed to the winning of the war. We realize more and more clearly that the fundamentals of our humane and Christian civilization are at stake. The battle will be won by "no easy task or lies" but by "from sacrifice of body, will and soul", in Kipling's phrase. Our universities are seeking to play a worthy part in this high enterprise. We are training professional men needed in the cause; scientists are at work on military problems; our undergraduates and graduates are either enlisting in the Active Service Force or are undergoing the preliminary discipline for national defence. As far as practicable, we are carrying on our normal programmes of teaching and research, but the war is always the background. We are trying to teach the real meaning and worth of democracy and the spiritual values which give it power. The people who live under a democracy are free to differ in their opinions and ideas. Education in a democracy, particularly higher education, aims to open men's minds and keep them open to new knowledge. This freedom must be maintained. We realize that the civilization we defend may be not only attacked from without by ruthless force, but may also be in danger of decaying within, of being (in Lord Tweedsmuir's phrase) "decivilized".

The universities have a great opportunity and a great responsibility to keep and to transmit the true democratic ideals. As we survey our resources and mobilize them for the immediate national needs, we do not forget that the great task of universities remains through the ages "the training of intelligent and well-disposed citizens for life in the democratic state, and of forwarding the welfare of that state and of the world through its contributions to truth". Their task is "the undramatic and long-range task of diffusing light and leading among mankind". They set forth the ideals which are to be defended; whatever therefore strengthens and purifies their strengths and purifies democracy itself. Part of our work is to help in the making of informed, capable and useful citizens. In a modern democratic society a university seeks to preserve and to advance knowledge; it also should seek to instruct public opinion. To it public opinion has the right to turn for impartial, accurate, and scholarly instruction and interpretation.

We are grateful to the legislature of the province for its annual grants and we have tried to be good stewards of the educational provision thus made for us. We are grateful for many private benefactions and to the great educational foundations which have given us timely help. To the members of the Board of Governors, to the administrative officers and deans, to our whole teaching staff, and to the student body I offer sincerest thanks for the co-operation and continued interest which make the university an organ of widening service to the community.

I hope that the next sixty years of The Varsity's life will be still richer and more useful to the university than even the past years have been. May it go "from strength to strength!"

H. J. CODY,
President.

Appointed Captain in Great War Madill is now C.O.T.C. Commandant

Appointed a captain in the Toronto C.O.T.C. during the first world war, H. H. Madill has been with it ever since, and now as a Lieutenant-Colonel he is commanding officer of the contingent in the second world conflagration of the century.

Lt.-Col. Madill duplicated his military progress by a similar rise in academic fields, for after graduating from the School of Architecture in 1912, he is now head of that school.

During the first war he was on the staff of the School of Infantry for military district 2, and in 1917 he was made officer in charge of training of the Polish army training camp situated at Niagara-on-the-Lake. He is in charge of all military training at the university but his direct responsibility is the Officers' Training Battalion.

Head of the Department of Military Studies and chief instructor of the C.O.

T.C., Major Barry Watson left Canada's shores in the first month of the Great War, going to England with the Canadian Engineers. He was commissioned with the Royal Engineers early in 1915 and went to France, where in 1916 he was attached to the Royal Flying Corps. He was incorporated into the R.A.F. when it was formed in 1917. In 1920 Major Watson organized a school of instruction for the newly formed Canadian Air Force. He joined the C.O.T.C. in 1932.

Major T. A. Reed, paymaster of the contingent and secretary-treasurer of the Athletic Association, has been an officer with the C.O.T.C. since 1915.

The adjutant, Captain H. C. H. Miller, has been with the Corps since 1927, and now shoulders much of the heavy burden of organization and general routine administration.

Sons of The University, Five Thousand Strong Fought the Foe---1914-18

Huge Number of Varsity Men Served the Empire on Land, on Sea and in Air. 604 Gave Up Their Lives in Highest Sacrifice. 68th Artillery Battery Organized as University Unit for Overseas Service

ROYAL FLYING CORPS TRAINED HERE

The University of Toronto contributed richly of her very life and blood to the cause of the British Empire in the world-shaking four years of war from 1914 to 1918. Thousands were trained on the campus in the first few years of the war, but toward the end there were very few men left in classrooms and labs. On far-flung battle lines, in the air and on the sea, they had gone forth from the campus to serve.

Undergraduates and graduates, 5,400 strong, they sallied forth to meet the foe, and of their host a noble 604 laid down their lives in sacrifice, never more to return.

C.O.T.C. Formed in Fall

Although under discussion as early as 1912, it took the outbreak of war in 1914 to make the University of Toronto contingent of the C.O.T.C. a reality. Prior to the opening of college that fall the Rifle Association took under its wing the training of officers, many of them Faculty members, who would be prepared to recruit and train students when the term commenced. Indeed all military training on the campus was carried on under the aegis of the Rifle Association until such time as the government authorized organization of the C.O.T.C. On November 2, 1914, that authorization came through general orders. A contingent consisting of nine companies was organized, and a month later three more companies were added, bringing the strength to 1,356 men.

Familiar Names Seen

Officer Commanding was Lieut-Col. W. R. Lang, and in the list of officers are many other familiar names. Major A. D. LePan (now superintendent of grounds and buildings), Lieut. F. C. A. Jeanneret (professor in French), Captain M. W. Wallace (now principal of U.C.), Lieut. C. N. Cochran (now Dean of Men in U.C.), Captain V. Massey, Lieut. G. S. Brett (now dean of Graduate Studies), Captain E. S. Ryerson (now assistant dean of medicine), Lieut. A. F. Coventry, Captain C. R. Young, Captain H. H. Madill (now commanding officer of U. of T. C.O.T.C.), and Captain W. S. Wallace (now librarian).

Training that winter took the form of marches, squad drill, mutual instruction, musketry and lectures, and the highlights of the year was the inspection by the Duke of Connaught in January, 1915.

Early in May the contingent, reduced in numbers, marched off the campus, boarded the good ship "Dalhousie City" and set sail for camp at Niagara where present C.O.T.C. contingents will shortly be in training. There they went into strict army routine, and put their winter's theory into actual practice.

Many On Active Service

That fall many members had earned qualifications and had gone on active service, and to bring the contingent up to its strength of 1,781 men, 1,141 new men had to be taken on strength.

In November the British War Office announced its willingness to accept Corps members for Imperial commissions, and numerous drafts were sent overseas on that basis in the following years.

The end of the academic year 1916-17 found the Corps greatly depleted through appointments and enlistments. In the next term, 1917-18, military training was made compulsory in the university as conscription was enforced in the country. A department of military studies was organized, and the C.O.T.C., minus a government grant, carried on the conduct of military training. The curriculum had changed from officer training to general fundamental military drill.

67th Battery Organized

By the end of the first year of the war, Varsity had its sons in every branch of the service, but it was not represented at the front directly by any particular combat unit. Thus in 1916 the proposal to form a battery solely of Varsity men was brought forth, resulting in the organization of the 67th Battery as a unit under control of the University of Toronto. The officers had to be university men and approved by the President. The first Commanding Officer was Lieut. W. T. Wright, now a professor in the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering. The Battery moved to Niagara, then to Petawawa and finally to Exhibition Park in Toronto, and by February, 1917 had sent four large drafts overseas. All in all, the 67th won a fine reputation for the university through its service. The S.A.C. contributed $1750 to the Battery out of funds raised by sale of the Varsity Magazine Supplement, a publication covering the university's role in the war.

In the spring of 1916, feeling that C.O.T.C. work should not be allowed to lapse during the summer, several officers sought permission "to organize an Overseas Training Company composed of members of Toronto University and others of equivalent qualifications . . . on the understanding that the Company is to be organized strictly on an overseas basis with regard to enlistment, obligations and pay, and that if the exigencies of the service so require, it will be liable to furnish drafts."

During the Great War the first headquarters of the Royal Flying Corps in Canada were located on the campus, and pilots and observers were trained here. A stationary training plane was built high up in the lofty old tree outside the north door of the S.P.S. building. Cadets carried on radio communication from the campus with airplanes hovering in the sky above.

Varsity Soldiers Fight Fenians Near Fort Erie

Participation of the university in the military affairs of the nation has had a long and glorious history, from its earliest years down to the present when hundreds of its sons are serving in scattered battle areas and thousands of others are preparing for military service. University soldiers played their first real military role when they were among the forces which met the Fenian invasion of 1866, fighting in the area around Fort Erie, Ridgeway and near Niagara River.

Varsity Rifles Organized

The University Rifle Company was organized in 1862 as an independent rifle company under the provisions of the Militia Act of 1855, and was incorporated as No. 9 Company in the Queen's Own Rifles of Toronto. They were under the command of Captain H. H. Croft, then professor of chemistry in the university.

By late 1864, the Fenian Brotherhood, organized in the United States in 1857 with the object of ridding Ireland of British domination and setting up an independent Irish Republic, was becoming a peril to Canada. It had set up headquarters in New York, elected a President and a Senate, was raising money through sale of bonds, and was drilling large numbers of men in cities close to the Canadian border. Consequently three battalions of the Active Militia were called out. The Queen's Own were kept in Toronto, drilling daily, and the sight of uniforms in the lecture rooms was a common one.

Cross Lake Ontario

On May 31, 1865, it was learned that the Fenians were planning to cross the Niagara River at Fort Erie. The Queen's Own, including the University Rifles, crossed the lake to Port Dalhousie on the steamer "City of Toronto" and proceeded by train to Port Colborne where they were ordered to entrench themselves. The Fenians were said to be camped at Frenchman's Creek, which is about four miles below Fort Erie on the Canadian side of the Niagara River and about eighteen miles from Port Colborne. A confusion in plan resulted in an engagement at Ridgeway, midway between Port Colborne and Fort Erie, hours before the Canadian forces had intended to attack.

The battle was fought in the area where the old Garrison Road crossed the Ridge road running from Stevensville to Ridgeway. Present-day readers, familiar with that area, can locate it as the sector where the Buffalo-Detroit highway crosses the road which leads to Ridgeway and Crystal Beach, famed summer resort on the Lake Erie shore.

Mistake Friend for Foe

The Canadian forces, especially the university men, were fairly inexperienced but they put up a sound resistance against the Fenian forces, seasoned by Civil War battles. At one point the

Local Troops See the World Via Boer War

With little fanfare, and practically no mention in The Varsity, a contingent of university men left the campus for distant South Africa and the Boer War early in November, 1899. A year later many of them were back, but in the intervening time their experiences had been many and varied.

According to an eye-witness account, the Varsity and Victoria men assembled on the lawn on the afternoon of Wednesday, October 25, 1899, and marched off in a body to the armories where they were joined by the men from other colleges. It was a gay parade, with the students singing such songs as "There's a place where the Boers ought to go!" and "We will hang old Kruger on a sour apple tree!" Arriving back at the university at about 5 o'clock, they gave three cheers for the contingent, three for Varsity and three groans for the Boers, before separating. Several days later the contingent left Canada.

The experiences of the university contingent are related in a letter to The Varsity written by Private C. J. Millar of S.P.S. The voyage out was "monotonous" and "our time was taken up with drill and fatigue duties during the day and guard duty during the night. The fatigues consisted of washing down the decks carrying coal to the galley and cleaning quarters." The contingent encamped near Capetown for a week, and then entrained for Bloemfontein, 700 miles distant. They passed from the verdant green grass country to a wasteland desert area "of sand and rock" where "everything presents a grey appearance." Then followed several weeks of hard marching, with much suffering from thirst. In their first real engagement with the Boers, they succeeded in dislodging the enemy from a well-protected kopje after more than twelve hours of fighting.

The contingent's sad action at many spots, including Zand River, Heilbron, Doornkop, Paardeburg, Riet River, Kemaardt and Mafeking.

Trinity College Company was sent off to the left while the University Rifle Company went to the right. Losing touch in the woods, they later caught sight of each other, but unfortunately the Trinity men thought the other company was the enemy. They opened fire, and a classic remark was recorded when a sergeant, later a renowned clergyman, took cover in front of a tree facing the enemy to screen himself from the Trinity fire, saying "I'd rather be hit in front than behind." Luckily the Trinity marksmanship was poor.

Through unfortunate leadership, the Canadian forces suffered a severe setback and were forced to fight their way back to the railroad, but the Fenians fled back across the river during the night. The University Company lost five men, and four were seriously wounded.

journalism, lip reading, short story and radio writing, advertising, gymnastics and dancing, metallurgy, art of the theatre, air conditioning, modern music, interior decorating—these are but a few examples of the wide range of courses available.

The Pass Course for Teachers, Mr. Dunlop feels, is one of the most worthwhile activities carried on the University Extension, for through this effort not only are teachers being given an opportunity to improve their own status and educational equipment, but it also produces increased efficiency in the instruction given to the school children of the province. This course, which leads to a B.A. degree, allows teachers in public schools to earn their degree by attending lectures in the late afternoon or evening and on Saturday mornings, or they may enrol in the summer session.

Those who are unable to take the course through the regular session take their work during the Summer Session, and for this they must do a required amount of preparation by correspondence through the preceding winter. For instance, a student who decides to take first year English and French in the Summer Session must, in the preceding September, enrol for correspondence work in those two subjects. Assignments are mailed out monthly and dates are specified for the return of the completed exercises.

The first summer session was held in 1909. Mr. Dunlop insists, despite the claim of Queen's University to have inaugurated the first summer session in the province in the summer of 1910. However, only a few people attended that 1909 session, and the idea died out for several years until there was a general revival of extension work in 1916.

With the flow of men back from the battlefields of Europe, there came in 1919 and 1920 new demands for adult education. Instruction was wanted by men who had failed to finish their schooling and by men who needed new instruction to help them fit into changed conditions. In that year the second evening tutorial class got underway—a course in journalism, and from then on the growth of all Extension departments was rapid.

Many special short concentrated courses have been prepared by the Extension department for the benefit of certain groups. There have been numerous courses, either weekend periods or of a week's duration, for farmers who are interested in economics, history, current events, literature and other non-agricultural subjects. Likewise there have been several courses for newspapermen who sent delegates to the university asking if some such course could not be provided. When offered it proved a great success.

In the autumn of 1939 University Extension ventured into a new field with the establishing of a Certificate Course in Business, designed to afford commercial school graduates a means of pursuing their studies further and at the same time give young business people an opportunity to improve qualifications for promotion. With the co-operation of the Department of Political Science and Economics and the Law Department, a three-session course was established. In each session a student may take instruction in two subjects. The central subjects of this course are accounting, economics and mercantile law, and the prediction has been made that in later years this may grow into a School of Business Administration.

New Extension Work Brought by War

The coming of war brought a new responsibility and a new activity to the Extension department whose Director was called upon to assume the general supervision of education for troops in Military District No. 2.

It was found that chief interest among the troops lay in obtaining junior matriculation, and under the scheme eventually worked out, it was decided that Ottawa would handle this phase while the universities themselves would take care of anything above that. Close to three thousand applications for various correspondence courses were sent to Ottawa from this district. The Extension department is supplying about fifty men with its own material, some of it going to troops in England.

Night classes in matriculation subjects are being provided for men enlisted in the R.C.A.F. who require an improved academic standing to qualify for pilot rating. These classes are held in various parts of the province, also, and the men are taught on a voluntary basis by secondary school teachers.

Young Varsity Grad, Boer War Vet, Wrote Poem "In Flanders Fields"

The 1917 Varsity War Supplement printed a scoop of sorts when a poem by a graduate of the university appeared and the announcement of the poet's death on the field of battle was added just before the issue went to press. The poem was "In Flanders Fields" and the poet was Lt.-Col. John McCrae.

A graduate of '94, McCrae served in the Boer War as a lieutenant, in which capacity a superior officer reported him as being "highly praised by his men."

Returning to action in the War of 1914-1918, he attained the rank of lieutenant-colonel.

A year after his death the 1918 War Supplement printed a poem replying to McCrae's immortal lines. Written by Rachel R. Todd, it read in part:

"But evermore, when larks and poppies sing, Thy message of the torch to Man will ring."

Feature of Rugby Games, Dances Varsity Yell is '07 Contribution

At all the rugby games, social get-togethers, and dances, where at least two members from this fair university of ours are present and possess a voice, sometime before the moment for departure has come, one is bound to hear the familiar words drifting through the general clatter and clang, "Toronto, Toronto Varsity!"

Many, many years younger than the university, the yell first came into existence at the turn of the century, 1903 to be exact. It was originally composed as a year yell by an undergrad who entered the university in that year, an undergrad who later became Rev. Norman A. MacEachren. A member of the class of '07, the term "Nought Seven" took the place of "Toronto" in the yell as we know it.

In 1906 the S.A.C. office sent out a call for a university yell and Mr. MacEachren submitted the yell in its present form. Apparently the judges didn't have a very high opinion of any of the yells submitted, including Mr. MacEachren's, and didn't think any would be permanent. However, Mr. MacEachren's yell was used at the rugby games during that fall, just as a filler until someone thought up something better, and—well, need we say more?

Women's War Work Assumes New Emphasis As Civilians Share Battle

Efforts Directed Toward Aiding Civilians Who Have Been Affected by Storm of War which Hits Non-combatants

Illustrative of the difference between the two wars which the world has lately faced is the work done by the staff side of the university in each. In the last war, "Base Hospital" and "Fruit Picking" were familiar terms. This time, synonymous with the entrance of the civilian population into the battle field, "the W.S.T.D.", "British Overseas Children Committee", "Food Administration", and "Refugee Work" come into prominence as descriptive of contemporary effort.

Some aspects remain the same. Nurses are still going overseas and the Red Cross work rooms, although location and type of work has changed, are again turning out supplies at the rate of an approximate 10,000 articles a year.

Equipped Base Hospital
Viewing the women's work chronologically, one finds that in March 1914, the University Base Hospital provided the occasion for the entrance of the university into Red Cross work of the last war, as it offered to equip and supply a hospital of 1,040 beds.

Another feature of the work contributed by women was the summer farming which began in 1917 when 300 students from the three women's colleges Victoria, St. Hilda's and University College, enlisted in the "national service" scheme, being sent out to farms where their help was needed in planting, weeding, fruit picking, packing and other agrarian pursuits. Rising at 5:30 a.m. was only one of the hard ships that came their way but it is in the records that college girls achieved their aim in a very definite way by aiding food production and distribution.

W.S.T.D. Inaugurated
The present war work of Varsity co-opts tells a different story. The inauguration of the Women's Service Training Detachment is the most obvious innovation. Taking England as an example of what can be done by women in a war which includes civilians, the Detachment was begun with the purpose of training women for service should war come closer to home, as well as for possible service in England.

A separate unit of the Women's Voluntary Service Corps of the Red Cross, the Detachment is established at the university under the Women's Athletic Association. Its platoons are led by members of the Athletic Directorate and for the bulk of the work entailed in the organizing of this student detachment credit is due to Miss A. E. M. Parkes, secretary-treasurer of the Directorate and Senior Lieutenant of the W.S.T.D.

Studied War Organization

Pre-Christmas training as outlined in October by Varsity's President H. J. Cody, dealt mainly with military matters including military organization, law drill and orderly room organization. The training takes the form of three hours a week of lectures and drill and is carried on under drill sergeants appointed by military district no. 2. The keynote of the spring training is civilian defence and lecture topics include A.R.P. organization, incendiaries and fire fighting, high explosives and protection of homes and air-raid shelters, war gases, elements of first aid, transport and public utility.

Four Main Sections

Under the W.S.T.D. the four main sections are Transport, Voluntary Nursing, Office Administration and University Detachments, and the Food Administration branch. The last is one of the more recently organized and plans to provide trained cooks, dietitians and nutritionists.

Finis will be written to this year's training when the Detachment writes off the A.R.P. examination in March. Future plans are tentative and anything definite will depend on word from Ottawa. It is assumed that it will continue next year with advanced courses for old members along special lines determined by government requirements.

War Service Committee

The idea of co-ordinating the work of university graduates, faculty wives, the administrative staff and others connected with the university in a central committee, endorsed by Lady Falconer, was carried out at the beginning of the war and resulted in a central committee of representatives, from every women's group on the campus. This group is known as The Women's War Service Committee, of which Mrs. H. J. Cody, wife of the president, is the chairman.

British Children Here

The most unique work carried on under the Women's War Service Committee was that of the sub-committee for British Overseas Children under Mrs. Peter Sandford. Instigated by private individuals interested in the evacuation to this country of children of friends, the work formally began early in June, 1940, after cables were sent to Cambridge, Manchester and Birmingham Universities offering to take children.

To cover all aspects of the work departments were set up to look after Immigration, Residence, Clothing, Equipment and Records. Although evacuation later came under the Children's Aid by government order, the women placed 147 children and 18 mothers as well as assisting 53 persons en route to the United States.

Work Room Figures

The criterion of a Red Cross work-room demands refugee supplies as well as medical and a statistical report by Mrs. W. E. Gallie, convenor, at the December, 1940, annual meeting reveals 6,495 hospital supplies, 885 refugee garments of the highest quality and the Jarvis Street workroom testifies, and 2,495 knitted articles.

Added to all this must be the work of the Occupational Therapy and the Physiotherapy students, many of whom have been sent to Britain and whose passage was financed by the Red Cross.

All this goes to defeat with great thoroughness the "girls are only good to dance with" argument.

Organization Of Battalion Was Speedy

The speed and efficiency with which the Training Centre Battalion was organized and put into smooth operation was astounding, and is due in large measure to the co-operation of Hart House in making space available, to the students themselves who took the matter seriously, to the instructions in The Varsity, and above all to the officer personnel of the Battalion.

It is interesting to note, as an example of the efficiency of the staff, that although every male undergraduate in the university was interviewed (with the exception of C.O.T.C. cadets), not a single record card was lost or misplaced.

Wilson in Command

The command of the new Battalion was given to the then Major W. S. Wilson, V.D., second in command of the C.O.T.C. Possessing a distinguished record from the last war, he was promoted to the rank of Lieut-Col. shortly after being given command of the Training Centre Battalion. Second in command was Major W. S. Wallace, chief librarian of the University of Toronto.

A distinguished list of company commanders served this year with the Battalion. Commanding "O" Company was Major F. R. Crocombe, while Capt. C. R. Sanderson, a veteran of the African campaign in the last war and now librarian of the city of Toronto, commanded "Q" Company. Capt. Crabtree, winner of the Military Cross in 1914, commanded "R" Company. Major W. Wright, professor at S.P.S. and in charge of the 67th (University of Toronto) Battery in the Great War, headed "S" Company; Captain R. M. Barbour, decorated with the M.C. in the last war, commanded "T" Company; and "W" Company was led by Capt. L. T. Hargreaves, an artillery officer in 1914.

Heavy Duties on Lane

Major G. R. Lane, a veteran of four years in the last war, is chief instructional officer of the Battalion and was instrumental in establishing the C.O.T.C. at Guelph in 1923. He was a member of the Toronto C.O.T.C. from 1924 the burdens of organizing the Battalion to 1926. On his shoulders have fallen and of mapping out the instruction courses. Difficulties were encountered due to lack of equipment but the syllabus has been admirably fulfilled, Lieut. E. A. Macdonald is Adjutant.

Training Centre Is Set Up this Year

During the autumn Saturday afternoons were largely spent on long route marches through the downtown sections of Toronto. Led by the 48-piece band under Captain John Slater, the Battalion marched three or four miles, and when joined by the C.O.T.C. the column stretched out for over a mile.

Brig. Haldenby Inspects

Several inspections were held on the front campus after marching past the saluting base on the front steps of University College. On one occasion Brigadier Eric Haldenby, who took the 48th Highlanders into Flanders and brought them out without loss during the Dunkirk retreat, took the salute as close to 3,000 men marched past. Several weeks later Major-General Constantine, head of Military District no. 2, inspected the Battalion.

In November Military District headquarters ordered a new and more thorough-going medical examination of all those who were required to take military training, excluding C.O.T.C. strength. Hart House again provided facilities, and the whole Battalion was given a checkup and reassorted into categories A to E. As many as twenty-four Medical Officers in uniform were present on some days.

After Christmas training was resumed at the University Avenue Armories. A Pipe Band was also organized, in conjunction with the C.O.T.C., and it made its first appearance at the C.O.T.C. Ball in February.

Land Plane Trains Men To Fly Blind

Down in the basement of the Engineering Building is a room containing several different types of aeroplane motors and also a complete Link Trainer. The Link Trainer is an aeroplane which does everything but fly, and when the cockpit is closed over you might as well be flying for it turns, banks, and spins as you control it by the instruments, and even bumps around irregularly when the bad weather apparatus is in operation.

"Airplane on Ground"

The Link Trainer is to train pilots to fly by instruments, and at a time when there were only four in Canada the Dominion Government bought one for the use of the University's course in Aerial Navigation. The trainer has the standard navigation instruments used on the Lockheed 68 and certain of them are duplicated on the instructor's desk, along with a special affair which records the plane's imaginary course on a chart. It is also equipped with the usual two-way radio telegraph and telephone apparatus which can be used to talk to the instructor and to learn the use of radio direction beams. When the trainer is not being used by the second-year Aerial Navigation students lessons are given at a nominal fee to the general public.

Aerial Navigation was organized in September 1938 by the Department of University Extension as a two year diploma course. The idea had been the joint brain-child of Wing Commander T. R. Loudon, Professor of Applied Mechanics, and of Professor E. F. Burton, head of the Physics Department.

Training For Civil Aviation

Wing Commander Loudon, who had always been interested in civil aviation, considered it a promising field for young men, so in 1938 the Senate of the University was asked for its approval of the draft of a course to provide instruction in the fundamental sciences including mechanism applied physics, and chemistry necessary to lead to qualifying examinations for Commercial and Transport pilots, navigators, dispatchers including control tower operators, operating meteorologists as assistants to dispatchers, and radio operators for communication and direction-finding. This approval was granted and the new course was placed under the Extension Department where it would be able to pay for itself without weighing on the University's funds.

The first class consisted of twenty men. Some women had sought admission but had been refused. At the end of two years (last March) seventeen graduated and of these, seven had been taken by the R.C.A.F. within two weeks after their final examinations, and the rest were all in god positions within a month. One of them, Bruce Smith, was retained as instructor for the Link Trainer. Wing Commander Loudon himself soon went to Ottawa to become the Chief Technical Officer of the Flight Research Establishment.

Gov't Provided Equipment

From the beginning the Department of Transport of the Dominion Government has taken a lively interest in the course, and has provided a great deal of equipment. But the war has naturally made a great difference. Of the 36 men who enrolled at the beginning of last year at least 20 have dropped out, a great number of them enlisting. This year there is a freshman class of 32 some of whom will complete their course next year. So far, however, no new applications are being accepted for next year.

A staff of 13, mostly professors of the School of Practical Science and of the Department of Physics, give all the instruction. Students must comply with the physical standards set by the Department of Transport for pilot's rating. This involves a medical examination each year by a physician appointed by the Department. Before entering the second year the student must have obtained at least a private pilot's certificate.

Since the course was designed primarily as a training for civil aviation, its future will be rather uncertain until the end of the war.

Base Hospital in Greece Maintained by University

One of the greatest non-combatant services of the University of Toronto in the first World War was the complete equipping and maintaining of No. 4 Canadian General Hospital, known in the first two years of the war as University of Toronto No. 4 Base Hospital. Most of its period of service was spent at Salonika in Greece, a spot which, writes one of the officers, "possesses one of the worst climates in the world".

Early in 1915 a university offer to provide a base hospital of 1040 beds was gladly received by the War Office which authorized appointment of 44 medical men, 73 nurses and 206 N.C.O.'s and privates. Two committees were formed—one consisting of the Senate, the Governors and the staff worked to provide the best surgical and medical equipment; the other composed of ladies connected with the university sought the provision of linen, garments and dressings. $60,000 was raised at the start, and funds kept coming in throughout the war, and on Wednesday, May 5, 1915, the hospital was given a rousing farewell in Convocation Hall. It joined the 2nd Canadian Expeditionary Force that month and sailed for England.

The officers and men of the unit saw quite a bit of the world on their passage from England to their final destination. Their ship touched at Gibraltar, Corfu, Malta and put in at Alexandria, Egypt, where the men expected to stay. Many were the photos they sent home to relatives, and the most recurrent shot seemed to be that of Canadian officers sitting astride camels in the middle of the desert, with the pyramids and the Sphinx looming up in the background.

From November 1915 until May 1916 the unit lived under canvas at Salonika, but by the latter date a new camp site was built and equipped and the men moved into comparatively palatial wooden huts, about ninety in number. Arranged in groups, there were sleeping huts, administration huts, clinical huts, operating huts, isolation huts for certain diseases, dental, X-ray and pathological huts, and many other types. The hospital could accommodate 1056 patients comfortably. A water supply system was installed with pipes to every hut, while sewage systems and power and electric light plants were set up.

In August and September, 1917, the unit was transferred back to England, and when Armistice was signed a year later, most of its members were in service at the hospital establishment at Basingstoke.

Page Two, Column Three Has Developed Humour With An Individual Style

A Paternally Prolific Cat Points With Pride . . .

This page is a tribute to the Cat of today and the Cat of yesteryear. Here you will find the Cat trends in humour as it developed through 19 years of existence. In the fall of 1922, an alleged typographical error brought the humour column into being, and before long the Cat became an indispensable part of The Varsity. In the early days of the column, the Cat confined himself to short epigrammatic gags, and puns and bits of nonsense verse. In 1929, however, along came Gaspard McGuffey and his cohorts and lifted the Cat out of the doldrums. McGuffey ended the roaring twenties with the first glimpses of satirical prose, and managed to steer clear of the old puny, play-on-word type of Cat. In the early thirties, such stalwarts as the Muddy Yorker, Chaz, Winkie and Shrdlu, spent their time dreaming up insane ideas, but the brand of humour in the early thirties rapidly deteriorated into the art of the pun.

Then came 1936, and with it the Golden Era of the Cat. In this year, the Cat trend of humour definitely turned to satire, parody, the fake news story, and fantasy. Umlauf Wiregarters, the Raven and others took charge, and before long the satire grew more satirical, the fantasy more fantastic, and the Cat leaped to the heights of popularity. Exchange papers both in Canada and the States took to reprinting the Cat, and Bob Carney, feature columnist of the Fordham Ram unhesitatingly declared that The Varsity Cat was "the finest college humour column in America."

Here are some examples of the Cat through its 19 years of existence. They are not, perhaps, the best Cats, but we believe them to be the most typical. It will be interesting to note the development of the form of humour as the Cat continues to stalk its pleasant way along the pages of The Varsity. The Cat today is one of the foremost institutions of the undergraduate newspaper, and we venture to predict that as long as there's a Varsity—the Champus Cat will never die.

KNOLLS INTERVIEWS ALBERT EINSTEIN

Knolls Overcome by Knolls' Sense of Humour and Brilliant Repartee

By R. E. Knolls

I arose this morning feeling quite well and happy about everything. Glancing around my spacious room, which is kept in beautiful condition by my extraordinarily efficient Japanese house-boy, I said, "Hmmm I wonder what I have to do today . . . ah yes, I have an appointment to interview Albert Einstein."

Quickly I drank a cup of hot coffee and putting on my splendid overcoat I hastened to my appointment.

Entering the hotel room I found Mr. Einstein awaiting me. I gazed at him for a moment and then uttered . . . "wie gch's" in his native tongue to make him feel at home. "You come originally from Germany?" I asked, helping myself to a pipeful of my own specially blended tobacco. "Yes," replied the professor.

"Ah Germany!" I cried, "what a blessed land. Well do I remember the happy days I spent there as a student at Heidelberg. What a life. Wiener-schnitzel and appfelstrudel and oh, what beer," I continued. I recalled with a tear the time I took a boat across the Baltic just to see Stockholm and taste that delicious smorgasbord.

"You are now in Princeton?" I queried. "Yes," answered Mr. Einstein. "Ah, Princeton . . . dear old Princeton," I screamed, "how I remember the days I spent as a Princeton undergraduate. . . . Fishing . . . studying. Ah, they used to call me Catfish Knolls . . . those were the days! I too was a brilliant mathematics student." I continued. "Once I was offered a professorship in mathematics but refused it, knowing that my first love was journalism."

Mr. Einstein yawned. . . . How continental, I thought. I rose and bid him good night, thanking him for a splendid story. I walked out into the street feeling happy. I would have sausages for lunch.

50 STUDENTS DIE AS LIBRARY CAGE FALLS DOWN SHAFT

Dying Screams Disturb Those at Work in Reading Room SABOTAGE?

Fifty students plunged to their deaths in the library yesterday, when the cable broke on the elevator carrying them down to their day's study in the stacks. The appalling tragedy occurred at 9.17 a.m. (E.S.T.) just as the first load was being taken down for the day. Forgetting even the thought of late books, the library staff rushed to the scene to render any aid possible. The entire student and staff body was summoned from the Medical Building, but their efforts were not required as there were no survivors.

"This is terrible," commented a high library official, "the stacks will not be available now for about three months and the exams are near!"

A cordon of police was thrown around the desperate crowd, bent on getting into the stacks for books they wanted before it was sealed for the proposed investigation. They had to be dispersed with tear-gas.

Hardest hit was the library janitor. "A deuce of a mess to clean up," he moaned. (Harder hit was a librarian.) She was underneath.

Thousands of telegrams poured into the university last night offering condolences. Several are printed below. "Honourable regrets and apologies."—Emperor Hirohito.

"Tough luck, Blues."—Queen's University.

"We warned you about this in 1908."—Amalgamated Elevator Co.

"Obviously the work of Communists."—Your Morning Paper.

"Obviously the work of Fascists."—Josef Stalin.

"Heil Hitler!"—Adolf Hitler. (Wall-papering done, easy terms.)

Names of the victims are being withheld, according to a usually reliable source. "We don't want publicity about it," he said.

Bodies of the victims were extracted by removing the east wall to the building. The bill will be added to their fees (payable by relatives).

October 29, 1929

I am lying on my face in the mud. I dig my fingers into it and bury my nose into its sticky mass, thankful for its poor protection from the enemy shells that shriek overhead through the night. A shell has blown off my pants; I am cold.

Suddenly I smell meat and I remember that I have not eaten for three days. It is not good meat that I smell. No, it is bad meat. But guided by my nose my emaciated claw-like fingers grope into the blackness before me. I grasp the precious morsel and bite greedily into it. I have not noticed what it is. Now I know it is a dead corpse rat. A few months ago it would have made me say "Ugh!" I take another bite.

I spit it out, and fling it far from me into the blackness. The blast of a shell blows it to pieces and fragments come flying back into my opened mouth. It is fate. I can do nought but accept it. I munch it thoughtfully.

This morning we were relieved and now we are sitting sunning ourselves on a pile of broken bottles near the dressing station, where we watch the wounded come in one by one, to get patched up. One poor fellow staggers in with his tonsils in his hand. Another has gone mad and imagines that he is an alligator, and goes creeping around on his stomach trying to bite people.

We sit and smoke and try not to think. We are content for the moment. Soon we will receive a ration of spinach from the cookhouse. It is rotten but it has a good grade of sand in it. That is better than mud.

I was walking along King Street of a Sunday afternoon when I happened to notice what I believed to be a very strange thing. There before my very eyes was a horse standing at the curb wearing a top hat.

I was taken aback to say the least, but upon recovering, I approached the animal and examined him very closely. "What the hell are you looking at?" said the horse examining me very closely.

Once again I was taken aback, but quickly countered, "Oh, nothing, I was just surprised to see you wearing a top hat."

"What the hell's so funny about me wearing a top hat?" queried the horse.

"Well . . . I mean . . . you being a horse . . . and that top hat . . . well . . . frankly I've just never seen a horse wearing a top hat," I answered lamely.

The horse looked at me loftily as a smile seemed to play around his lips. "Well Mr. Know-Nothing, let me inform you that thousands of horses wear top hats including some of my most intimate friends."

I had nothing to say. I had never seen a horse in a top hat before but not wishing to show my ignorance, I resolved to make friends with this unusual beast. I said "I've seen lots of horses wear straw hats."

"I wouldn't be seen dead in a straw hat," the horse replied.

"I was just telling you what I've seen," I answered quickly. "No offence meant."

"O.K.," answered the horse. "Now run along and play with your marbles."

I turned to leave but after taking a few steps I turned and called to the horse, "Haven't I seen you some place before?"

"Perhaps," said the horse, "I get around."

His answer was curt and seemed final so I turned and continued on my way. However, I felt some sort of apology was due and once again I called to him "I'm sorry about the top hat."

"Forget about it," the horse snapped. Obviously, I had wounded the horse's pride. I made my way home towards a thoroughly chastened individual. After all, why shouldn't a horse wear a top hat? Why shouldn't a horse wear a homburg or a stelson? Isn't this a democracy? I cursed myself silently for being a toady and a sneak. I shall have to watch myself in the future.

Students Have Been Laughing for Sixty Years

The Varsity Has Sought To Relieve Campus Tension Through Humour Columns

Patriarch Student, Di-Varsities, Question Drawer Have Produced Student Cuffaws in Past Years

CAT APPEARED IN '22

Undergraduates like to laugh. And for sixty years The Varsity has striven to curl the campus lip. The humour columns have not always succeeded in being uproariously funny; but their writers have always been amused.

The Varsity of 1880 revelled in verse such as this:

When the young and tender school girl isn't thinking,

*Isn't thinking,
Of the time when she will be allowed to vote,*

*'towed to vote,
The chances are that she is coyly blinking,*

*Coyly blinking,
At Harry in his brand new Ulster coat,*

Ulster coat.

Observations of the Patriarch Student, the earliest of The Varsity's regular humorous columns, mentioned in passing, antedating the current attacks on Hart House provender by about forty years:

"Doctor Wilson has recently missed several skulls, and during the past week a new kind of soup has been added to the long menu of the residence dinner."

In 1883, Our Wallet quoted an exchange paper as saying:

"A dozen women ride now where one rode a few years ago." And the columnist then commented: "This arrangement must be hard on the old horse."

Three years later, Di-Varsities was the cause of student smiles and sneers as it remarked:

"Died of hard drink," was the verdict upon the man who was crushed under a lump of ice."

Round The Table, not to be confused with the current Round the Table, was introduced in 1885. It was a literary column, notable chiefly for its verbosity and stamina. A similar column was conducted by the Sanctum Philosopher in 1890.

The Question Drawer, first appearing in 1896, was of great assistance to puzzled students who knew not Dorothy Dix. For instance:

"Sopomore, S.P.S.—You can get

Gowns Doffed By Students As Years Progress

Less and less during the years have Varsity men and women bedecked themselves in the somber student gown. This tendency to what Wolfe men still term "academic nudity" is perhaps traceable to the following excerpt from "Observations by the Patriarch Student," a Varsity feature, on Nov. 13, 1890:

"Every morning I see, passing my ranch, a lugubrious individual robed in a College gown. I want him to read the following sensible remarks from the Acta Victoriana, and be converted in the reading:

"We think the time has come when this last relic of the dark ages should be abolished. And indeed the only argument which seems to be in favour of the costume is that it is 'a part of college etiquette.' What etiquette then is in this nineteenth century of modern civilization, in a four-cornered black cap and a long, sable, seamless, shapeless robe, flapping and flapping and flying in the wind, would require the sensitive eyes of Lord Chesterfield or some other master of etiquette to determine. Does not the student manifest sufficient etiquette in his upright conduct and gentlemanly demeanor in all his relations to college life?

"Can anything be said in favour of the little of the costume? It conduces but little if any to the protection of the body. It impedes locomotion; it diverts the attention of strangers. It frightens the lower orders of animals. It is uncouth, unfashionable, and altogether useless as an article of clothing."

soap very cheap down at T. Eaton's on Friday. (Bargain Day.)"

"Horsepower, S.P.S.—In riding a tandem, it is considered most proper for the gentleman to ride behind."

In 1903, the commentary, Week by Week, waxed prophetic upon the topic of imitations, as it said:

"What of the future? I venture a conjecture. In 1925, the 'boys' will be dressed in skirts and bonnets, and will march to lectures in 'divisions.' They will live in residence and be subject to curfew law which will require lights to be out at 9 p.m. No one will be allowed out later except under careful chaperonage. Each student will take daily exercise in smiling, his diet will be carefully supervised, and the Sporting Editor of The Varsity will conduct a two-page department on 'Chats with My Boys!'"

In the post-war years, returned men, sporting such noms de plume as Bass Drum and Old Estaminet, wrote columns like these:

"Well, troops, here's the Old Estaminet again, with its windows all shone and the glasses polished and a new set of bulletins and 'Beware of spies' notices posted up in most readable French and Flemish and 'Flamgoonish.'"

Most important development in The Varsity's humorous history was the appearance of the Champus Cat. The column, which has become the most popular feature with the undergraduates, first blossomed forth on the morning of Monday, October 23, 1922. The name, so runs tradition, was the result of a proof-reading error on the part of the night editor, for The Varsity had previously printed a column entitled "Campus Chat."

In its earlier years, the Cat was a collection of wisecracks and bits of doggerel. Later it came to employ burlesque as its chief instrument of humour, running whole columns devoted to parodies on practically every type of literature from news stories to Arts Examinations.

The Cat column is now conducted by the Feature Editor, although many "Cats" are contributed by other members of the staff. The signatures appended to today's Cats thinly veil the identity of many of the reporters and editors of The Varsity.

Most often quoted Cat appeared early in the venerable feline's history, and struck the key-note of irrelevancy

Musical Theory, Other Arts Subjects Compose University's Music Course

From the red-brick three-story building set back from the south-west corner of University Avenue and College Street, there emanates the strangest assortment of sound to be heard under one Toronto roof. Teachers play into the small hours of the night; musicians come and go; for this is the Toronto Conservatory of Music. During the daytime, students in one of the smallest and newest courses in the Faculty of Arts, those in the honour course in Music, hurry in and out.

The idea of combining general instruction with music was first conceived and put into practice some years ago by Sir Henry Hadow, principal of the University of Sheffield. Combining a deep knowledge of the classics and English Literature with acknowledged musical ability, he was also the author of the "Oxford History of Music." Sir Henry thought that arts subjects should not be isolated in water-tight compartments, but should rather be combined with other branches of culture.

The Department of Education realized the advantages of offering a course of study in which the student would have an opportunity of obtaining a knowledge of some of the arts subjects as well as that of music, and in 1937-38, such a course was introduced. The three-year course leading to the degree of Bachelor of Music had been in existence for many years but its curriculum included only music and its allied subjects.

Prof. Leo Smith believes that this new departure is a move corresponding with the trend of thought to-day and that it effects a closer co-relation between artistic effort and social and political conditions than has previously been the case.

The curriculum was particularly designed for those desiring to become teachers in Secondary Schools and who, while specializing in music, would be qualified to teach a few additional subjects, such as modern languages. It was also expected to appeal to the professional musician who realizes that the cultural background gained by such a course would open to him many positions, the majority of which are occupied by foreign artists.

The head of the Faculty of Music is Sir Ernest MacMillan, eminent conductor, composer, and organist, whose name is familiar throughout the musical world. He was knighted by the late King George V for his fame as a conductor and particularly for his instrumentality in raising the status of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra to its present level. This incidentally was

In 1936, Hither and Yon, an exchange column dealing with events of interest at this and other universities, made its appearance. Typical of the spirit in which the column is written is the following extract, first used by Frank Shuster in 1938, and quoted since by other Hither-and-Yonners:

achieved during the years of depression. The other members of the faculty are Dr. Healey Willan and Leo Smith, both well-known as musical performers, composers, and authors.

The course in its inaugural year saw an enrolment of eight students, seven of whom were registered in Victoria College and one in St. Michael's. The enrolment of beginners has numbered from seven to nine students in the subsequent years. Of the eight members of the class of 4T1, three dropped out after the first year, but the remaining five, four of whom are in Vic, will graduate this year.

The current membership in the Mus. Bach. course numbers fifty. It offers a general training for the professional musician, whether his preference lies in composing, teaching, conducting or some other branch of music.

The first two years are devoted exclusively to a theoretical study of music, including counterpoint, harmony, composition and history of music. In the final year, practical performance is also involved. As well, the candidate is required to submit an original composition for Chorus and String Orchestra or a string quartet, or a thesis of 5,000 words on a subject connected with musical criticism or history.

Governor Simcoe's Dream On Lonely Lakeshore Produces King's College

Simcoe Hall Commemorates First Governor of Upper Canada who Planned Setting Aside of Crown Lands whose Revenue Paid for Founding of First Provincial University by Royal Charter Elsewhere Described

STRACHAN TREATED FOR CHARTER

The University of Toronto with its affiliated colleges and faculties exists today as the realization of the visions of John Graves Simcoe, the first governor of the Province of Upper Canada. Colonel Simcoe's foresight and constructive activities have left imperishable marks upon this province. When he became governor in 1791, Upper Canada, now Ontario, had a population of perhaps twenty-five thousand Loyalist pioneers and Indians, sprinkled along the shores of the St. Lawrence and Lake Ontario. As an Oxford scholar and a cultured English gentleman, Simcoe hoped to create a new educational and social conditions in Upper Canada as existed in the old country.

In order to foster culture among the settlers Simcoe formulated two plans. The first, Clergy Reserves, kept political parties at variance for forty years. The second, to which this university owes its origin, met with universal approval from the outset. He proposed to devote the revenues from certain Crown Lands to the maintenance of educational institutions. The money thus obtained was to be used to instruct "especially the more respectable class of people by the erection of free grammar schools and, in the course of time, a college or university." In view of this proposed university, it is particularly fitting that its administration today should be conducted from "Simcoe Hall."

Unfortunately Simcoe was recalled before he could put his plans into operation. Nevertheless, the university idea did not die out, and in 1797, one year after Simcoe's departure, the Legislative Council and the House of Assembly asked his Majesty for an appropriation of land to support grammar schools and "a college where the youth of the land may be enabled to perfect themselves in the various branches of liberal knowledge." His Majesty's government was agreeable, and a committee was appointed to look over the proposition. Finally 250,000 acres of Crown Lands were granted to endow a university at York.

Unhappily the youth of the land had to wait a very long time before perfection in liberal knowledge was possible. In granting the land the government had carelessly neglected to pick out land that would make money for the university at once. Nothing was done until 1820, when Sir Peregrine Maitland became governor, and the Reverend John Strachan was Archdeacon of York (Canada). The Archdeacon was a power in educational, political and ecclesiastical matters. As a result he was sent to London to see about getting the land grant exchanged for land that would bring in immediate cash. He was also to treat for a royal charter for the university-to-be in the interests of character and dignity. He obtained both. The royal charter itself was described in the last article of this series. With extensive revenues and royal sanction it looked as if Governor Simcoe's hopes would quickly materialize. However, a new factor, inter-denominational disagreement, crept into the negotiations, and the actual inauguration of teaching in the University of King's College was unavoidably deferred until 1843.

LUCKY SEVENS

What's in numbers? There seems to be a great deal in dates ending with lucky sevens for the University of Toronto. In 1827 came the Royal Charter and the Letters Patent. In 1837, after ten years of disagreement, a new charter was adopted. 1837—the University Federation Act, the nucleus of the present organization of the University. In 1907 Robert A. Falconer became President of the University, and in 1917 he became Sir Robert Falconer, K.C.M.G. In 1927—came the Centenary Celebration.

ROYAL CHARTER

"George the Fourth of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, by the Grace of God, King, Defender of the Faith," and so forth gave royal consent to the foundation of the University of King's College at York, Upper Canada, in the charter granted on March 15, 1827, and signed with the signature of the Earl of Bathurst "by writ of Privy Seal." This document is especially interesting for it recalls the days when Toronto was Muddy York and Ontario Upper Canada.

The charter consists of two pages of parchment or vellum, perhaps thirty inches square and only slightly faded after a century of seclusion in desks and vaults. The pages are covered with handwriting so accurate that it seems to have been printed by machinery. In the upper left-hand corner is a portrait of King George the Fourth. The margins are filled with fancy scroll work which entwines pictures of the royal family and what are apparently angels. "The Privy Seal" is attached to the charter by a rope like a clothes-line with a few red strands braided into it. The seal is the size of a small Christmas cake, and made of yellow wax. On one side is a representation of Georgius Quartus Dei Gratia on horseback. The seal, owing to its softness and fragility, is kept in a tin can. An interesting description of the charter thirty-six years ago and how it came then into the hands of the Bursar is supplied by "The Varsity" of March 17, 1891:

"For some years Sir Daniel Wilson has been on a hunt for the original charter of King's College, the embryonic form of our present Provincial seat of learning. He at last got a hint that the old Bishop of Toronto (Rev. Dr. Strachan) had had it, and a search of the archives of his successor revealed the long sought for document. But the Bishop did not think he was authorized to surrender it. So off went Sir Daniel to the Attorney-General and got him to intervene. Whether Mr. Mowat threatened the Bishop with a writ of de charta replegiando or merely persuaded him by milder means, the worthy prelate surrendered it, and last night the bursar of the University came into the Senate proceedings armed with a large box like a banjo case and drew therefrom the original parchment, the seal attached to which was as large as a pancake and as thick as ten of them. All were in an excellent state of preservation after seventy years of pigeon-holing in London and Toronto. . . ."

College Opening Delayed By Religious Disputes

In spite of the possession of a Royal Charter and a liberal endowment, the actual foundation of King's College, the future University of Toronto, was deferred for many years through disagreement between Anglican and non-Anglican educationalists. The terms of the Charter provided that the university should be controlled entirely by the Church of England with the Archdeacon of York as president ex officio. The Methodists and Presbyterians, who formed by far the greater part of the population, objected strenuously to the fact that the proposed university, supported by public lands and funds, and ostensibly for the benefit of the people at large, should be dominated by the clergy of one denomination.

In the face of opposition the Council of King's College was formed, and a President and Bursar elected and given salaries. To this Council the University of Toronto owes its beautiful grounds, as 168 acres of beautiful park lands were purchased in 1829 at one hundred dollars an acre. Unfortunately this acreage was badly cut up by later administrators, but even today the University owns Queen's Park and much of the surrounding land.

One other factor contributing to the delay was the founding of Upper Canada College, which absorbed a large part of the endowment. The college, though not under the Royal Charter, was a subsidiary of King's College. It was agreeable to non-Anglicans, and as a result the Methodists founded the Upper Canada Academy at Cobourg in 1836. This Academy became Victoria College in 1841. Queen's University, too, was founded by the Presbyterians at Kingston in 1842.

King's College Established Out of Political Welter Existing in Mid-'Forties

Religion, Finance, Geography and Jealousy Are All Factors in Creation of "Provincial University" in 1843; King's College Becomes University of Toronto Six Years Later through Work of Robert Baldwin

FACULTIES LOOSELY LINKED AT FIRST

Politics, religion, finance, geography and jealousy entered into the story of the development of the University of Toronto following the opening of King's College in 1843. At this time there were three colleges providing higher education for the youth of the land, "especially the more respectable classes," namely—Victoria, a Methodist college at Cobourg; Queen's, a Presbyterian college at Kingston, and King's, an Anglican college at Toronto. King's College was the "Provincial University," supported by public endowment.

At once it was felt that a union of these colleges, modelled after universities in England and on the continent, would be in the best interests of education. The general view was also that King's College, supported by public funds, should not be devoted to one religious creed. Various attempts to improve the situation were made by Robert Baldwin, the Liberal leader, and others, but the vigorous resistance of the King's College Council effectually blocked any constructive policies. Finally, with the return of Baldwin to power, partly on a platform of educational reform, King's College was made in 1849 the University of Toronto, under the control of the state, and with no theological restrictions. The result of this change was the foundation, by Bishop Strachan, of Trinity College, designed to carry on the Anglican tradition.

But it did not seem right to do away entirely with instruction in divinity. In 1853 a new organization was introduced, in which the University of Toronto undertook only to conduct examinations, to confer degrees and to manage endowment. A separate corporation, University College, was formed, and the teaching of Arts transferred to it. The President of University College was also President of the University of Toronto, and remained such until 1901. The outlying theological colleges at once entered into affiliation, with the exception of Trinity.

Unfortunately, University College was to all intents and purposes the University of Toronto. To most people it was still King's College, and succeeded to the rivalries and jealousies of that institution. A college situated 70 or 160 miles from Toronto could not feel strongly attached to what it considered a rival institution. The University and

There were many defects in the Act, which have since been remedied, yet it was essentially the nucleus of the present organization of the University of Toronto. Queen's College could not see its way clear to moving to Toronto—and there seemed to be sufficient justification for a separate University in Eastern Ontario. Trinity also stayed out of the Federation, as it felt that it could not approve of certain terms in the Act. It finally became a member in 1904.

Governor-General Bagot, Then University Chancellor, Presided at Ceremony

Despite Elaborate Ceremonies, Political Manipulation Menaced Life of King's College; Site was Expropriated

TWO SEPARATE EDIFICES

Old King's College had a most pompous foundation ceremony. The Governor-General wielded the trowel and the military were present in full regalia. The aristocracy of Upper Canada lent their distinguished approval. Numerous cannon were shot off, and classical poems were delivered.

"On April 23, the corner-stone of the University building was laid with most imposing ceremonies by his Excellency Sir Charles Bagot, Governor-General of the United Canadas and Chancellor of the University," reports the historian. "On the morning of that day, being St. George's Day, the St. George Society, accompanied by the Sons of St. Patrick and St. Andrew, attended Divine service in the Cathedral, where an appropriate sermon was preached by the Reverend Henry Scadding of St. John's College, Cambridge. At one o'clock the procession formed on Queen Street at the University Avenue gates. After an address in Latin to the Chancellor, to which he replied in the same language, the procession marched up University Avenue to the chosen site, where the Parliament Buildings now stand. Here, in the presence of a large concourse of ladies and gentlemen and of that military, civil and educational officials of the Province, the stone was duly laid by his Excellency. Addresses were delivered, poems in Latin and Greek were recited, and the works concluded with salvos of artillery. The Bishop of Toronto said it was the happiest day in his life, a day to which he had looked forward for forty years."

The impressive ceremonies did not seem to ensure the permanency of King's College. In 1853 the site of King's College was expropriated for a Government House, Parliament House and buildings to accommodate the several Public Departments. "Such portion of ground forming part of University endowment lying at the head of College Avenue and not valued for collegiate purposes as may be found requisite." The feeble justification was that "whereas the site hereinafter mentioned is the most valued for the purpose aforesaid." The University was to be paid in full with interest at 6%. It is not flattering to the Provincial Government that no payment of any kind was made until 1897.

As The Varsity commented in 1880—"No university has suffered more from political manipulation than has the Provincial University. For many a year it was under the harrow and suffered alternately from its friends and its foes. Sent from the Park to the Parliament Buildings and thence to the Park again, where it was housed in two separate edifices, our Alma Mater has had no rest for the sole of her foot. For a long time the University seemed to be a missing link between politics and insanity, for the building occupied had been sacred either before or after to either one or both."

Contrast the foundation of the King's College building, a structure which lasted only a few years, to that of University College, "still going strong": "The new buildings were erected almost by stealth, lest the foes of the University should agitate for a suspension of the works. As the Reverend Dr. McCaul remarked when the coping-stone was raised, there had been no laying of the foundation-stone. Like the first temple, though for a different reason, this magnificent building of stone was silently raised so that it might almost have been said 'that there was neither hammer nor any tool of iron heard in the house while it was in building'."

"The most interesting thing about King's College is the foundation-stone. Strange to say, no one seems to know in what part of the building the stone was placed. It is to be hoped that it was not placed in a similar position to that occupied by the foundation-stone of University College, because it is well known that the stone in the old building contained a bottle, and if it has already been taken down, the men at present engaged in the work may have allayed their intellectual thirst—where there is so much fine dust—by appropriating the contents."

Curriculum of University Now Includes All Subjects

Originally Emphasis was Placed on Classics, English and Mathematics; Wider Range of Courses Now Available

26 STUDENTS IN '43

From an institution whose educational emphasis lay solely on classics, English and mathematics, the University of Toronto has over the years developed into a body whose academic roster includes practically every known field of study. Related to this, both as cause and effect, has been a great numerical expansion of the student body and a resulting increase in staff.

Twenty-six students signed the roll in June, 1827, and commenced academic work. There was a prescribed amount of "fixed" work which every student had to take, and in addition, those who were trying for honours and special distinctions were called upon to take extra work. As the curriculum changed through the years, the distinction between Honour and Pass courses emerged, based on this early demarcation between "fixed" and extra work. The Pass course consisted of a curriculum of a varied and general nature, while the Honour courses were highly specialized.

From about 1877 on there was apparent a growing tendency to take into consideration class-work as well as examination results, and all students in scientific courses were soon required to have certificates of laboratory work. In 1892 provision was made in all Pass courses for taking into consideration reports from the instructor on the students' term work. This led to a greater emphasis on essay-writing which now forms the major part of the term work in such courses as history, English and Political Science.

In the 1880's the ever-increasing world emphasis on Science was gaining recognition in the university with the establishment of laboratory facilities. Sir Daniel Wilson, president of the university, reported in 1887 that "the Physical Laboratory has been furnished with a valuable collection of apparatus for instruction in Mechanics, Acoustics, Light and Heat."

During the summer of 1889 the American Association for the Advancement of Science held its conference at the university and it gave a considerable impetus to scientific development here. At Convocation that fall Sir Daniel Wilson commented upon the meeting and went on to say: "The long felt need of adequately furnished and equipped laboratories and lectures rooms for our scientific staff was anew brought into prominence by the restoration to the University of its Medical Faculty; and we now enter upon the work of another year provided with buildings admirably adapted for biological and physical study and research. Plans have been approved of, which when carried out to their full extent,

Time and progress have wrought great physical as well as academic changes on the campus. Shown above are five buildings which contribute much to the architectural beauty of the university. Hart House. In the centre Convocation Hall, on the style of the Pantheon in Rome, is pictured. Knox College is shown on the lower right while on the left is University Library.

King's College Charter Leads to Federation Act

The Royal Charter granted to King's College in 1827 inaugurated a long period of discussion among the educationists and politicians of this Province; for sixty years the far-sighted visionaries hoped and laboured for the realization of a great federated university at Toronto. These years of anticipation came to an end in 1887 when the University Federation Act afforded a substantial basis for the constitution of the University of Toronto as we know it today.

This Act naturally had its defects, which have since been remedied, yet its salient features apply to the University even today. The University was primarily a body to confer degrees. The colleges, when they entered the federation, forfeited this right except in Divinity. The University also undertook instruction in those subjects not suited to the colleges, such as the Sciences, Psychology, Mathematics, Italian, Spanish, etc. The University Faculties and University College are supported by public monies; the colleges have private means.

By 1890 there was well under way a period of unprecedented activity in university circles which shows no signs of coming to a close even today. At that time the University was composed of the University Faculties of Arts and Medicine, University College, Victoria College and St. Michael's College (which offered instruction in both Arts and Divinity) and the strictly theological colleges, Knox and Wycliffe. It was hoped that Victoria and St. Michael's would relinquish their teaching in Arts so that the University would revert to its status of 1853, a single Arts College with affiliated theological colleges. However, the interest and activity in Arts made this impossible.

Women Absent From University Halls Until 1885

Could Write Examinations But Barred From Classes To Avoid "Excitement"

Women Winning Scholarships Were Unable to Hold Their Awards Because of Ruling; Violent Opposition to Co-Education until Order-in-Council was Passed by Provincial Legislature in October, 1884

SIR DANIEL WILSON OPPOSED MEASURE

For students of the present generation it is sometimes difficult to believe that a little over a half-century ago there were no women at the university. Not until February, 1885, did a woman student enter these academic halls as an undergraduate in regular attendance for it was felt that the dangers implicit for each sex were far too great.

Co-education, in the opinion of one principal, "would add other excitements to that attendant on the pursuit of knowledge."

The story of the struggle for co-education, and the arguments advanced on each side, can only be regarded as extremely humorous by modern students in a university whose halls and lecture-rooms are populated by almost three thousand women undergraduates, and where women share in student government equally with men.

Women Demand Admission

In the late 1870's the demand for increased facilities for the higher education of women was becoming more and more vociferous throughout the province. Earlier women had been admitted to examinations but they had not been allowed to take courses of instruction at the university. In 1877 the Senate of the university had established the Local Examinations for Women which were actually matriculation examinations. Many women were passing these examinations, although they could not come on to university, and in 1879 a young lady from Hamilton Collegiate Institute greatly embarrassed all concerned by winning the matriculation scholarship in Modern Languages. She was, of course, unable to hold it due to regulations. In 1881, however, a resolution was passed throwing scholarship competition open to women, regardless of attendance.

Applications for admission of women to University College as undergraduates were becoming more numerous until in March, 1884, the Provincial Legislature passed a resolution which is vitally important in the history of co-education and which served to bring the whole matter into the public light. It read: "Inasmuch as the Senate of the Provincial University have for several years admitted women to the University examinations and class lists, and inasmuch as a considerable number of women have availed themselves of the privilege, but labour under the disadvantage of not having access to any institution which affords the tuition needed for the higher years of the course; in the opinion of this House, provision should be made for the admission of women into University College."

Many Objectors

This resolution called forth a host of objectors who would no doubt turn over an untold number of times in their hallowed graves if they could but catch a fleeting glimpse of the University College rotunda between lectures today. Sir Daniel Wilson, president of University College, responded to the resolution with a letter in which he outlined the differences between higher education for women on one hand, and co-education on the other.

He stressed his sympathy with higher education for women and told of his work in founding the Toronto Ladies'

Educational Association some fifteen years previous. On October 22, 1869, Sir Daniel said: "We meet today for the purpose of inaugurating a movement which aims at securing for ladies facilities for training in the highest departments of mental culture, in some degree corresponding to those available for young men." During the succeeding years he delivered many lectures to young women on the same subjects given to men at University College, and other professors on the staff gave lecture-courses in their own subjects.

However, this was not co-education. There Sir Daniel and the fellow members of the staff drew the line. "It can scarcely be necessary to point out the essential difference between admitting women to university examinations and their entering as fellow-students with the young men in University College," he wrote.

"Danger to Discipline"

In the Legislature a member spoke about the situation at the university: "The question arose, 'Why were women equally with the male sex not to enjoy the same facilities for obtaining higher education?' The college through its council had said, 'We sympathize with these young ladies; we think they should have all the advantages of higher education; we are willing to do that which lies within our power to confer on them these advantages; but they must not enter the precincts of University College, because we think that due order and discipline would thereby be endangered.'"

Sir Daniel commented on this by saying that due order and discipline did not mean the prevention of riots. "What-ever is calculated to divert the student's mind from systematic devotion to the studies required of him is incompatible with due order and discipline," he said. The presence of women in lecture-rooms and around the campus would not be conducive to concentrated study, it was maintained. From the women's standpoint, a lady principal of Girton College was also opposed to the principle, and stated: "I should expect co-education, at the age suitable for college life, to have a distracting effect on the minds of young women at any rate. I have not considered the subject as it regards the young men. I should think it would add other excitements to that attendant on the pursuit of knowledge."

Women Suffer Most

"The remark made to me recently," said Sir Daniel, "by a gentleman of long experience as the Principal of a Collegiate Institute was that I 'need not fear so much for the young men. It is the young women who suffer most from co-education.' Looking to the illustrations to which I have referred, and even to the extent to which boys and girls are kept apart in our best organized city schools, I may be permitted to protest against the statement that co-education is recognized throughout the educational system of Ontario as in all respects preferable; and to smile at the complacent assumption that I and others who have questioned the wisdom of bringing young men and women together at the most critical period of their lives, in all the attractive relations of undergraduate rivalry, are the mere representatives of antiquated prejudice."

The example of Oberlin College, first co-educational institution of higher learning in the United States is pointed out. There, out of eighty-five women graduates, only twenty-three, and all of those among the youngest, remained unmarried in 1884. The president of Oberlin deals with the subject thus: "Will not the young people form such acquaintances as will result, during the course of their study, or after they leave school, in matrimonial engagements? Undoubtedly they will; and if this is a fatal objection, the system must be pronounced a failure. The majority of young people form such acquaintances between the ages of sixteen and twenty-four, and these are the years devoted to a course of study. It would be a most unnatural state of things if such acquaintances should not be made in a school where young men and young women are gathered together in large numbers; nor is it to be expected that marriage engagements will not be formed more or less frequently. Now and then it may occur that parties will seem to have left school for the purpose of consummating such an engagement." Or says Sir Daniel Wilson, "have abandoned their studies, and left the college to be married!"

"Shrink from Co-education"

Sir Daniel was sure that the women would not respond to the new system in any great number, but that they would shrink from the incidents inevitable to their intermingling with a large body of male students." Furthermore, he says, "I have the assurance of many ladies that they will not attend lectures; and of others of mature years that they would not entertain the idea of their daughters entering as students, at a college where they must be thrown into more or less familiar intercourse with between three and four hundred young men. I have also the assurance of parents that they will hesitate to send their sons to a college where they are thrown into such intimate relations, as fellow-students, with strangers of the other sex."

Despite these and other demonstrations of opposition, the fight for co-education was finally won on October 1, 1884, when an Order-in-Council was passed to give effect to the original resolution in the Legislature. By February of the following year eleven women, one of whom soon dropped out, entered University College as regular undergraduates. By the turn of the century their numbers had passed the two hundred mark, and is now upwards of 2500.

King's College Opening Curtailed By Educationalists' Disputes

to cancel the charter and grant another more generally acceptable. As a result the Council of King's College was requested to surrender the charter and the endowment. The Council refused, but offered certain concessions; even so, however, control would have been vested with the Church of England. In 1835 the government in England tactfully refused to take any further part in the matter, considering it "needless interference in the internal affairs of the province." In 1837 the question was referred to a committee. Under Dr. Strachan's influence a new basis of the divinity staff would still have been Anglican.

In 1839 it was decided to go ahead with King's College in spite of opposition. A shortage of funds was discovered, due to incompetency, though not dishonesty on the part of the bursar. Under diligent management the annual income was increased by $39,000 between 1839 and 1842. Consequently the corner-stone of the College was laid by Sir Charles Bagot, Governor-General of the United Canada, where the Parliament Buildings now stand, on the twenty-third of April, 1842. As the Provincial Government had been transferred to Kingston, the first classes were held in the old Parliament Buildings on Front Street. After sixteen years of uncertainty classes were begun on June 8, 1843, with six professors and twenty-six students.

University Curriculum Includes Courses in All Branches of Study

will furnish equally satisfactory accommodation for departments of Botany, Chemistry, Geology and Palaeontology, along with laboratories, workrooms, museums and other requisites for efficient instruction in the various branches of science."

Twenty-six students signed the first roll, and in 1853 the teaching staff numbered ten. Those numbers rolled on like giant snowballs until today the student registration is close to eight thousand and the total staff numbers over a thousand. Surveys reveal that the teaching load per teacher is heavy, unduly heavy in some cases, especially where other activities not essentially academic create demands on time. As the late Lord Tweedsmuir once said: "A university has two plain duties. It has to transmit knowledge and to advance knowledge." These two duties the University of Toronto is discharging to the best of its ability, and its development through the years is well illustrative of this truth.

University Act of 1906 Introduced Organic Unity Into Varsity Constitution

Royal Commission, Including J. W. Flavelle, H. J. Cody, Goldwin Smith, D. B. Macdonald, Brings Down Report which Leads to Act; Government is Termed "Mass of Perplexities and Anomalies"

ESTABLISHES SENATE, CAPUT

The attempt to introduce an organic unity into a confused structure whose history had been one of successive additions, disputes, divisions and reorganizations, culminated in 1906 with the University Act which gives the University of Toronto its present constitution and administration.

The 1906 Act stemmed from the report of a Royal Commission appointed to investigate university affairs, headed by J. W. Flavelle and including among its six members H. J. Cody, now president of the university, Goldwin Smith, and D. Bruce Macdonald, present chairman of the Board of Governors. The scheme of university government then in existence presented "a mass of perplexities and anomalies," with inefficiency and abuses springing from divided internal control, overlapping powers, excessive political party in academic matters, and insufficient revenue.

Thorough Investigation

The terms of reference given the Commission were broad, and the resulting investigation was wide in scope. The Commission was asked to inquire into and report on:

1. A scheme for the management and government of the University of Toronto in the room and stead of the one under which the said University is now managed and governed.
2. A scheme for the management and government of University College, including its relations to and connection with the said University of Toronto.
3. The advisability of the incorporation of the School of Practical Science with the University of Toronto.
4. Such changes as, in the opinion of the Commissioners, should be brought about in the relations between the said University of Toronto and the several colleges affiliated or federated therewith, having regard to the provisions of the Federation Act.
5. Such suggestions and recommendations in connection with or arising out of any of the subjects thus indicated as in the opinion of the Commissioners may be desirable.

Seventy-seven meetings were held, trips were made to some of the larger American universities, and volumes of testimony were received from experts. Many alumni were invited to submit their opinions on the proposed reorganization.

Present System Resulted

The present basis was thus set up following the Commission's proposals and aims at dividing the administration of the university between the Board of Governors, who will possess general oversight and financial control (formerly exercised directly by the State), and the Senate, with the Faculty Councils, which will direct academic work and policy. The whole administrative machinery rests upon these two executive arms, and their respective spheres of action are clearly defined. The connecting bond between those two is the President of the university.

Under the system set up in 1906 and still existing, the Crown has but one responsibility, the appointment of the members of the Board of Governors. Once those are selected, the Provincial government has no further voice in university matters, except that its sanction is needed for any Board expenditure which might impair the university endowment, and it requires auditing of accounts and an annual report.

Board of Governors Set Up

The Board, consisting of the Chancellor and the President, ex-officio, and twenty-two persons named by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council, has the power of appointing and removing the president and, upon recommendation or nomination of the President, all staff members of the university or University College. It is largely an unacademic body, for none of its members may be on the staff of the university or its affiliated colleges and faculties. One of its functions is that of court of appeal for students dissatisfied with decisions of other academic bodies, and it may also veto decisions of the Senate. With it are vested "the government, conduct, management, and control of the University and University College and of the property, revenues, business and affairs thereof."

The Senate establishes courses and conducts examinations, affiliates colleges, decides on petitions from students, and makes recommendations on all matters touching the welfare of the university to the Board of Governors. Its membership consists of four classes: ex-officio members, faculty members, appointed members, and elected members.

Caput is Disciplinary Body

A new body, the Caput, was set up by the 1906 Act to act as a general disciplinary body over the students where more than one college or faculty is concerned, or in any cases outside the jurisdiction of the individual colleges. The Caput is composed of the president and the heads of the colleges and faculties.

By the Act the separate School of Practical Science was united with the university as the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering. It was thus brought under the control of the president, the Board and the Senate, and it was financially supported by the university rather than by direct legislative grants.

Thus, more than a century after the dream of a great provincial university took shape in the mind of John Graves Simcoe, the University of Toronto as we know it today, except for several minor changes, was constituted by the University Act of 1906.

Hart House Ideal is Common Fellowship of Men

Enrichment of Life Was Fundamental Aim Of Hart House Founders

Spurred by the Lack of Accommodation for Men's Extra-Curricular Activities, Undergraduate Vincent Massey Conceived Idea of Hart House, and Building was Erected in Memory of His Grandfather

STARTED IN 1911 AND COMPLETED DURING WAR

Hart House was named in memory of the late Hart Massey of Toronto by his Executors who donated the building to the University. In 1909 the Hon. Vincent Massey, then an undergraduate, was impressed by the lack of accommodation for extra-curricular activities of students in the university and in 1910 his father, Mr. Chester Massey, on behalf of the executors of his grandfather, Mr. Hart Massey, offered to erect a building to serve the purpose of a students' union and to replace the then existing gymnasium and the university Y.M.C.A. The former occupied a site south of Wycliffe College and the latter stood midway between the site of the present Hygiene and Electrical buildings. Mr. Chester Massey's offer was accepted by the Governors of the University and construction was commenced in 1911 on the site of the old gymnasium and the ground extending to the east across the old bed of the "Taddle". The original plan included a gymnasium, club rooms and a Gothic hall, arranged in a three sided square. From that original plan the conception of the present structure gradually evolved, a conception which was due to the Hon. Vincent Massey with the architects, the late Mr. Henry Sproatt and Mr. Ernest Rolph, created Hart House in its final form and who personally supervised every detail of its construction.

Used for Drill in 1914

As the building progressed a rifle-range, guest rooms and warden's quarters were incorporated and by August, 1914, at the outbreak of the Great War, it had reached the stage of finished walls and completed roof. During the war-period, building operations, while they did not cease, were brought as nearly as possible to a standstill. Hart House, in this unfinished state, was never the less used for military purposes. Drills were held in the Great Hall and the theatre was a rifle range for a school of musketry under the command of Major Vincent Massey. Other parts of the House were used as lecture rooms by the Canadian Officers' Training Corps. When a branch of the Royal Flying Corps was established in Canada a number of aeroplanes were set up for that unit in the gymnasium. During the latter part of the war, and for some time after the Armistice, a large portion of the building was used by the Medical Services for the care of war casualties. Among many reminders of its early use for military purposes, the devices of various units which occupied Hart House during the period of the Great War are carved on the bay over the Map Room on the south façade of the building.

The halt in building operations during the war made possible the development of many new ideas which were ultimately incorporated in the structure of the House, an accomplishment which would have been impossible had building operations been continuous and

Sergeant-Major, Familiar Figure, Retires After Twenty-One Years

In June, 1940, the Great Hall was the scene of a presentation to Sergeant-Major Camm on his retirement from the staff of Hart House after twenty-one years of service, during which he became a friend of thousands of Varsity students.

The Sergeant-Major's connection with Hart House commenced in 1917 when he was appointed instructor in the School of Musketry operating in what is now the Theatre. Two years later when the House was opened to students he received the appointment of Houseman.

The Sergeant-Major was born in the fen country of Lincolnshire and came to Canada in 1896. He served with the rapid. Among these were the theatre, the Faculty Union, the Chapel and the Art Gallery (originally the Sketch Room).

Building Resumed After War

Building was resumed immediately following the Armistice, and every effort was made to complete it in time for the opening of the University term in the fall of 1919. For the difficult task of furnishing the House, Mr. Massey was fortunate in having the assistance of his wife who has always taken the keenest interest in the House. Mr. and Mrs. Massey were greatly concerned that the building should have beauty and distinction but they had no desire to add an atmosphere of luxury. They saw Hart House, under the guidance of its Warden, as not merely a conventional men's union but as something of far greater significance, a unifying force, bringing together into one body the constituent parts of the University, students, faculty and graduates for the intellectual benefits to be derived from intercourse and for the fostering of that lasting loyalty which is essential to the welfare of any seat of learning.

Hart House was opened to students at the beginning of the Michaelmas term of 1919. By November 11, the date of the formal opening, the various rooms were sufficiently complete for general use. In the presence of a large gathering Mr. Massey gave the dedicatory address, extracts from which appear elsewhere in this issue. During the first year, in spite of a certain amount of disorder due to the carrying on of all kinds of work, the building was practically in full use.

Committee System Organized

Two years before the actual opening a committee had been formed to give careful consideration to the plan for administration and the system now in force conforms in general to the original sketch: the Warden was to be entrusted with the general supervision, assisted by a number of committees: the governing body of the House was to be a Board of Stewards, the Warden being ex-officio Chairman. The first meeting of the Stewards took place on 21st April, 1919. Provision was made for the election of standing and special committees and at the beginning of the fall term the Finance, House, Hall, Library, Music and Graduate Committees were set up. All of these, with the exception of the Hall Committee (now

FOUNDER'S PRAYER

"The Prayer of the Founders is that Hart House, under the guidance of its Warden, may serve in the generations to come the highest interests of this University by drawing into a common fellowship the members of the several Colleges and Faculties, and by gathering into a true society the teacher and the student, the graduate and the undergraduate; further, that the members of Hart House may discover within its walls the true education that is to be found in good fellowship, in friendly disputation and debate, in the conversation of wise and earnest men, in music, pictures and the play, in the casual book, in sports and games and the mastery of the body; and lastly, that just as in the days of war this House was devoted to the training in arms of the young soldier, so in the time of peace its halls may be dedicated to the task of arming youth with strength and suppleness of limb, with clarity of mind and depth of understanding, and with a spirit of true religion and high endeavour."

REVELATION OF ORIGINS GIVEN BY MASSEY SPEECH

The following excerpts from the address by the Hon. Vincent Massey, Chairman of the Massey Foundation, on the occasion of the formal opening of Hart House on 11th November, 1919, by His Excellency the Duke of Devonshire, K.G., gives a clear insight into the origins of the building and the place it was designed to fill in the life of this great University.

"The project of Hart House was conceived in 1910, when it became evident that the Young Men's Christian Association stood in need of better rooms and that the Undergraduate body required quarters in the nature of a club. 'To meet these needs the Executors of the Estate of Mr. Hart Massey, of Toronto, offered to give to the University a building which would serve as a Memorial to the founder of the trust, and bear his name. This offer was accepted and construction commenced in 1911.

"Owing to the war, Hart House developed slowly, but the pause in its of Toronto, teachers as well as undergraduates, but that it may help to bridge the gulf of time and space which too often separates the graduate from his University. Here will be a place where the present and the past generations may meet.

"It is a source of profound gratification, Sir, to anyone associated with the years of the war, was able to make some contribution to the cause which, at the time, stood of paramount importance. Of those who passed through these schools there were many who, had erection gave an opportunity to widen its scope. It is perhaps not incorrect to say that the House as it now stands is intended to represent the sum of those activities of the student which lie outside the curriculum. These activities are not unimportant; indeed, I would submit, Sir, that the trust education requires that the discipline of the classroom should be generously supplemented by the enjoyment, in the fullest measure, of a common life. A common life, of course, pre-supposes common ground. At this University it happens that but a very small proportion of the students can enjoy the advantages of the community life provided by a college. It is perhaps unlikely that we shall ever see in Toronto a completely developed collegiate system. But even if this were the outcome, there would still be the need, indeed the greater need, for the unifying force which it is one purpose of this institution to introduce into the University.

"Hart House, in one sense, may be described as a Students' Club, but the purpose of the House is wider. It is greatly to be hoped that this place, from the many angles at which it touches the life of the student, will exert an influence of the most positive nature in giving him a real sense of membership in an academic family, and in making him conscious of a very noble tradition, which is his duty and his privilege to maintain.

"Furthermore, let us hope that not only will the House serve the interests of the active members of the University they returned, would have enriched the life of this place. We may remember them along with the great company to whose memory we do especial honour to-day.

"It is a very great pleasure to be able to pay some small tribute to the work of the Architects, Mr. Henry Sproatt and his colleague, Mr. Ernest Rolph. One finds it difficult to overstate the idealism and the devotion which both these gentlemen have applied to their task. Their object was the creation of a work of art in the true sense, but they never failed to strike that fine balance between beauty of design and utility of purpose, the achievement of which is one of the major problems of architecture. Their enthusiasm, energy and patience in this work have been unbroken.

"I would not forget, too, to refer to those individuals and firms who have sympathetically co-operated with the architects, and under their inspiration have produced the actual fabric. On the imaginative, as well as on the purely structural side, the execution of this work has been most painstaking and entirely conscientious.

"If the direction of the building was sincere, the workmanship has been no less so. It too often happens in these days that the pleasure of self-expression has passed from manual work. On this structure, due both to the length of the period during which it was in process, and to the nature of the work itself, it was possible to preserve something

"Collegiate Gothic" Is Architectural Style Embodied in Building

Recognized throughout the World as An Architectural Gem, Hart House was Developed in a Leisurely Manner by Its Architects Who Faced Great Problems in Combining Many Purposes into One Structure

STAMP OF PERSONALITY LEFT ON BUILDING

To some, Hart House is but a name, to others, just one of the university buildings, but to those familiar with its history, it is the realization of a dream and the embodiment of an ideal. There are those who admire its composition by daylight and many who delight to study its silhouette against the clear sky of a moonlit night but only those who are privileged to study its plan in relation to the exterior and to stroll from room to room, can possibly appreciate its splendid architectural qualities.

The architectural expression is what has been called "Collegiate Gothic", an adaptation of English Gothic to American educational and other institutional buildings. The architecture of Hart House is purer than much of the so-called "Collegiate Gothic", however, and it would therefore seem fitting to refer to it simply as "Perpendicular Gothic", the finest development of the Gothic manner of design. Credit Valley Rubble Stone in random ashlar pattern was chosen for the field of the exterior and Indiana Limestone for the trim. The textures of the hammer-faced rubble and smooth or machine-faced trim combine perfectly, each enhancing the quality of the other.

In contrast to the mad rush of present day planning and construction, Hart House developed in a leisurely manner. The architects (the late Dr. Henry Sproatt and Mr. Ernest Rolph) faced the perplexing and difficult problem of combining within one building, of pleasing composition, accommodation for a students' union, quarters for the university branch of the Y.M.C.A., an athletic department, and a dining hall. An analysis of the present layout will suffice to convince the most critical of the enormity of the task and the success of the architects' solution. The southwest portion was set aside for the students' union, the south for the Y.M.C.A. offices, the east end (flanking Queen's Park) for the dining room and its services, the north and north-west wings (because of their proximity to the back playing field and to the stadium) for the gymnasium and other athletic facilities.

From the turning of the first sod in 1911, the building had reached the stage of finished walls and completed roof by August of 1914. Operations were partly suspended during the war period and a number of alterations were made in the original plans. Among these were the Theatre, the Faculty Union, the Chapel and the Art Gallery. The Theatre, located under the quadrangle, was one of the most amazing pieces of design and planning in the whole building. In the beautiful foyer, the vaulted ceiling of the auditorium and the high stage, there is not the slightest suggestion of the subterranean position of this department. The gallery overlooking the Great Hall was converted into the Faculty Union dining-room. This change necessitated the construction of two new stairways, one from the Great Hall to the Faculty Common Room and one from the kitchens in the basement to the Faculty serving-room. The stone enclosures of these stairs, each representing a mediaeval tower, came as a surprise to those trained in Classical Architecture but are proof of the genius of the late Dr. Sproatt and his intimate knowledge and appreciation of the style in which he was working.

Noteworthy in the design of the House is the long unbroken roof of the south wing, with its four multiple chimneys, which gives a feeling of repose to the whole composition. In this regard it is interesting to note in the design of Hart House a sense of symmetry seldom found in work of this architectural style. True it is that much of other good Gothic work has what might be called asymmetric balance but in this building, as in the Victoria College residences and other buildings by the same designers, the balance in some elevations has been carried almost to the point of Classical symmetry.

Architectural features worthy of mention are almost without number. The vaulted ceiling of the Faculty Union dining-room, the vistas of the long corridors, the vaulted ceiling of the hallway at the hall porter's desk, timbered ceilings of the Debates Room, Faculty Lounge and Music Room, and the two cantilevered stone stairs to the third floor are all worthy of study. The view of the quadrangle through the windows of the lower gallery is one which will not quickly be forgotten. Special attention should be given to the Great Hall, with its beautiful proportions and decorated windows, its carved hammer beam trusses and oak dado. The coats of arms (the work of Mr. A. Scott Carter) so colourful in paint and gesso and the frieze of painted letters below the dado cap, add life and atmosphere to the room. The corbels of the roof trusses were for the most part creations of the imagination of an

Sixteen Hundred Famous Folk Leave Their Scrawl on Guest Book

The guest book of Hart House is a record of the names of the many distinguished men and women who have visited the House during the 21 years of its existence. Royalty, Governors-general, Lieutenant-governors, musicians, and men of science have inspected the House, dined in the Great Hall, been present at special functions or occupied the guest rooms. The book contains the signatures of almost 1600 people. In May 1939 when Their Majesties King George and Queen Elizabeth had lunch in the Great Hall they spent a few moments in the map room and added their names to those who have put their signatures in the Hart House guest book. It contains the name of the Duke of Kent and that of the Duke of Windsor who as Prince of Wales visited Hart House. The great explorers Vilhjalmur Stefansson and Fridtjof Nansen have recorded their names. Great soldiers and sailors of both the last and the present war, Lord Alenby, Earl Beatty, Lord Baden-Powell, General Smuts, Admiral Sir Howard Kelly, and General McNaughton, have set their signatures in the book. Among men of letters who have inscribed their names are Bertrand Russell, Julian Huxley, Christopher Morley, John Masfield, John Drinkwater, Bliss Carman, Andre Maurois and Thomas Mann. The list of statesmen and ambassadors includes Earl Baldwin, The Rt. Hon. Neville Chamberlain, Sir Stafford Cripps, The Rt. Hon. Alfred Duff Cooper, Lord Lothian, Lord Halifax and Mr. Edouard Herriot. From widely different parts of the world have come representatives of music, art and drama, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, George Arliss, Horatio Walker, Paul Robeson, Jan Kiepura, and Percy Grainger. In the field of religion are Sir Wilfred Grenfell, Cardinal Villeneuve and Dr. Toyohiko Kagawa, and in the field of medicine Sir Frederick Banting and Lord Dawson of Penn. Lord Byng, Governor General of Canada in the early days of the House, and Lord Tweedsmuir have signed the book.

Hart House Once Predicted as "White Elephant"

Used to Capacity by All, House Fulfilled Role Tho' Alterations Needed

With Great Growth in Membership, There Arose a Pressing Need for Additional Accommodation and Facilities. Kitchens had to be Expanded and Steamshovel was Employed to Make Huge Excavation East of Great Hall

ORIGINAL ARCHITECTS MADE ALTERATIONS

The late Henry Sproatt, one of the architects of Hart House and a frequent visitor to the High Table, on one occasion told some of the undergraduates present that during the building of Hart House certain of his acquaintances had informed him of their regret that he should be associated with something which in their opinion would prove to be the greatest "white elephant" ever built in Toronto. It was with considerable pleasure, therefore, that Mr. Sproatt and his partner, Mr. Rolph, on their occasional visits to the House found that every part of it was being used to capacity. Greater still was their pleasure to be called a few years after the opening of the House to consult on needed additions due to the ever increasing use of the House. The firm of Sproatt and Rolph gave generously of their time and architectural skill when the pressing need for additional accommodation arose.

In the case of most of the structural changes to Hart House, the whole of the cost has been generously borne by the Massey Foundation. In other cases the major part of the cost has been borne by the Foundation and the remainder by the funds of the House. Endless hours of planning have been spent by various committees of the House to provide additional facilities for members. From Mr. Vincent Massey the committees have been given continuous encouragement and the means to convert their plans into actualities.

An outline of some of these changes may be of interest to members:

Kitchens

By the year 1930 the staff of the Dining Hall Department were endeavouring to prepare and serve meals in an area and with equipment designed for one-quarter the number then being served. Such an overload had naturally worn out equipment earlier than would usually be the case. Efficient service had become impossible and accidents to staff numerous. Plans for a completely new kitchen and service wing were prepared. All that part of the original building which lay to the east of the Great Hall was demolished and a steam shovel soon prepared a deep foundation for the new wing. In this new area were provided large store-rooms, two large elevators, a dumb-waiter, a new service with modern stainless steel equipment, a new dish-washing room, adequate ventilation with hoods over all steam tables and enlarged administrative offices for the Dining Hall Department. Two large receiving platforms were installed adjacent to the elevators and the whole area enlarged to meet the needs of the large number being served.

Faculty Union

At a later date the House was again enabled by the generosity of the Massey Foundation to completely re-build the services attached to the Faculty Union Dining-Room and the Graduate Dining-Room. The equipment in both these services, as in the case of the Great Hall service, was made of stainless steel. New refrigerators, steam tables, coffee and hot water urns were installed and Terrazzo flooring, easily kept clean, all enabled a better standard of service to be given in these dining-rooms.

Theatre Rehearsal Rooms

The second major addition to the House since its commencement was the creation of a theatre rehearsal area. The Theatre was beset with difficulties in rehearsing plays with the stage in constant use. There was also a very considerable lack of adequate storage space for stage properties. Edgar Stone, then director of the Theatre, was interested in the development of plays to be put on the air. But no sound-proof rooms were available for such a purpose. The need for additional space was urgent. It was found after some investigation that the walls of the Great Hall had been carried down to

At the far end of the hall is the High Table, for the use of visiting dignitaries, members of the Students' Administrative Council and Hart House Committeemen. The entrance to the kitchen is at the left, the university crests are on the panels at both ends, and the inscription from Milton's "Areopagitica" can be seen as a dark strip above the panelling.

Enrichment of Life Was Founder's Aim

Camera Rooms

The same method of downward expansion as was used in the Theatre became necessary to create additional space for the Camera Club. This Club, under the guidance of Professor A. F. Coventry, the chairman, designed new dark rooms and a large work bench with washing sinks. The committee were enabled by this enlargement to accept double the membership in the Camera Club.

Tuck Shop

The Tuck Shop has undergone one of the greatest changes in the House. It commenced as a small counter in the Barber Shop, later being moved to what is now the print room of the Art Gallery. At a still later date it was moved to its present site at the end of the Billiard Room corridor. Since its removal to its new location it has undergone continuous expansion by taking in successively four store-rooms adjacent to the shop. These rooms were plastered, decorated and furnished with chairs and small tables. Enlargement was also necessary to the store-rooms behind the shop in which large quantities of cigarettes, chocolate bars, bottled drinks, gymnasium supplies and the many articles sold by the Tuck Shop are stored.

Warden's Sitting-Room

Two major additions to the accommodation in the House on the third floor were created from what were originally lofts for skylights which lighted the two stairways on the south side of the House. By cutting doorways, plastering and panelling these areas, cutting windows through stone walls three feet thick and lowering sections of the roof, two beautiful rooms were created. The Warden's Sitting-Room is known to hundreds of graduates and undergraduates who have been entertained there by him. The new Faculty Sitting-Room gave much needed additional accommodation to the members of the Faculty Union.

Students' Council Offices

The expanding needs of the Students' Administrative Council made it necessary that more office accommodation be provided for that body. By rearranging space at the Hall Porter's Desk, shifting the office of the houseman to this rearranged area, the general office of the S.A.C. was doubled. This necessitated the abandonment of the dumb-waiter that formerly served the south side of the House.

Alterations to Existing Areas

Alterations to the House which did incorporated in the House Committee) have continued to the present day.

Walter F. Bowles, a graduate of Victoria College, who had served in the Great War, was appointed Warden and much credit is due to him for the early organization of the House. He was faced with a tremendous task and the problems were many and varied. Not only had a staff to be assembled and their duties allocated but the committees had to be set to work. For the first time in the history of the University there was a centrally placed building for the use of men of all faculties and colleges. Its opening coincided with a sudden increase in registration as, in addition to a normal freshman enrolment, many men resumed studies which had been interrupted by the war. Appreciation of the privileges offered by the House grew and during the first year it was constantly in use. Meetings and smokers were held, plays performed in the theatre, meals served in the Great Hall and there were a number of dances. In 1920-1921 the Camera, Sketch, Billiard and Squash Raquets Committees were formed and an ever increasing demand was made on the facilities of the House. At this time the Hart House Masquerade (predecessor of the All University Fall Dance) was inaugurated. A part of the proceeds of this function was used to purchase a picture for the House and as the years passed this became a tradition. These pictures, together with those presented each year since 1922 by the entire Graduating Class of the University, formed the basis of the Hart House collection which has come to be recognized as one of the finest and most representative of Canadian paintings in existence.

Bickersteth Appointed in '21

In 1921 the present Warden, J. Burgon Bickersteth, took over the administration of the House. Born and educated in England, he spent a number of years in the Canadian West and after serving in the Great War, accepted a post at the University of Alberta. From there he came to Hart House.

The next ten years was a period of great development. Annual elections for undergraduate representation on the various committees were instituted and the committees assumed greater responsibility.

During the period 1922-1924 Mr. J. R. Gille, a graduate of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering, joined the staff in the capacity of Comptroller; the series of Sunday Evening Concerts, made possible by the generosity of outstanding musicians of the city was begun; the first "Warden's Christmas Dinner" was held and the first annual exhibition by the Camera Club was inaugurated. Arrangements were made for members to introduce their friends on the last Sunday of each month, now known as "Visitors' Days". Out of a number of fireside sing-songs, held on Sunday evenings in the Music Room, grew the Sunday Evening Songsters, directed by Mr. J. Campbell-McInnes and the weekly noon-hour sing-songs on Fridays directed then and ever since by Mr. Ross Workman. The first sketch classes were held under Mr. F. H. Varley, director, and the first debate in the House along the parliamentary system was instituted by an informal committee. The tuck shop was opened and soon outgrew its quarters. During this period the Great Hall served as many as 1,600 regular meals in one day not to mention a great many special luncheons and dinners, among which was the dinner in November, 1923, in honour of the Nobel Prize winners, Dr. Frederick Banting and Professor J. J. R. MacLeod.

Undergrad Membership Grows

Undergraduate membership increased steadily year by year, from approximately 3,000 in 1919 to 4,000 in 1930. In the six years between 1924 and 1930 the Sunday Evening Concerts were supplemented by the popular Friday Recitals. Hart House owes a great debt to the many musicians who have given these concerts and recitals gratuitously in order that its members may become familiar with the world's finest music. The Songsters became a regular event and attracted large numbers of members who came to sing and to learn about folk songs. Bi-monthly exhibitions of contemporary art were arranged in the Sketch Room and as time went on numerous requests were received from artists who desired to show their work; the Print Fund was established through contributions from friends of the House and accommodation was arranged in the little Sketch Room for periodic exhibitions of prints. Debates became monthly affairs and the Debates Room was often packed to the doors. From time to time distinguished hon. visitors were present at these debates, on two occasions a Prime Minister of the Dominion taking part. From the earliest days there has been close association with the Student Christian Movement (which took over the work of the University Y.M.C.A.) and under the direction of the Rev. F. J. Moore, who was appointed General Secretary in 1925-1926, the Movement became more

Dignified Great Hall Is Feeding Ground For Hungry Undergrads

Hundreds Daily Eat Their Three Meals There, Many Unaware of Inscription from Milton which Circles Walls

ROOF OF OAK TIMBERS

The Great Hall of Hart House is recognized as one of the finest dining halls possessed by any university in the world. Since the opening of the House in 1919 it has been the daily meeting place of hundreds of undergraduates, and the scene of a great number of those social functions which are identified with the academic year.

Executed in the Gothic style it is a room of great dignity. The open-timbered roof and the dado are of oak and the floor paved with travertine marble from Italy. The windows are beautifully proportioned and decorated. The great window to the south bears the arms of those men who have played a prominent part in the history of the University and those to the east contain small designs symbolic of various games and some of the faculties and colleges, together with certain monograms. A bond with other universities in the world is established by the many-coloured panels at either end of the room. Those on the south wall bear the arms of the Royal Family and of 51 universities in the British Empire, those to the north the arms of seventy-four universities of nations allied with Britain during the first Great War.

The inscription, which runs completely round the Hall, is taken from Milton's "Areopagitica" written in 1644 in defence of the freedom of unlicensed printing. Mr. and Mrs. Massey felt that this passage had a peculiar appropriateness in view of Canada's relation to the Great War. The selection received an unexpected confirmation one day in a remark made by the painter engaged in the lettering. Milton's prose and its significance made such an impression on him that he was heard to say "This sort of makes you think of Canada with the war on."

Originally, benches were used with the refectory tables in the body of the Hall. These gave way in 1935 to the greater comfort of the present chairs, upholstered in red leather, a gift of the Massey Foundation.

One of the most interesting features is the High Table. Situated on the dais, it is for the use of members of Hart House committees and guests whom they may introduce. It provides an opportunity for representatives of all the faculties and colleges, undergraduate and senior, to meet in friendly discussion.

The Superintendent of the Great Hall, under the general direction of the Comptroller, is responsible for the administration of this department. The aim is to serve good food at reasonable prices. Not only is this dining-room open for regular meals (except on Sundays) but it has been the scene of many University functions. It would be impossible to recall them all, but it may be said that for the past 21 years the majority of the various faculties and colleges have celebrated their annual dinners under its roof. Three interesting Hart House gatherings are the annual dinner for Committees in October, in December the University Settlement Christmas Party and the Warden's Christmas Dinner for those students from many parts of the world who are unable to return home for the holiday. An important single event was the dinner in 1932 given in honour of Sir Robert Falconer, on the occasion of his retirement as President of the University, by the joint Student Administrative Councils. At the Warden's Birthday Party in January 1926, 550 men were assembled in the Great Hall and lower gallery. The Great Hall is also much in use for large dances, when as many as 3000 guests have been served. In the summer months it is used together with the quadrangle for garden parties and teas. Although primarily a dining-room, it is an ideal setting for the Sunday Evening Concerts.

Graduates Find Place In Hart House

Graduate Membership Helps Bridge "Gulf of Time and Space" between Past and Present

FEE REDUCED IN 1937

Mr. Massey in his speech delivered at the opening ceremony of Hart House on November 11, 1919, emphasized the value of graduate membership and expressed the hope "that not only will the House serve the interests of the active members of the University of Toronto, teachers as well as undergraduates, but that it may help to bridge the gulf of time and space which too often separates the graduate from his University. Here will be a place where present and past generations may meet, and here, let us hope, may be fostered the lasting loyalty and the 'esprit de corps' which are essential to the welfare of any seat of learning."

The Graduate Committee is responsible for the social and athletic activities of the senior members of Hart House (both faculty and graduate). The graduate dining-room and north common room come under its supervision. Monthly dinners are arranged and the committee provides for the comfort of senior members. It arranges gymnasium classes, badminton tournaments, golf instruction and other activities.

All graduates of the University of Toronto are eligible for graduate membership and also graduates of other universities who are proceeding to a graduate degree in the University of Toronto. Members of the Faculty Union are also eligible for "senior membership" in the House. Graduates living outside of Toronto may join as "non-resident" members for a nominal fee. In 1937 a special reduced fee was established for men joining during the first year after graduation.

One of the most interesting of graduate activities is the Graduates' Ball inaugurated on New Year's Eve 1925 and since held annually. It had its origin in the idea that just as each undergraduate faculty had the privilege of holding one formal dance a year in Hart House, graduate members should also have this privilege and might find it of advantage in developing a further spirit of corporate unity within the graduate body. This annual dance has developed from year to year and is now an established feature of graduate activities in the House.

Five years ago through the co-operation of Dr. Les Black and Dr. G. H. W. Lucas, Captain of the University of Toronto Rifle Association, the Hart House Revolver Club was formed. Practise shooting and competitions of various types are held in the rifle range and there has been a steady increase in interest and membership.

Through the generosity of the Massey Foundation the graduate serving room has, during the past two years, been completely re-equipped and the graduate dining-room has been renovated. This room is now one of the most attractive in the House. It is much appreciated by graduate members.

It is to be hoped that this brief account of the place which senior members have taken in Hart House may in some measure indicate their relation to the well-rounded scheme visualized by the Founders of Hart House and clearly expressed by Mr. Massey in his dedicatory speech.

Hart House's Most Distinguished Visitors

and more influential in undergraduate life. Members of the House also took an active interest in the University Settlement and in 1926-1927 were hosts to approximately 300 men and boys at the first annual Christmas party. In October, 1927, Hart House took an important part in the celebrations connected with the University Centenary. Many reunions were held within its walls, including the Undergraduate Centenary Ball and the Graduate Centenary Ball. Some 3,050 guests were present on the latter occasion, the largest function in the history of the House. In October, 1928, for the first time members of all committees, including Faculty, senior and undergraduate members, dined together in the Great Hall. This, as an annual event in October, has become one of the cherished traditions of the House. From time to time various conventions came to the University and Hart House provided accommodation which proved ideal for such gatherings. In 1930 alterations and enlargements were effected in the kitchen department, the serving room adjoining the Great Hall having long been inadequate for the steady increase in attendance. As the activities of the House branched out in all directions the burden of administration increased and in 1927 Mr. W. R. Cowan, a graduate of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering, was appointed to the staff as Assistant Comptroller.

Revenue Cut in Depression

At the beginning of the depression in 1930 it was not known how far Hart House would be affected but in point of fact registration increased until the year 1932-1933. The House was used as much as ever but there was nonetheless a reduction in revenue in all departments. The Hall Committee sought to assist the students in their financial straits by lowering the price of meals. Additional accommodation was also provided for those who wished to bring their lunch. All activities flourished and in 1933-1934 a glee club was formed under the direction of Mr. Ail B. Sly. The present conductor, Dr. Charles Peaker, took charge in the following year. The club made steady progress and adopted the name of the "Hart House Glee Club". In 1930-1931 Mr. H. S. Palmer succeeded Mr. F. S. Haines as director of the art classes, continuing in that capacity until 1937-1938. These classes were most popular and attracted large numbers. In 1933-1934 an arts and crafts group was formed and accommodation provided for their work and equipment. Mr. Carl Schaefer was engaged as instructor. In 1938-1939 Mr. Gordon Webber undertook the work of both classes and was succeeded in turn by Mr. Carl Schaefer and Mr. Caven Atkins. In 1934-1935, on the suggestion of members of the Library Committee, the first "library evening" was held. Members gathered informally around the fireplace in the library to listen to a short address by some well-known figure in the world of literature, which was followed by a discussion of their own leisure reading. Ample provision had been made by the Founders of the House for leisure reading by donation of a fund for the purchase of books. A collection of 1,000 volumes grew to 4,000 by 1937-38, including many special editions and private press printings given by friends of the House.

In 1930 the Rev. Leonard Dixon was appointed General Secretary of the Student Christian Movement and made an invaluable contribution during the years that he was in office. He was succeeded in 1934-1935 by Dr. W. C. Lockhart, under whose guidance the Movement developed still further. In 1931-1932 Mr. Edgar Stone became director of the theatre and a regular series of Hart House plays were produced. In 1933-1934 the first regional playoffs in the Canadian Drama Festival were held in the theatre, the award going to the Hart House group for a play called "Michael", directed by Mr. Stone. He resigned at the end of that year and was followed by Mr. Melville Key and later by Mrs. Nancy Pyper. Since 1937-1938 there has been no incumbent of this position.

Fame of House Spreads

In the years following 1930, much that was undefined and in an experimental stage in the early years of the House became settled and a matter of routine. Requests were continually being received from other universities for information regarding the House and it is interesting to note that those responsible for the erection of similar buildings at the University of London, the University of Paris, the University of Melbourne, as well as a number of universities in the United States have drawn on the experience of Hart House.

From the earliest days there has been a succession of distinguished visitors from many parts of the world, reaching a climax on 22nd May, 1939, when Their Majesties, King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, were guests of the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario and the Executive Council at a luncheon held in Hart House.

It would be impossible in the short space available to pay sufficient tribute to the Faculty and Senior members for the devoted service which they have rendered to the House. Some of these, however, must be specially mentioned: Professor M. A. Mackenzie, who occupied the Chair of the Finance Committee for 16 years until his retirement in 1934-1935. He was succeeded by the present Chairman, Professor V. E. Henderson, who has been a member of this committee since its inception. Professor Henderson was also a member of the first Board of Stewards and continued in that capacity for several years. Hart House has profited greatly by his wise counsel. A debt of gratitude is also due to Professor H. Wasteneys for his inspiration and vision as a Chairman of the Art Committee during its period of greatest development and for the contribution that he has made during his long years of service as a member of the Finance Committee and of the Board of Stewards. It was logical that he should be appointed Chairman of the Board of Stewards during the Warden's absence.

Visit of Their Majesties To University Campus Puts Great Hall to Test

Hart House Places Facilities at Disposal of Government for Entertainment of King George and Queen Elizabeth; Queen Reviews Toronto Scottish on Back Campus Prior to Luncheon

LUNCH IN 52½ MINUTES

The outstanding event of 1939 and the most memorable in the history of Hart House was the luncheon given in the Great Hall on Monday, May 22nd, in honour of Their Majesties by the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario and the Executive Council of Ontario. The use of the Great Hall was willingly granted to the Government for this purpose and the duty of the University and Hart House was to carry out the instructions of the Government Committee which was in charge of all plans for the royal visit to Toronto and to do their best to see that all arrangements were satisfactorily carried out.

Their Majesties arrived at Hart House at 1:10 p.m. by the south-west door. Except for the cluster of flags over the doors by which the King and Queen entered and left Hart House there were no other decorations, either inside or outside the House. His Majesty walked to Hart House from the Parliament buildings, the Queen joined him after just having reviewed the Toronto Scottish regiment, of which she is an Honorary Colonel, on the back campus. They were met by the President of the University, Mrs. Cody and the Warden of Hart House, J. B. Bickersteth, at the south-west door.

After signing the Visitor's Book in the Map Room the party, accompanied by the Lieutenant-Governor, Mrs. Albert Matthews and Mackenzie King, proceeded to the Great Hall by way of the quadrangle. His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario presided over the luncheon and proposed toasts to His Majesty the King and Her Majesty the Queen who sat on either side of him. With each toast the National Anthem was played.

The total number of guests was 479, each of the guests was admitted by a special card which he had to hold in his hand as he walked from Hoskin Avenue and Queen's Park Crescent to Hart House. There were no speeches at this great event. Music for the occasion was supplied by the band of the Seventh Toronto Regiment, Royal Canadian Artillery, which was stationed at the east end of the quadrangle. After a short rest Their Majesties with those in attendance left Hart House at 2:25 p.m. by the upper south-east door. Both the King and Queen gave frequent proof that they understood the idea underlying Hart House and expressed regret that lack of time made it impossible for them to make a thorough inspection of the building.

Man With the Phenomenal Memory Jack the Hall Porter Has Retired

Jack Warwick, known to members of Hart House in its early years as "Wingy" and to later generations as Jack, retired from the Hall Porter's Desk in 1940.

During the first Great War Jack enlisted with the 44th Battalion at Winnipeg. He was badly wounded at the second battle of Ypres and spent long months convalescing in hospitals in England.

Jack joined the staff of Hart House in October, 1919, as it opened to receive its first undergraduate members. His memory for names and faces, faculty and year, is amazing and old graduates have been surprised on re-visiting the House after long absences to hear Jack call their "number".

Jack is taking an interest in public affairs round about Richmond Hill. His mail from former members in various parts of the world continues to give him much pleasure. Those desiring to write him may address mail to either Richmond Hill Post Office or Hart House.

Whirl of Activities Greet Pleasure-Bound Students

Three Shades of Blonde

Co-ed Chorus Fraternities at University Features U.C. Follies Are in Healthy Position

The only production to boast a singing and dancing chorus of beautiful co-eds, the University College Follies now holds the centre spotlight among campus musical comedy extravaganzas.

In common with other traditional events at Varsity, the Follies has had an evolutionary history, starting as an informal evening of skits put on by each year and developing in successive stages until it is now a complete musical stage-show with chorus, orchestra, three main acts with entre-actes, and original songs written by U.C. students.

For many years the Follies consisted of skits, taking off professors, campus personalities and events. In the twenties it was moved to Hart House, and each individual year was assigned a certain room in which to present its entertainment. Dancing took place in other rooms, and of course, supper was served.

New and more grandiose ideas soon made themselves felt, and by 1934 their pressure was instrumental in collecting all the separate parts of the Follies and moving them into Great Hall under one roof. Saul Rae was producer of the Follies in that year, and to him must go much of the credit for making the show what it is today. From his brain originated the innovation of having one large unified presentation which would be given twice during the evening, and from him came the first high pressure publicity releases in connection with the Follies. Following in his tradition, producers have yearly strained their imaginations to invent new and startling adjectives to lure undergraduates to their shows.

That was the first year in which a female chorus tapped its way onto a Follies stage, and hints of the innovation aroused a high intensity of interest weeks before the production was to take place. With another masterpiece of publicity overstatement, Saul Rae proclaimed to the university public through The Varsity: "Earl Carroll's Vanities will look like amateur night at the Roxy compared to the U.C. Follies."

In the following year the Follies stage show moved downstairs to the theatre but the other attractions expanded in number and spread themselves into every nook and cranny of Hart House. Since then it has grown in size, although not always in quality. This year, however, it achieved the ultimate in recognition when School Nite, annual extravaganza produced by the engineers, advertised itself as "bigger and better than the U.C. Follies."

Fraternity System, not as Exclusive as in American Colleges, Enjoys Position of Importance in University Life

Although they do not fill the exclusive and perhaps over-emphasized role which they do in many American colleges, and more especially in the minds of Hollywood movie producers, nevertheless fraternities have come to play an important part in the university life of Varsity men and, more recently, women.

Statistics are difficult to procure in connection with fraternity membership but it is estimated that the 32 men's fraternities on the campus embrace almost a thousand men from all faculties. There are at present ten women's fraternities, drawing almost exclusively from University College, with a membership of slightly over three hundred.

No Official Recognition

Although the men's fraternities have never gained official recognition, and consequently have never been placed under university control, they have unofficial sanction and are recognized as playing an increasingly important and fruitful part in campus life. St. George street between Wilcocks and Bloor streets has become what might be called "Fraternity Row" with both men's and women's fraternity houses scattered along its length.

The houses themselves vary in size and accommodation, some having additions which enable them to accommodate as many as thirty boarders, while others can only handle ten or twelve. All of them are old houses, rich in Toronto history, and far removed from the palatial, specially-built scale of American fraternity houses. Separate houses for the women's fraternities are a fairly recent development, and at present only a few have been able to move out of apartments either to take separately a house or to share one with another fraternity.

Pan-Hellenic Organization

Women's fraternities at Toronto are unique in that they are not called "sororities" as are their counterparts south of the border. They are officially under university control, and have been organized into a Pan-Hellenic Association which lays down regulations concerning rushing, scholastic standing, and size. Rushing is not open, as it is with men's fraternities, but is confined to two weeks in January. Definite rules are enforced as to rushing procedure, and the amount of money which can be spent in this activity is limited by agreement.

With the men, rushing is open and at times cut-throat. It commences on the first day of term, but there are few fraternities who have not carried on "spring rushing" or have not made "contacts" during the summer months. When term opens, life becomes a bewildering whirl, the new freshman as he is swept into house after house for lunches, dinners, bridge games, movies, football games, and a myriad of other activities designed to give him a good time, and incidentally to show him what a great bunch of boys are in the particular fraternity which is his host.

First Fraternity in 1879

Almost all fraternities on the campus are local chapters of international organizations, although there are one or two purely local fraternities. The first fraternity founded on the campus was Zeta Psi which started in the United States in 1846 and took root here in 1879. Here on the campus is a Canadian chapter of the first secret social fraternity to be established on the North American continent, the Kappa Alpha Society, founded at Union College, Schenectady, in 1823. It was the second fraternity to spring up in Toronto, its local chapter being formed in 1892. Incidentally, the Kappa Alpha Society was the first fraternity to build its own house on the campus. It is still standing, at the corner of Hoskin Avenue and Devonshire Place, and is now used as the women's medical building. At the turn of the century there were only seven men's fraternities at Varsity, and only one women's society, Kappa Alpha Theta, founded in 1887, but the spread of fraternities after 1900 was rapid until today there are just under fifty in all.

Most of the fraternities carry on social service or charitable work on a small scale, but one fraternity, Beta Sigma Rho, does it expansively with an annual musical extravaganza presented on the stage of Hart House theatre. Each December, after weeks of hard work, the fraternity members present the show to the public on three successive nights.

Healthy Relation Exists

The position of fraternities within the university is an extremely healthy one, and there has rarely been any indication of friction between fraternity and non-fraternity students. It is conceded, of course, that fraternities require an extra financial expenditure by the individual student, but this is more than

"Coke Dates", Saddle Shoes or Formal, Movies, Woo, Dancing Still Remains Favorite Collegian Pastime

Campus Amusement Covers Wide Variety from Skating to Symphonies, with Movies Second Only to Dancing

MACDONALD'S A FAVORITE

Dancing has long been the most popular social activity on the campus, but there are many other media of entertainment available which make the university social life a well-rounded one.

Second to dancing on the popularity list, most undergraduates would place the movies, a typically spontaneous form of entertainment when there is nothing planned for the evening. What the undergraduates of twenty years ago did in place of going to the movies, it is hard to say, but certain it is that they have now become a great time-saver.

The campus is not particularly well-situated as far as movies are concerned, for from the west side of the university it is a good fifteen-minute walk to the nearest theatre. From the east-side residences however, it is but a short jaunt. One large first-run theatre and two small neighborhood movies can be found in the Bloor-Yonge business area which is closest to the university. Most of the first-run theatres are downtown which is about a twenty-five minute walk from the centre of the campus.

Radio-listening is practically a lost art among students living in residences. Bowling, informal "coke-dates" at neighborhood drug-stores, and moonlight walks through the campus, however, are favourite forms of recreation. The ten o'clock coke or coffee at MacDonald's drug store on Harbord street has become practically a nightly institution with undergraduates in the U.C. residences, in Trinity and St. Hilda's, in North, East and South houses, and in St. George street fraternity houses. Night after night the store is thronged, and the blaring wurlitzer in the corner has a difficult time making itself heard over the din of voices. For Victoria residences the eating-spot in the vicinity of Bloor and Avenue Road are most popular.

During the winter skating is a popular way to spend an evening, and students are admitted free three nights a week to Varsity Stadium where the whole rugby-playing surface is flooded and a band supplies appropriate music. Off late skiing has surpassed the milder excitement of skating, however, and on the weekends students stream north by car, by bus and by train to the University Ski Club property north of the city and to the hundreds of other excellent ski-spots which dot Ontario.

Fast and Risque Daffydil Night Now Under Ban

After becoming a well-fixed tradition in the history of the Medical Faculty and in campus entertainment circles, Daffydil Night is no more. But although it has passed from the present scene, there can be little doubt that once the war is over deep-rooted medical tradition will bring a new and better Daffydil extravaganza into our midst.

Famed Daffydil Night had its beginnings when in 1897 medical students organized a Punch and Judy show in the lecture theatre of the old Medical building at the corner of Gerrard and Adelaide streets.

Through the years the nature of the script tended to become more and more risqué, and in the last few years occasional charges of obscenity were levelled. It was felt that although the production might be all right for male consumption, it was undesirable to present it to mixed audiences. In 1940, as the performance drew near, the Caput of the university, after reading the script of the show and the proofs of Epitaxis, termed it "undesirable" and asked that it be revised.

Formal and Informal Dances Are Found to be the Greatest Consumers of Students' Leisure Time. Many of the Most Popular Dances Have Had a Long Tradition, Evolving Through the Years into Their Present Form. Conversations Still Linger

MODN DANCES WERE ONCE FEATURED

The "Moon dances" of 1900 have given way to the "Blackout Waltzes" and "Boogie-beats" of 1941, and conversations featured by musical concerts have succumbed to formal dances marked by jazz-age floorshows and to informal parties distinguished by saddle shoes and sloppy seaters. But though there be changes in kind and in number, the after-dark life of the university continues in all its brilliancy and variety.

When lectures and labs are over, when essays and reports are completed, and when the welcome weekends roll around, Betty Coed and Joe College find at hand a social whirl made up of a complex of activities designed to fit any purpose, any mood and any amount of time.

Formals Are Big Feature

The greatest consumers of student allowances are the large formal dances which have evolved from the brilliant conversations of past years. The name still persists in some of the traditional present-day functions although slang has changed the wording as in the case of the Trinity Conversat. Every college and faculty has its annual formal dances, usually known as the At-Home. Several of these have grown to huge proportions and have gone out side the bounds of the campus. Importing famous American orchestras, functions such as the Meds At-Home, the School At-Home and others have taken over several of the largest ballrooms of the Royal York Hotel and have found no trouble in packing them with several thousand dancers. With the coming of war, of course, imported bands have passed from the scene, thereby reducing expenses greatly.

Moon Dance Gets Results

In University College the annual formal is known as the Arts Ball, and is a direct outgrowth of the old University Conversation and the later Arts Dance which developed when more faculties sprang up on the campus. The programs of the big dances years ago were printed in The Varsity several days in advance, and Moon Dances used to be an important feature of the evening. In 1910 a writer notes that the Moon Dance at that year's Arts Dance had evidently accomplished things, for one couple announced their engagement right after it. Program dances are gradually disappearing.

In the early years of the university the annual Conversation was a brilliant affair. In a publicity article in The Varsity, the entertainment at the forthcoming 1883 Conversation is discussed: "Mrs. Coldwell, Mr. Jenkins, Mr. Torrington's orchestra, the Glee Club (in choruses from Antigone) will contribute to make this department enjoyable and attractive. The scheme at first proposed to light the building by the Electric Light has been abandoned."

Originating as Tribute to Janitor Vic "Bob" Nearly Seventy Years Old

On an autumn evening in 1872 room two of East Hall at Old Vic in Cobourg rang to the laughter of a small group of students as they gathered to give their genial janitor, Robert (Bob) Beare a token of their appreciation of his faithful and long-suffering service.

The next year for lack of space the festivities moved to room nine. There the noise disturbed Dr. Nelles in his room below. He investigated, but before he could protest he had become one of the party. Thus the Bob received tacit faculty recognition and was established as a tradition.

From its small beginnings the Bob grew to its present status of a full dress stage show. It early became a custom to present informal dramatic sketches satirizing college characters. By the time Victoria moved to the Uni-

Informal Parties Popular

Apart from the formal college dances, there are innumerable informal parties. Each college has its year parties, its Hallowe'en parties, its freshmen introduction parties — all of which are informal and noisy but which contribute more than the large functions to the development of college spirit and friendliness. Then too, the college residences have their three or four dances a year, one of which is often a formal. The women's residence hold several formal a year, bids to which are eagerly awaited by the male populace. These of course are traditional, for an old copy of The Varsity notes that at the Queen's Hall dance, "the usual coterie of fair women and brave men" was present.

Several All-Varsity Dances

There are only several large dances which embrace the whole student body. One of these is the All-University Fall Dance held each October in Hart House, replacing the time-honoured Masquerade. The Masquerade was long one of the sparkling events in the campus social season. Close to two thousand people thronged Hart House for the affair, and the multitude of varying costumes representing everything two thousand imaginations could produce, turned the House into a veritable wonderland. Prizes were given for the best, the funniest, the most original and the most beautiful costumes. The masquerade trend has steadily been on the down-grade in the past few years, and in 1938 it was replaced by the All-University, an informal dance with five orchestras supplying music in almost every room of Hart House. Another such all-university affair is, of course, the annual Graduation Ball in June.

The forty-odd fraternities on the campus provide many more social affairs for their own members, although most of them are confined to informal parties in the fraternity house plus one large formal dance in the late winter months. The women's fraternities sponsor subscription dances at the downtown hotels on Saturday evenings each fall, the proceeds going to charity and war work. In the warm, care-free days of peace before the abolition of intercollegiate sport, these dances proved to be the most popular in town, drawing huge after-game crowds.

In the field of entertainment a majority of the colleges put on a stage-show, with skits and original songs. The university of Toronto campus the fundamental elements of its present form had been established.

The Bob today consists of three acts. The first is an unmerciful skit on the college staff, the second a more temperate examination of freshman foibles, and the third a variety presentation in which any other personalities of fame or notoriety about the college may be brought to book. Between acts the freshmen and sophomores are given the opportunity of direct vituperation by singing some of the most violent hymns of hate ever to drip from vitriolic pens. The crowning presentation of the evening is the singing of the traditional Bob song by the Bob Quartette. To the tune of Lillie they expose to shame the misdeeds of the more prominent freshmen.

University Has Undergone Extensive Face-Lifting

Farm Land in 'Muddy York' Was Original Situation Of City-Encircled Campus

College Council, after Weighty Consideration, Decided in 1827 upon 164 Acres of Fairly High Park Lands Lying Almost a Mile North of the City Limits which in Those Days was Queen Street

FRICION AROSE OVER LOCKING GATES

"Velut arbor aevio" (crescat).

The motto on the coat-of-arms of our University was well chosen. "As a tree may it grow through all the ages" and as a tree it has grown, from the tiny seed planted in 1827 to the thriving University we now know, and there is every evidence that it will continue to grow.

It was in 1827 that the idea of selecting a site for a university in this part of Ontario was first conceived and the council who chose the site acted wisely, for the site they finally decided upon has accommodated a century of university growth, despite the appropriation of Queen's Park by the government. Choosing the site for the new university was a weighty problem and in "muddy York" the avoidance of low ground and mosquitoes was evidently an important consideration. Finally the College Council chose the northern halves of three farms, 164 acres of beautiful park lands, about a mile north of what was then the northernmost limit of the town of York and on which has since been erected both the university and Parliament Buildings.

Site Lay Outside City

Since the site purchased by the council lay wholly beyond the outskirts of what was at that time a small town lying entirely south of Queen St. and east of Yonge, the next move of the council was to purchase land for two avenues of approach through the adjacent farms to the south and east and to make arrangements for staking out in the woods the line of these two avenues. The principal avenue (now University Avenue) led southward for some 5/8 of a mile to Lot (now Queen St.), the other (now College St.) led west to Yonge St. These avenues, being university property, were fenced in and furnished with gates, which, at certain hours were locked (from sun-down to sun-rise). This locking of the gates was a constant source of friction between public and academic authorities, so much so, in fact, that in 1859 these two roadways were handed over to the control of the city.

University Avenue, intended to be the main avenue of approach to the university with the main building of the university at its head (where the Parliament Buildings now stand), was immediately laid out with beautiful horse-chestnut trees because of the symmetry of these trees and their rapid growth. The men on the College Council had a dream, and a very lovely one, of a magnificent white college building enthroned at the head of a long shady avenue and surrounded by beautiful park lands with the lesser buildings of the university holding court in a half-circle behind the main building. They planned carefully to make this dream come true but "the best laid schemes of mice and men gang aft a-gley".

Many Changes in Location
On St. George's Day, in 1842, with great pomp and ceremony, the corner stone of King's College was laid, not far from the east side of the present Parliament Buildings. From the first the fates seemed to unite forces to stamp out the infant university. Five times within seven years the headquarters of the university was changed but she continued her existence with admirable tenacity. In 1843 King's College was officially opened and in 1845 the south-east wing was completed and used as a residence but the university was not fated to remain. Due to the expense of keeping up the new building it was shortly shunted to the Old Parliament Buildings, but then the capital was moved to Toronto and the university, finding the welcome mat removed from the Parliament Buildings, returned to King's College. Transformed into the University of Toronto in 1850, by Parliamentary action, the college as it stood was too small to house the faculties of arts, medicine, and law, so another building was built for the medical faculty, Moss Hall, approximately on the site of the present Biology Building. This building became the home of the whole university in 1856 until what we now know as University College was built.

Building Housed Lunatics

From the very first the government seems to have considered the university of little importance to be tucked away out of sight. In 1853 some of the university land was expropriated for government buildings. In 1856 the government appropriated the old King's College building as a branch lunatic asylum for the province and named it, ironically, "the University Lunatic Asylum". As might well be imagined the university authorities were slightly peeved. Nevertheless, in 1859, even more of the university property was expropriated by the government for Queen's Park. Thus, of the original university property which extended east to Surrey Place, only the western portion now remains, with the exception of the lands on which Victoria College now stands.

Face South or West?

As a result, when it became necessary in 1856 to build a new university building, the only possible site was the one where University College now stands.

Thus, after much controversy, the new building was begun. In the beginning there had been constant contention

Campus Buildings Feature "Fifty-Seven" Varieties

Expansion through the Years Inevitably Changes Sparsely Settled Farm Land into Closely Built-up City Area

In spite of constant opposition and misfortunes the physical side of the university has steadily developed from the virgin land purchased in 1827 down to the present university area which includes fifty-seven buildings "of all varieties."

The first permanent building was erected in 1829, and by 1890 there were five buildings on the campus. Since then, however, growth has been phenomenal, aided greatly of course by the federation of the affiliated colleges. And even as changes have occurred through the years, so changes will constantly continue in the future. Even now, the physical face of the university is undergoing alteration with the building of a new Trinity College residence, and the planning of a new U.C. men's residence. Just like the umbragious maple upon her crest, the university is spreading out in all directions.

The first gymnasium of the university was built in 1868, on U.C.'s back campus. It was a plain frame building with a narrow board walk in front. It was bordered on one side by a picket fence, on the other by the vegetable garden which supplied the university dining hall, while, in the shed at the back of the gym, the superintendent kept his pig. This was the forerunner of Hart House.

Ten years later, still another building was added to the University of Toronto, a plain red brick building with some ornamentation in white brick, a building which faced the lawn on its southern border—a home for the new School of Practical Science. For seven years, this building contained what is now the Faculty of Applied Science. In 1885, however, an additional building of considerable size was added, incorporating the original structure as its north wing and facing towards the east.

It was about this time that the enemy which the Artsmen felt for the Engineers expressed itself in the form of a fence at the south of the campus to keep the ever-increasing hordes of interlopers out. Part of that fence still remains. At that time, the campus was covered with tall grass which had to be cut with a scythe before the Artsmen could indulge in their favourite sport, cricket.

In 1882, Wycliffe College took up its abode in a small building in the southern portion of the university grounds, just north of where the chemistry and mining building now stands. A few additions were made in 1885, but six years later it moved and took up residence on its present site. Additions have been made to the original building on Hoskin Ave. The old building remained standing until the location was required for erection of the Mining Building in 1905.

As is always the case in progress, sentiment has to be sacrificed, and in 1887 Moss Hall, which had seen faithful service for nearly forty years for everything from the Medical Faculty to the Varsity newspaper, was torn down to make way for the Biological Building. The eastern part of the present Biological Building was erected in 1888. This was the first of that galaxy of buildings which now surrounds the campus. After the turn of the century one would almost think to look at the records, that buildings must have sprung up over night like mushrooms. Until then, progress had been comparatively slow.

1921-1922

An extra half-page issue of The Varsity hit the streets at 3.30 p.m. announcing the presentation of honorary degrees to Lord Byng and Admiral Beatty. J. Burdon Bickersteth was appointed varden of Hart House. Appointments to the Medical Faculty were vigorously criticized by a professional journal and as vigorously defended by faculty officials. A young actor by the name of Raymond Massey played Marchbanks in the Hart House Theatre production of Shaw's "Candida." Connie Smythe coached Varsity hockey teams and gave The Varsity the biggest high-pressure publicity campaign ever seen in its columns on behalf of an athletic organization. There was, however, no championship.

1922-1923

A column called "Campus Chat" appeared on Page Two and became "Champus Cat" the next day. The Art, Music and Drama column also appeared for the first time.

Six men were knocked unconscious and one had his wrist fractured at the annual S.P.S. initiations. The Alumni Federation created an employment bureau. A new administrative building was under construction beside Convocation Hall thus promising relief to University College's overcrowded classrooms. The Women's Union moved to more capacious quarters in 79 St. George Street.

The new musical comedy, "Irene", was playing at the Royal Alexandra Theatre.

1923-1924

The Varsity finally blossomed forth as a daily paper, or rather as one published five times a week by the Students' Administrative Council. Big news of the year concerned the daring burglary of the Women's Union, in which money and vanity cases were stolen by a sneak-thief. Lloyd George paid a brief visit to Toronto, but was unable to attend a special convocation, at which it had been intended to grant him an honorary degree. Hazing was barred at the University of Western Ontario, and The Varsity and the Star co-operated in organizing a special broadcast of the

Reams of Printed Word Daily Pour Forth From University Press

The Press, Unobtrusively Hidden Behind the Chemical Building, Serves as a Channel for the Publication of All the Various Literary and Scholarly Efforts Produced in the University of Toronto

PRINTS THE VARSITY

Few departments of the university are less generally known to the average student than is the University of Toronto Press, and yet the Press is, in a very real sense, one of the centres of the university.

It is the seat and bulwark of the Undergraduate Newspaper, itself the organized expression of student thought. It is further, a link between all faculties inasmuch as through it stream the greater part of college and faculty student publications, and by it, notices, and books concerning the university as a whole are made possible and more easily available. Being a completely self-supporting unit within the university, it is specially geared to meet university demands, and helps to keep university funds from straying into the outside.

The Press Building stands unobtrusively behind the McEellan Laboratory and the Chemical Building. Over the front entrance the date of its erection, 1920, is inscribed, and, upon seeing this date, those who are historically inclined are wont to pause and think about the origins of this, the only University Press in Canada.

The origins were modest. In 1901 a printing department was installed in the building of the former Wycliffe College, on the site of today's Mining Building. Its purpose was simply to print examination papers, but soon its activities increased and in 1902 it was transferred to a small rough-cast cottage which once served as military barracks and which stood behind the present Physics Building. But before long, this also was found inadequate and in 1910 the Printing Department was moved to the basement of the University Library. Here it remained for 10 years and continued to expand, so much so that in 1920 the Board of Governors decided to erect a separate building for it. The present Press Building was therefore built with only two storeys, at a cost of $60,000, provided by the Press itself, which has always been financially self-supporting. In 1926 a third storey was added and since then no important alterations have been carried out.

The history of the Press can be roughly divided into two parts. From 1901 till 1930 it was but a Printing department, printing examination papers and other university forms. But in 1930 the Book department was added to it, and it also took over the publishing of the University Studies, comprising results of research work and monographs, which had heretofore been published by the Library. Although these publications were not saleable, the change opened up a new field for the Press, and immediately the Publications department was organized on a new basis, with a full editorial staff, ready to take on new responsibilities. The Book department on the ground-floor of the Press Building, is one with which all students are familiar. It was formed around 1890 to meet the student demand for cheaper books, for book-sellers outside the university were taking advantage of the lack of such an organization to charge exorbitant prices. This Book department was run as a private enterprise within the Library, under the direction of Miss McKimling. Upon her death, Mr. R. J. Hamilton, manager of the Press, was appointed to its head and it was thus that in 1930 the Book department was added to the Press, though it remained a private venture till quite recently. In 1936 R. J. Hamilton, who had managed the Press since its beginnings, died, and was superseded by the present manager, Mr. A. Gordon Burns.

The University Press is the only one in Canada and compares favourably with the University Presses in the U.S. It is completely equipped to produce a book in all its stages, from the printing to the binding, and in fact from 8 to 12 books are published by the Press every year. Besides this, four quarterlies are published regularly, the Canadian Historical Review, the U. of T. Quarterly, the Canadian Journal of Economics and Political Science and the U. of T. Law Journal.

But the routine university work keeps the Press busy enough. About 6,000 copies of The Varsity are printed every day of the week, and 90 per cent of other university, faculty and college publications, announcements, posters, notices and forms of all kinds also go through the ever-active University Press.

In this way the Press may be considered as the common point to all university activities, whether academic, social or athletic; it is the common channel of expression for every phase of university life.

Oxford debaters came to Varsity and won an intercollegiate debate, and students in Burwash Hall, rummaging through a lumber room, came upon a human skull.

There were several important appointments made in this year: Canon Cody became Chairman of the Board of Governors; Sir Edward Walker was named Chancellor; N. J. DeWitt became Dean

1924-1925

Varsity Stadium was renovated, and the Bloor Bowl now had a seating capacity of 16,000. But the Big Blue Team failed to cop a title that year, although the junior gridgers won, whipping Loyola in the final. His Highness, the Prince of Wales, visited Hart House informally, and was hailed in a Varsity streamer as "A Jolly Good Fellow."

Ontario College of Education

For sixty years The Varsity has served this University, and with distinction. Not the least important phase of its service has been the forging of a sense of solidarity among the students of all faculties. Those colleges which are not fortunate enough to be located on the campus are especially appreciative of the unifying influence of The Varsity. It is especially easy for a small professional faculty, very busy with its own practical affairs, and serving graduates of many other universities as well as of our own, to lose contact with the general life of the university. Few integrating factors have been more effective in combatting that tendency than has The Varsity. That is, perhaps, the chief reason that the arrival of the "undergraduates' newspaper" is a welcome daily event in this College.

Own Physical Plant Makes Varsity a Contained Unit

Babbling Brook, Shimmering Pond Are Forgotten Varsity Beauties

Perhaps the one thing which produced the most striking difference between university grounds of the old days and their present appearance was the stream that used to flow south through the ravine parallel to the path from the Economics building down to Hoskin Avenue.

The stream, called the "Taddle" around the university although more authentic sources declare its rightful name to have been "Tattle", commenced somewhere in the high ground north of Bloor Street, and meandered south along the ravine on whose east bank the Museum is now built. Crossing what is now Hoskin Avenue, it babbled noisily down a steep hollow (now filled in) on which one wing of Hart House is now located.

At the road leading from Queen's Park to the theatre the creek passed under a culvert where a dam diverted its water into the hollow above mentioned, to form McCaul's Pond, so called after the first president of the university, roughly on the present site of Hart House Theatre. The overflow from the pond trickled south through the well-defined ravine on whose west bank stands the library, east of the Engineering Building, across College St., and finally to the bay near the foot of Church St.

The size of the stream is a controversial subject. The depth of the ravine would seem to indicate that it was quite large at one time, and some records speak of it as "a mighty stream sweeping onward". Other reports, however, say that it was tiny, never more than five feet wide at its broadest point. The depth of the pond differs accordingly but it was apparently never more than seven feet deep. At one time the creek and pond were things of beauty, fringed with willow trees and low-lying shrubs, and fish could be caught there.

Unwalled and Unmoated Self-sufficient University Is "City Within a City"

With Facilities at Hand for Sleeping, Eating, Studying and Various Forms of Entertainment, Students Can Live for Weeks without Venturing into the City Lying South of College Street

REPLACEMENT VALUE OF PLANT IS $17,500,000

Set off from the rest of the city of Toronto by four bustling thoroughfares, the university campus is a detached, self-sustaining community which has developed into a city in itself.

With facilities for eating, sleeping, studying and entertainment of the student, the hallowed haunts provide almost everything an undergraduate could ask for, and many can and do spend weeks without once venturing from the variegated "City within a City."

Including the federated and affiliated colleges, the University of Toronto has sixty buildings, the replacement value of which, at a conservative estimate, totals seventeen and one half millions of dollars.

Staff Attends to Upkeep

To keep the buildings heated and lighted in good repair, to renew the ordinary "wear and tear", requires a very considerable outlay annually, and the services of 80 caretakers and cleaners, electricians, plumbers, steam fitters, carpenters and painters. But it is illustrative of the careful and thrifty use made of available revenue by the university authorities that repairs and renewals annually amount to less than one per cent of the replacement value of the buildings.

Further illustration of the policy of the university to cut down on operating costs is contained in the facilities for heating at the central heating plant, a small building which nestles behind the library. At the expenditure of $105,000.00 a year for fuel and purchased heat every building is heated; 40 of these are heated directly by the central heating plant. However, the costs of operation of the plant run up to about $145,000.00. That includes of course the generation of electrical power which is a by-product of the heating.

Its Own Electricity

Most of the university gets its electricity basically through the central heating plant. Some of the students with radios have objected to the current which is not the usual A.C., but is D.C. The direct current was installed because, originally, much of the experimental apparatus required it. Additional power, both A.C. and D.C., is purchased to augment the amount of general electricity both on the university's lines, and on separate services to transformer stations over separate units of the distributive system. The supply even includes street-lighting within the university.

During the past year $100,000 of merchandise was distributed through the Superintendent's Store. The purchasing orders for the same period reached the staggering sum of 15,000, 800 of which were departmental orders, and the remaining 7,000 orders were for the Superintendent's Stores. In addition there were 23,000 accounts to be settled, and 2,600 customs entries to be made. The post office netted an income of $34,000 with $21,000 coming from the sale of stamps.

The Protective Force

The university maintains quite a protective force. Four policemen are only a part of the effective system. Day and night there is a staff of watchmen continually on patrol.

A squad of groundmen are detailed to clean the snow in the winter. Their number varies with the amount of snow to clean. As many as 50 men are sometimes employed in cleaning snow after a heavy snowfall. The regular staff of groundmen numbers only 12, and their job in the summer is to cut and water the lawns which is no mean feat on such a large campus, as that owned by the university cuts a piece out of the heart of Toronto to the extent of seventy acres. Outside the city there are some 426 acres; at the Connaught Laboratory farm, 70 acres; the Gull Lake tract covers 172 acres; 178 acres stretch out at the David Dunlap observatory — these are exclusive of the land recently acquired for the Forestry Faculty's survey camp.

between the Governor-General and the architect as to the architecture of the college and the direction it should face. The Governor-General was in favour of Byzantine architecture and the resulting building is a hybrid, with traces of Byzantium but with the Norman-Gothic style predominating. The architects had so planned the building that, for maximum advantages it should face south, and had so staked it out. The Governor-General paid the university a visit and decided that it should face west so the building was restaked. Then it was discovered that, unless the building faced south some very fine old trees, including an elm which the Governor-General considered the tallest and handsomest in Toronto, would have to be sacrificed. The Governor-General declared unthinkable, so once again the building faced south with the elm tree waving triumphantly at its south-east corner.

Since the building had to be begun in secrecy it was finished with ceremony in 1858. Instead of having a corner stone laid by some notable it was the coping stone on the turret which was laid with ceremony by His Excellency, the Governor-General.

First Norman Architecture

University College was the first example of Roman or Norman architecture to be erected on this continent. It was the expressed intention of the builders that the edifice should be one which would be an inspiration to higher ideals. To fulfill this purpose skilled art-carvers were collected and the sculptor and his chief assistant were brought from Germany. The building is so constructed that the dominant feature is the great Norman tower. Stand in front of the building some day and take a close look, and you'll be amazed at what you see, for the architecture on one side of the door is totally different from that on the other.

And now, walk around to the back of the college and compare the two wings. In most buildings one wing is but a reproduction of the other, but, while apparent balance is maintained in the wings and on either side of the principal southern facade of University College, yet there is no commonplace repetition. By tower, or by gable, by minaret or change in form or grouping of the classic windows, an artistic variance is introduced which really has to be seen to be fully appreciated. Nor is this all. In this large building with its multitude of carvings, no two carvings are the same. The gargoyles, the leaves, the carvings at the top of each post along the cloister, they're all different, either in theme or arrangement. Is it any wonder that people come from great distances to behold the architecture of University College? Even the two long, rope-like carvings at the very doors of the college have a meaning. They depict the Worms of Ignorance recoiling from the Gates of Knowledge.

Unofficial "Fraternity Row" Enjoys Healthy Existence Here

vidual, and for that reason many are unable to join, but this has not led to any snobbishness in the Toronto system. Fraternity and non-fraternity students study together, work together on part-time and summer jobs, serve on the same committees, participate in the same extra-curricular activities, play on the same teams and attend the same social functions — all on a common basis as Varsity students.

Fraternities came under fire in 1940 when a member of the British Columbia legislature charged that they were "undemocratic and un-British," breeding class divisions, but it was soon proved from all parts of the nation that there was no foundation for the accusation.

Back in 1883 fraternities were facing accusations and persecutions, too, and two long articles in The Varsity came to the defence of the system, just as in 1940 the student newspaper came to its defence. Inquiring into the right of fraternities to live, the writer stated:

"Since the beginning of the movement in 1825 much opposition has been manifested to these organizations and it is our purpose to review as briefly as possible the arguments brought against them, and at the same time, show what claims they put forth to public recognition and support."

In answer to the charge that fraternities are expensive, it was replied that spending money will be used for something and that fraternities were a profitable investment. "Fraternities certainly offer greater advantages for the disposal of extra cash than wine shops or kindred institutions." True friendship, a home, guidance from sympathetic fellows in time of trouble, an opportunity for free open discussion, the development of the intellect and of the personality, a retreat from the busy rush of lectures and meetings and committees — these were but a few of the advantages offered by fraternities then in 1883 and now in 1941.

AND NOW...WOMEN'S SHIRTS Man-tailored by TOOKE

For a long time women have been enviously eyeing their husband's and brother's shirts. Finally they have taken them right off the men's backs—at least, Tooke, that famous maker of men's shirts, has done it for them. These feminine shirts have the superb fit of truly man-tailored ones. They have the same trim smartness, too. The mannish materials—the colors—the designs make them faithful interpretations of those shirts women have long been hoping for.

The Spring 1941 fashion dictate, "Keep Your Shirt On"—is going to be pleasurably obeyed by smart women who wear these new, man-tailored Tookes. They are going to have as many as their men folk and they're going to love wearing them.

Simpson's Blouse Shop is launching this important new fashion in a complete collection of eight attractive styles—we've space to show only one here—each bearing the celebrated Tooke label that's been famous in men's shirts since 1869.

(Illustrated) English broadcloth, chalk stripe in background shades of blue, tan or rose. White pique collar, long sleeves with pique cuffs and pearl links, and shirt pocket. Sizes 12 to 42. $4.

MILITARY SHOP

Senior students now being commissioned in His Majesty's Service will be interested to know that Simpson's Military Shop has on hand a full range of materials for Navy, Army and Airforce officers' uniforms and greatcoats. These are fine quality imported woollens from high-grade mills that customarily supply London's better class tailoring houses. Tailoring is done to rigid specifications, with careful attention to official regulation.

NAVY

Greatcoats are cut from a thirty-two-ounce, treble-milled indigo-dyed pilot cloth, woven to the exacting standards of the Royal Navy. Finished with satin lining and interlined to waist. With buttons, $60. Jacket and Slacks, cut from fine quality 24-ounce English Doeskin, $60.

ARMY

Greatcoats are of fine quality 32 to 35-ounce Scotch and English meltons. One-third satin lining and all-wool interlining to vent. Inside of shoulders protected by generous-sized leathers. With buttons and rank insignia, $60, $65 and $75. Army tunics and slacks are made of fine English barathra or whipcord. With buttons and rank badges, $55 and $67.50.

AIR FORCE

R.C.A.F. Officers' greatcoats are tailored from English meltons of a quality excellent in both appearance and serviceability. Satin lining to waist, hand-felled collars, bound edges and screw-buttons on shoulder epaulettes. Complete with buttons and rank insignia, $60 and $75. R.C.A.F. tunic and slacks, $55 and $67.50.

Library is Pulsing Heart of University's Knowledge

Books and Periodicals Overflow Their Home, Now Exceed 500,000

Plans Drawn Up a Decade Ago for Extension of Stacks and Addition of Northern Wing Languish Half-Forgotten While Facilities of Institution Grow Increasingly Inadequate. Must Remain in Present Form Until After War at Least

U.C. WAS SCENE OF FIRST LIBRARY

Today, with more than half a million publications, the University of Toronto Library, source of nourishment for the ever-growing tree of knowledge, represents one of the finest collections of verbal wisdom on the continent. Its circulation, which amounts annually to almost 350,000 of these volumes, is the third largest in North America. A growing concern, its use has multiplied five times in the past two decades.

Library Needs Expansion

Well-organized as it now is, the library is by no means what it should be, mainly because of its housing facilities. If all the books listed in its ponderous catalogue were to be turned in at once, for example, there would be no place to put them. Actually, even in the summer months, several thousand books are out on loan, and the stacks are still congested.

Main needs of the library are more reading-room space, room where students can browse among the 150,000 periodicals, and larger stacks, to provide for present and future needs. Plans for the addition of a northern wing to balance the present south wing, and enlargement of the stacks, were hopefully drawn up in 1932, but the project was postponed, and the faded blueprints are still pinned up on the door of the librarian's office.

Had Humble Beginnings

It was a meagre collection of less than 4,000 volumes stood on the shelves of the first university library in 1859. This was east hall of the then newly-finished University College, an imposing structure set off in the comparative wilderness of Queen's Park. Some of these volumes, no doubt, had reposed in the second-floor room of the remodelled Upper Canada Parliament Buildings in 1843. There they had been used by the 26 undergraduates who, 18 years before, had signed the roll and donned the gown of King's College under the watchful eye of its president, Bishop John Strachan, in the opening ceremonies at the remodelled Upper Canada Parliament Buildings on Front Street.

The First Librarian

The east hall collection began under the care of the Rev. Alexander Lorimer, a Baptist minister who had managed to achieve the position in 1854 by virtue of being the brother-in-law of a member of the government of the day. In accepting the post, he ousted the university's first full-time librarian, the Rev. John W. Small, a '27 graduate of Trinity College, whose most interesting record is a letter to Lord Elgin in 1853 lamenting the fact that "a beadle should be thought worthy of a higher remuneration than a librarian."

Librarian Lorimer, clad in a stiff and formal black tail-coat, was small, slight, and consumptive. However, when a disturbance was going on in the reading room, his appearance, with even a little show of indignation, was usually enough to quiet the men.

Although he had gained his position through political patronage, Mr. Lorimer presided over his handful of books in the new, alcoved U.C. library with care and efficiency, and classified the volumes by painstakingly writing the titles and authors on slips of paper and pasting them into six ponderous brown-paper scrapbooks.

Upon his death in 1869 he was succeeded by John E. Thompson, a King's College graduate, who later became insane. Professor William Henry Van der Smitten, head of the German department, who succeeded him, leaves this cryptic message about his predecessor: "Dr. Ellis gave him some medicine, which seemed to make him violent. He was shut up in the asylum."

Accessions Early Problem

From 1874 until the year when fire gutted U.C. in 1890, Professor Van der Smitten was librarian. In spite of constant difficulties the library grew until, when destroyed entirely by the blaze, it had about 33,000 volumes. Government of the library, in the early days, as at present, was in the hands of the Senate library committee, but no appropriation was made by the Senate until the reconstruction of that body, and the addition of members elected by the graduates.

"How did they buy books?" writes Professor Van der Smitten, "they didn't. Some of the professors seemed to have had the power of ordering books which were paid for when the bill came in. Authorities told the librarian that they would pay for all continuations, and that they must be kept up. . . . There upon the librarian ordered everything that could possibly be called a continuation order, with the result that the authorities received a bill for a sum far exceeding the usual annual expenditure on books, which had to be paid since the librarian had acted upon the instruction of the library committee chairman. . . . There was a complete set of the Byzantine historians, but I never knew these to be referred to."

The library was used very extensively, by what students there were. Of the 700-odd men and women on the campus in the late eighties, about 150 used the reading room, but students were not allowed to take books away from the library except by order of a professor.

Daily Except Sundays

Seldom photographed or sketched, the picturesque door of the library is probably familiar to more students than any other portal on the campus as the scene of spasmodic smoke-interruptions in their study. It has been the welcome goal of last-minute returners of books since 1892.

Incidental Intelligence

The library fee of $7.00 now paid by every U. of T. undergraduate was raised in the hopes that it would finance the much-needed addition, but the library never sees the fee. It goes directly to the bursar and accessions are financed by endowments and annual grants.

The sexes mingled in the library until 1912, when the stacks were changed into the women's reading room. Before the reading rooms were separated, the library was a much more boisterous and noisy place, which required the exercise of discipline by the librarian himself.

About 100 of the original books used by students of King's College in the 1830's reposed on the shelves of the Trinity library stacks, and were transferred there when Bishop Strachan fell out with the U. of T. and founded Trinity. They bear the stamp of their donors—"The Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge," and the date 1828. All are theological volumes.

Professors can take out books indefinitely—merely by dropping in and signing for them every six months.

In the eighties an accession could be made only when ordered by a professor, and the librarian struggled vainly to replenish his shelves. "You know, Tennyson and Byron are beginning to be pretty generally recognized," Professor Van der Smitten once suggested tactfully to the English professor.

"Better wait until they're dead," was the reply. "Then we can get complete editions."

"The books were assembled in alcoves, with tables and chairs in each, and fittings of solid oak," wrote Professor Van der Smitten, recalling a slip put in for "Bar's Homer," by a student who so signified the translation of Homer's Iliad by Sir John Hershall, Bart.

Brebner Was Assistant

Dr. Brebner was the last assistant of the library at the time of the fire, and afterwards assisted until his appointment as registrar in 1892, when Hugh H. Langton took charge of the newly-built library on its present site.

Although not a volume was spared by the great fire, the years following began to show the first real development in the library's history. New books streamed in from benefactors all over the world, and a new building—the nucleus of the present one—was thrown up on the banks of the Taddle, on the east side of the campus.

As university librarian, Mr. Langton helped the development through the longest period of service of any who functioned in the position. From 1900 to 1905 the number of volumes rose from about 50,000 to 83,000, and in 1912 the facilities were hopelessly inadequate, and the building was enlarged to assume its present form.

Wallace Appointed

Succeeded in 1923 by W. S. Wallace, Mr. Langton moved from the librarian's office up to a room in the tower, which he still visits occasionally.

The present librarian has brought the

$500,000 Fine Is Library Record

Bewilderment struck librarians a few years ago when two books were turned in stamped "University of Toronto Library," bearing accession marks quite strange to the system used by the library. After a puzzling bit of research, it was concluded that the books must have been a part of the original library collection of ante-confederation days which had just found their way back to their proper place—50 years late! Perhaps a little annoyed at the belated return on which they could scarcely impose the usual fine of 25 cents a day, they characteristically lavished no sentiment on the old relics. After they had been re-accessioned, the books were tucked away in the stacks, where already they are forgotten and unidentifiable.

Valuable Editions Were Burned

But Fire Was "Blessing in Disguise," According to Librarian Wallace. It Stimulated Library's Development

MANY REQUESTS MADE

In the mid eighties, when the university library was housed in the east wing of University College, Vice-Chancellor William Mulock thought about the 30,000-odd volumes the room contained, and got an idea.

The idea, put into effect in 1885, was to have the books insured, and accordingly, the value of the volumes was estimated by the librarian, Professor W. H. Van der Smitten, and his assistant, James Brebner, from the accession catalogue, and an insurance register was compiled.

On the night of February 14, 1890, when fire swept through the old University College building and ravaged the east wing, the entire collection of books, housing all the written wisdom on the campus, disappeared in smoke and ashes. Through the foresight of the university's oldest alumnus, however, the loss had been made almost negligible.

Many rare and valuable books went up in flames, among which were Audubon's Book of Birds, a Manuscript of Dante's Divine Comedy, Illuminated, The Koran, illuminated, in Arabic, several first editions and a fine collection of books on Epigraphy, collected by Professor McCaul, and a number of ancient folios which nobody ever looked at, but which were highly ornamental.

Of the entire collection, only books which had been taken out by professors survived. It is said that D. R. Keys, Professor of Anglo-Saxon in the nineties, had as many as 300 books out of the library at the time.

But the fire, according to Librarian W. S. Wallace, proved a "blessing in disguise," for it stimulated the library in a way that would have been virtually impossible otherwise. Universities and benefactors all over the world, hearing of the university's plight, sent large

Social Work Is To-day A Profession

Social Science a Two-Year Post-Graduate Course Preparing Students for a Challenging Vocation

U. OF T. SCHOOL LARGEST

In our rapidly changing world one false impression is undergoing fortunate extinction. It is the vague idea that social workers are people who tend babies while the mothers go to work—"or something like that." The social worker of 1941—male or female—is steadily assuming a more important role in our social economy. He or she is now a person of graduate standing, professional training, with a wealth of interesting and important work to do—work relating to people as individuals, in groups, or en masse. And never before have social workers been faced with larger and more challenging problems than at the present time.

Here at the University of Toronto is located the largest of Canada's three training schools for social science work. Smaller schools are located at McGill and University of British Columbia. The course is a purely post-graduate one, and at present a B.A. degree is required for admission. It consists of two years of professional preparation in classroom and field work, at the end of which a diploma is given, although plans are now completed for granting a Master's Degree and this standing will soon replace the diploma.

Social work in America appeared in the latter decades of last century and pursued a mild and largely unnoticed course until the Great War. The social pressures of that period gave the embryo profession a powerful shove. During the 1920's private and public social work advanced steadily. The depression period of the 1930's intensified social problems and brought large extensions of its field.

Social work development in Canada has been somewhat slower, but is proceeding steadily. For several reasons we are now at the beginning of a period of more rapid expansion. The new public services, starting with the National Employment Service and the Unemployment Insurance Act, are getting under way. The exigencies of war are creating new problems in housing and child welfare.

The post-war period will present large problems of domestic statesmanship to our government, and a professional challenge to social workers. Every available worker will be needed to meet the changing problems and to man the new services in which we will be engaged.

Consistent with the changing social outlook, social workers are placing more emphasis on the treatment and prevention of social ills.

gifts of books, and a new library was built on the present site in 1892. By the turn of the century the new establishment was flourishing, with 72,337 volumes, about 23,000 pamphlets, and a much larger circulation.

Department of Social Science

In the sixty years since it was founded, The Varsity must have introduced a long succession of young journalists to the meaning of such terms as "copy," "deadline" and "thirty." Doubtless it has also made them aware of the many ways in which newspapers are changing. No longer are news and opinion segregated as they once were. The importance of the editorial or leading article has declined as the vogue of the columnist has increased. Syndication and the increase of large neutral dailies are important factors. And propaganda has become a recognized technique of mass persuasion. All these and many other changes have been reflected to some extent in the copies of The Varsity which have been read in this Department since its establishment in 1914, just at the beginning of the last war. These years have brought great changes in social work, also, and this School, in common with two others in Canada, now offers professional training to men and women graduate students whose services are in demand in public and private agencies in all parts of Canada. Far greater changes in all areas of life lie ahead, which will affect all of us who are students—teachers—citizens. As an exponent of sounder ideals and traditions of community life in a changing world, The Varsity, in common with other newspapers, will face new opportunities and responsibilities. The members of the full-time staff of the Department of Social Science join in congratulations and good wishes to an old friend on the completion of sixty years of campus service.

AGNES C. MCGREGOR,
Acting Director.

Graduate Studies

As Dean of the School of Graduate Studies I have great pleasure in responding to your invitation and sending you the congratulations of all our members on the occasion of your Jubilee Issue. The majority of the students enrolled in this Faculty since its inception have been undergraduates of the University of Toronto. They will remember with pleasure and gratitude the service which your paper has rendered to them and their fellow students during the past years, both in the recording of current news concerning their special interests and in the expression of opinions and policies which have from time to time assisted the formation of their views on the problems of education and conduct. On behalf of the students past and present who have been enrolled in the School of Graduate Studies I express our appreciation and cordial good wishes.

G. S. BRETT,
Dean.

University College Has Rich Store of Memories

Royal College

The Norman Romanesque architecture of the University College building has dominated the campus since 1856. The fire of 1890, though it gutted the interior, had little effect on the stonework which remains virtually as it was originally.

Lit Was Stamping Ground For U.C. Rhetorician

Rating the feature spot in many an early issue of The Varsity, the University College Literary and Scientific Society — now Literary and Athletic — followed the usual path of such societies. U.C. students of yore were as fond of the sound of their own voices as are those of today, and the debates and discussions carried on at Lit meetings have always been pursued with vigour.

Established in 1854, the society was addressed at its first meeting by Mathematics Professor John B. Cherriman who said: "Gentlemen, if you have nothing to say, say nothing." This piece of advice has, on rare occasions, been taken by the society's members.

The first home of the society was in the old Parliament Building on Front Street, from where the members of the society migrated to the Normal School, the Medical School and other outlandish havens before settling down in home territory several years later.

Enthusiasm flagged during the early years, due to bad roads and general apathy. But the vigorous support of Sir Daniel Wilson kept the Lit going until it assumed a degree of stability. A few years later the society held 17 debates and 20 readings in a single session. Among subjects discussed were "Galileo and His Times" and "The Conquest of Granada."

In 1864, when Bill Mulock was vice-president, the Lit took over its first executive task when the first annual Conversazione was held under its auspices. At the Conversazione a concert was given, speeches were made and students were given the rare opportunity of conversing with feminine society. The radical introduction of dancing into the Conversazione did not take place until 1895, the first time the event was held after the Great Fire of 1890.

Two university presidents, a chairman of the Board of Governors, a registrar and a principal of U.C. have served on the Lit executive, as have several professors and prominent men in public life. The roster includes James Loudon, H. J. Cody, M. W. Wallace, T. A. Russell, W. J. Loudon, J. Brebner, N. A. McLarty and H. C. Hindmarsh.

Recently the Lit's functions have become less literary and more executive. Today the society runs the U.C. Follies, arranges college dances and joint meetings, finances college organizations and initiates freshmen. More than ever before the Lit has become the unifying force for University College men.

University College

"'Tis Sixty Year Since"

I am glad to avail myself of your invitation to convey my greetings and congratulations to The Varsity on the occasion of its publication of a Jubilee issue to celebrate the 60th anniversary of its founding. It is strange to reflect on the changes that have occurred during those sixty years, changes far more fundamental and significant for human beings than in any other like period of history. Science has revolutionized the conditions of our daily life; the university has expanded in buildings, equipment and numbers of students beyond anything that could have been anticipated. Perhaps nothing would have amazed the men of 1880 more than to learn that we have entered on a period of catastrophic world war. The study of past history has given us little capacity to forecast the future.

Sir Thomas Bowne has urged us to think of things long ago, in order that we may preserve some sense of perspective in the midst of engrossing present interests. In 1880 University College was still responsible for all the Arts teaching of the university. President McCaul had just been succeeded by Professor Daniel Wilson as President, and Professor Maurice Hutton had just succeeded McCaul as Head of the Department of Classics. The new Vice-Chancellor of the University in 1881 is Chancellor of the University in 1941. It was the day of small things, but we may have serious doubts whether the University of today represents as high an average of ability among its students as was present sixty years ago. In the Senior Common Room of the College there is a photograph of the men who graduated in 1883 in one honour department—that of Classics. Of the twelve men who constituted the class the following names will be known to many graduates of the College.

J. I. Folgeringham—Head of the Medical Services of the C.E.F. in the Great War.

J. C. Robertson—Professor of Greek in Victoria College.

C. W. Gordon—"Ralph Connor", the author.

Hugh H. Langton—Librarian of the University.

H. R. Fairclough—Head of the Department of Classics in the University of California.

E. W. Hagar—Principal of Harbord St. Collegiate Institute in Toronto.

And this was but one of the four classes in Honour Classics.

Today the study of Classics has ceased to attract the interest of a large proportion of the ablest men in the College; indeed all literature and philosophy are somewhat suspect as "not practical". But some day our mad world may turn again to sanity, and may decide on a new definition of what is practical.

I do not wish to appear as one who praises the past at the expense of the present. It is sufficient that we recognize the differences between them. The Varsity began as a literary magazine, and once or twice small volumes of prose and poetry were collected from its pages and published separately. Today it fulfils a different function. Besides being a news bulletin it seeks to give a real sense of unity to the highly variegated activities of different faculties and colleges, and to voice unvarnished opinion on matters of university policy or practice. This is a highly important role, and in fulfilling it The Varsity has usually been able to enlist the services of some of the ablest members of the student body. I hope, and have no doubt, that it will go forward to greater achievements in the strenuous days that lie before us.

MALCOLM W. WALLACE
Principal.

The history of an arts college is the history of the development of many minds—the minds of all the individuals ever connected with it. There are no startling discoveries or brilliant pieces of research work to record; the history is made day by day in lecture halls and libraries.

The history of University College will never be recorded. Existing volumes give abundant statistics concerning the scholastic output of the college and its academic development. It is easy to discover the number of prominent statesmen, lawyers, teachers, men of business and writers whom the college has produced. These facts and figures bear the same relation to the history of University College as the date of the Battle of Hastings bears to the history of England.

There are historic figures in the college today. They are the people who are inspiring thoughts that are original and true and noble. They are the people who are thinking those thoughts and who will circulate them and apply them to practical use. Many of them are unknown; some of them will never be recognized.

The recorder of the history of University College would have to interview every professor and every student who ever entered the building. He would have to discover from each one of them the exact nature of the contribution which U.C. had made to their lives and the means by which they passed it on to others.

This, the real history of U.C., does not appear on these pages. What does appear is a record of names and dates and institutions which may have influenced its development.

U.C. Women's Union Formerly Men's Residence

Dream of "Women's Hart House" to Accommodate All University Co-eds Is Yet to be Realized

FACILITIES INADEQUATE

Many of the women students who daily take advantage of its numerous facilities will doubtless be surprised to learn that the University College Women's Union, the hub of so many activities for women throughout the university as well as for U.C. co-eds, was originally a residence for single men of the faculty. But circumstances came to the aid of the fair sex and the residence was transformed into the women's union for which they had long struggled.

There were three houses then on the present St. George Street site of Whitney Hall — "81", "83", and "85". The men's residence was at "85". However, when the war came, and young men went overseas, it was felt that they no longer needed the building. Consequently the Board of Governors decided to hand it over to the women of University College.

Such a building to provide a centre for the activities of the women of the college had long been needed. Queen's Hall had for a time filled that function as long as it could accommodate all the women students whose homes were not in the city. However, as the college grew the majority of the students were scattered in lodgings along St. George St. and Huron St. and had no central meeting place, as at that time there was not even the present women's common room in the college itself. Thus it was a great achievement for the women when, on Sept. 27, 1916, the first Women's Union was opened under the leadership of Miss Wong.

This building soon proved inadequate for the needs of the growing college. There were 420 undergraduate women in U.C. and 50 graduates, all members of the Union, the dining room of which had a maximum capacity of 66. The common room accommodated only 110 people so that class meetings had to be held elsewhere, and only 15 students could use the library at one time. From the inadequacy of these quarters as also of the women's residence at Queen's Hall, it is plainly seen that something had to be done. In 1919 Hutton House was taken over as a U.C. residence, which for a time alleviated that situation.

However, in 1920 the Board of Governors provided the site at the corner of Hoskin Avenue and St. George St. for a new residence and union. Plans were formed for a residence to accommodate 250 students and a union for 500 with dining rooms, large and small common rooms, library, practice gym, and music room, to aid in forming the well-rounded life so essential to college students.

By 1922 the Ontario Government had approved the purchase for the old Nicholls residence at 79 St. George St. which after alterations and additions would be the new Women's Union, "the pivot of the women's activities in U.C." The old Union was now to serve as a residence for graduates.

The Nicholls property was a fine old residence, with fewer rooms than the

Source of Crest Is Unknown

"Gules, a chevron argent bearing a crown royal, between two open books and a beaver passant, all proper. Crest, a lighted lamp. Motto — 'Parum claris lucem dare.'"

To the layman this may sound like surrealist prose — actually it is the correct description of the University College arms.

The history of this coat of arms, as well as that of the university, seems to be entirely lost. There is also no record of any coat of arms used in connection with King's College. All official correspondence of the old college which has survived bears no crest.

The University College crest must have been designed between 1853 when the college was created and 1858 when the stone work of the building was laid, including engravings of the arms. With the university arms, they are to be found above the main door of the college and on the south wall of the east tower. A replica of the arms in full colour appears on the front wall of the junior common room.

Since the university and the college were so closely connected in the early years, a composite coat of arms was designed bearing the university arms on the left and those of the college on the right.

The meaning of the various emblems is traditional. The crown represents the king's charter; the books signify learning, as does the lighted lamp; the beaver is the symbol of industry and of Canada.

And the motto does not mean "First of all are we."

Just Jottings From the Files

1925-1926

Trinity and Forestry opened new buildings amid the usual pomp and ceremony. Wymilwood was presented to U.C. as a women's residence and club.

McGhen nosed out King in the federal election, which The Varsity covered with enthusiasm. Hart House Library was closed when 54 books were stolen from its shelves. Professors debated the advisability of placing crests of German and Austrian universities on Great Hall panels. Result—negative.

The Varsity pucksters won their eighth consecutive intercollegiate title and the first Speaking of Sport columns appeared.

Principal Maurice Hutton Was Outstanding Factor In U.C.'s Development

First Principal of University College and Classics Professor was Dynamic Figure whose Influence was Felt by All His Students; Produced Greek Play and Made Frequent Contributions to The Varsity's Literary Column

DEATH LAST YEAR BROUGHT UNIVERSAL TRIBUTE

Of the many personalities who have contributed to the rich atmosphere of University College, Principal Maurice Hutton is outstanding. When he came to the university the year of The Varsity's birth as professor of classics, Mr. Hutton already enjoyed a reputation as an outstanding Greek scholar. When he retired in 1927, he had won the respect and love of the university and of the nation, not merely as a profound and sensitive interpreter of classic authors, but as a preceptor and philosopher, exercising an influence upon his classes which extended beyond the boundaries of his subject. His death last year brought forth sincere tributes from former pupils, friends and all who had known him.

When Mr. Hutton came to the university it was still at an early stage of its development. When he retired, it had become one of the outstanding universities on the continent. The force that made the university great was typified by the contributions of Mr. Hutton to university life.

Two years after joining the staff, at a time when drama meant little more to the students than a chance to gather in the upper gallery of a theatre and throw things, Mr. Hutton directed a student production of the "Antigone" of Sophocles in the original Greek, in which he played the lead. At a time when The Varsity was a struggling young publication with a precarious financial future and questionable literary merit, Mr. Hutton enriched its pages with many contributions of various kinds.

When he was appointed principal of University College in 1901, the principality of the college having been separated from the presidency of the university, the choice was a popular one. The Varsity, in an article shortly after his appointment, commented on his never-failing sense of humour and his capacity for making "ironic comments on things in general." His speeches abounded with Greek references and quotations which the editorial writers of The Varsity seemed to have no difficulty in understanding.

With the resignation of President Loudon in 1906, Principal Hutton became acting president for the remainder of the term, but refused to become a candidate for the permanent occupancy of the post despite the insistence of his friends, in order to continue what he considered a more fruitful career in teaching classics.

Among his outside interests, Principal Hutton included a love for the outdoors, interest in sports, participation in the University Chess Club and the composition (in Latin) of a college song.

Famous Entrance

Faculty of Arts

The S.A.C. operates to bind together students of all Faculties and Years. One of its chief instruments for this purpose is The Varsity, which by its editorials and special features contributes to the formation of a general University spirit among the student body.

The teaching staff of the University seeks to stimulate each individual student, so that he may set for himself a high standard of appreciation in the field of his special studies. The Varsity provides the student with the means of rounding out his personality and developing qualities required for the give and take of citizenship.

The Faculty of Arts offers the student a wide variety of choice of special studies and seeks to develop in him a high degree of professional competence in those selected. From this point of view, the emphasis is placed on equipping the student with an understanding of special facts and their relations, so that he may expect to be successful in the race of life. A further objective of great importance is concerned with the students' mental development. Here, the subject studied seems as the instrument calling for the exercise of the mental faculties, which are thereby extended in scope and made flexible and certain in operation.

The balance between these objectives varies with the subject and with the individual teacher. Might it not be well to introduce a third variable, namely the particular student? Would it not be possible to run a series of letters in The Varsity, dealing with our system of instruction and recording the views of students concerning the weight to be attached to each of these objectives?

Medical Faculty Saga of Great Strides in Science

Medical Faculty Subject To Much Criticism in 1922

A Short Story

On the 30th October, 1920, Frederick Grant Banting originated the hypothesis that the failure theretofore to isolate the internal secretion of the pancreas had been due to its destruction by the ferments liberated during the process of extraction.

He devised an experimental method by which this destruction could be avoided and the internal secretion (now known as insulin) obtained.

In May, 1921, Banting and Charles Herbert Best, both graduates of the University of Toronto, conducted in this room the experiments which culminated in the isolation of insulin.

Medical Men Find CAMSI Very Important

CAMSI is a very important name to medical students at the University of Toronto. This organization (Canadian Association of Medical Students and Internes), although only three years old, has done a great deal to further pleasant relations between internes and hospitals throughout Canada and has acted very capably as a student welfare board.

Before CAMSI came on the medical scene, there had been much confusion with regard to the placing of internes in the various hospitals throughout Canada. Potential internes would place applications before as many as six hospitals in an effort to ensure their being placed somewhere by the time they had graduated.

As a result, some of the fellows would get more than one answer and find themselves in the difficult situation of not knowing where to go. Or possibly they would snatch at the first opportunity that came along even though it was not considered best. Now, however, all these kinds have been ironed out by CAMSI and as a result this body has become a very significant and popular one.

CAMSI has tried to get compulsory free X-ray plates for all medical students and X-rays for tuberculosis have been obtained at reduced cost.

The School of Nursing

In a university at large and scattered as our own, an integrating force such as that provided by The Varsity is a necessity rather than a luxury. Thus we realize the importance of the paper played in the life of the student body. On this sixtieth birthday, we are glad to offer thanks for past service, appreciation of the present, and many good wishes for the future. May your sense of responsibility keep pace with your growing power and with the awesome opportunities of the present day.

As this issue of the paper intends to paint a composite picture of the work being done in the University, each one of us must contribute a brief word about the activities of the school which he, or she, represents. Thus it falls to me to speak of this young School of Nursing which came into existence only in 1933, although the work that it is doing was not entirely new at that time for it absorbed a former teaching unit called the Department of Public Health Nursing, and also took over some courses for graduate nurses that were being carried by the Department of University Extension.

In addition to an ever increasing variety of one year courses for graduate nurses, the new school is offering a full training course in general nursing, which includes also a preparation for public health nursing, and which is a little over three years in length. As the school is detached from the hospital — to the extent of being placed on the opposite side of the street — it is a bit difficult for people to understand how it can maintain a real training in nursing. It appears possible, however, to bridge even this great gulch of space, and slowly we are breaking through the tradition which has forbidden educational and financial independence to a nursing school. Working with the help of an endowment from the Rockefeller Foundation (given for the particular purpose of improving the preparation of public health nurses) the school is demonstrating the need to distinguish between the service needs of the hospital and the educational needs of the student who is preparing for future service. There is an interesting field of work here for young women who have completed a course in the Faculty of Arts, and the school offers an especially favourable arrangement of work for candidates of this kind.

Faculty of Medicine

The Faculty of Medicine wishes The Varsity many happy returns of its sixtieth birthday. As medical men we think of you in terms of your life history from the time you were brought into the world up until you enter now into that period in human beings which we recognize as senescent. But whereas man's life only extends over three generations of the time he attains this age, yours has passed through sixty generations, or should we say only fifteen, for many of your staff serve you for the four-year period of a university course. In this latter way, you differ from other members of your phyla, for their contributors, many of whom have served their apprenticeship with you, spend their whole lifetime forcing their ideas of politics and war, and even the practice of medicine, upon us and the innocent public. As far as you, yourself, are concerned, you are to be congratulated upon your continuous life, despite the fact that your life cycle lasts only four years. Each new generation has maintained your vitality as the result of the hereditary influence of its predecessors, and has thus perpetuated your useful and valuable functions for the undergraduates of your alma mater.

We in Medicine appreciate the recognition you have always given to our Faculty throughout your long history, despite the small contribution that we have been able to make to your publication. We are learning to serve the public in one way and you in another. "As a race," writes Sir Oliver Lodge, "we are still in the morning of the times. We have hardly begun to tackle the real problems which face humanity. We do not yet realize what life might be but if each generation strives to leave the world a little bit better than it found it, there is no end to the good that can ultimately be accomplished."

Medical Building Gutted In Great Fire of 1928

Fire Attacked Medical Building About 7.30 a.m. and by 10 a.m. Main Building was Practically Gutted

FIRE UNEXPECTED

"Medical Building Gutted This Morning; Fire Breaks Out Unexpectedly at 7.30." This was the screaming headline in the Stop the Press news of The Varsity, January 30, 1928.

Next day a fuller account of the great fire appeared in The Varsity. It read as follows:

Fire of unknown origin, causing damage estimated at $50,000 dollars broke out in the medical building of the university shortly before eight o'clock yesterday morning. It first began on the third floor in the research laboratories of the department of biochemistry. The blaze spread to the second floor and to the attic. The damage caused by the fire itself is not as heavy as previously estimated but the water and ice will cause great harm. Firemen were greatly handicapped by the fact that they were forced to use ice-covered apparatus with which they had been fighting the holocaust at the Metropolitan Church. At 9.30 a.m. the fire was out although dense clouds of smoke continued to emerge from the building. The loss is fully covered by insurance.

The most serious aspect of the conflagration is the temporary setback to the research work of Dr. Burke and Mr. Balfour, F.A.Sc., were the chief sufferers in this respect, losing the work of several years. Their loss fortunately is not irreparable. Many of the professors were on the scene immediately and collected many of their personal papers, analyses and figures from research work. Hundreds of students looked on as the blaze was subdued, kept back by a special squad of policemen.

Schoolmen congregated on the steps of the little Red Schoolhouse hurling their customary war-cry, "Poor Mees!" as the fire progressed. As one of the big ice-coated extension ladders crashed through the window of the building an answering shout of "Dirty School!" was hurled back.

Medical Society Student Organ Of Government

Although Only Three Years Old Has Done a Great Deal to Further Pleasant Relations with Hospitals

HELPS INTERNES

Organ of student government for the Faculty of Medicine is the Medical Society, for whose upkeep as well as for that of the Athletic Association and the Medical Journal, each prospective doctor pays an annual fee.

The Medical Society looks after the Meds At-Home, the medical banquet and other such functions. Any money which is left over from these affairs is used as a fund for bursaries.

The Athletic Association buys all sorts of equipment for the students who take part in the various sports. The Medical Journal is edited by a student and the articles that appear in it are written by students and professors. Six issues of this journal appear every year.

The history of the Medical Society is a long one and according to the president, Bill Orved, it "started long before the last war". The society conducts meetings on current topics at which there are open discussions. Many of the changes in the course of medicine, which took place three years ago, were due to the efforts of the Medical Society.

Many of the men engaged in research work lost valuable personal articles in the fire. Dr. E. Henderson, who has an extremely valuable personal library on the second floor reported that it was unharmed. The private office of Dr. A. Hunter on the third floor and the immediate section destroyed by the fire was also unharmed. As Dr. Hunter has many personal possessions in the way of apparatus, documents and slides in these rooms it is particularly fortunate that they escaped destruction.

Medical Profession History Example of Great Work In Fields of Learning

Thanks to Generous Endowment of a Chair by Sir John and Lady Eaton, it became Possible in 1920 to Appoint Dr. Duncan Graham the First "Full-time" Professor in the University

GALLIE DEAN OF FACULTY SINCE 1936

The history of the medical profession in this province is an example of the great strides made over the past hundred years in the fields of learning and science in this Canada of ours. It is the saga of an advance from the rude beginnings when private practitioners conducted schools of their own in Upper Canada to the extensive system which present day civilization enjoys.

Back in the days of the horse and buggy students placed themselves under the tutelage of distinguished medical practitioners in the province. After 1818 they presented themselves for examination to the Upper Canada medical board and after 1839 to the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Upper Canada.

First Lecture in 1844

Properly organized medical education began with the opening of King's College in 1843, and the opening lecture of the medical faculty was given by Dr. Hersick on January 15, 1844. A small frame building known as the anatomical theatre was erected to the west of the old Parliament Buildings on King St.

Dr. J. H. Richardson, one of the two first medical graduates of King's College, describes the building thus: "The first building used for medical teaching was a frame structure just west of the Parliament Buildings containing two rooms, one for anatomical, the other for chemical classes. When dissection and preparations were performed in anatomy it was common for students to group themselves around the dissecting table during the lecture in order to get a view of the subject. As might be expected, sometimes the students, though never unruled, would indulge in harmless fun."

Moved into Moss Hall

In 1850 the building in Queen's Park known as Moss Hall was built for the accommodation of the medical faculty of King's College. The teaching of medicine was discontinued in the University of Toronto under the University Act of 1853, due largely to the work of John Rolph. This extraordinary man had studied both law and medicine in England, and had not only been called to the bar from the Inner Temple but was also a member of the Royal College of Surgeons.

Rolph Undermined Faculty

In 1831 he settled in York (Toronto) and here he established a private medical class which he conducted for several years. In 1843 he was permitted to return to the country after being forced to fly in 1837 because of his connection with the Mackenzie rebellion. He re-established in Toronto what became known as "Rolph's School". This private medical school was a rival of the medical faculty of King's College. In 1851, Hincks government he worked to undermine the medical faculty of the new University of Toronto and succeeded in doing so in 1853.

From 1853 to 1887 the University of Toronto continued to conduct exams to confer degrees in medicine but the work of instruction was carried on by the proprietary medical schools. Rolph's school was incorporated in 1851 under the name of the Toronto School of Medicine; but in 1854 it became affiliated with Victoria College at Cobourg.

In 1855, Drs. W. T. Arkins and H. H. Wright left Dr. Rolph, taking the charter of his school with them, and founded a new medical school called the Toronto School of Medicine. Within a few years of Rolph's death in 1870, his school passed out of existence and the building which it had occupied was taken over by its new rival. A third school, known originally as the Upper Canada School of Medicine, was founded by Dr. E. M. Hodder and Dr. James Bovell early in 1850 and later in that year it had become the medical faculty of Trinity University. In 1856 it broke up and several of its faculty including Drs. Hodder and Bovell joined the

Toronto School of Medicine. Eligible for U. of T. Degrees

From 1853 to 1887, students from all medical schools were eligible as candidates for the degree of the University of Toronto though in practice most of the medical grads of the university were trained in the Toronto School of Medicine. During these years the idea of reviving medicine as a teaching faculty in the university was several times mooted.

In 1882 the University of Toronto raised the standard of medicine, and this action brought the situation in medical education to a head. In 1887 Dr. W. T. Arkins, who had been head of the Toronto School of Medicine, was appointed dean of the faculty and Dr. Adams Wright its first secretary. Under Dr. Arkins the faculty was placed on a sound footing.

Building Erected in 1902

The medical building of the university was erected in 1902 and the long war between the various medical schools in Toronto was brought to an end with the amalgamation of the Trinity Medical School and the medical faculty of the University of Toronto in 1903.

Medical Course Extended

On Dr. Reeve's retirement in 1908, Dr. C. K. Clarke was appointed dean and he, like Dr. Reeve, remained dean for 12 years. Under him the medical course in the university was lengthened, first to five and then to six years; and plans were laid for the reorganization of the faculty through the appointment of so-called "full time" professors of the clinical subjects of medicine and surgery.

Thanks to a generous endowment of a chair by Sir John and Lady Eaton, it became possible in 1920 to appoint Dr. Duncan Graham the first "full time" professor in the university, and in 1921 the reorganization was completed by the appointment of Dr. L. C. Starr as first "full time" professor of surgery.

In order to aid in this development, the Rockefeller Foundation made a magnificent financial contribution. The latter stages of the reorganization was carried out, not by Dean Clarke who resigned as head of the faculty in 1920, but by his successor Dr. A. Primrose, under whom the reputation of the medical faculty reached its zenith. Not only had the standard of undergraduate instruction become as high as anywhere else on the continent, but the research work conducted in the laboratories produced results of the most far-reaching importance such as the discovery of insulin by Dr. F. G. Banting.

Dr. Primrose was dean of the faculty until 1932 when Dr. J. G. FitzGerald was appointed. Dr. Gallie has been dean of the Faculty of Medicine since 1936.

Alpha Omega Alpha For Top Students

Top medical students at the University of Toronto are members of a fraternity called the Alpha Omega Alpha.

Membership to this organization is restricted to the four top men in both the fifth and sixth years in the faculty. That is, the active membership in the fraternity is limited to eight men and these people meet every two weeks at different professors' homes where one of the members gives a paper on some medical topic.

Records of Good Musical Works Played by Vic Record Club

The idea of the Victoria College Record Club, youngest of Victoria's extra-curricular societies, was conceived last fall by three Vic students who proceeded to round up a group of students interested in hearing recordings of good music.

The use of the Victoria Chapel was procured for meetings, but the university's direct current blasted hopes of electrical reproduction and the club was forced to rely for some time on the unsatisfactory efforts of an old acoustical machine. Bill Dafoe, Gate House electrical wizard, came to the club's rescue and produced a unit which would operate on direct current. Since then the Monday noon club have been privileged to hear recordings of the finest music, played by great musicians and reproduced by the best modern electrical methods.

A recent innovation has been the playing of records made by members of the club. The records played at the regular meetings are contributed by members from their own collections.

Jottings From Files Reveal Human Highlights

Men Once Lived in Women's Union

old Union yet larger, more attractive, and more easily adapted for common rooms and expansion. In the spring of 1922 tentative plans were on view at the office of Colonel Le Pan, superintendent of buildings and grounds of the university. Two dining rooms, the necessary kitchens and pantries were to be added at the back, stretching back 90 feet, almost to the fence. Thus 170 people could be accommodated for dinner and twice that number for lunch, cafeteria style. Upstairs there was to be a large lecture room or assembly hall, with stage and dressing rooms. The first plans proved inadequate as far as the library, guest rooms, offices for the resident head, bedroom accommodation and dietitians' quarters were concerned so the U.C. alumnae continued to agitate, raise money, and develop plans.

Tuesday evening, February 14, 1923, was a memorable occasion in the lives of U.C. women. For on that night the new Women's Union was officially opened. A large number of graduates were present to make their acquaintance with the new building. The undergraduates of the college had put much work, including the hemming and hanging of the blue curtains in the theatre, into the success of the new Union. After the "Tour of Inspection", the students were welcomed by Miss Waddington. "The Bear" by Chekhov was presented in the theatre.

Thus the Women's Union as it stands today came into existence, and it has served its purpose well for eighteen years. Owing to a limited amount of money with which to make the alterations, the idea of a gym had to be dispensed with and the theatre leaves much to be desired. The problem of a library was met by the building of Whitney Hall, and its library under Mulock House. Nevertheless the present Union is in danger of being outgrown, and the only hope is that in the near future some kind soul will prove a fairy godfather to the women of the university and make the "Hart-House-for-women" dream come true.

Victoria University

On behalf of the students, the graduates and the staff of Victoria University I extend my heartiest congratulations to The Varsity on the occasion of its sixtieth anniversary. During the six decades of its history it has seen many important developments in the university, including the inauguration of university federation and the establishment of many new faculties. At the same time it too, has grown and developed, and today is one of the great unifying forces on the university campus. Its readers are the whole university; its staff is representative of the many faculties and colleges of the university; and it seeks to keep in touch with the various activities of the campus and to mirror its life.

There are definite limitations to a college daily. A great newspaper continuity to its policy and who, by the vigour and clarity of his thinking and a college daily, whose staff and constituents change each year and whose studies, must be measured by different standards. But if a college daily lacks the depth and breadth of his views, wins for himself a wide constituency. But officers regard their work—or should regard their work—as secondary to their continuity of policy and is relatively feeble in dealing with national interests, it has its own compensations. It is written for college students by college students and it reveals their interests, their activities and their problems, and breathes the spirit of youth.

Though their work on The Varsity many students have discovered their capacities and their limitations for journalistic work, and as a result some have gone directly into that field after graduation. As a training ground for future journalists The Varsity serves a real purpose, for if the freedom of the press is to be maintained the spirit of the university must be infused into our newspapers.

The freedom of the press is not the freedom to say what one pleases, but the freedom to speak the truth. It requires journalists possessed of intelligent understanding of people and of issues, of firmness of spirit and dispassionateness of outlook that is concerned to present the news without bias, and of the courage to stand for what one believes to be the best interests of the nation.

May The Varsity long continue as a training ground for such journalists.

WALTER T. BROWN,
President.

City's Needy Made Happy By University Settlement

The University Settlement is a veritable hive of activity. Through its doors every week over 2,000 people pass, whose lives have been made fuller and more enjoyable than they would otherwise have been. Here men, women and children of 38 different nationalities from the district are brought into contact with one another; here they gather and exchange views, acquire new leisure-time skills and find further enjoyment in life through recreation. These are a part of the vast number of working people who form the backbone of every nation. People on relief and especially those who are foreign-born and find themselves swallowed up in a strange city, tend to lose their sense of community responsibility, and grow isolated and lonely, either sinking into apathy or becoming actively anti-social. It is in this satisfying the urge of human beings to belong to a definite community that the Settlement fulfills its chief aim.

Of Help to Volunteers

Since it is a University Settlement, it also serves another purpose; it offers students and other members of the university an opportunity of enriching the life of a crowded city community by putting into practice the knowledge and experience which they possess. The volunteers, in their turn, through these contacts gain a wider sympathy and a keener insight into the actual results of our present-day social and economic forces.

Founded in 1910 by Sir Robert Falconer and a group of interested graduates and members of the University of Toronto, the Settlement acquired the present building at 23 Grange Road in 1926 through the generosity of friends. In 1928, a new hall was added which could seat 125, and a men's and boys' club room suitable for billiards and bowling. At present, two small semi-detached residences make up the Settlement House and space is taxed to the limit for the many activities carried on by the permanent staff of eleven members, aided by 172 volunteers.

Effect of War Shown

International events in the past year and a half have not been without their effect on the life of the Settlement. Enlistment among the families has increased; foreign born are speedily taking out naturalization papers, and jobs are becoming more plentiful. Coupled with the intense anxiety of the Central Europeans for their relatives in the war zones, is their undying gratitude that they themselves are safely in Canada. These young people are showing an increased interest in the country of their parents, yet at the same time showing that they owe their first allegiance to Canada. Nowhere is this so well illustrated as in the groups containing Russians, Finns, Germans, Poles, Czechoslovaks, and Jews, who play together without any feeling of bitterness. None of those social poisons which are usually one of the most deplorable results of war among civilians have been bred in the Settlement.

Language Difficulties Found

One of the most interesting of the clubs conducted is the Senior International Club with a membership of 71 men and women who represent 17 different nationalities. The club program consists in singing their folk-songs translated into English, folk-dancing, and games. Self-government was at first a problem owing to the difficulty of language and lack of experience in democratic methods, but there has been marked improvement. The International Exhibition is their big event of the year. Last spring it was a very colourful affair—a village street was constructed in the big hall with a Finnish windmill, Russian, Ukrainian, Hungarian, Danish, Norwegian, and English cottages. At these the various national handicrafts were sold or exhibited.

Women Do War Work

War work is a definite part of the program of the three mothers' clubs—one provides funds and clothes for evacuated children, another supplies Settlement boys and club members' socks with sweaters and socks. The weekly

Group of Methodists Founded College at Cobourg when Family Compact Refused to Allow Introduction of Liberal Subjects in Government-Controlled Educational Institutions; Came to Toronto when Federated in 1892

UNIVERSITY IN OWN RIGHT

A century ago this year a young secondary school on the old Ontario strand became a full fledged college under the name of the reigning Queen, Victoria. Thus it is that Victoria celebrates her centenary in the same year as The Varsity's diamond jubilee.

In the early thirties of the last century certain energetic Methodists requested that more liberal subjects be introduced into the curriculum of the existing educational institutions.

The conservative element then controlling education in the province refused, and the Methodists resolved to found a liberal school. To this end the cornerstone of the Upper Canada Academy was laid in 1832 in the town of Cobourg. But the Family Compact under their patron, Lieutenant-Governor Sir Francis Bond Head, sought to prevent the establishment of the new school by refusing to grant a charter or lend any financial aid from the public funds.

Although there were fewer than 10,000 Methodists from whom to raise the $3000 necessary to complete the building fifty-five of the sixty circuit-riding ministers took the lead by pledging $100 (in some cases half a year's salary) and set off on their rounds to solicit more. The response was amazing, but the goal was not reached, and again the ministers and secular sponsors of the scheme gave all they could and enlisted their personal credit in support of the as yet unbuilt academy.

In 1836, the Legislative Assembly having proved itself hopelessly stubborn the Reverend Egerton Ryerson went to England and on October 12th of that year King William IV granted the Upper Canada Academy the first charter ever given to a school founded by Dissenters.

To his amazement Bond Head was forced to grant financial support to the new institution and the Upper Canada Academy began a life no less difficult than its birth.

In June, 1841, the trustees of the academy by pointing out its excellent record of five years' growth and progress were able to petition successfully for an Act of Parliament permitting the institution to undertake university subjects with the name Victoria College.

From the beginning Victorians were interested in the idea of a federated state university. All during the half century between 1842 and 1892 various proposals for federation were discussed and at last in 1892 Victoria, a university in her own right with Arts, Law, Medical, Science, and Theology faculties, left her home on the old Ontario strand to come to Queen's Park as a Federated College of the University of Toronto. Later Trinity and Saint Michael's Colleges joined the federation and the university as we know it today became a fact.

The period between 1841 and 1892 was one beset with numerous growing pains. It was not easily that Victoria grew, and her joining University College in federation was made at considerable sacrifice of hard won privilege and cherished rights. Her rights of granting degrees were held in abeyance, her medical and scientific faculties went to strengthen those of the university, while some of her classes were taken over as university subjects. Most important of all, her independence was now gone and as a college Victoria could not hope for academic glory. Her own would henceforth be the university's.

Materially Victoria has since contributed her full share to the university. She has steadily maintained a registration of better than 30 per cent of the university enrollment in Arts and has provided instruction for these students in all the college subjects. She has provided residences and dining facilities and has encouraged and provided space for athletics. Her extra-curricular life is second to none in constructive activity as well as from the purely recreational standpoint. In her position as a church college Victoria has been given bequests and endowments which she has been able to hand on to the university and which the university as a state institution might well not have obtained but for Victoria's good offices. The Lillian Massey Building was first offered to Victoria, and Hart A. Massey, for whom Hart House is named, was a graduate of Victoria. The Dunlop Observatory was given by a member of the Board of Victoria College. "Victoria," her principal points out, "represents the voluntary spirit in education and that voluntary spirit has overflowed into the university."

meetings at the Settlement mean a great deal to these women whose homes are growing more and more lonely as their sons and husbands leave for overseas service. There are also three sewing classes, two of whom are supported and supplied by the women's auxiliary, the other receiving instruction from two university staff wives.

The pottery class for adults is typical of Settlement groups in that it is composed of a wide variety of people—a professor's wife, a dressmaker, a girl in domestic service, a teacher, a writer, a student, a factory worker, and an ex-missionary, as well as several housewives.

Valuable Instruction Given

In the Homemakers' Club, the young married women learn the mysteries of home economics—the balancing of meals and budgets. The women also derive much enjoyment from the weekly gym class given by the Margaret Eaton girls. A women's choir has been conducted most successfully for over a year now, and a group for music appreciation has been started.

The two men's clubs and the Armchair Club for older men and the Young Men's Club, meet on the same night in an endeavour to build up a definite men's night in the house. Games and the occasional lecture constitute the program. The activity to which the men formerly used to flock is Open House held on Saturday nights chiefly for the unemployed. It is now held at St. Christopher House instead of at the Settlement.

In more serious vein are the many classes and clinics conducted. Ten English classes are taught by qualified teachers and university students. Parent education class gives an opportunity of discussing problems pertaining to the home. Two clinics are held—the well baby clinic maintained by the public health department, and the mothers' clinic supervised by a volunteer woman doctor and a nurse.

Develop Responsibility

In the young people's clubs, an effort is made to develop a sense of responsibility, and every opportunity is given for experience in organization and leadership. The various programs include games, gym work, dramatics, arts and crafts, discussion groups, photography, sports, and dancing.

The largest of these is the Junior International which has 100 members, and has undertaken many worthwhile projects. They have organized national nights on which they bring in outside talent to demonstrate the music and dancing of different nations. Last summer they raised money to send a boy and girl to the Fresh Air Camp, and hope that this year they will be able to send more.

From Tiny School to Foremost Ranking Faculty

Faculty of Engineering One of Ranking Colleges

From a tiny school to one of the foremost ranking engineering colleges on the continent, has been the evolution of Varsity's Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering in the course of sixty years.

It was only after the greatest difficulty and many years of effort on the part of those interested, that the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Ontario could be persuaded to sanction the founding of a School of Practical Science. From 1878 until the turn of the century it remained such, then in 1900 it became known by its present name; six years later, by the University Act of 1905, it became the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering in the University of Toronto.

The first public recognition given to the need of technical training in Ontario was in 1871 when a bill was introduced in the legislature to provide for the establishment of a College of Technology where mathematics, chemistry, mechanical engineering and drawing, and modern languages might be taught. In due time a building at the corner of Church and Adelaide Streets was bought and fitted up with laboratories and lecture rooms; night classes were conducted by three instructors, one of whom was James Loudon who later became president of this university.

In 1877 legislation resulted in the change to the School of Practical Science, and steps were taken towards the construction of a building on the university grounds. The following year, the north wing of the present Engineering Building was ready for classes. By '91, increase in the enrolment forced the completion of the building as it is today in order to provide space for the needed lecture rooms, drafting rooms and laboratories.

It was just about this time that School began to expand by leaps and bounds. From an enrolment of five at its founding, it increased to 151 in 1892; in 1901 there were only thirty-three graduating, but at the same time there were 151 in the first year alone. Ten years later the total number of students had pyramided to 793.

Further expansion had begun in 1901 when work was started on the Mining Building; in 1910 the Mechanical Building was complete; in 1930 the cornerstone of the Mill Building was laid.

Through all this growth, the guiding hands have been those of the deans and a few thoroughly interested members of the staff. Theirs were the heart-aches and discouragements of pioneers and adventurers, but untiring enthusiasm and zeal carried them on towards their unwavering goal; today, the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering of the University of Toronto ranks among the world's great engineering schools.

1929-1930

In keeping with the vogue of mystery typified by the appearance of "The Green Murder Case" on the local screen, a Vic student disappeared for two weeks, turning up at the home of his girl friend's parents at Rochester. Father Forster of St. Michael's College also disappeared and was not mentioned in The Varsity's columns again.

Official records of this year will give the information that E. W. Wallace became Chancellor of Vic and that Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain received his honorary LL.D. degree. Unofficial chronicles will note that the Vic Students' Parliament threw furniture during a debating session and that 60 per cent of the students favoured the sale of beer on the campus in a straw vote conducted by The Varsity.

The Varsity's political squabble of the year ended in victory when the S.A.C. unanimously condemned the action of its president, Allan Ferry, in suppressing a screamer concerning a meeting of the council advocating changes in student government. Ferry had removed the offending screamer from the forms and substituted his own in the later editions.

1930-1931

The Varsity celebrated its fiftieth anniversary by picking fights with everyone in sight. It took on the S.A.C., the Board of Governors, the downtown press (singly and in groups), the police, members of the staff, and students. Subjects of discussion ranged from free speech and atheism to Rudy Vallee's rendition of "The Blue and White" and parked petting on the university grounds.

An editorial by Editor A. E. F. Allan in which he asserted that the majority of the staff were practical atheists finally brought action from the authorities. The S.A.C. suspended The Varsity and published their own news bulletins for several days until the innocuous twenty pages of The Varsity's Fiftieth Anniversary Issue appeared.

1931-1932

Announcement of the election of Canon H. J. Cody to succeed Sir Robert Falconer as president of the university, and the opening of Whitney Hall were the highlights of a remarkably peaceful year of Varsity publication. Even the Cat died for a few weeks to reappear casually when its writers thought of a few more ideas.

The eminent British statesman, Winston Churchill, visited Toronto to give an address at the new Maple Leaf Gardens. An explosion in the Mining Building killed one student and injured another.

Warren Stevens, forward passing star of the Montreal Varsity Wheelers, was appointed Athletic Director of the University of Toronto.

Marlene Dietrich was playing in "Shanghai Express".

1932-1933

A group of inebriates hit the headlines by rolling into the Varsity Press early one morning and starting a minor riot. They were ejected by the gallant staff members, aided by two co-eds.

The prices of Hart House meals were reduced and students spoke disparagingly of the C.O.T.C., charging that it instilled a spirit of militarism into the campus.

The Blue gridders sloshed through the mud of Molson Stadium to win the intercollegiate title from McGill but lost 9-3 to Hamilton Tigers in the eastern final.

1933-1934

The Varsity scooped the world when it learned by phone of the Mollians' unsuccessful take-off attempts at Wagsa Beach. Two editions were run in order to catch the latest developments.

Long John Sinclair celebrated his last game in a Varsity uniform by booting all of the ten points that gave the Blues the intercollegiate title.

Applied Science

FIFTY YEARS AGO

To ask me to contribute a memoir on The Varsity of sixty years ago is beyond me, the utmost to which I can stretch my memory is fifty-two years and in round figures I am thinking of a half-century ago, in the gay nineties.

In those days the University had less than nine hundred undergraduates, Arts, Medicine, and Engineering, although at that time the School of Practical Science was not a Faculty but an affiliated college. It must nevertheless be borne in mind that the old "School" goes back to 1878, the date cut in the stone over the door on the north side of the "old red school house."

Fifty years ago Applied Science, as we now call it, had about seventy undergraduates. My own class entered with thirty-two and graduated in 1892 with eighteen. Then there were but three courses, Civil, Chemical, and a combination of Mechanical and Electrical. We participated in all the University organizations, including the Literary and Scientific Society, but we had our own Engineering Society which was started in the late eighties.

Today, with a thousand students in Applied Science in ten Departments and over five thousand graduates, the "Old School" is proud of a long and useful life in its contribution to the development of the country. Its graduates are scattered over Canada and beyond, and many are now serving in the armed forces overseas as they did in the Great War of 1914-18. One hundred and forty-four rest in Flanders Fields.

To read some of the journalistic efforts and the college news items as presented in The Varsity of fifty years ago (on very good magazine paper, too), would be a good pastime even of this generation. In one issue, December 16, 1890, were three clever original poems, one by a man who later made a great name in the Church, "A visit to Paris" by one later a Canadian financier, a most timely article on "State Aid vs. Private Enterprise," good for today, another descriptive of the Glee Club's trip to Hamilton (lily in a special car) to give a concert, most amusing, whilst among the news items a reference is made to an advertisement of a well-known jewellery firm, still going, for pins, cuff-links, etc., made from the great bell destroyed in University College fire of the previous February.

A three-column article, March 1, 1892, "School of Science Formal Opening" would be exceedingly interesting reading to engineering students of today. It described the official function of opening the "main building," being all that large portion of the large Engineering Building, except the north wing, which up to that time, had constituted the "School." There were 1,500 people present in the evening, packed into what is now the First Year Drafting Room, third floor. Speeches were by the Minister of Education, the Chancellor and Dean Galbraith, the Father of "School," on "Technical Education." All the machinery in the building was on exhibition, operated by students, to the delight of their guests. The main interest was in the new 100-ton testing machine, still in use in the Strength of Materials Laboratory, which was pulling apart steel bars for their pleasure.

"Time Marches On," the shade of The Varsity still haunt University Halls and the "Spirit of School" is still distilled.

Dean.

Varsity Grad Engineers Found Within Borders Of Numerous Countries

Engineers from University of Toronto Permeate Life and Activities of Whole Country; People in Canada Continually Coming in Contact with the Works of Their Hands and Their Intellects

SCHOOL GRADUATES NUMBER 4,500 LIVING

Almost half the graduate engineers of the Dominion of Canada are alumni of the University of Toronto. But Canada alone is not the home of Varsity-educated engineers; every country of the civilized world finds graduates of The Faculty of Applied Science within its borders.

Beginning with the first graduate from the School of Practical Science in 1881, the ranks of Schoolmen have swelled to include five thousand, of whom 4,500 are living.

Engineers from the University of Toronto permeate the life and activities of this whole country. From the time Canadians leave their beds in the morning until they turn off the light at night, they are continually coming in contact with the works of their hands and their intellects.

From tap-water to street-cars, from dishes to power plants, from metal money to newspapers, from the buildings along the streets, the streets themselves, railways and canals to planes overhead, one continually comes in contact with their deeds and realizes to what extent they have become so much a part of our daily lives.

Many of the recent graduates have placed themselves at the service of their country, and are now found in uniform; others did so during the last war, and of the 640 who served, 144 died in action.

Many of the alumni have added to the world's knowledge by either going on the staffs of various technical schools and engineering colleges or by going into fields of research and invention. To list the graduates who deserve mention for conspicuous contributions to human welfare and happiness in whatever field they found themselves would require much more space than is available. However, a few include: W. D. Black, president of the Oils-Pensom Elevator Company in Hamilton; R. A. Bryce, noted consultant mining engineer; Dr. J. B. Chaffies, vice-president of the Shawinigan Power Company; H. A. Dixon, chief engineer of the

C.N.R.; G. Herrick Duggan, engineer for the Dominion Bridge Company; J. M. R. Fairbairn, former chief engineer of the C.P.R.; F. A. Gaby, late chief engineer of the Hydro-Electric Power Company; Dr. Norman Gibson, chief engineer and vice-president of the Niagara Power Company; T. H. Hogg, chairman of the Hydro Commission; T. R. Loudon, formerly of this university and now with the R.C.A.F.; K. S. MacLachlan, Deputy Minister of National Defence; Balmer Neilly, high mining official; E. S. Rogers, late of Rogers-Majestic Radio; Max V. Sauer, chief engineer of the Beauharnois Power Company; E. R. Williams, superintendent of Shawinigan Chemicals. Such a list is far from being complete.

Not only have engineering graduates from this university won recognition among laymen, but also among their colleagues and contemporaries. Of the fifty-two presidents of the Engineering Institute of Canada, eleven of the twenty-one college graduates were alumni of the Faculty of Applied Science.

In almost every field of human endeavour engineers have found their places, and it is the fond dream of those who guide the destinies of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering that its graduates will continue to help mould and fashion Canada into one of the truly great nations of the future.

Doctor James L. Morris First S.P.S. Student

Every morning at eight-thirty finds School's first graduate in the new parliament buildings unlocking his office door — a door whose inscription tells us that this is the office of chief inspector and engineer in the Department of Lands and Forests.

Seated in his second-floor office behind a huge desk piled with papers, letters and blue-prints, and surrounded by book-eases, files and maps, this man whose appearance reminds one more than a little of former Vice-President Garner, daily conducts his work.

It is sixty-three years since Jimmy Morris left the upper Ottawa Valley to come to Varsity. Now he is Doctor James L. Morris, an engineer with many years of experience, a citizen with many years of public service.

When he came here first he tried to enrol in University College, but he found that he wished to enter a course where there were no special lectures, and no drafting rooms. Professor Albert Baker, registrar of the college, told him, "Well then, you'd better cross the lot to that red brick building where they are starting up a school of science."

And so his first graduate enrolment in S.P.S.

But no matter what he has thought since then, it was not without misgivings that the sixteen-year-old trudged across the lawn. Some forty years later he wrote: "Looking back at that architectural gem, University College, and in front at the red brick pile with 'School of Practical Science—1877' cut over the main entrance, there was no doubt in my mind that a grave mistake had been made somewhere, and that I was not to be a University of Toronto graduate."

In those days the School comprised only one-third of the present Engineering Building, and the main entrance faced north. The first floor was composed of the chemistry and mineralogy labs and the second was mostly chemistry labs. Only one large room on the east side of the building was left for the Engineering Department.

The faculty was composed of only five members. One of these was James Loudon, professor of biology, grand uncle of "Tommy", and future president of the university. Another was Johnny Galbraith, assistant professor of chemistry, and future Dean of the Faculty of Applied Science. Dr. Galbraith was the whole staff, lecturing on mixed mathematics and engineering subjects, and he also took charge of the drafting room and field work.

Of the six students who entered S.P.S. in its first year, only one graduated in '81; another of the same class followed the next year with two others, and similarly three more graduated in '83.

Field work was conducted in the ravine running from College Street to Bloor, and on the ground where Convocation Hall and the Medical Building now stand.

As yet, the faculty was not large enough to have its own undergraduate clubs, and so the University College Literary and Scientific Society amended its constitution to give all the regular students of S.P.S. the privileges of membership.

Even in its first year, School took an active part in sports. Its first championship came in '78 when Schoolmen won the walking race on the lawn of University College. Next year they came through with two wins — the mile and the half-mile races.

Little Red Schoolhouse

Home of the Toike Oike, scene of many a School scuffle, the Engineering Building stands in cold, red brickedness ready to meet anyone who may raise a hand or lift a voice against any of her sons.

FIVE SCHOOLMEN INVENT TOIKE OIKE ---YELL OF TRIUMPH FROM BEGINNING

Wherever Engineers are found, there is their yell. Be it at a football match, an election parade downtown, a coast-to-coast broadcast of their At-Home, or a Vic class party, there is the yell.

But where the yell came from, most people haven't the slightest idea. Six years ago one of the faculty tried to chase it down. Finally he got a letter from Walter H. Boyd of the Dominion Department of Mines. In part it read: "I remember quite well the birth of the School 'Yell'—Toike Oike. It came about in this way: a group of us, Stovel, Burnside, Carter, Piper, thought that the School should have a catchy yell, that could be used on all occasions such as football matches, etc., and a triumphant yell of victory when we succeeded in stealing the bicycle racks from the Arts Building and for other such stirring occasions."

Apparently each one of the group above mentioned was to forget about books, slide-rules, results and formulae, and was to concentrate all mental effort on the composition of a yell — a yell which would stir the blood of the faint hearted, spur the tired to victory, and ring out as a triumphant battle-cry.

In due time, the fruits of each one's labours were examined. Each yell was practised: each yell was judged. The choice was Piper's "Toike Oike". Apparently the words "Toike Oike" were coined by the yell's author especially for that purpose.

The other part starting with "We are! We are . . ." and stretching on down to all those naughty words was imported from some unknown engineering campus, and together the two came down to the present day after echoing across Canada and around the world since the turn of the century.

Trinity College Atmosphere Reflects English Tradition

St. Hilda's Established To Recognize Co-eds

It was not until 1883 that Trinity College began instruction for women, and at that time they were not required to attend lectures and did not receive degrees. In 1888, Dr. Body, the second Provost of Trinity, founded St. Hilda's College for women. It was to have been modelled on the women's colleges of Oxford and Cambridge, being entirely separate from the men's college. Its first headquarters were on Euclid Avenue just east of the college, and later, in 1889, instruction was given in buildings on Shaw Street.

The plan for a separate college did not prove feasible largely because of the financial difficulties in connection with it, and in 1899 the corner stone for a residence was laid in the Trinity College grounds, the women taking instruction with the men.

In 1925 with the move to Queen's Park, St. Hilda's occupied a number of houses on St. George Street.

In the fall of 1937 building was begun it was opened the following year. It is the most up-to-date on the campus and among the most beautiful.

Though the college has been absorbed by Trinity many of its organizations have continued to develop separately. The College Meeting corresponding to the Trinity Board of Stewards acts as the medium between the students and the staff. Its officers are chosen from the various years for their scholarship. The St. Hilda's Literary Institute meets every two weeks for debates and the presentation of plays by the separate years. It has a history paralleling that of the Trinity Institute from which it was derived.

Two New Residence Wings To Be Ready in September

Episkopon Lives

Lot of Whispering that Trinity's Patron does not Really Exist but There is No Doubt About It

TOOK UP ABODE 1858

Way up in the big "pepper-box" on the top of Trinity College lives Father Episkopon, Trinity's patron, the guide of its destinies, the one who knows all, sees all, and yes, tells all. Just who he is, or why he came, no one knows; but there can be no slightest doubt that he exists. There are those in this callous age who may pretend not to believe and there is a lot of whispering about "just a lot of guff . . . some fellows get together . . ." but Father Episkopon knows and they soon find out. It is said that one time long ago before Hoskin was ever thought of, someone not of the elect tried to invade the Venerable Father's privacy and discover his secrets, and many years after when the residence was being torn down there was a skeleton—but then no one actually knows.

Sometime about 1858 Father Episkopon took up his abode in the original "pepper-box"—just why is another thing—and somehow a certain Pakenham Edward Stewart either found him out (a most daring thing) or the great Father chose Stewart from among his fellows. Anyway it was in that year that the first volume of the Episkopon was written with the help of Carruthers and Bradbury. It was in the style of Pope and was, as the Father had planned, a satire of the Trinity students and staff, carefully rebuking them for their misdeeds.

Great care has been lavished on these manuscripts, care no doubt inspired by love and fear of the Father, and many memorable documents have been produced. Cartoons met with favour, fit subjects being the various attitudes of the Provost. Even Episkopon has met with a few difficulties. There seems to have been some slight difficulty in connection with mention in a rather belittling manner of the early morning chapel; but more serious was the advent of a rival publication. In 1875

Trinity College

Trinity College extends cordial congratulations to The Varsity on the attainment of its Diamond Jubilee. It has a record which gives it good reason to be proud. It has been outspoken in its advocacy of what it considered to be in the best interests of those it represented. It has always had, and doubtless will continue to have, the outlook of youth from which the ranks of its Editors and contributors are constantly recruited. It has always displayed the energy and restlessness which characterize youth, but this has in no way impaired its usefulness.

The Varsity has through the years established its position as a minor reflecting undergraduate life and opinion. It has been a unifying influence amid the divergent interests of many faculties and colleges. As a bulletin board and a dispenser of University news it plays a part in which it can have no rival. It is now read daily by thousands with interest if not always with approval and it is accepted as a traditional institution without which University life would lose much of its savour.

Trinity College also extends its good wishes for the future of The Varsity. Whatever may be the form or shape it assumes in the days to come may it continue to render the same good services, not only to undergraduates but to the University as a whole. May it continue to have the esteem of all groups of students and play its part in maintaining and even enhancing the reputation of this University. It will do this no doubt by holding up before both graduates and undergraduates the ideals which every true student should possess. May the future of The Varsity be even more glorious than its past. Long may it live and flourish.

F. H. COSGRAVE, Provost.

Trinity Tradition, Spirit Unmatched on Campus

Trinity College has a history which is in many ways unique, a history which has left deep imprints on its collective character, and through them on the character of the individual student. In its struggle for existence, while holding firm to the ideals, with which it was begun, together with its segregation from the rest of the city, it has developed a series of traditions, and, more important still, a spirit, almost unmatched on the campus.

Trinity is rich in tradition. Its Literary Institute is one of the oldest university organizations; Episkopon is without parallel; its societies are among the most active; its record of scholarship is enviable. Moreover, there has been a serious attempt to transplant the forms of the important English colleges—Oxford and Cambridge—to Canadian soil, with the "old school tie" traditions which they imply. These factors have done much to contribute to the character of Trinity, a very decided character. With its gowns, its "we are the salt," its ceremonial, it stands alone.

Trinity is to be lauded for its comprehensive plans for the future and the generosity of its alumni which has made these plans possible. The new residences are but a beginning in these efforts. This progressive attitude must foreshadow a promising career for Trinity College.

Trinity Portal

The rear entrance of Trinity College, despite its humble location, has an architectural beauty of its own.

Democratic Training Given By Literary Institute

While stressing the importance of training their students for service in a democratic nation, many universities are failing in the actual practice. Trinity University has rather unconsciously adopted an admirable medium for this purpose in its Literary Institute. Through a very long period of development, its complexion has changed from the literary slant it once had, into a debating club, but with rather bigger significance.

In the constitution it states that "the objects of the Institute shall be the encouraging of public speaking, and the fostering of literary studies by a system of debates and by reading matter contributed to the Common Rooms".

In addition to its duties in connection with the common rooms and the Conversazione, it serves as an organized medium where student opinion can be determined and expressed, perhaps the most interesting and significant feature to an outsider.

The Institute is one of the oldest on the campus. Strangely enough its history extends over a period ten years longer than the college itself. It began in 1843 as the Debating Society of the Diocesan Theological College in Coburg with a membership of 18, not to theology."

Trinity College History Reveals Long Controversy Over Secularization

Bishop Strachan, Once President of King's College, Breaks with "Godless" University of Toronto after Religious Teaching is Abolished; Founds Trinity University Under Church of England

OLD COLLEGE ON QUEEN STREET STILL STANDS

One cannot properly understand the development and history of Trinity University without an understanding of the struggle for higher education in Upper Canada, a struggle which brought as much conflict as Canada would wish to see, the results going much to determine Canada's future character as a nation. These struggles are bound up with the fortunes of one man, the indomitable Bishop Strachan. It was he, who in 1827 travelled to England and obtained royal assent to the plans for founding a university in Canada. But the Charter was not a happy one, for it implied control of the University by the Church of England in a country where only a small portion of the people subscribed to that faith. As might be expected the hostility towards it in Canada was very great, and it was only by very careful playing of politics that the Charter was not cancelled. However, it did not pass the legislature and could not be put into effect.

It was not until 1837 that a suitable compromise was reached, and in that year an architect was hired to draw up plans. At last King's College seemed to be on the verge of reality, but on inquiring into college funds, it was found that they had been sadly dissipated through a series of injudicious loans to the members of the College Council, loans which were not immediately recoverable. The plans for building had to be discontinued.

University affairs were quiescent for the next few years but in 1842, largely through the influence of the then governor-general, Sir Charles Bagot, plans for building were once more drawn up and the Council was granted permission to use the Parliament Buildings (of Upper Canada) while building was going on. The corner stone was laid in the spring of 1842 and the official opening of King's College in the Parliament Buildings was made the following summer. King's College was now an accomplished fact, with Bishop Strachan as president.

The university question, however, was not settled. It must be remembered that this College, almost wholly supported by the state, was a college with its president as the Anglican Bishop of Toronto, nearly all the professors, members of the Church of England, and most of the undergraduates members of the same faith. There was a lot of protest, some of it unjustified, for Victoria College and Queen's also received grants, though they were not nearly as large. Various methods of settlement were proposed, none proving acceptable.

Strachan Begins Again

In 1848 the general election brought the Baldwin-Lafontaine government into power once more and Baldwin decided for complete secularization of the College. The endowments were to be turned over to a new body, the University of Toronto; the chair of divinity was abolished, and denominational forms of worship were prohibited. Strachan resigned.

The new university was "godless" to Bishop Strachan and being as sincere as he was stubborn, he immediately set forth to begin another in close connection with the Church of England. In 1850 this courageous old man—he was 72—travelled once more to England and obtained a royal charter much like that of 1827 to found his new college. By a vigorous campaign he got a "goodly" endowment, a true measure of his energy. Property in the limits of Toronto, out west along Queen Street, was set aside, and there in 1851 he laid the corner stone of Trinity University.

The University was empowered to grant degrees in seven faculties though it provided instruction only in arts, medicine and divinity. It was a rather successful attempt to reproduce the ideals of the English universities in Canada. All the staff came from either Oxford or Cambridge and had to subscribe to the Trinity-Nine Articles. Residence was compulsory except in special cases for both the students and the professors, and this implied celibacy on the part of the latter. Chapel attendance was compulsory. Religious teaching and the requirement of residence still remain among the precepts of Trinity.

Courses of Study

The medical faculty was first to go into operation, instruction being carried on in a house just north of Queen Street on Spadina. Instruction in arts and theology was not commenced until 1858. The arts calendar of those days is most interesting. Before entrance students had to make the following pledge, "I do most willingly and heartily declare that I am truly and sincerely a member of the United Church of England and Ireland", and later one concerning the practice of "barring". Attendance at lectures was compulsory and the student had to attend at ten complete terms, taking four years. There were no options. Two examinations had to be written. The first consisted of one historical book of the New Testament, Father's evidences of Christianity, the catechism, one Latin and one Greek author, Latin prose, Euclid, elementary algebra and trigonometry. The second for the actual degree was in: Bible history, one historical book of the New Testament, the Articles of the Church of England, Latin and Greek authors, Greek and Roman history, Latin prose composition, Euclid, algebra, trigonometry, mechanics and hydrostatics. For the honour degree you might specialize in classics or mathematics after the degrees had been obtained.

St. Michael's College Culmination of 84 Years of Effort

University's Newest College Building

The new St. Michael's College building, erected in 1936, the north wing of which houses the newly-established Pontifical Institute of Medieval Studies. Here, by Papal decree, students may qualify for their Licentiate and Doctorate of Medieval Studies.

St. Michael's Pontifically Erected So Students Qualify For Degrees

Experience Shows that Graduates of Pontifical Institute Are in Considerable Demand as Professors at Other Universities and Growing Interest on Continent in Culture of Middle Ages

CONDUCTS OWN EXAMS IN PHILOSOPHY

Under the terms of the agreement whereby St. Michael's College became a part of the University of Toronto it was given the right to set its own courses and conduct its own examinations in Philosophy. For that reason that subject has already been a very prominent one and the philosophy of St. Thomas Aquinas in particular has been stressed. In order that its students might be able to study under some of the most noted teachers in this field, the college brought men like Sir Bertram Windle, Reverend Gerald Phelan and Etienne Gilson to Toronto.

On the suggestion of Professor Gilson it was decided to go beyond philosophy in the field of mediaeval culture. In 1929 the Institute of Mediaeval Studies was founded under the Presidency of Father Henry Carr, now Superior-General of the Basilian Fathers, with Professors Gilson and Phelan in charge of studies.

Gained Benefit of Study Abroad

With a prophetic eye cast at the future expansion of the Institute a group of Basilian Fathers was sent abroad to the great universities of Europe for several years of study, that they might become future professors. When they returned in 1935 the curriculum of the Institute was broadened to include several mediaeval subjects. At this time also, that greatest of contemporary thinkers, Jacques Maritain, was added to the faculty on a part-time basis.

The quarters of the Institute until 1936 were in a former private residence on Elmley Place, but in that year the new building was opened, the north wing of which is entirely given over to the Institute.

Approved by Rome in 1936

The statutes governing the academic activities of the Institute were revised and approved in May, 1936, by the Sacred Congregation of Seminaries and Universities in Rome; in the same year the Archbishop of Toronto named the Rev. Gerald Phelan president.

In October, 1939, the faculties of St. Michael's and of the Institute, received the glad news that the Institute had been pontifically erected, and that its students could henceforth qualify for the pontifical degrees of Licentiate and Doctorate of Mediaeval Studies.

The relations of the Pontifical Institute of Mediaeval Studies (as it is now known) with the university are somewhat unique. Though it is not a part of the university, the fact that it was founded as a graduate school in St. Michael's College makes it possible for its professors to be also on the faculty of the School of Graduate Studies and for its students to receive both the Pontifical and the University degrees.

KNOX, WYCLIFFE, EMMANUEL REPRESENT RELIGIOUS BODIES

Three federated theological colleges, namely, Knox, Wycliffe, and Emmanuel, represent the parts played on the campus by the Presbyterian, Anglican, and United Church religious bodies respectively.

Knox first became affiliated with the University in 1875. When the Presbyterians moved from Spadina Crescent in 1915 to their present location on the front campus, The Varsity featured the dedication of the new building. On September 29th a picture of the edifice, and two columns of news appeared on the front page of the newspaper, stating that 19 honorary degrees had been conferred in this "the latest and one of the most creditable buildings surrounding the University Campus."

Knox Beard-raising Contest

News of the Knox Soccer team can be found in the very first issue of The Varsity away back on October 7, 1880, and since then the student body has frequently provided startling items for the press. In 1928 a theolog contracted smallpox, and some 20 men were quarantined. They passed the time with a beard-growing contest. In November that year an anti-smoking league broke over the question of expelling a member who had taken one puff from a pipe. October, 1929, saw Detective Black of the city police hunting for a student who had disappeared from the residence. No trace of him has yet been found.

Division Over Union

An interesting story about Knox is carried in The Varsity of October 8, 1925, when two colleges, two faculties, and two student-bodies shared the same buildings. The situation occurred at the time of the Church Union Movement. The report in The Varsity reads: "This year sees Knox opening her doors both to students of the United Church and also to those of the Presbyterian Church in Canada. Classrooms are divided, three being given to each Church, and the residences are also equally divided. As far as possible there is co-operation between the two bodies. They retain their individuality, but enter into the most friendly relationships and camaraderie."

Wycliffe College was the next one to be affiliated with the University, and this took place in 1885. The Varsity gives a detailed account of the opening of the new library in October, 1929, when Dr.

St. Joseph's, Loretto Founded 1911

Each College Operated by Order of Teaching Sisters, Both of Whom Conducted Schools Before 1911

UNIVERSITY ASSOCIATION

Prior to 1911 there were no women undergraduates at St. Michael's College, but in that year St. Joseph's and Loretto Colleges were founded and, through St. Michael's, became associated with the University. Each of these colleges is operated by an order of teaching sisters, both of whom had conducted primary and high schools in Toronto for many years before 1911.

Until 1926 St. Joseph's College held its classes at St. Joseph's Convent on St. Alban's Street, while the residence was at 25 Queen's Park. In that year the present building, just one block south of St. Michael's on Queen's Park was purchased, and is used both as residence and lecture hall.

From 1911 until 1925 Loretto College was housed in the old Loretto Abbey on Wellington Street west of Spadina. In 1925 it was moved to a wing of the Loretto school on Brunswick Avenue. Both of these locations were a long way from the University and consequently put the students at some disadvantage. In 1937 the present building on St. George Street was occupied and thus with its third location Loretto joined the University geographically.

Basilian Fathers Bring Catholic Higher Education To People of Province

"To St. Michael's College is Due the Honour and the Credit of Having Blazed the Way which Ultimately Led to the Federation of Various Other Denominational Colleges Here"

—Sir William Mulock

HISTORY DIVIDED INTO THREE PHASES

Those new-looking buildings of Indiana limestone on the east side of Queen's Park represent the culmination of 84 years of effort on the part of the Basilian Fathers, the religious order that operates St. Michael's College, to bring Catholic higher education to the Catholic people of this province. The history of St. Michael's may conveniently be divided into three phases.

During the first, up to 1881, it was a completely separate institution with no connection with the University of Toronto. It was in September, 1852, that five members of the Basilian Fathers, of Annonay, France, set up a school for boys in a red brick building on Queen Street. These quarters soon proved inadequate so in March of 1853 the fledgling academy was moved to a wing of St. Michael's Palace, which still stands, at 200 Church Street. Here it was that the name, St. Michael's College, first came into use. Again the need for greater space necessitated a move and through the generosity of the Hon. John Elmsley considerable ground was obtained on the north side of Clover Hill Road, which is known to all today as St. Joseph's Street. The cornerstone of the old building was laid in 1855 and it was completed in its present form in 1902.

"Blazed the Way for Others"

By becoming a full-fledged federated arts college and present phase of its history. Speaking during the anniversary celebrations mentioned before, Sir William Mulock said, "To St. Michael's College is due the honour and credit . . . for having blazed the way which ultimately led to the federation of various other denominational colleges of this university."

In 1922 Bay Street was extended northwards and the college lost much of its beautiful grounds, which had reached well over to Yonge Street. It was at this time that the stone wall along Bay Street was built.

In 1935 the cornerstone of the new building on Queen's Park was laid and the class of 377 was the first to graduate from the imposing-looking structure. The building as it now stands is U-shaped, the base of the U consisting of residences, the south wing of lecture rooms (Teely Hall), while the north wing houses the Pontifical Institute of Mediaeval Studies. When the building programme is completed, the base of the U now standing will form the west side of a quadrangle which will be enclosed by further residences along St. Joseph's Street and Elmsley Place.

The other building completed at this time is Brennan Hall, at the head of Elmsley Place, which contains large separate dining halls and common rooms for each of the three groups, college students, high school students and faculty.

St. Michael's took the position that if it should be allowed to teach history and philosophy in its own right, it would be willing to enter into association with the University. The problem lay with the student body posted on the progress of the new building, reporting in the issue of February 4, 1930, that the noise of excavations was disturbing students in the Vic library.

First news of Emmanuel student body rolled off the press on October 31, 1928, when the first annual banquet was held in Burwash Hall. Dr. Gunn, Moderator of the General Council, concluded a stirring address with these words: "We have brought to you, young men, a nobler and greater Church. We have carried the torch, where will you carry it?"

Later on in that same year the first convocation was held in Victoria University under its new charter, and the first degrees in divinity were conferred by the new Emmanuel College.

Wycliffe College

The Principal and Teaching Staff of Wycliffe College join with the other faculties of the University in extending heartfelt congratulations to The Varsity on the completion of its sixtieth year of publication.

What an interesting story must lie behind those years, some of them stormy, all of them marked by the cross currents of undergraduate thought and activity. Yet The Varsity has weathered the storms and has on the whole given wise and constructive leadership. It has rendered a valuable service in reflecting the main body of student opinion, and in expressing with courage and ability what has been generally the real mind and heart of the undergraduates of each generation.

Perhaps one of its greatest and most valuable contributions has been the service it has rendered to the whole University in keeping the various faculties in almost daily touch with each other, informing them as to their respective activities and at the same time emphasizing the things of common interest and importance, so doing much to create a true University spirit. In this way it has been more than a mere Campus newspaper. Through its editorial columns and in other ways it has done much to develop and direct the mind of the Student Body. More particularly, The Varsity has helped in building up the religious tone of the University through its editorial comments, articles, and publicity given to religious meetings and societies on the Campus.

As one of the first of the Theological Colleges to come into the scheme of University federation, Wycliffe College, its Council, Staff and Student Body, extend to The Varsity its congratulations and best wishes for continued success and useful service in the years to come.

St. Michael's College

An undergraduate newspaper can exercise a great influence for good in the world to-day if it is prepared to abandon much of the aims and methods which generate what is called "the power of the press." Its guiding principle should be that which must direct all the activities of university students, the search for truth. True, they no enjoy no monopoly of this quest but they have sworn a special oath to pursue it to its remotest implications.

The readers of such a publication have already much in common; they are united by closer bonds than the reading public of other journals. They have common problems and ultimately seek to reach common answers. Their effort should be a common effort and their newspaper should give expression to it. They must necessarily admit that there is a commonly shared truth for all men, that there cannot be different, opposing sets of truth without destroying reason, that there can be no compromise between truth and error, and that, though truth can only be reached by the free activity of each individual, no one is free to reject it.

All undergraduates should actively contribute to make their newspaper a cooperative search for a common truth by patient, honest discussion, by willingness to learn and readiness to admit the error of one's view, by evidence of that tolerance which prefers variety of opinion to agreement founded on truth.

With its sixty years of experience The Varsity is in a position to lead the way to real journalism based on the absolutism of truth which alone is capable of embracing all the forces at work in the world to-day.

Faculty of Forestry Fights For Survival Of Canada's Trees

Visit of American Forester Results in Formation of University of Toronto Faculty Conferring Degree of Bachelor Science of Forestry on Graduates of Four-Year Course in Fundamental Forestry Subjects

CONSIDERABLE AMOUNT OF FIELD WORK REQUIRED

To the average Canadian at the turn of the century, a forester was a mythical person dressed in Lincoln green and armed with bow and arrows who spent his spare time relieving fat misers of their money. When, about 1903, a real forester in the person of Dr. B. E. Fernow stepped into this romantic picture, he shattered it completely by appearing in ordinary business clothes, with no arrows in evidence and obviously with no intention of waylaying anybody.

Dr. Fernow, once Chief of the Forest Service in United States, and one of America's leading foresters, came to Canada on a lecture tour across the Dominion. His first consideration was to explain the meaning and purpose of forestry, which is, broadly, the study and application of the principles under which forest lands are best managed. Next, he laid before his audiences a graphic picture of how the march of civilization with all its demands on the forest had already almost stripped southern Ontario, and how White Pine, the most useful tree in the world was becoming extinct.

In a country such as Canada with its eight hundred million acres of woodland, Dr. Fernow's speech was the spark that kindled and fanned to life a popular interest in the preservation of that wealth. People began to realize that forest fires and the wholesale destruction of trees without thought of reforestation were taking their toll of the precious and fast-dwindling natural resources.

In Ontario especially was felt the urgent need for men trained in forest administration, work which previously had consisted of a pitifully small amount of planting done by farmers on their poor soils, and that much only through the unrelenting efforts of a forester attached to the Guelph Agricultural College. However, the opening wedge had been forged into public interest and, once the people became aware that the cherished illusion of Canada's unlimited timber wealth was a pipe dream, there was considerable agitation for education in forestry, both through the press and on the lecture platform.

These efforts finally bore fruit when, in 1907, a Faculty of Forestry was founded on a recommendation of the Thumb of the campus. Its present faculty consists of five members, but, in addition to these, there is an impressive list of professors from other faculties giving instruction in everything from physics, law, botany and surveying, to the more purely cultural courses of English and French.

The studies are almost entirely planned with the purpose of providing information of practical importance in the management of forests, and, while giving one of the broadest and most general courses of education in the university, includes nothing irrelevant.

The regular course leading to the degree of Bachelor of the Science of Forestry (B.Sc.F.) is a four-year one, the first two years being devoted to the study of the fundamental subjects, the final years to typical forestry subjects.

A quick glance through the curriculum reveals what appears to be an insurmountably complicated (and often unpronounceable) array of courses, including Biological Dendrology, Forest Entomology, Morphology, Spherical Trigonometry and Pleistocene Geology.

The names are camouflage for the wide range of subjects covering every conceivable angle of forestry. The boys learn the life histories of native trees, their characteristics, and how to identify them, the principles of Zoology, Chemistry and Physics, Geometry as it applies to forestry, forest engineering, wood distillation and the manufacture of pulp, paper and cellulose, to mention only a few. Methods of fire protection are an important part of the work, since about 500,000 cubic feet of timber are wiped out by fire each year.

The study of weather and climate is a part of the work too, as are glaciers, formations of the earth such as hills, plains and valleys which are studied on excursions as well as in the lecture room, for in addition to lectures, the embryo forester has a certain amount of field work to cover. All years are required to spend at least three weeks in the "Spring Camp" where they put their knowledge to practical use. In addition, the two lower years do field work on Saturdays throughout the term, identifying and measuring trees. Third year has one week in the Easter term at an Ontario logging camp, while fourth year goes to a government reforestation and nursery station to study the growing of trees.

The very nature of the work done in the faculty, requires that the students be in excellent health, have good eyesight and a strong body well able to endure the hardships often imposed. Ability to swim, while not a prerequisite, is an advantage—and very few finish their course without learning.

The more ambitious undergrads acquire practical experience in the work they do during the summer aside from spring camp. Many find summer jobs with the Ontario and Dominion Forestry Branches where they are employed, mostly in fire-ranging at $2.69 a day (as worked out by one mathematical-minded tree man).

A considerable amount of research is done in the faculty, and it has revealed such things as the cause of White Pine blight. The numerous varieties of heart-rot which cause the falling of most valuable timber has also been investigated.

Embryo Foresters Rough It Far From Civilization

Learn Practical Angles of Future Profession in Gruelling Routine of Playing Nursemaid to Northern Woods

FIGHT FIRES

Most boys—from sixteen to sixty—have an insatiable appetite for "roughing it in the bush." To some, this takes the form of pitching a tent quietly beside a lake and idling the summer away over an unresponsive fishing line. To others it means the comparatively primitive life of a summer cottage, complete with electric light and radio. But to the Foresters it really means roughing it.

When lectures and exams are over, and the other faculties are looking forward to long-awaited vacations, the Foresters, in wood attire, are preparing for the most gruelling part of their work which takes them beyond the limits of civilization into the vicinities of Kapuskasing, Timmins, Longlac, Gull Lake and points north. Just how far from civilization Spring Camp is, is a matter of controversy—statistics saying thirty miles, the Foresters stoutly insisting on nearer a hundred.

The problem of how to reach the camp with a minimum of effort has been deftly solved by generations of resourceful lumbermen, until they can now choose their means of transportation by water, rail or woods road. In White River, they even improvised their own "taxi-cab" by removing the tires from an auto and running it on the rims—along the railway tracks. There were probably complications when a train wanted to use the same track.

Then there is the "pointer", an unlovely but very efficient little scow-like boat used for carrying supplies. Its value is in the fact that, when canoes are being portaged around rapids, it can plough gaily through them or even over small falls without injury.

The boys work in parties under the leadership of a graduate forester who makes sure that their days are well-filled from the time they get up at five a.m. until bed at anywhere between seven and nine at night by the light of camp fires and lanterns.

One of the first considerations of the freshman year is learning how to properly handle a canoe without dumping it, and how to carry it over portages without becoming entangled in the landscape. They soon discover that the smooth, easy rhythm of canoeing is not as simple as it looks! Once this is mastered the foresters can turn their attention and aching muscles to other things.

"Timber-cruising" takes a large proportion of their time. Armed with compasses, tape measures and calipers, they leave camp early in the morning and spend the day determining the amount of timber in a certain area and its rate of growth. They take careful measurements from which they construct maps showing where particular types of trees predominate. This involves travel through rough country and virgin bushland, cutting trails as they go.

In this type of work, the value of aerial photography is demonstrated. Aircraft was first used by the Provincial Department of Lands and Forests in the session 1922-3, and by the following year, the government had its own air service. The airmen map out the subdivided areas both by observations and by photographs; copies of these maps are given to the ground parties who are then able to locate the starting points for examining the timber in a given district.

On these long treks, the boys carry their own supplies and cook their dinners over the open blaze of a camp fire. They are justly proud of their culinary efforts, but there is no professional jealousy between them and their regular lumber camp cook.

A forest fire sometimes breaks out near a camp, and fire-fighting is added to their activities. The boys in Kapuskasing last year had a taste of it when a small one destroyed twelve acres and required the shipping in of five hundred fire-fighters.

For entertainment and relaxation at night, each camp usually has a portable radio and by two or three mouth organs. But by that time, the boys are so tired that not even a beautiful co-ed could keep them up after nine o'clock. (Supposing, of course, it were possible to find a beautiful co-ed in the middle of the woods.)

Yes, the scenery is beautiful, they admit, and they have snapshots of winding forest trails and beautiful river scenes to prove it. But when you are hacking your way through it inch by inch it loses some of its appeal. Add to that the unpredictable spells of rainy weather and the hordes of black flies—the curse of woodsmen, it can become actually obnoxious.

Congratulations and Best Wishes to The Varsity

We have watched your growth during more than half of those sixty years, sometimes with trepidation but more often with approbation.

The Faculty of Forestry

Faculty Does Not Welcome Women But Hardy Co-Ed Might Get In

The Faculty of Forestry can hardly be called the woman's Mecca, for, though she has invaded every other sanctum on the campus (including Hart House on Sundays) the red brick building on St. George is still "Men Only". There is no regulation in the calendar to the effect that women are not allowed and, if a co-ed insisted upon her rights she wouldn't be forcibly removed, but Forestry is definitely not a woman's course. The lecture part presents no difficulties, but when it comes to the hard outdoor work of Spring Camp with its trail-cutting, portaging and black flies, it is a different matter.

If a girl did succeed in taking the degree of B.Sc.F. she wouldn't stand much chance of employment afterwards. The few in the United States who have broken past the barriers of disapproval and taken the work have not been successful in this respect. Many girls have wanted to take the course here, but the faculty has conscientiously discouraged them, pointing out that the present value of lady fire-fighters and lumber camp bosses is nil. Since most forestry jobs entail work of this kind, all the co-ed can do is look forward to about a hundred years hence when forestry in Canada may have advanced far enough to provide openings for women.

As for the boys' opinion of girls in Forestry, it can be expressed in one big, black, and very emphatic "NO!"

Congratulations to "The Varsity"

I am glad to learn that The Varsity is still surviving, and apparently going strong, sixty years after its foundation and fifty years after its revival in 1891. I had the honour of being on the resurrection board.

The survival of this journal surprises me all the more as I have been pained to note, ever since I graduated at Toronto fifty years ago, the apparent, and I should I must add, the progressive decline of men and things about my Alma Mater. As far as my memory serves me, Toronto University reached its height in the year when I entered my first year. I recall that there were men in the fourth year,—I saw them end once one spoke to me,—of an attainment in scholarship never since reached. They could, I understand, have written out the whole of Homer's Iliad from memory,—had they cared to. I recall that in point of mathematics there were men at Varsity,—I have seen them there in the Caer Howell Hotel,—who could pass any examination without study, indeed some did not even pass.

As to the professoriate, the men of that day represented a depth of learning practically beyond the reach of a plumb line. I remember I once asked one of the ancient Babylonians had a system of algebra and he answered, without a moment's need for reflection, that he didn't know. Three thousand years, covered like that!

Under such circumstances one can well believe that the college paper, The Varsity, touched a point of literary merit hardly seen since Queen Anne. I recall in particular a brilliant essay on The Genius of William Shakespeare, and a poem A Prospect of the Don Valley when behind Brick Dust, that was said to have broken new ground.

Yet I admit that the degeneration of which I speak had begun while I was still at college. I noted in my fourth year that the students of the first year had already dwindled into school boys and their intellects had greatly shrunk. Their heads looked small. When I came back to the University as an examiner a few years later I was pained to realize that the dry rot had reached also the upper years. I had to pass their papers without reading them. Later on, years later, when I had the honour to come back and deliver an address in Convocation Hall, it seemed to me that the professoriate had been replaced by a very different and immature set of men. Few had beards, and none to their waists. They lacked culture and one, I remember, bored me to death by talking of Babylonian algebra, apparently the only thing he knew.

I may be a little bit in error about the exact date of the degeneration. My old friend President Cody who was two years ahead of me in college tells me that he had noticed it two years before I did, in fact in the year when I entered. On the other hand Sir William Mulock claimed, in conversation on the topic, that the degeneration had set in ten years and years before, in fact, to be exact, the year he got out.

Still, I am glad that The Varsity keeps alive and that there is to be a special Sixty Year edition. I would like to suggest that it might be a good idea to have a Sixty Year edition every sixty years. That would give the professors time to turn round.

Toronto Faculty of Dentistry First in British Empire

Dentistry Contributes To Medical Knowledge by Continuous Effort

First Dentists Show Put On Twenty-one Years Ago Draws Down Severe Reprimand from the Dean of the Faculty and Next Year Students Are Subject to Some More Adverse Criticism

QUACKS ONCE DID GREAT HARM TO FACULTY

Ninety-five years ago, a little group of half a dozen men, who had come to Canada from England or the United States, looked after the dental work of the entire province of Upper Canada. Theirs was a new task and a new field, for only a decade or two before, dentistry as a profession was unheard of in America.

By 1866, just as the Dominion was deciding to assume national proportions, about 175 tooth experts were deciding to organize also, and through their efforts the Ontario Dental Act was passed, incorporating the group into the "Royal College of Dental Surgeons," with the dual function of teaching and licensing.

Passed by the first session of the first legislature of the new Province of Ontario, the Act antedated every other dental statute in the world except a small clause in a bill adopted by the State of Alabama in 1841. Although it was necessary to revise the original act many times as dentistry in Canada outgrew it, this original piece of legislation brought forth by the association of Ontario dentists has been the model for dental acts in countries all over the world.

A School of Dentistry

Closely associated with the incorporation of the profession was the question of a school of dentistry. In 1868 appeared the first announcement of the Canadian College of Dentistry, Toronto, a private undertaking which lasted only a year and a half, and had just six students. Two years later an attempt was made by the Royal College of Dental Surgeons themselves, but the organization lacked finances and again the scheme fell through.

In 1875, some 35 years after the organization of the first dental college in the world—the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery—the Toronto Dental School was founded at the request of the R.C.D.S. Directors by Dr. Luke Teskey and Dr. J. B. Willmott, who became dean of the school.

Seeks Affiliation

Once formed, the new institution sought to affiliate itself with various Ontario universities, but dentistry had not yet assumed sufficient importance to be recognized, and the efforts were without avail. When William Mulock became Vice-Chancellor of the University of Toronto, however, with a new policy of broadening its sphere of influence and encouraging suitable affiliations, he suggested that another application be made by the R.C.D.S. The new application was approved by the Senate, and the University opened its arms to Dentistry in 1888.

On March 8, 1889, the day Dentistry in Ontario as a corporate body obtained its majority, 25 dentists and dental students paid their examination fees, and filed their application for admission to the first examination ever held by a British University for a doctor's degree in dental surgery.

Just before the turn of the century, the R.C.D.S. erected a building for their dental school costing $46,000. The entire property belonged to the dentists of Ontario and each one had an equal share both in ownership and management, a condition of things unique in dental history, and one on which the Ontario practitioners may well be congratulated. The building was the most complete dental school on the continent, and was the result of a careful study of all the schools on the continent by Dean Willmott and an incorporation of all their best features. In 1909 it was forced to move to its present location at College and Huron Streets in order to make way for the erection of the Toronto General Hospital. The east wing was added in 1920.

But buildings and material equipment alone do not make efficient educational institutions, and the school has been fortunate in having on its staff some of the most outstanding dentists in North America.

Becomes Faculty

The School of Dentistry became the Faculty of Dentistry of the University of Toronto in 1925, when the Royal College of Dental Surgeons relinquished to the University its function as a teaching body and continued as a licensing body for the Province of Ontario.

New Methods and New Results

Dentistry is no longer simply a matter of plugging a cavity or pulling a tooth; the educated dentists of today treat almost every faulty condition which occurs in the mouth. Dentistry has also made sufficient contributions to medical and surgical knowledge to entitle it to the respect of the medical profession. It has given the world great blessing and comfort of practical anaesthesia, for it was the dentists who first put ether and nitrous oxide into use as relievers of the discomforts of operation. Dentistry has furnished a complete and most efficient means for treatment of jaw fractures, and made perfect restoration to health and usefulness in cases where general surgery has failed miserably.

The great advancement in Dentistry has been brought about by the continued efforts of men from the days when dentistry was in its infancy to the present day. Prior to the founding of the Toronto School of Dentistry most of the practitioners received their training by means of apprenticeship, although a few were graduates of dental or medical schools in other countries. Itinerant charlatans were common. Just as Law had its shysters, Medicine its quacks, and Theology its imposters, Dentistry had its charlatans who put up a strong fight for existence. Typical of the struggle against the rising dental profession in its youth is the following extract from a letter written to a dental journal:

"There's to many dentists who think we can't learn the work without books. A shomaker doesn't know anything about the anatomy of feet, but he makes a good boot. What do we want with colleges, and journals if we can make a set of teeth. You college chaps should shut up and leave the work to us."

Over half a century ago, the vogue of the period was the widely-advertised "Cordial Portable Reception Chair". It was light, strong and designed especially for the travelling dentist. This was the last word in convenience, especially from the point of view of the itinerant dentist himself. A stop-over in a small town, a deft assembling of the chair in the parlour of the local hotel, a speech propounding the merits of his dental skill, a dramatic demonstration—and a fast getaway.

Quacks Harmed Professor

These quacks did a great deal of harm to the profession and it was through the natural zeal of the R.C.D.S., by organizing the school and by enforcing the powers given them by the legislature that quackery was stamped out. Another accomplishment of the R.C.D.S. was the cessation of advertising in Ontario, which was prevalent 25 years ago (previously?), when it was quite common for the tooth practitioner to advertise his business by large posters and show cases.

Faculty of Dentistry

SIXTY YEARS OF DENTISTRY

It is sixty years since the first edition of The Varsity came off the press. From the very beginning it has faithfully reflected undergraduate opinion, agitated for needed reforms and bestowed merit where and when it was due. The Faculty of Dentistry extends sincere felicitations to the editorial board of The Varsity upon celebrating its Diamond Jubilee.

For dentists such a celebration naturally focuses attention upon a retrospect of the history of the dental profession for the same period of time. Such a survey, although very superficial, is well worth while because it affords encouragement to those who have, perforce, to tackle the problems presently confronting the profession. The past sixty years of dentistry comprised a unique record of a very important era in the history of the profession. At the beginning of this period hardly anything has been done to apply dental science to the service of public health; at its close, dentistry has come to be recognized as one of the chief outlets of preventive medicine.

Today it is fully recognized that dental education must be an integral part of the general system of university education. Fortunately it has become manifest to all concerned that dental education must have for its object the disinterested pursuit of knowledge for its own sake; that a dentist should have, not only a broad technical education, but also an adequate scientific and academic background. He must have, as well as manual dexterity, a knowledge of the biological sciences, especially as they are basic to oral conditions. Dentistry, probably more than most professions, combines humanism and technique, theory and practice; and for this reason it has secured a rightful place in the comity of the learned professions.

Dentistry Infirmary Busy Campus Organization With Ninety Modern Units

Twelve to Sixteen Thousand Patients Receive Dental Care Each Year at Completely Equipped Clinic

STUDENTS INTERNE HERE

The infirmary of the Faculty of Dentistry, with from twelve to sixteen thousand patients receiving dental care each year, is one of the busiest spots on the university campus. Here in a clinic equipped with ninety complete modern dental units, senior students spend their internship.

All patients pass through the examining doctor's office, and after the cases have been diagnosed and charted, they are allotted to the various senior students. Work is directly supervised by the professors and their assistants in charge of different departments. For instance, cases of replacement with artificial appliances are sent to the Prosthetic clinic, while fractures, and teeth removals are handled in the oral surgery clinic. The operative clinic makes restorations in natural teeth, and there is also an orthodontia clinic where teeth are straightened.

The preventative clinic is considered to be one of the most important. There diets are discussed and tests are made which are designed to improve the general health of the patient. Not only does it aid in preventing oral diseases but it helps to take the fear out of dentistry. Research is carried on continually in the various clinics and departments.

Besides the paying patients there are many groups, such as the Red Cross, the Children's Aid and Neighbourhood Workers which provide dental care for underprivileged children through the dental college. A child's clinic is operated for school children sent by the Director in charge of school clinics of the Board of Education. Only the graduating students do the necessary dental work.

Another of the more important children's health services is the Public Health School clinic of Preventive Orthodontia. Here children's teeth are straightened, thus preventing the ugly appearance of mal-formed teeth. Two hundred children a year are benefited in this way. The cases accepted are only those which can be done by the students within a year. However, the patients may be kept under observation for 3 years more.

By an agreement with the Norwegian government, the oral health of its fighting forces in Toronto is taken care of at the College. Amongst the other groups taken care of are the "War Guests" and the Kiwanis Children's Clinic.

the prize as heretofore they were thought ineligible.

Dentistics first made it bow in Convocation Hall and for several years it was held there. It moved to the Faculty of Education's Auditorium but trouble over smoking at rehearsals resulted in it being put on at Hart House Theatre. For the next few years it appeared at one or the other of these two places depending on their management, and the behaviour of the cast.

One year the Dean decided that the show had got entirely out of control and refused to consider another Dentistics night. The following Spring the Students' Parliament asked permission to put on a play which was to be received by a Committee appointed by the Dean. The play was a decided success and for several years this idea prevailed. The pendulum must of necessity swing both ways so the skit idea was again resurrected and for three years this type of show has won favour. A larger number of students take part in these performances, greater interest is aroused and a better attendance is assured.

Among the outstanding contributors to the success of these nights over the years, the following names come to the fore: Ken Phillips, Margaret Cowan, George Clark, Elmer Hackett, Albert and Ted Fyfe and Jack MacDonald. It was thought by all that the work of these students was of a professional character.

1934-1935

The Varsity established a date bureau, in the same year that the University College Parliament went on record as saying that Love was not the sweetest thing. Fire damaged Little Vic Rink and Dr. Stephen Leacock spoke in one of the Hart House debates.

Editor C. R. Ellis was suspended for an editorial he wrote against members of the S.A.C., but reinstated after two days.

Benches were abolished and smoking was first permitted in the Great Hall.

1935-1936

The death of King George V occupied an entire front page as a memorial service was held to mark his passing.

The university distinguished itself politically by calling the Conservatives to take the general election in a straw vote two days before the Liberal landslide swept Bennett out of power. Ex-Mayor William J. Stewart mentioned at a meeting of the Macdonald-Cartier Club that he would accept the provincial leadership of the Conservative party if it was offered to him. It was not.

An epidemic of thieving terrorized the women's residences and President Cole criticized universal suffrage.

1936-1937

Schoolman George W. Phene died from injuries received in a Mulock Cup game against St. Mike's.

The U.C. Players' Guild won its first University Drama Festival with its production of O'Neill's "The Rope." Varsity won a rugby title from Queen's 11-3.

Librarian W. S. Wallace banned "The New Republic." South House men tackled a thief fleeing from their residence after a daylight entry, and turned him over to police. Varsity's ace trackman of recent years, Larry O'Connor set up a new world's mark for the 60-yard hurdles, whipping around the Maple Leaf Gardens' track in 7 3-10 seconds.

1937-1938

Hon. Cordell Hull, American Secretary of State, received his honorary LL.D. degree, Prime Minister King and Governor-General Lord Tweedsmuir who had already got theirs, attending.

The university was a month late in opening because of an infantile paralysis epidemic. The new St. Hilda's residence, Cartwright Hall, was opened. The Vice janitor caught a burglar in the act of trying on a coat.

Over the newly-created wires of the Canadian University Press The Varsity gleaned the information of McGill's fight against the Padlock Law passed by the Quebec provincial legislature. McGill also banned the S.C.M. because of insubordination.

1938-1939

Sadie Hawkins appeared on the University of Toronto campus, and started a vogue which has spread over most of the major colleges of the continent during the last few years.

Frank O'Hara, Port Huron broker, made a few sweeping charges to the effect that students were all radicals, the S.C.M. was a Communist group and that Victoria College fostered the germ of revolution, and hardly anyone even bothered to laugh at him.

The Toronto Swing Club had a beautiful time charging The Varsity with libel, and winning $1,000 dollars damage awarded by the Law Club's Moot Court.

1939-1940

The university got allergic to alphabet soup during the nation-wide squabble between the N.F.C.U. and CSA, two national student organizations with considerable capacity for calling names.

More serious news was the situation caused by the declaration of war. Hundreds of students flocked to join the C.O. T.C., and soldiers drilling on the campus again became a familiar sight.

Lord Tweedsmuir died in his last year as Governor-General. A memorial service was held.

Varsity won the hockey championship, snapping McGill's consecutive streak at seven straight.

1940-1941

The second year of the Second World War saw the campus increasing its efforts to co-operate with the rest of the country in the anti-totalitarian struggle. The C.O.T.C. carried on its work of turning out officers to lead Canada's forces; the Training Centre was established; the W.S.T.D. was formed; intercollegiate athletics were cancelled for the year.

Plans for a Special Convocation were suddenly abandoned when Lord Lothian, British emissary to the United States, died suddenly. Another death which caused widespread sorrow in university circles was that of Sir Frederick Banting, famed scientist and co-discoverer of insulin. Sir Frederick's funeral, held in Convocation Hall, was "one of the most moving spectacles the university had witnessed in many years."

And The Varsity made journalistic history by producing its Diamond Jubilee Issue.

pagan freshmen actually had the audacity to rebel against satire which strangely enough, centred on them and their habits, and in 1876 and 1877 a certain precocious young man brought out the Kritikon. However, it lacked prelatial blessing and ceased publishing, though there was more than a hint of sabotage when its producer became scribe the same year. Most of the orthodox merely assumed the Venerable Father had pulled a fast one.

Somewhere about this time (1885 to be exact) the Episkopon dinner came into being in spite of the Father's protests—it was the one time he had given in—and it soon became a big day in the college life, when graduates and students might meet in common. There is reason to believe the great One's acceptance of this frivolity was owing to his pleasure with the exceptionally fine efforts that had been put into the printing of his word, for among other notables Archibald Lampman was the scribe in 1882 and "put his whole soul into it." Father Episkopon has exhibited very great care in choosing his scribes.

Episkopon still goes on in all his glory, with his dinner on the Friday nearest to the ninth of March. Every year after the dinner the name of the new scribe is posted mysteriously on the bulletin board.

mention a fine for non-attendance. One year after the inauguration of the college, the society was incorporated in it. Today as in 1853 the wearing of gowns is enforced, but it is a far cry from those days when a member was sternly rebuked for the slightest breach in decorum till now, when the speaker wears his mortar-board cocked on the side of his head and playfully tossing up and catching his gavel.

The programs formerly consisted of debates, readings, and essays, but the latter two seem to have fallen out of favour over a period of years, no doubt due to the introduction of other societies which had them as their primary interests. Early in the eighteen-fifties the society took charge of the common rooms; in 1866 the first public debate was held. There is a record of a debate at that time, "Resolved that we request the Provost to allow us to have beer at 7.30 on evenings of debate instead of at 9.00 as before", a resolution remembered perhaps because it is unusual rather than because it referred the usual type of debate. It is during this period that the Institute began the Conversazione, though the actual date of its commencement is obscure.

Both Pharmacy, Law Show Rapid Recent Development

Druggists Extend Course And Expand Facilities As Science Advances

Third Year, which will be Optional for Student Pharmacists, will Include Training in Such Diversified Fields as Economics, Psychology, Chemistry, Physics, and Qualitative Organic Chemistry. New Building to be Ready Next Fall

OLD BUILDING BEING REMODELLED

When the doors of the Ontario College of Pharmacy open for the Christmas term in September, 1941, its students will find a second building completed and ready for their use. Already under way, the new building will be of concrete construction, with a facade of modern Georgian style, and modern in every detail within.

The new building will house the faculty, the new administration offices of the college, a board room, and a library.

Students will also find that the old building has undergone a drastic change, for it will be partly rebuilt and entirely remodelled, with special laboratories designed and equipped for efficient pharmaceutical research. These splendid improvements will be the culmination of many years' effort on the part of the pharmacists of Ontario to provide quarters and equipment for those desiring to enter the drug trade, and for graduates who wish to pursue their studies further.

Third Year Added

The completion of the new building will enable the Faculty to give still more advanced training, and it has been announced that starting in September, 1942, a third optional year will be added to the course.

In this additional year splendid instruction will be given in Pharmacy, Physics, Chemistry, Psychology, Economics and Qualitative Organic Chemistry. For this purpose the remodelling of the old building will provide an improved, modernly equipped lecture room, a Physics and Chemistry laboratory, a room for drug assaying, a sterilization room for filling ampoules and preparing sterilized products, and a Pilot Plant room where miniature mills will be housed, along with mixers and tablet machines. The new building will contain an enlarged and more complete pharmaceutical library, which will be made available to the students and graduates. In general, it is claimed that the new improvements, besides providing facilities for the third optional year of the course, will help fit the graduates to enter manufacturing pharmacy laboratories, and doctors' clinics.

In the early days of Upper Canada the dispensing and selling of drugs was open to anyone who so desired, but as a rule the Province's earliest pharmacists were Englishmen who had come out here after several years of apprenticeship to Old Country druggists. This free and loose state of affairs lasted

The Ontario College of Pharmacy

To The Varsity—On the occasion of your diamond jubilee, we extend our sincerest congratulations.

The Ontario College of Pharmacy is proud to honour you in this issue and to join your host of friends in bearing tribute to your worth.

During three score years, The Varsity has been a living force in the University, interpreting an independent expression of campus life. Students of all creeds and professions find a common ground in your paper. You have contributed to the promotion of a hearty good will and to the general welfare of the University of Toronto.

College fraternities and activities were never so prosperous and never so united as they are now, and you have been an important factor in this consolidation.

On this sixtieth birthday, with full realization and appreciation of your proven value and service, we now add our best wishes for as full a success in the years to come.

Dean of Faculty

but 21 students attending classes during the first term, and that the number had increased to 45 in the second term. In the course of the next few years the classes seemed to have fluctuated between 50 and 60, while at the same time many changes were made in the staff and in the methods of teaching.

In the winter of 1884 the Board of Examiners suggested "the purchasing or erecting of a modest building for accommodating a museum, a library, a school of pharmacy, and examination rooms", and enquiries were sent out as to the most suitable location, and to estimate the money necessary.

Discovery that property was rising rapidly in price, brought action, however, and early in 1886 construction started on the present College on Gerard Street East. Progress was slow, and minor labour difficulties were encountered; but in spite of all this the building was advanced enough in construction to permit the holding of the first classes there in September of the same year. Great improvements in the College itself were due to Dr. Heebner, who held the position of Dean from 1892, when he succeeded Dr. Shuttleworth, the first Dean, until his retirement in 1937.

Course of Study Defined

The course of study was defined in the Act of 1889, by which students were obliged to attend two series of lectures. The Junior Term could be taken at any College approved by the Toronto Pharmacy Council, while the Senior Term could be taken only at the Toronto College. This course of instruction proved thorough and complete, and when affiliation with the University of Toronto was achieved in 1892 the students were able to receive the degree of Bachelor of Pharmacy upon the successful completion of their studies. A special licence to practice pharmacy in Ontario was then granted to all graduates, provided they passed a final set of examinations set by the Council and had fulfilled certain qualifying conditions.

A further Act in 1900 raised the entrance requirements of the College to that of Senior Matriculation but the course of studies remained the same until 1927, when a two year course became obligatory instead of the one year course of two terms. At the same time arrangements were made with the University of Toronto that instruction should be given there in Theoretical and Practical Chemistry, Theoretical and Practical Botany, Pharmacology, Bacteriology, and Microscopical Pharmacology, while the remaining subjects would be taught at the Pharmacy building.

Throughout the history of the College, there have been many changes in the Council, the members of which are elected biennially, and in the staff of the College itself. But the position of Dean has been held only by three men. Dr. R. O. Hurst, the present Dean, who is also Professor of Pharmacy at the College, joined the staff in 1915, and was appointed to his present place in 1937, when he succeeded Dean Heebner, who had held the position for 46 years. The Professor of Materia Medica, Dr. Paul L. Scott, is the one member of the teaching staff who presents a link with the earlier history of pharmacy in Ontario. Dr. Scott entered the Faculty in 1901, and for three years held the chair of Materia Medica at the University. In 1903, when the chair was transferred to the Pharmacy College, he was again appointed Professor of Materia Medica, the position which he has held and still holds to this day.

As a final note, it might be mentioned that Dr. Shuttleworth, the first Dean, who safeguarded the College as it passed through its early years, was also present on the occasion of the 50th jubilee of the Pharmacy Act of 1871. The celebration was held in Toronto, in June, 1921.

Honour Law Course On Its Own Since 1930 Is Well-Organized Faculty

Established as Faculty Half a Century Ago, Course is Regarded as One of World's Best

400 STUDENTS

Not a separate faculty, although it could be; not an old course, although its origins go back half a century; not a large department, although giving instruction to over 400 students; not a famous faculty, although many of its graduates are now holding responsible positions and many of its undergraduates are prominent in student activities; not a dominant campus body, although one of the most closely-knit, well-integrated groups at Varsity.

Such is the Honour Law Course of the University of Toronto, a comprehensive course that has provided and continues to provide an excellent background for students, whether they intend to practise law or not.

The Course and Its History

Exactly 51 years ago a Faculty of Law was established at Varsity, and this separate faculty still exists nominally, even if in actual fact it is now merely referred to as a four-year honour law course in the Faculty of Arts. This latter arrangement was made when the various colleges federated to erect what has become the largest university in the British Commonwealth of Nations.

Up to the year 1930, law was taught two years in common with economics in the former Politics and Law Course. In 1930 law became a separate course, and the Department of Law was set up, headed by Dr. W. P. M. Kennedy who then held, and still holds, the seat of Professor of Constitutional Law.

Firmly founded and well-directed, that Department has grown steadily and rapidly, attaining its present position of importance in little over a decade. Today there are almost 100 full-time students enrolled in the Department of Law, six of whom are women. In addition, an estimated 400 undergraduates and graduates from other courses and faculties take lectures in the Law Building every week. The building itself is a large, three-story edifice at 45 St. George Street. Besides numerous offices it has seven rooms in which lectures are given.

A number of substantial scholarships, prizes and medals have been established for the students in law. And not least of the Department's boasts is a separate Law Library and Reading Room situated downstairs in the main Library building. This Law Library now contains full Canadian Reports, as well as many of the English, American and hundreds of the modern recognized texts Australian Reports. It also has many and most of the main legal periodicals and journals. All in all, there are over 10,000 volumes in the library, of which Miss J. A. MacBeth is the capable custodian.

The actual instruction given in the course itself is of broad scope. Emphasis is laid on the law of contracts, tort and crime and the history of English law in the first two years, and on constitutional, administrative, industrial, municipal and international in the latter two years. Economics, political science and psychology are also taken, while philosophy is taught throughout the course. There is one pass subject.

A special privilege is extended fourth year students who attend weekly clinics at the Psychiatric Hospital where they may observe actual cases. This course in criminology probably vies in interest appeal with any course in the university. The staff in law also provides instruction for students proceeding towards their Bachelor of Law and Master of Laws degrees. There is one student in the Master of Laws course this year. W. H. Chin of China, who is one of the Boxer scholarship men at Varsity.

A unique feature of the Department of Law is the remarkable amount of co-operation that exists between staff and students.

The Law Club

Every member of the Law Course is a member of the Law Club, the official organization of the undergraduate body. During the academic year, the club holds monthly meetings addressed by prominent guest speakers with discussions afterwards. The Hon. R. S. Robertson, Chief Justice of Ontario, is the honorary president, Dr. Kennedy the honorary vice-president, and John Yaremko, 471 U.C., was this year's active president.

Simultaneously with founding of the course in 1930, the club was given birth on November 13, 1930. Among its speakers at regular meetings have been many members of the Ontario judiciary as well as such men as the Hon. Robert Manion, the Hon. R. B. Bennett, the Hon. Leopold Macaulay, the Hon. Arthur Roebuck, the Hon. Gordon Conant, F. H. Barlow, Dean Falconbridge of the Osgoode Hall Law School, Dr. Cecil Wright, and Professor Jean Escarra of the University of Paris and former legal adviser to the Chinese Government.

The club also has an annual banquet, and included among the famous personages who have been guest speakers at these impressive events are: the late Hon. N. W. Rowell, K.C., former Chief Justice of Ontario and honorary president of the club; J. S. Woodsword, M.P., leader of the C.C.F. party; Sir Thomas White; Judge Manley O. Hudson, formerly of the Permanent Court of International Justice at the Hague; C. K. Burdick, dean of Law at Cornell; Sir Edward Beatty; the late Lord Tweedsmuir who gave a stirring address on the occasion of the Lord Durham Centenary in 1938; Roscoe Pound, dean of the Harvard Law School; and Professor Yntema of the Michigan Law School.

In lighter vein is the following quotation from the official minutes of the club for the meeting of January 22, 1931: "a motion was carried severely censuring the Vice-President for allowing his garter to become undone and for brazenly exposing his leg to the horrified members of the executive while proceeding with the utmost sang-froid to do it up." Solemn chaps, these lawyers.

Moot Court

Providing an invaluable practical touch to the Law Course is its Moot Court. Holding weekly sittings, the Court offers students the opportunity to argue cases both in a Magistrate's Court and in the Appellate Division before three justices. Conducted with the complete decorum of similar trials and cases in the real courts, the Moot Court of the University of Toronto offers the student the experience of appearing before robed justices, of wearing the gown himself, of preparing and presenting

Household Science Girls Master the Technique Of Modern Homemaking

Course was at First Opposed as Unnecessary; Co-eds Now Learn Basic Theories and Practical Household Lore in Four-Year Session which Turns Out Potential Helpmeets of the Highest Order

TWENTY PER CENT OF 1,200 GRADS ARE DIETITIANS

In the month of June, 1911, an unprecedented storm of applause culminating in the chant "We want pie" arose when a small group of girls appeared before the Chancellor to receive their degrees. The group which evoked such enthusiasm consisted of the first graduates of the University of Toronto in the full Household Science Course.

In February, 1902, Normal classes had been started for Domestic Science teachers, and in the following November a H.S. course at the University of Toronto had been established by the in Canada to give a degree course, and classes in special fields were to be taken at the Lillian Massey School of Household Science and Art. In 1905 the suggestion was carried out that the science work of the Normal Course be taken at the University. In the following year when the Lillian Massey School was merged into the Household Science Department of the University, no mention was made of the Normal Course and it has never been taken over by the University.

Suspicious of Science in Home

The Department of Education of the province refused to recognize the degree granted in Household Science as qualification for secondary school teachers unless two subjects were added. These subjects were Latin and Mathematics and when they were added in 1907, the course became a B.A. course. In 1924 the course which led to Bachelor of Household Science was added to the curriculum.

Opinions about the course changed with the times. There was a tendency at first to regard with suspicion the application of science to domestic affairs. It was felt that a girl could learn all that was necessary about cooking in her kitchen at home. Even at the opening of the building in 1913, many were heard to say: "think of all this for a cooking school." Still, many who had entertained doubts as to the worth of a university education for women since they believed it did nothing to fit a girl for the probable domestic life in store for her, now felt that higher education for women should be in the courses of household science.

Practical Work Follows Theory

The course was arranged so that pure science would be given before the domestic subjects dependent on it. The first year is mainly science. In the second year, the students take Household Management and Textile Chemistry. This includes a study of home care of the sick, the home and its furnishings and the application of chemistry to laundering of clothes and the care of fabrics. The third year consists mainly of a study of foods and food value. The physical and chemical properties of food are studied experimentally and the preparation of it as influenced by these properties. The students learn one hundred calory portions of all common food. Normal diets for varying types at varying costs are planned and prepared.

In the fourth year, Dietetics are studied, particularly the principles underlying dietetic treatment of the metabolic diseases. Practical planning and preparing of diets for hypothetical cases is carried on. In this year original articles bearing on the work, especially in feeding experiments, are required. The students also take the Economics of the Household. This includes such subjects as women in modern industrial life, status of domestic service, production, distribution and marketing of commodities, division of income and budget-making.

Many Openings in Field

There have been roughly twelve hundred graduates in Household Science but there is a great shortage of trained girls in this field at present. About fifty per cent of these graduates are married, twenty per cent are dietitians, and eighteen per cent are teaching. The other twelve per cent are doing such work as social service work, laboratory work, and public health work.

The study of Household Science is no longer regarded with the suspicion with which it was once viewed. Its value is realized in the professional world and even more so for the girl who chooses marriage as her career. "When they settle down and get married, we expect them to be model homemakers," said Dr. Brodie, the Head of the Department of Household Science. If the graduates follow this advice, here then is the happy hunting ground for future brides.

Wisdom of All Ages Preserved For Posterity In Royal Ontario Museum

Archaeology, Geology, Mineralogy, Palaeontology and Zoology Are Main Departments of Famed Antique Storehouse. Original Opening in 1914—Rapid Growth Necessitated Additions in 1932

OPENED BY DUKE OF CONNAUGHT

Set forth in letters in the dome of its rotunda is the ideal which has inspired and guided the development of the Royal Ontario Museum: "That all men may know Thy sight."

The establishment of the Museum which comprises the five museums of Archaeology, Geology, Mineralogy, Palaeontology, and Zoology, by legislative act in 1912 marked the culmination of a movement which had been gaining great strength in the preceding decade.

The original building was opened in March, 1914, by the Duke of Connaught, but the rapid growth of the collections necessitated an addition in 1932. The Museum has always been closely associated with the university, and the link is maintained by the inclusion of the Chairman of the University Board of Governors, and three University appointees, on the Board of Trustees in whom management of the Museum is vested. A director is appointed for each separate museum, and they are considered members of the university staff, although they are not now, as in former years, heads of their respective departments in the university. The museum collections are used in many university lecture courses. The cost of maintenance is shared equally by the provincial government and the university, and although there was formerly an additional provincial grant for purchasing new objects, this is in abeyance during the war.

The natural history collections which ultimately developed into the Royal Ontario Museum of Zoology can be traced as far back as 1857, when a catalogue was begun by Professor William Hinde, brother of Sir Francis Hinde, who became the first professor of Natural History in 1853. This catalogue shows that some efforts were made to provide a museum from the earliest days of the University. In 1863 it was housed in what is now West Hall, University College. The first of 1890 damaged much of the building, but left most of the collection unharmed; it was moved, however, to the new Biology building which had been opened in 1889. By 1905 the need for larger quarters was already felt, and the drive begun which culminated in the Act of 1912.

The Museum of Geology also had its beginnings in the University. When the university departments of Geology and Mineralogy moved into their new building in 1904, space was provided for a museum. With the opening of the Royal Ontario Museum in 1914, there was an added impetus to collecting, but the stimulus was even greater after 1933, for the original quarters of the Geological Museum were in the basement and its facilities for display were poor.

The beginning of the palaeontological collections may be traced back to 1871 when Professor A. H. Nicholson was the professor of Natural History at the University of Toronto. All the early specimens were destroyed by the University College fire and it was Professor Ramsay Wright who was responsible for the inclusion of palaeontology in the collections made after that fire. From 1904-1914 they were located in the Chemistry and Mining building, but the quarters soon became too small. In 1911, Victoria University added its valuable collection of fossils.

The present extensive Archaeological Museum which occupies by far the largest part of the building is the section perhaps best known to the general public. It is of more recent origin than any of the natural history museums and largely through the genius of its Director, Dr. C. T. Currelly, it has grown from a small collection in the early years of this century to rank with the outstanding archaeological museums of the world. The history of this newer museum has not yet been published. The phenomenal growth in the archaeological section was one of the chief factors which made the extension in 1932 necessary.

Household Science

GREETINGS FOR THE VARSITY'S JUBILEE

The Faculty of Household Science wishes to extend its congratulations to The Varsity at this time of its Jubilee.

This Faculty is too young to have seen the full growth of the paper but we have seen it develop and have watched generations of students studying its pages.

The staff have even seen it rivaling their 11 o'clock lectures as these begin, but before long, even the most confirmed addicts of Varsity readen do learn that study, directed by lectures and laboratory work, will give them some value for the future which our good college paper cannot supply.

So some hundreds of graduates have gone out from this Faculty, and still more hundreds of our foster children from the Household Economics course in the Faculty of Arts, for the staff of this Faculty direct their studies and give them much of their instruction.

Now these graduates are scattered. Some are wives and mothers, directing happy households; some are dietitians, supplying good food to the sick in hospitals and to the healthy in restaurants and tea rooms; some are teaching our young people better ways of living, and yet others have been and are in far countries as Christian missionaries but preaching the gospel of wholesome adequate foods and good living at the same time.

All of them carry with them happy memories of college life, and I venture to say that anyone of them would rejoice to see a Varsity of today, and would note its pages to gather news of the student life as it goes on in the University of Toronto.

A college paper has a service to render, as historical evidence for the future as well as for interest for staff and students of the present.

C. C. BENSON,
Secretary.

Lillian Massey Building Made Debut in 1913

Multi-Coloured Marble Halls Provided with Gymnasium and Swimming Pool for Women as well as All the Necessary Laboratories and Equipment; Furnishings Selected with an Eye to Durability, Utility and Beauty

BUILT OF INDIANA LIMESTONE

"The finest individual gift that the University has ever received," said President Falconer at the opening of the Household Science Building in January, 1913. It was because of the generosity of the late Mrs. Lillian Massey Treble that this building, together with all its equipment, was built and presented to the University of Toronto.

The Household Science Building which stands at the north entrance to Queen's Park, is of Greek design and is built of Indiana limestone. The keynote of the style and manner of the building is simplicity. The main entrance door is a copy of an example found in the Erechtheion at Athens.

Marble Used Extensively

Inside the door, there is a realization of the operatic lyric—"I dreamt that I dwelt in marble halls." In the entrance hall there are Ionic pillars of marble mosaic. This hall contains the main staircase which is built entirely of white Italian marble, and solid columns of the same marble support the upper landing. The walls of the entrance hall have dado and pilasters of the same material. Its floor as well as that of the wide corridor which runs around the building is laid with marble mosaic with a border of black and white cubes, forming a Greek fret pattern.

The second floor is used entirely for the teaching of Household Science. The third floor contains the laboratories for Household Management and for the teaching of Food Chemistry. The walls of the corridors and rooms on these floors have white enameled tile dados. The floors of these corridors, the Food Laboratories, Store Rooms and Laundry are laid with terrazzo, while the floors in the Food Chemistry and Household Management Laboratories are of vitreous tile.

Ample Laboratory Facilities

One hundred students can work at the same time in the Food Laboratories. The Household Management Laboratories provide places for forty students to work and the Food Chemistry for fifty students. The Laundry gives space for a class of twenty-four, and the same number can be accommodated in the Dining Room.

The basement floor contains the gymnasium, centre of co-ed athletic activity on the campus. It extends through two stories and is provided with a gallery on a level with the main floor. Near the gymnasium is the swimming pool, forty-five feet long by twenty feet wide, lined with white English tiles. The walls of the room are lined with a dado of white tiles and the room is floored with terrazzo.

Swimming Pool Aroused Praise

It was this swimming pool which aroused the greatest praise in the description of the buildings written at the time of its opening in 1913. The swimming pool or swimming bath as it was more commonly called then was described as a picture "from Pompeii or Babylon because of its gleaming depths with white pillars mirrored in their cool green." An even more eloquent description ran "those cool green depths shifting in the wintry sunlight jade to emerald, shimmering in the broad expanse between columns of alabaster, look like a picture of Leighton or Alma-Tadema, rather than a mere natatorium in a modern educational building. However, when four o'clock comes and young Canada splashes about in its efforts to learn the gentle art of keeping afloat, the scene becomes one of practical To-day."

Household Science Has Two Objects

Sir Edmund Walker, Chairman of the Board of Governors, publicly thanked Mrs. Treble for her generous gift. Miss Alice Ravenhill who had begun the course of Household Science at King's College in England was the guest speaker at the opening. She declared that the two objects of the Household Science course were "to teach the right conduct of life in the home and to prepare women for the peculiar calling it is their privilege to follow and these objects could be carried out satisfactorily in this new building."

FREELAND STUDIO

Specialists in Graduation Photography

For at least half of the period of Varsity's sixty years, commemorated in this issue, our studio has been serving a large proportion of the graduation classes, and serving them well.

We are exclusively and specially equipped to turn out a high standard of graduation groups, and our portraits always maintain a better average. And the reason—because every member of the staff is a skilled specialist; the camera room is equipped with special lighting developed from years of experience; and all work is completed in our own studio, using the highest quality materials only. That is a partial explanation of the cleanness and quality of our work that shows up so definitely in Torontonensis, and in our individual portraits.

Congratulations on this splendid issue of good old "Varsity".

Eating and Sleeping are Old Student Problems

Appetites Persistent Under All Circumstances

Students Originally Ate in Parliament Buildings—Cow Pastures and Vegetables Provided Campus Scenery

QUALITY IMPROVING

Almost everyone feels entitled to the conventional "three meals a day," and college students, if they don't miss breakfast, usually manage to work in the time-honoured trio without any difficulty.

But for the average undergraduate any time is time to eat—food is the logical conclusion of a Big Evening, the obvious diversion at club meetings, after skating or the movies; the natural welcome intermission in an evening's study, and almost a "must" before bedtime.

Students today get a much better quantity and quality of food than did any generation of their forbears. Even in war time, they are merely asked not to waste butter. In their enjoyment of good food, however, they and their fathers and fathers' fathers are all alike, for whether the century be 19th or 20th, eating is a necessary and a noble occupation.

Grew Food on Campus

Back in the early days, when the campus was a wilderness and before the halls had had time to become hallowed, professors and students dealt with the eating problem in their own practical ways. There was a time, for example, when the back campus supplied the University Residence with fruit and vegetables, when cows were pastured where Victoria College and Annesley Hall now stand by people fearing contaminated milk. The Superintendent once kept a pig in a shed behind the first gymnasium.

The first classes were held in the Parliament Buildings and for a while students ate there. In 1859, a residence was opened in the west wing of University College and with it a dining hall in what is now the Junior Common Room. This was closed in the nineties at the same time as the residence, but re-opened later, around 1908, as a place for men students of all faculties to eat. Under the name of the Students' Union, it was operated until the opening of Hart House in 1919.

Latin Grace Started Meals

A certain amount of ceremony had to be observed in the old dining hall back in the seventies and eighties. A professor in cap and gown presided alone on a dais in the upper end of the room, and the meal began and ended with a Latin grace said by one of the undergraduates. But this seems to be as far as decorum went because after the meal was over, when the professor marched out between the tables, he often had to step nimbly to avoid having his toes mashed by "accidentally" upset benches.

In 1870, board cost from two to three dollars a week, an amount work a good deal more than now. St. Vincent Street (now Bay Street) was the region of boarding houses and of penurious boarding house mistresses. Some students were very poor, and lived on only two meals a day, cooking their own meals, and wherever there was a stove a group would congregate. In later times, those who had little money depended a great deal on food sent from home.

Play One Eatary vs. Other

The most frequented restaurants in the early '90s were on College, Spadina and Yonge Streets. Their characteristic—to quote a graduate of those years—was "more gravy on the bottom of the plate than on the top." However, by playing off one restaurant against another, the students used to fare pretty well. If the food of one was falling

Undergraduates Faced By Residence Problems

There are approximately 5160 undergraduate students enrolled in the University of Toronto. Of these, 3090 live at home in Toronto and 1050 live in residence. Of the remaining 1020, about 300 live in fraternities, leaving 180 women and 540 men to find accommodation in boarding or rooming houses.

Since all residences are always filled, obviously these students do not remain outside them because of the relatively high cost of living. Clearly stated, the fact is that the university is in need of residence accommodations for 41 per cent more women and 84 per cent for men.

Residence life gives the student many advantages, especially the out-of-town student. Bringing him into more intimate contact with the university itself, the residence also gives him ample opportunity to make contacts among fellow-students and faculty members. This role cannot possibly be filled by a boarding house which is of necessity decentralized and out of touch with the campus even though its atmosphere may be pleasant and its facilities satisfactory.

below standard, they would change to another offering special extras to win their patronage. There they would stay until the food became poor, when they would flock back to the old place that was now making overtures to get them as customers again.

If you can believe some of the stories, meal-taking must have been an exciting business then. In place, patronized by both medical and engineering students, the Meds' coat pockets would be picked in the course of the dinner and bones—not chicken bones—would start to fly through the air—direct descendants of the rolls which are today's regulation meal-time ammunition.

Many Dining Halls Today

Nowadays, a registration of 7,000 means quite a number of lunches consumed on or near the campus each noon hour. Great Hall in Hart House, serving three meals a day except Sunday, feeds over 500 men at lunch and 200 in the evening. The Women's Union and Wymilwood have cafeterias where city girls may eat and bring their own lunches. Non-residents may lunch at St. Hilda's College, and the new dining hall for Trinity men is designed to hold 250 residents and non-residents. Fraternity men and women can eat at their fraternity houses.

The women's residences all have dining rooms, but some of the men's do not and the boys living in them "eat out". In the co-operative residences, the boys make their own breakfasts and help prepare lunch and dinner, besides getting all their meals on Saturdays and Sundays.

Students Are Healthy Eaters

Students who eat in any of the 12 or so hideaways within easy reach of the campus usually have a light breakfast—few ask for hot cereal—a lunch at noon (a typical one is soup and a sandwich) and dinner at night. The average meal check is about 30 cents. For the most part students eat sensibly, restaurant managers say, drinking a lot of milk and being strong on salads and fruit, particularly when spring comes. They drink coffee rather than tea.

Campus Co-op Leads In Health Service Plan

Infirmiry and Care Services Now Given in Some Residences but No System yet in Use for Whole University

INSURANCE SCHEME

The widespread trend toward various schemes of health and hospitalization insurance has of late been mirrored on this campus by a group of interested people who first set up their own small scheme and then turned their attention to the possibility of establishing a broader service.

In the fall of 1940 the Campus Co-operative Residence, Inc., set up a pool to provide medical and infirmiry services for its members. An infirmiry resident has charged to his account an amount of $3.50, the unused portion of which is returned as a dividend at the end of the year. Further, each member so desiring may join the Co-operative Medical Services. On payment of $3.00, the member may receive up to $15.00 each year for professional medical services, excluding dental work or the treatment of known chronic diseases, or disease contracted before joining the medical services scheme.

The success of this scheme and the demand for extension of membership has turned the light on existing health, medical and infirmiry services throughout the university. The result of an exhaustive investigation has revealed that the medical examination to students is only average, and in the case of men below average, and that the care a student receives when sick depends entirely upon which residence he lives in.

Each student in first and second year is given a physical examination, and in later years a brief lookover is required for those participating in sports. A smallpox vaccination is compulsory before entering the university. Consultation and first-aid are available when needed at the university medical offices, but the university physicians do not make any residence calls. After consultation, students are referred to their own doctors for treatment. An intracutaneous tuberculin test, generally considered to be important, is given to women only, and then just in first year. For positive reactors, X-rays are available at the General Hospital at special rates. With the exception of medical students who are constantly exposed to tubercular cases, no men in the university receive the test.

Infirmiry service and care vary with the residences. Victoria College resident students are well-provided for, the women receiving an annual exam, infirmiry, medical and nursing care for a $15 fee, while the men receive infirmiry, medical and nursing care for $7. In St. Hilda's College and Whitney Hall, the girls receive infirmiry, medical and nursing care, as do the men in St. Michael's College. Trinity men receive infirmiry and nursing service. In the University College men's residence and in East, North and South houses of the old university residences, no service whatsoever is provided for the several hundred men living there. Fraternity houses usually have their own arrangements with a physician to make calls, but students living in boarding houses have no services provided. It is for these groups, and for those residences having no infirmiry or medical care, that some health insurance scheme is desired primarily.

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE

University College is the Provincial Arts College, maintained by the Province of Ontario. It is non-denominational but not non-religious. There are residences for men and for women. A spirit of unity and co-operation pervades the whole College.

University College offers thirty-two (32) scholarships at Matriculation and many scholarships and prizes in course.

Substantial Bursaries are granted to able students who have difficulty in bearing the total expense of a university education. Preference is given to applicants from schools not situated in Toronto.

For information on residences, scholarships, entrance, choice of course, and a free copy of a beautifully illustrated descriptive booklet, write to the Registrar, University College, University of Toronto, Toronto, Ontario.

For information on courses in Arts, Medicine, Applied Science and Engineering, Household Science, Education, Forestry, Music, Graduate Studies, Dentistry, Social Science, Nursing, the new Course in Physical and Health Education, the new Honour Course in Geography, the Honour Course in Law, the Course in Commerce, the Honour Courses in Fine Art and in Music, etc., write the Registrar of the University. For particulars regarding the Pass Course for Teachers, Evening Classes, Summer Session, courses in Occupational Therapy, in Physiotherapy, in Aerial Navigation, and in Business, write to the Director of University Extension.

Student Organization Formed at Century's Turn Survived Early Trials

Revision of Constitution in 1931 Brought a Satisfactory End to Colourful Squabbles of Thirty Years which Ran from Complex Undergraduate Discipline to Repeated Financial Troubles in the Twenties

CHARGED WITH BEING "RUBBER STAMP"

Many problems have been created by the structure of this university along the lines of a federation of local colleges and faculties. Central among these problems has been the need for some university-wide, centralizing organization for administration of student affairs, a need which has led, through a process of evolution, to the establishment of the Students' Administrative Council.

Back in 1901, in response to a general need, a men's Union was formed for those students who did not belong to the Athletic Association, but who wished to mingle with men of other faculties. In rooms in the west wing of University College, dashing collegians in high collars and hair parted in the middle (some even had handlebar moustaches), played billiards or smoked, what Torontonians of those years refers to, as, "O.P." tobacco. The membership in the hey-day of the Union was about two hundred and fifty and in it one can discern the idea back of Hart House. The Union purchased The Varsity, then a weekly private enterprise, and combined it with another student's organ known as "College Topics".

Students' Committee Suggested

Then, in 1905, a Students' Parliament was organized for those interested in open debate. Not only did it concern itself with matters of great political moment, but it took over actual administrative responsibilities. Those were the days when the "great strike" of 1895 had left a spirit of rancour among the student body, and some irregularity in the awarding of a scholarship, spread in a Varsity editorial, caused another upheaval of opinion in the university. In 1906, in that year, Royal Commission had been set up to overhaul the cumbersome organization of the university as it then existed, and to it one Albert H. Abbott sent a letter suggesting the organization of a students' committee to act as an official organ of student opinion to which the authorities could refer. The important thing about this letter was that it suggested two principles of organization which, if not adopted then, have since become salient features of our S.A.C. These were that the membership of the committee should be composed of the heads of various college or faculty organizations, and that membership of all students in "university" organizations should be enforced by means of a small compulsory fee so as to obtain the interest of all students in their representative body. The compulsory fee exists but it is doubtful whether this of necessity means that students care how it is spent.

Executive More Important

The Parliament as a debating organization deteriorated to the dismay of its founders and editors of campus publications. Its main topic of discussion seems to have been proposed amendments to the constitution, and attendance fell off rapidly. The cabinet, or executive committee on the other hand grew in importance. During these years the publication of Torontonensis was taken over, and to the delight of everyone, Theatre Nights and Glee Club Concerts were outstandingly successful. Then, in 1910 the Parliament took over control of the Students' Union and with it The Varsity. Torontonensis of that year extolled "public control" and called it an experiment in socialism. The Students' Directory now published as the University Directory by Simcoe Hall, was begun about this time by the Parliament.

But the Parliament still declined, while an organic change began to manifest itself in the tendency "for business to proceed from the executive to the legislature instead of the other way around", as the secretary put it. So the Students' Administrative Council came into being in 1913, with members chosen in their constituency to hold this sole position. At the time the greatly increased percentage of the attendance seemed to compensate adequately for the loss of a wide basis of membership. The Council was, needless to say, for men's affairs only, the fee was one dollar and in 1914 a permanent general secretary was engaged.

During the war the women came into greater prominence, and took over, in large measure, the publication of The Varsity and Torontonensis. Organization was also necessary for war work such as knitting and raising money for various relief funds such as those for Belgium and Serbia, and the Women's S.A.C. came into being in 1916. But there was still no means of co-operation between men and women; thus 1919 saw the birth of the Joint Executive of the S.A.C. whose main responsibility was the publication of Torontonensis, The Varsity, and the Students' Directory.

Need Collective Student Opinion

But the underlying reason for a Students' Council had been given as the need for some official organ of collective student opinion. At the same time it was felt that strength could be given to the Council by making it responsible for the discipline of the student body. Thus, just after the re-organization of the Parliament in 1910-11 a referendum to the students was taken, a favourable return was recorded and the Discipline Committee was set up with representatives from the various faculties and colleges, and smaller sub-committees for matters local to only one of them. The Committee had no power to punish, but turned miscreants over to the Caput with recommendations for disciplinary action. Says an earlier history of the subject: "The Caput rarely, if ever, found it necessary to object to any penalty suggested by the Discipline Committee on the ground of leniency." The same committee for some strange reason was engaged in organizing "rooters" practices and parades" but this did not prevent its growth in importance on its less frivolous side. Finally, with the help of one Hon. Mr. Justice Masten, the constitution of a court was drawn up "that was a model of precision and clearness."

A later article in The Varsity states that "because the court has been most prominent and received the greatest publicity when acting as a trial court after breaches of discipline by student bodies, the general impression prevails in the mind of many students that its chief work is the levying of fines". Indeed, during the first session of the Court in 1921, First and Second year Medicine were fined $150 for "unlawfully taking part in a street parade". The U. of T. Monthly tells of the pomp and circumstance and then what would leave one in a somewhat doubting frame of mind: "after the case had proceeded along these formal lines the verdict of guilty was finally pronounced."

In 1925, two policemen with a great sense of duty, turned over to the court two students caught scalping tickets at a football game and when the cops appeared at the trial in Hart House received disapproval hearty enough for the Telegram to note the fact, and for The Varsity to become more than usually denunciatory. An item from the Star Weekly, March, 1927, records the imposition of fines of $250 for a "scrap" between Meds and School. Says the Weekly: "The School of Science men were ordered to bear the largest share

"The Idea" Begins to Take Shape

Three members of The Varsity masthead are shown here mulling over a makeshift dummy of their much-prized, long-dreamed-of Diamond Jubilee Issue which taxed imagination, historical knowledge, original phraseology and general physical stamina. This typical "mulling" scene is daily repeated in the news offices where every issue is closely scrutinized and savagely criticized.

of the costs". School again set the newspapers in a dither by raiding Mr. Jerry Shea's Hippodrome Theatre on the night of November 15, 1928. The citizens of Toronto must have been more stolid than usual on that night for the S.A.C.'s letter of apology contains the statement that "the Council realizes the serious nature of these breaches of discipline, but in the present case, by the greatest good fortune, no damage or panic occurred".

The Students' Court disappeared in the revision of the constitution of 1931; it was felt that asking students to take the responsibility and the associated odium of punishing their fellows was not entirely fair or desirable, and that these permanently responsible, the Caput should do so.

Financial Troubles Set In

In 1922 The Varsity became a daily publication. The S.A.C. management did not, apparently, make sufficient preparation of financial policy to swallow the change all in one gulp, and in 1926 it was revealed that the S.A.C. had a deficit of over $11,000. The deficit for the previous winter had been $2,800, of which The Varsity accounted for $2,200. The S.A.C. brought its troubles before the Board of Governors who loaned it $6,000 to strengthen up its finances, advised retrenchment in the production costs of The Varsity, and the levying of an extra dollar on the regular $3.00 compulsory fee until the loan was repaid. Editorial criticism for laxity of administration was aimed by The Varsity mainly at the Joint Executive of the S.A.C. for its failure to exact a financial report from its administrators between 1922 and 1925. "Laxity has been the curse of the administration of student affairs in the past; and unless the representatives of the students wake up and attend to business they have no reason to expect that it will not continue to be so to the end of time."

But the feeling of malaise continued, and in November, 1927, The Varsity suggested that the meetings be thrown open to the public, because the students knew or cared so little about the S.A.C. and its Joint Executive. Such was the power of the press that the Council adopted the suggestion; but a report of the third such open meeting states that "there were no students present other than the members of the Council and The Varsity reporter". The editorial lines per week on the subject of the S.A.C. began to rise in number and urgency; amendments were in the air. The most important suggestion was that the general secretary should be appointed by the president rather than by the Council on the approval of the president. The problem of dragging students out to games was posed, and the nearest the Council got to the present set-up was the suggestion of a book of tickets "provided it be not compulsory, and not more than five dollars".

Attacked as "Rubber Stamp"

The following winter the University was "in a condition of mental, moral and intellectual lassitude", according to Saturday Night. Leonard Ryan, that year's Varsity editor, it continues, "with commendable zeal decided that he should do something about it. So shaping his editorial pen like a lance, he mounted the Champus Cat and began charging madly about the campus tilting at anything and everything that looked like a windmill. In this fashion he accused the fraternities of exerting political influence on student affairs; the athletic commission with showing favoritism with regard to rugby tickets; and roundly condemned the students of S.P.S. for rowdy behaviour in a downtown theatre. All of which created little flurries of excitement among the students. But evidently Mr. Ryan was not satisfied. And one day an editorial defending "betting" (note: remember, this was the day of gigolos, black-bottom trousers and flappers) appeared in The Varsity followed shortly by another stating that professors were not wholly oblivious to the charms of feminine students. This was in the nature of juvenile humour; unfortunately, however, a number of the Board of Governors took the affair seriously and the Students' Council was requested by the authorities to have a talk with Mr. Ryan. This was done and everything looked lovely. Then, the next morning, Mr. Ryan came out in The Varsity to attack the Joint Executive of the S.A.C. as being a rubber stamp for the University authorities. The result of this was that the student executive requested Mr. Ryan to resign forthwith, which he did. The next day he and his loyal staff brought out their opposition paper The Adversity in the columns of the Evening Telegram."

Investigation Ordered

Within a week, on February 14, 1929, a motion was made to set on foot an investigation into the constitution of the S.A.C., this to be done by a "disinterested group", even though this made the dismissal of the editor seem inconsistent with reforming zeal. The great debt had finally been wiped out but it was decided to continue the extra dollar fee for another year to provide a "contingency fund". Considering what year it was this may seem prophetic. The Mail and Empire of May 2, notes that Dr. DeLury, dean of the faculty of arts, Rev. Cosgrave, provost of Trinity, and Dr. McMurrich, dean of the graduate school were appointed an investigating committee. As early as September 27 in the following term the Men's S.A.C. began passing motions to speed up the investigation. Allan Ferry, the incoming president early issued a vigorous statement and The Varsity backed his plea for greater student interest in the S.A.C. It was by now openly admitted that the Joint Executive controlled the W.S.A.C. and the S.A.C., and the women of the University began to clamour for "suffrage" since the president of the S.A.C. was ex officio president of the Joint Executive.

Many Functions Performed By Administrative Council In Interests of Students

Variety of Services Performed by Council, Ranging from Huge Loan Fund for Needy Students to Rooming Accommodations and Summer and Part-Time Employment for Men and Women

S.A.C. PUBLISHES THE VARSITY, AND TORONTONENSIS

The Students' Administrative Council is student self-government. Many students have the impression that it is merely a student employment bureau for part time and summer work. It must be admitted that the latter function is more obvious than others, and probably it is one of the most useful of its functions. As a matter of fact, the present chances of getting part time or even permanent employment through the S.A.C. are the best they have ever been, and the two general secretaries-treasurers are faced with the problem of finding students to take jobs rather than of finding employers to give them. There is a distinct opportunity for further building up an already strong connection between the students as potential employees and business men as potential employers. Oddly enough the employment service is the most recent one taken on by the S.A.C., and because of its close connection with the "office" has increased greatly the importance of the administrative side of the S.A.C.

Huge Sums Loaned

The next thing that is likely to come to mind is the loans service. Nearly every undergraduate knows that within the limits of the available surplus of the S.A.C.'s funds, he may borrow up to one hundred dollars, interest free if he has an honest face, and his need is pressing. As a rule students don't get around to this until third or fourth year, but there are instances of loans to freshmen and sophomores. This requires penetration beyond the outer office of the S.A.C. in Hart House, and a personal interview with the man who more than anyone else has come to be looked upon as the central figure in the S.A.C. These days one doesn't think of S.A.C. without thinking of E. A. Macdonald.

Extensive Rooming Service

Then, maybe, the S.A.C. found you a room in a boarding house, and, if it is frugal, you are fairly certain that it is clean, and not too great a strain on the budget. You may even be getting the room rent free in exchange for work about the house.

Maybe you don't even know who the president of the S.A.C. is. According to the constitution, article VI, section 1, sub-section (a), the president "shall be a male graduate of the University of Toronto of not more than five years' standing, with experience, if possible, on the Council, and who shall be elected by the Council". The present incumbent is Bill Small, last year's president of the Victoria College Union, a member of the Varsity inter-collegiate tennis team, an outstanding student, and, to all who know him, a "right guy".

You are also probably aware that the S.A.C. has something to do with The Varsity, Torontonensis and the students' "Bible", the Handbook. And you may recollect having paid among your other fees, $2.00 that was for the S.A.C. Beyond that, as likely as not, your knowledge of your local government does not extend.

"Finest in Canada"

Just for perspective, then, let it be known, that for efficiency and service, the local organization is without much question, the finest of its kind in Canada. It would be difficult to determine its place in comparison with student councils in the United States. Certainly, in some of them there is a more far-reaching organization, and a greater volume of business. The least we can say is that for harmony and efficiency, our organization can be compared with anything the States has to offer. It is just this smoothness of functioning that keeps the S.A.C. out of the public eye. Before 1931, it worked with many groanings and creakings, and from its inception after the University was re-organized in 1906, the student government went through cycle after cycle of deterioration. After twenty-four years of experimentation a working constitution which has given ten years of cloudless administration has been worked out. It aims at retaining a representative basis. There is yearly, of course a complete change of membership. Full responsibility is in the hands of the Council members all but a few of whom are undergraduates; that is, full responsibility for the spending of about $30,000 a year.

Local Interest is Strong

This University happens to have a "federal" set-up, probably unlike most educational institutions. Aside from the question of whether the focusing of sentiment is good or desirable, it is obvious to any student here that his first interest is in his own particular bailiwick, be it an arts college, a professional faculty or otherwise. This, it is believed, is desirable because a student body as large as ours the individual would tend to become a cipher, were the stress not laid on particularizing the centre of interest. Thus "university" sentiment and interest are secondary, and the colleges and faculties are the vital focal points. Nevertheless, there are some things that affect the students as a whole, and can be carried out better by serving a wider constituency. In the academic realm we find such subjects as mathematics and pure science, the social sciences and history drawing students from all colleges or faculties. Likewise we can have a better daily newspaper and yearbook by doing the thing on a large scale, and this hold true for the band, the symphony orchestra and the inter-collegiate teams. But, apart from this, there are some occasions when a student cannot speak for himself alone but only as a member of a group holding similar opinions, and one of the original functions of the S.A.C. was to represent student opinion in the mass.

Composition of S.A.C.

The S.A.C. is composed, ex officio, of "the presidents or heads of the recognized men's student government organization," or as in Trinity, Forestry and Pharmacy, the elected representative, of the four arts colleges, Applied Science and Engineering, Dentistry, Education, Forestry, Medicine, Pharmacy and the Theological Colleges; the women are likewise represented in the arts colleges and the faculties of Education, Household Science, Medicine, Public Health Nursing, and Social Science. The two general secretaries-treasurers, two faculty members, the editors, men's and women's, of The Varsity, and the editor of Torontonensis are also members of the Council. In Council meetings, for general purposes, the undergraduate members have one vote each, but in matters of great importance a member has a vote equal to the full time registration in the represented college or faculty. The latter method is practically defunct at the present time. There are certain definite advantages to the system, the main one being that the presidents or heads of college or faculty organizations are usually "first class" men or women who are capable enough and interested enough to get themselves elected to the initial presidencies or headships. The system is democratic, or should be, assuming that there is interest enough in the various constituencies to see to it that the best people are elected. In practice it usually turns out that the Council members are indeed "first class" people with business

Council is Instrument of Undergraduate Government

S.A.C. Helps Students In Many Different Ways

ness and organizing ability. There is little that can be said in a general way about the types that the constituencies usually throw up. U.C. seems to have a reputation for party politics with the men's residence being the predominating influence. Moreover, U.C. is diverse in composition and its sentiment is diluted by the presence of so many people of other loyalties. But in all the other faculties there would seem to be greater solidarity. As a rule there are a few leading people, on a Council totalling twenty-four members, who are prominent at meetings, and hold commissionships.

Work by Committee

Beside the regular Council meetings there are six standing committees each under a commissioner. These are the committees on Publications, Literary and Debates, Sporting Activities, Student Services, Loans and Finance. They meet a week previous to Council sessions, and present reports prepared then for the Council's approval. The set-up of the Finance Committee gives an indication of the closeness of responsibility of the permanent administration to the Council. The general secretary-treasurer must present to it a report on the previous month's business on the fifteenth of each month, the committee considers and passes on tenders called for by the secretary, and supervises estimates drawn up by either secretary. All those who draw salaries from S.A.C. funds are required to sign contracts, and in the case of the editor of The Varsity, a long declaration of policy must be adhered to "both in the spirit and the letter".

This Finance Committee is made up of the President of the Council, two members of the faculty, the senior representative of the Council, two representatives of the Council, "at least one of whom shall be a woman", and the two general secretary-treasurers who do not have votes. At present the faculty members of the S.A.C. are Mr. Lorrain of the Chemistry department, and Mr. Chant of the Psychology department, and they sit on the finance committee. Here then, it would seem is where what might be a controlling hand from Simcoe Hall is laid upon a supposedly free S.A.C. Actually the two faculty representatives are given explicit instructions not to block proposals brought up in the committee's meetings. They are there as experienced, interested men, not as censors from headquarters. They offer advice, but, as Dr. Cody himself believes, power usually means responsibility and it has been found that there need be no grounds for doubt as to the capabilities of the elected Council members. If the president of the S.A.C. be assumed likely to side more readily with his near contemporary undergraduate fellow-members, then the voting power is four as against two in favour of the elected people within the Finance Committee.

The Varsity costs about $10,000 a year to publish, about half of which is paid by advertising, and the other half out of S.A.C. funds. It is certainly an advantage for a harassed editor (college editors are always harassed) to have the problem of cost off his mind. E. A. Macdonald has been responsible for increased advertising sales although the cost per line is lower than that of some commercial papers of equal size, i.e. 4 1/2c. a line.

Torontonian costs about $6,200 and the editor, an undergraduate, gets $200.00 for producing it. Clubs and fraternities pay $10 a page to be mentioned in it, and provide their own cuts. The general secretary-treasurer is editor of the Handbook.

The Aim of the Council

On May 29, 1939, E. A. Macdonald gave an address on "Student Self-Government in the University of Toronto" before the National Conference of Canadian Universities at Montreal, a gathering of the heads of the universities of Canada. The first point he stressed was: "In the University of Toronto there is a unique and effective organization and one that is an integral part of University life, The Students' Administrative Council. This body concerns itself for the most part with giving practical assistance to less fortunate fellow students". So the original first impression of the S.A.C. was probably not far wrong. The loan fund, the employment bureau, and the housing service, aside from their significance as figures on a ledger sheet, are different from other S.A.C. functions in that they are what might be called necessities. Altogether $37,000 has been loaned since the fund was inaugurated; in its first year $1,500 was loaned, this year $7,200 has been loaned. The cash value of the numerous jobs found for students through the S.A.C. would naturally be harder to estimate.

Formed at Century's Turn S.A.C. Survives Early Tests

New Era Dawns

Soon afterward, as the headlines among the clipping files indicate, a new era dawned. December 15, 1931, notes the inauguration of the Loan Fund. September 27, 1934, The Varsity notes a slightly older institution, the housing service; and September 28, 1934, the possibility of an employment bureau is reported. November 30, 1934, it was suggested that the S.A.C. might inaugurate health and accident insurance up to a minimum payment of $175, and, although not implemented, it shows the reforming trend that was then in full swing. The S.A.C. began its retreat from the public eye and had a favourable exposition of its activities by the editor of The Varsity entitled: "What is this S.A.C.?" in 1935. In 1936, the editorial is headed: "Bouquet for the S.A.C." The headlines go on in a rising spirit of favour. In 1938, The Varsity editorial reads: "Never before has the work of the S.A.C. assumed the vast proportions that it has this year." In the winter of 1938-39, E. A. Macdonald and Professor Chant made their tour of American universities and returned to report that the S.A.C. could expand even more. On March 17, 1939: "An honour society was formed by the S.A.C. which will award certificates of merit to students who have made outstanding contributions to the University in non-athletic, extra-curricular activities."

Vice-Chancellor Mulock Stood By University Men In First Union Attempts

Varsity Editor Proposed First Resolution for Student Government at Meeting which Ended in Yonge Street Police Fight. Brawl Extended to Hogg's Hollow and Law Student Arrested in Fiasco

HOPED FOR VOICE IN PARLIAMENT

A mass meeting of more than 500 Toronto students followed by a Yonge Street police fight that extended to the city limits and culminated in a court case in which "Mr." William Mulock, then Vice-Chancellor, intervened to gain release of a Law student who had been charged with "disorder," was the scene of the beginnings of the first attempt at student union.

It was on Dec. 15, 1881, that George Sanfield Macdonald, one of the editors of the first Varsity ever to be published, took the floor of the convention at Temperance Hall and moved the desirability of forming a Student's Union.

Unite to Form Opinion

"Scarcity of knowledge of what goes on in other colleges tends to narrow-mindedness, and gives an exaggerated idea of local greatness," the far-seeing young editor declared. "By union the opinion of student bodies has great weight with public opinion. I have often been asked, what influence can a collective student opinion have? to which I answer that the student body is as representative a one as there is in the Dominion; in fact, is the pick of the province."

Taking a serious view of the problem, representatives of other student bodies took their turns at speaking, several suggesting that the chairman of the meeting, Vice-Chancellor Mulock, should be its parliamentary representative should it gain a voice in parliament. The resolution was unanimously carried, along with another, that the Student's Union consist of the following bodies, which were comprised of 1600 students:

Toronto University College
Trinity College
Toronto School of Medicine
Toronto Medical School
Toronto Law Students
Knox College
Baptist College
Protestant Episcopal Divinity School
Veterinary College
Ontario School of Dentistry,
... and such other bodies as may from time to time be admitted thereto." A committee was then chosen to draft a constitution, to be submitted to a future meeting for adoption.

Attacked by Police

Following the meeting, the students swarmed up Yonge Street, singing school songs (if The Varsity's reports of the event are unbiased), in "an orderly manner, though often molested by the police," who wished to break up the crowd and stop the singing.

"The action of the students was very creditable, while that of the police was provoking in the extreme," says The Varsity indignantly, "and it must have impressed the casual spectator with the idea of tyranny." The students then decided to go to Yorkville, and, past the city limit, "to indulge in songs and speeches."

Faced with 500 students, the county constable lost no time in urging the Toronto Police Force to come over and help, and the latter followed the students across the border line and carried on their work of dispersing the crowd. The students proceeded to Hogg's Hollow, still trying to outmatch authority, but "experienced many inconveniences at the hands of the police. The matter was finally settled, apparently, when the police secured the names of a number of the students, and the students secured the numbers of all the officers."

Law Student Arrested

Policeman Long arrested a Law student during the proceedings, and though the latter was convicted of disorder in Magistrate's court, the case was reopened in March of the following year because of a technicality. Under the stern eye of Judge Boyd, who seemed no more eager to believe the police than the students, the officers of the law filled the court with contradictory statements, the genial Sergeant Stark being forced to admit that he could not swear that the prisoner had ever taken a drink in his life, although some time previously he had stated under oath that the prisoner had been drinking before being brought to police station.

"That the procession was not disorderly until some time after being molested and attacked by the police, Vice-Chancellor Mulock was there to swear; was there to swear that he himself walked with the procession that night because he was proud of the students who formed it. The County Crown Attorney tried to die hard; his collapse was quick, though painful."

arguments, and of handling difficult witnesses.

The Moot Court also conducts an annual murder trial, open to the public, which is one of the bigger campus events of the year. This January, 300 The Law Course has its own undergraduate publication, the "Court Crier"—a mimeographed quarterly bulletin containing 10 pages of student news, views and articles.

The Faculty

Head of the Department is Dr. W.

P. M. Kennedy who has held the university seat of Professor of Constitutional Law for over two decades. He is a noted authority on constitutional law, author of numerous texts, contributor to leading juristic reviews, and the holder of various special lectureships at Canadian, American and European universities. Dr. Kennedy was the adviser in the drafting of the Constitution of the Irish Free State in 1922, and also adviser to the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial Relations.

Mayor Sends Greetings

It is with a very great deal of pleasure that I avail myself of this opportunity of extending the heartiest of congratulations to "The Varsity" on the celebration of its sixtieth anniversary.

I look back with happy recollections on my undergraduate days, and to the place that "The Varsity" even then occupied in the lives of those attending the University of Toronto. The excellence of this paper has been maintained over a long period of years, and undoubtedly has been instrumental in developing the cohesion of the various Faculties of the largest and one of the best Universities in the British Empire.

This great University, of which we are all so proud, stamps Toronto as one of the foremost educational and cultural centres on the North American Continent. The growth of the University and the progress of the City of Toronto have unquestionably, to some extent, been interdependent, and the facilities provided by each have been of distinct advantage to the other.

It is no mean honour to be, at one and the same time, associated with the University of Toronto as a member of the Faculty of Dentistry and the Mayor of this great City, and in this dual position I can continue the harmonious relationship that has existed between the seat of learning and the seat of Civic Administration. Toronto is indeed proud to be the home of Toronto University, which commands the respect and confidence of educational authorities throughout the world.

In congratulating "The Varsity" on the completion of sixty years of usefulness to the educational life of this City, I extend my best wishes for continued success in its specialized field of endeavour.

FRED J. CONBOY,
Mayor

YELLOW-SHIRTED MENACE NOW CLOSER THAN VENICE

YELLOW-SHIRTED MENACE NOW CLOSER THAN VENICE

Two heads are better than one

We must confess to a feeling of intense disappointment in the President as an orator. He made a servile appeal to the low intelligence of the masses. Every one could understand the word he used. He failed to employ quotations from Greek, German or Sanskrit; a public school child could spell any word in his speech. We hope that in the future Mr. Lincoln will utilize the talent which he undoubtedly possesses and give us something which will not be intelligible to the man on the street.

The article then went on to criticize strongly David Playing Before Saul, Forbes-Robertson in "Hamlet" and interviewed Ulysses on The Song of the Sirens.

MEDICAL STUDENTS MAKE BAD DOCTORS

"Those of you who are practising medicine in this country will probably make pretty lousy doctors," stated Dr. F. X. Fitzgib, well-known local corpse-cutter to the Medical Staff Society last night.

"However," he went on, "it won't matter much, because by that time we will have a system of Public Health Insurance which will be pie for the so-called medical profession."

Dr. Fitzgib told a lot of interesting anecdotes about the Provincial Department of Health, which used to be housed in a little cubby-hole in the basement of the Engineering Building. The Director's only assistant was a lab-boy, and whenever he felt the need of a stenographer he used to throw a white towel out the window. Everyone thought this was a good idea, but the laundry bill was too high.

Landing the medical profession of Soviet Russia, he said "I wish we were all Communists and got our pay regularly every month. Let us have a Medical Communist Party. Let us replace the Five Year Plan with the Nine Month Plan."

Spicy and Stimulating, The "Special Issue" Was Annual Institution

The Early Editors Called it "Joyous Irresponsibility" — but Professors and Prominent Students Quaked at the Prospect of the Publication which Feared and Spared No One

ITS SYNTHETIC NEWS HOOOWINKED THE CREDULOUS

Unmourned by successive years of Freshmen who "never knew the summer woods," but a pleasant highlight in the memories of the host of men and women who attended Varsity between 1921 and 1937, is the Jazz Issue. Though it issued only once annually from the press-room, the Special Issue, during the nearly two decades of its existence, was long-awaited by students and even by staff members. To them it became an institution—a time when the bounds of conventionality snapped free with a resounding crack; the "powers that be" on the editorial staff of the undergraduate newspaper "left town" and, all unwitting of the dire consequences, turned the paper entirely over to the staff.

The following day (always to the Editor's great consternation, runs the myth) the axe had fallen. Sometimes members of the editorial staff themselves felt the blow, often the Students' Administrative Council and prominent students in various faculties. It is said that many members of the University staff shivered in their boots and spent fitful nights when the approach of a "Jazz Issue" was rumoured.

Actually the editors enjoyed it all hugely. Those on whose shoulders the year's strenuous responsibilities of publication had fallen would rather have split an infinitesimal failed to put in an appearance at the Press on the night of one of these frothy issues. Coming at or near the conclusion of the year's journalistic work, it was to them as one editor put it, a time of "Joyous Irresponsibility," when no holds were barred and nothing was sacred. They revelled in writing the heads shown on these pages.

The origins of the Jazz Issue are shrouded in mystery—editorials of the period are silent about the whys and whences of early numbers. Perhaps the idea was copied from an exchange campus publication. Certain it was that the large, buoyant and fun-loving staff of The Varsity of 1921 was a logical post-war reaction from the understaffed and painfully solemn Varsity of 1914-18. Possibly the first issue was simply a product of its time—a time when people were beginning to relax again and socks, shirts and spirits were on the upswing.

As a bright spot near the end of the academic year, when exams were approaching and the campus was clothed in the tightening nerves of spring, the Jazz Issue, as it finally came to be called in 1926, was looked upon as a thing rather to be welcomed than censured. A source of good, clean fun for almost all concerned, it was often entirely innocuous; while it did bring the wrath of the few upon its head, its cordial reception by the many served to perpetuate and encourage it, and most of the staff-and-student lampooners frankly and good-naturedly enjoyed its shocking playfulness. It lived on, a boon to weary journalists, a lark to students, and one of those delightful exceptions to commonplace life which make routine existence a little more livable.

In the twenties it showed a fairly steady rise in calibre. Following two years in the early thirties when staff disruptions barred its publication, it burst into print again in 1933, fresh from its two-year dormancy, with the topnotch issue of them all. Here was the Jazz Issue at its best: its humour was a sublime innuendo—free as a drink of water, yet restrained in that it was calculated to outrage no one. Its producers knew how far they could be risqué and libelous without getting themselves into trouble, and they went just that far.

In 1934 the standard fell markedly, and in the three years succeeding, the Jazz Issue resorted less and less to humour and successively more to smut. On this and the next page are printed some of the more strictly humorous stories and headlines of Jazz Issues since 1922. It is not from fear of censorship that we reprint only one of the stories which appeared in the banned issue of 1937—rather it is with a respectful preference for what is really funny; an even deeper respect for the natural limits of journalism, and a sigh and a click of the tongue that the 1937 masthead went too far in trying to outdo its predecessors in printing the unprintable. Most future students will not miss the Jazz Issue—all future "Varsity" mastheads will.

Herewith are to be seen, in as nearly their original form as makeup possibilities would allow, a representative collection of "Jazzed" "Varsity" material. As the editor of the 1925 edition wrote: "The Varsity hopes its readers will read the articles in this issue in the spirit in which they were written. We apologize beforehand if an injustice has been done anyone."

"Just the thing," explained Mr. Kennel, when interviewed by The Varsity on the subject of the proposed tunnels to connect the various university buildings. "I certainly agree that it would speed up traffic and I am sure the students would find it more convenient to meet their friends in a tunnel than out on street corners facing the weather and the curious on-lookers. Personally I have always believed that students have a right to their own private social life."

Questioned as to the possibility of getting lost in the maze of tunnels, Mr. Funnel felt that the students would soon overcome their own difficulties.

Preliminary Announcement

The Annual Graduation Ball

The Graduation Ball in honour of the graduating classes of all the Colleges, Faculties and Departments of the University of Toronto will be held this year in Hart House on Friday, June 6th, 1941. This is the largest and one of the most brilliant functions in the University year. A list will be sent to every college, faculty and department, and each member of the graduating class who intends to be present at the Graduation Ball is asked to sign this list. Tickets will be reserved for each person who has signed. Members of the graduating classes may secure tickets for themselves and a limited number of their friends from the Students' Administrative Council Office, Hart House, on or after April 15th. Price to members of the graduating classes only, $1.00 per ticket. As the accommodation of Hart House is limited, members of the graduating classes are asked to sign the lists and secure their tickets at an early date.

Preceding the dance a reception will be held in the Quadrangle of Hart House.

Five orchestras will be in attendance and supper will be served.

Please cut out this advertisement for reference.

OPINION OF STUDENT BODY STILL VARIED

Student opinion seems to be very varied. Some were in complete agreement while others felt that while the idea might, under some conditions, be a good thing at the present time the depression called for every stringency. Many refused to give any opinion, but generously permitted their names to be used as having nothing to say.

"I have nothing to say," stated Professor W. J. Mandel-Wurtzel, head of the Spanish Department, "but if I did have anything to say I might remark that it is too early yet to form any opinions on the matter. As far as I myself am concerned, I must think of my wife and little ones. However, you may quote me as saying that if I weren't afraid of losing my job I could make some very startling revelations indeed."

WILL DISBAND C.O.T.C. FOR GOOD AND ALL

"Our Work is Done" Declares Officer when War Declared

Quite contrary to a statement made by Colonel Cockleshell at the band banquet on Tuesday night the C.O.T.C. at the U. of T. will be disbanded immediately, and no more parades will be held. The news comes as a blow to the members of the corps, who were to have received new uniforms immediately in the future. The uniforms, which were to be blue and white shorts with natty royal blue blouse and white scarf to match, are already designed, and the Federal Government is merely waiting for prosperity to arrive before supplying the outfits.

"The reason for disbandment is quite obvious," said Major O'Bill, "a war is threatening in Manchuria or somewhere out there, and there is no further need for the C.O.T.C. After all the duty of our boys is to preserve the peace in times of peace, but we are not interested in training our youth for bloodthirsty battle.

Reeking of Port

The undergraduate support of the recent athletic contest has been discouraging in the extreme. Just why students should waste their time supporting Varsity teams is hard to see, particularly as there are so many counter-attractions in the form of ten-cent movies, etc. It is not within reason that students, pressed for money as they are, should spend two dollars for a season ticket admitting them to twelve senior hockey games when they can get an orchestra seat at a burlesque show for a dollar and a half. When will the student body come to realize that teams of all kinds can play better when they are not disturbed by the vociferous shouting of their enthusiastic admirers.

EDITOR OF THE VARSITY PURCHASES TWO TORONTO EVENING PAPERS

The editor of The Varsity announced last night that he had bought the two Toronto evening papers. This action is understood as taken from prolonged consideration dating from last October. The Toronto journalistic fraternity are surprised at the novel turn of events and there is a distinct feeling of uncertainty in the city circles.

Mr. Loeb issued a statement last night in which he assures everyone that he is fully aware of the grave responsibility which falls upon him with this new venture. "I have always had ambitions to try my luck carrying one of the larger papers. I want no one to feel uneasy and I am sure that no one will suffer from my action. I have always been under the impression that the daily papers in Toronto were not as good as they ought to be."

For quite a while Mr. Loeb will be busy looking over the two large newspapers and some of his other duties will have to be neglected. "It is quite a load to carry and even when once settled there will be so much to look into that I will not have time to do very much else."

About the reorganization contemplated the new owner said that a good many heads ought to be changed. "A great many of them," he declared, "are bastards, and have no right in any newspaper of repute."

It is believed the amount of money involved is about forty miles.

Scoops the World

Owing to the prompt action of James Hyrus Smilegorten, star Varsity reporter, "The Varsity" was able to print a full and detailed account of Mrs. Churchill's last tea. Investigation has revealed the fact that no other paper in the world, including the "Shanghai Gesture," reported the tea before it appeared on these pages. Mr. Smilegorten, who happened to be on the spot at the time the disaster occurred, telephoned all particulars to this office. Laugh that off, Star!!!

NO 'VARSITY' TODAY

Owing to a slight blaze which gutted the University Press last evening there will be no issue of The Varsity today. Arrangements have been made with a downtown firm for the publication of the annual Jazz Issue of The Varsity, which will appear tomorrow. As the number is limited to 200 copies, students are advised to get theirs early.

Hasten Jason the Basin!

Final Issue Out Did Predecessors In Sheer Unprintability

Enraged Officials Sprang into Action, Stopped the Presses, and Called in All Available Copies when "Issue to End All Jazz Issues" Hit the Street. All-Time Ban Followed within Week

CONSIDERED OEMOTING "VARSITY" TO BI-WEEKLY

Excitement reigned at the Press on the night of March 3, 1937, as the staff milled joyfully about the northeast corner of the second floor which had seen so many staffs and so many issues come and go. Crowding in corners to sing raucous songs, chortling about typewriters as newer and screwier gags were born and exulting over wacky headlines, they resolved to make it the daringest jazz issue ever; and they did—a jazz issue to end all jazz issues.

Having done his part in the production, Editor Martin Loeb looked on the maudlin scene and decided that perhaps he was getting a little old for this sort of thing. He left explicit instructions about a couple of stories that were not to run, and went home to bed, shaking his editorial grey locks.

Next morning, cheerfully heralded by bold headlines, there were the stories; next morning, credulous freshmen picked up their Undergraduate Newspaper with "ohs!" and "ahs!" that hit high C—staid old staff members looked on it and hid their faces. "Stop the press!" the cry went round, and even as the echoes of the presses faded, apologetic officialdom scuttled about the campus, gathering in all copies of The Varsity they could find.

By noon that day, undercover copies of the banned issue, selling for up to five dollars, were finding eager buyers in the byways and the hedges.

The editor was apologetic, but the damage had been done. Apologies seemed a little late as President Cody, on recommendation of the Caput, asked the Publications Committee to consider changing The Varsity from a daily to a weekly or bi-weekly. There was talk in many circles of abolishing it altogether, and the editor concluded that no matter how rigidly a jazz issue might be supervised, there was nothing to keep it from getting out of hand—the jazz issue must go.

Four days later the front page of the paper was flooded with a statement from the Students' Administrative Council which included the following paragraph:

"Upon motion of The Varsity Editor, Mr. Martin B. Loeb, the following recommendation was made to the Council—"That the Jazz Issue of The Varsity serves no good purpose, such issues as that of this year being indefensible, and for these reasons Jazz Issues should be abolished and this regulation be made a condition of the contract of all future Editors". The Council unanimously adopted this recommendation. . . ."

To the Last Ditch!

This paper has always stood for progress and the amelioration of the burden under which members of this university groan. The editorial board felt, therefore, that as the term is now fast drawing to a close and as yet we have reformed nothing, it behooved us to "get hot". After considerable thought, a glaring malpractice was unearthed, and with this issue we intend to take a firm stand. Something has been slowly making inroads into the heart of our university since its inception in—well, quite a bit before our time; something which threatens the happiness of over five thousand (count 'em) students, a ghastly shadow which looms over one's whole university course, tingling the rosate hopes of youth with a murky ochre. And we, your ill' paper have set ourselves to face this shadow, armed only with our ill' Remington portable (adv.). Dramatic, you must admit.

We, the staff of The Varsity feel that the greatest drawback to collegiate happiness here on earth is examination. At a meeting of the whole staff held recently we passed six votes of non-confidence in examinations in as many minutes—but that's another story. This significant gesture is in keeping, we thought, with the modern spirit of revolt so prevalent in modern youth, and we intend to support it to the full. Our Underwood portables (adv.) will not be laid down until the end of this evil has been wiped out (pass the bottle, Toughy), wiped out.

Students, we art martyrs in your cause. Give us a hand-out.

Board of Governors, we defy you! Come clean with a decent proposition, and we'll let you up!

DON'T KICK MOTHER WHEN SHE IS DOWN

Subject of Interesting Talk Before St. Michael's Last Night

It is rumoured from an authoritative rumour that there is a rumour rumoured about that there is a rumour that Professor A. W. Forfun has accepted the post of Professor of Dogmatics at the Toronto Baptist Seminary, according to an authoritative rumour from a reliable source of rumours that reached the ears of The Varsity last night. This rumour is rumoured to be a rumour based on best rumoured authority. It is also rumoured that Dr. P. P. Fields could not be reached to verify this rumour.

Warden Answers Charges Over Purity of Local Soup

"Absolutely untrue," was the answer given by Mr. Bickersteth when asked if there was any truth in the rumour that preferential treatment was being accorded those members of Hart House who eat their meals at the high table. "There is only one kind of soup served in the Great Hall and it is served to the high table. As it is absolutely impossible to make any worse soup, the other members of the House are served the same brand."

Further questions by the reporter failed to draw any more information from Mr. Bickersteth, and he suggested that if the matter was thought of sufficient importance it could be made the subject of a debate at the Women's Union.

EXAMS START MARCH 17

Whoops, My Dear Exams are Here

The Registrar has requested The Varsity to announce that the final examination in Arts will begin on April 1st, in School of Practical Science on March 15th, and all other faculties two weeks earlier.

The startling news reached the ears of The Varsity last night, that the Senate had moved all examinations forward one month owing to the fact that many of the professors have to attend a Socialist meeting in Berlin during the middle of May.

Regretting the fact that this may inconvenience a few of the students who have procrastinated their studies, the Registrar added that special consideration will be made for repeaters next year. He hoped that a special reduction in fees could be arranged to induce a large percentage to repeat their year.

Two Religious Movements are Linked Internationally

Informal S.C.M. Groups Cut Across College Lines

The Student Christian Movement Began as Part of the Y.M.C.A. but Grew So Rapidly that a Separate Organization was Set Up in 1920; Is a Member of the World Student Christian Federation

BROAD CHARACTER HELPED CHURCH UNION MOVEMENT

The origin of the Canadian Student Christian Movement can be discerned in the little groups of university students who, during the last quarter of the Nineteenth Century banded together to form prayer groups. The first such society in Canada was formed in 1871 in University College.

Neither prudes nor puritans, these pioneers in student organization constituted a vigorous and progressive movement. This is clearly indicated by the movement's constant struggle for recognition and the extension of its activities, and by its members, many of whom later became leaders in varied fields.

Affiliated with "Y"

Soon showing its vitality the organization moved to perpetuate itself, and established outside connections by affiliating itself with the Y.M.C.A. Perturbed at this novel experiment the U.C. College Council "officially disavowed" the new University College Y.M.C.A., but the students refused to be discouraged, and continued as an underground organization until official recognition was granted in 1873. . . .

The purpose of the Student Christian Movement today is to provide the opportunity for undergraduates to discover the relationship of Jesus Christ to their lives and to the world. This is achieved through a programme of study groups, addresses, forums, conferences, and worship services. What good is it for a student to be given training and knowledge if he does not at the same time learn how to use it in the right way?

Spirit of Inquiry

Following the Creed of its predecessors, the organization does not pursue this purpose in a narrow, pious, or long-faced manner. A spirit of inquiry and the application of Christianity to social, economic, international, and scientific matters has always permeated its discussions, and sociability and gaiety it considers essential in the study and practice of Christianity.

The S.C.M. provides a democratic fellowship in which all students who seek the truth may unite, no matter what their faculty, college, or denomination. Of all the voluntary student organizations in the university it is the most representative of all the colleges, and provides therefore an excellent instrument for the expression of student opinion. There are units in Vic, U.C., Trinity, S.P.S., Medicine, Knox, Emmanuel, Wycliffe, and Social Science. The interdenominational nature of the S.C.M. has been and is an important influence for the growing movement towards church union. Several years ago the Theological College Union was formed to promote understanding and interchange of ideas between the students of the four Protestant theological colleges. There is no better indication of this influence than the fact that of the twenty secretaries assigned the task of organizing the Oxford Church Conference which discussed a basis for church union, were former S.C.M. secretaries.

Nation-wide Movement

No less a factor in the importance

Refugee Students Helped By S.C.M. and I.S.S.

Student Christian Movement Has Formed Committee to Maintain Needy Refugee Scholars on Toronto Campus

NOVEL VIC APPLE DAY

Last year as a result of the war a new project was added to the S.C.M. programme on this campus. To help maintain at the University Dr. Leopold Kohr, a refugee from Germany, a committee was formed on the initiative of the Vic S.C.M.

At the beginning of this scholastic year it was decided to perpetuate the Refugee Committee, and to support another refugee student. Among refugees in Toronto was found a German girl, daughter of a university professor who had been exiled by the Nazi régime. The Committee with the assistance of the Women's War Service Committee maintains the guest at the United Church Training School while pursuing her studies in first year Physiotherapy. In its drive for funds the Refugee Committee has brought a new activity to this campus in the form of the "Vic Apple Day". In November, when apples sold like hot cakes in Vic's Alumnae Hall, the experiment proved a success and convinced its sponsors that the event should become an annual institution. Funds were also raised by contributions from all the Vic S.C.M. study groups, and by a successful Refugee Tea held in Wymindool this winter.

After leaving Germany the refugee guest lived for a year in London after which she came to Canada with an English family. Her father, who remained in England, was killed in an air raid near the beginning of November.

The leading spirit of this enterprise is Miss Royal Ke, chairman of the Refugee Committee both last year and this. The scheme was adopted by the S.C.M. to help accomplish their policy of emphasizing the international fellowship of Christian youth.

conferences also occur on occasions of the visits of prominent leaders.

Of the federated S.C.M. units on the campus the Victoria S.C.M. is the largest, and is accepted as a part of Vic so universally throughout the college that its executive is elected by the whole student body. Its nine study groups are led for the most part by members of the staff who design their topics for the students studying their particular academic subjects. A special feature of the Vic S.C.M. is its monthly open meetings, which feature worship, singing, discussion, and barn dancing.

The U.C.S.C.M. has a programme of informal talks by various members of the staff on their personal ideas of religion. It has two discussion groups, one of which, interested in social problems, investigates the working conditions and recreations of factory workers.

In Trinity a men's group studies the topic of "The War—And Afterwards" under the leadership of Professor Dale. A women's group are busy examining the report of the Oxford Church conference.

Central Student Executive

To give unity to all these groups there is a central student executive. To carry out the policies of this council, and to transact most of the executive work there are two full-time Secretaries, at present Miss Jean Hunter, and John Coleman. Continuity is given to the Movement by the Advisory Board made up of nineteen seniors, friends of the S.C.M.

A practical training in leadership is acquired by the members and leaders who are entirely responsible for the financing of the organization. The budget is not small—involving $7,000—and as there are no fees or grants to depend on, the entire revenue must come from the voluntary contributions of generous graduates, friends, Faculty members, and students. The Varsity S.C.M. not only pays for itself but contributes its share to the support of the national organization and the W.S.C.F.

International Students' Service Committee Has Been Organized to Collect Funds for War-Hindered Students

HEADQUARTERS IN GENEVA

To produce the enlightened leadership essential for post-war co-operation by aiding student war sufferers, a student I.S.S. Committee has been organized to carry on a campaign for funds with the whole-hearted backing of the S.A.C. and S.C.M.

The I.S.S. International Committee, with its headquarters in Geneva, Switzerland, administers the funds to relieve the physical misery and intellectual isolation of students suffering as a result of the wars in Europe and Asia. In this way the organization hopes to preserve the good will which, if lost, would mean the failure of our struggle even if we do win the war. Aside from this long-range view the fact that thousands of our fellow students are suffering would warrant this effort.

Many Materials Needed

The amount of materials necessary to carry on the I.S.S. relief programme is very great. For the Chinese students trekking into the interior, for example, the I.S.S. organization is providing food, clothing, medical supplies, hostels, and books. Due to their simple needs and the monetary exchange a little Canadian or American money will go a long way in China. For example, five cents of Canadian money will provide a week's lodging for a Chinese student. This advantage is offset, however, by the very large number of student sufferers in China.

Behind the barbed wire of German prison camps there are many student war prisoners. While not providing any food or clothing for these students, the I.S.S. is trying to send more secretaries into Germany to assist the one already working in that country and attempting to procure the study materials so urgently desired by these students. Efforts are being made to assist students interned in Switzerland to continue studying with books distributed among them; and with I.S.S. aid, penniless refugee students in unoccupied France have taken up their studies again.

Last winter the University of Toronto answered a plea from the Canadian I.S.S. Committee by holding a meeting for all interested in the cause, which appointed a committee to organize a campaign for funds. Similarly at a meeting held this past December an I.S.S. Committee was formed for the same purpose. Every student club and society on the campus has been invited to participate, either by direct contribution or by appointing a representative to raise funds among its members.

In recent years campaign contribution boxes were placed at various points about the campus, and $1,600 was netted. Due to the increased need this year the campaign will be stepped up to aim at an objective of $2,000. Besides the posters and pamphlets which were employed last year personal solicitation and circular letters will play a part in this year's drive.

The International Student Service grew out of the World Student Christian Federation during the last war. Today as an autonomous organization it is backed not only by the Protestant W.S.C.F. but by the Pax Romana, its Catholic parallel. It also works in close co-operation with the International Red Cross and the World Committee of the Y.M.C.A.

The membership of the International Committee of the I.S.S. is very representative. The chairman is a German Swiss and the secretary a Frenchman. There are two vice-chairmen, an Englishman and a Frenchman, and most of the staff are Americans.

V.C.F. is Toronto Branch Of Inter-Varsity Movement

Varsity Organization was Formed After Kingston Conference in 1928 at which English Representatives of the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship Suggested Starting a Local Fellowship in Toronto

ARRANGES STUDY GROUPS AND LECTURES

If you were a beautiful young lady and an outstanding scholar who had been on the University Staff at the age of 21, and if you were in South America working in the Escuela Dominical Deka Mission, Evangelica de la Boca, your duties would include bringing up babies and playing checkers. Your name would be Muriel David, and the folks down there would call you Saint Muriel. If, on the other hand, you dwelt in a nifty little bungalow at the foot of the Himalaya Mountains and had graduated from Varsity, in all probability you would be Capt. W. J. Virgin of the Indian Medical Service. You would be a Doctor in the Combined Indian Military Hospital, with an additional little Mission Hospital of your very own.

Inspiration to Many

If you were Mr. James, missionary to the Eskimos, or Miss Phyllis Argall, missionary to Formosa, or Mr. Hart-Davies, assisting in his father's church in Scotland—in each case you would join with many a grad and undergrad of our Alma Mater in praising the Varsity Christian Fellowship.

A little more than twelve years ago, the Varsity Christian Fellowship was non-existent. In 1928 a conference of no less than seven students, three of them Torontonians, met in Kingston. There they met Dr. Guinness, an eager young Englishman who was seeking to start a Canadian branch of the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship, which had been formed in 1877 in Great Britain. There the I.V.C.F. in Canada was born; back in Toronto a handful of students formed the Toronto Inter-Collegiate Christian Union.

Faith in Christ Needed

Abandoning the historical for the analytical approach, we may consider the purpose and programme of the V.C.F. The Fellowship has as its raison d'être the conviction that personal relationship with God is possible only through faith in Jesus Christ, in whom "are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge." The Fellowship programme is a varied one, and includes noon-hour addresses by outstanding speakers, Sunday teas, discussion groups and daily prayer-meetings.

The real "meat" of the V.C.F. menu is furnished by the weekly study groups. These are designed to help students more clearly to understand the great truths of the Christian faith, to resolve intellectual problems and to deepen their spiritual lives. This year there have been four study groups. Reading from left to right, we have first the General Arts Group, which has been meeting under the leadership of a most able teacher, Mr. J. Hunter. This group has been studying the book of Romans. Next comes the Meds group, the people who turn up here are Medical and Biology students, with an occasional Schoolman. Study has centred round a book on "Prayer" by a Swedish pastor. Then there is the Missions group, which has been studying the life of the adventurous C. T. Studd, missionary extraordinary. Finally, the largest group discussed Personal Evangelism during the first term, and has since been studying some chapters in the Gospel of St. John.

V.C.F. is Interdenominational

Interdenominational in character, the V.C.F. is not concerned primarily with dogmas or theological abstractions. Its members stress the necessity of knowing Jesus Christ as Saviour and Lord, and seek to witness His reality and power in every relationship of life. This, they claim, is the heart of Christianity. Ethics and social doctrines are the circumstance of the circle; the living Christ is the centre. Briefly, this is the V.C.F. creed.

One of the chief sources of the Fellowship's strength is the Inter-School Christian Fellowship. This junior organization embraces a large number of Christian students in the High Schools of Canada. High School graduates from these groups have always been most active in the University work, and to a considerable degree the rapidly increasing influence of the V.C.F. is traceable to a corresponding expansion on the part of the I.S.C.F.

Steady, Quiet Growth

The V.C.F. has never endeavoured to make a big splash. Its history during the few years of its existence has been marked by steady but unsensational progress. No mushroom growth has come its way; additional organization has been added slowly, as definite need for it has arisen. The past year has been a momentous one for the Fellowship; Dr. Zwemer's visit here under V.C.F. auspices has given considerable impetus to the work. Members appear to be optimistic concerning the future. If past performance and present progress is a just criterion, the Varsity Christian Fellowship has grounds for confidence.

Varsity Athletic Heroes Bring Glory to Old Toronto

Senior Stickhandlers Hold Apex Position Of Collegiate Triangle

Varsity's Intercollegiate Hockeyists Swept All Before Them in the Twenties, and Have Taken the Canadian Intercollegiate Hockey Union Championship During Half of Its Thirty-five Years

LEAGUE INAUGURATED IN 1903

Blue-and-white-clad hockey machines have carried off top honours during 17 of the 35 years of intercollegiate puck competition, to head all rivals by a wide margin. McGill has topped the crown 12 times and Queen's, victors on only five occasions, haven't worn the laurel wreath since 1914.

The Canadian Intercollegiate Hockey Union was inaugurated at Kingston in 1903 as the Queen's sextet whipped Varsity 7-1. McGill went on to take the title that year. The C.I.H.U. trophy was presented by Queen's Hockey Club and has been competed for every year since, except for the period of the First World War.

First Varsity Champs

Toronto's first championship came in 1907 from the stick of the great Herb Clarke. With Clarke again blazing the way, Varsity repeated the following winter. Before World War I caused suspension of intercollegiate sport, the Big Blue had added three more silver plates to the cup.

Then came the Armistice and the greatest decade in Toronto's hockey history. For ten years — from 1920 to 1929 — some of the greatest teams Canada has ever produced passed through the portals of the U. of T.

In the spring of 1920, the hard-hitting young students brushed McGill and Sudbury aside, only to lose to Winnipeg Falcons in the Allan Cup finals. But their day was dawning and the following year saw it.

Win Allan Cup

Dr. Bill Dafeo led his great team to the Senior O.H.A. title when they defeated Granites in a close final series. So Greyhounds and McGill Redmen fell before the onslaught and Varsity went west to capture the Allan Cup in Winnipeg by crushing Brandon.

That team is considered Varsity's greatest — even better than the World Champion Grads of 1928. Four members of Dafeo's sextet rank with hockey's immortals — Jack Langtry, Beattie Ramsay, Stan Brown and Bill Carson. A youngster in that lineup of stars was destined to become perhaps Varsity's most brilliant puckster — Dr. Lou Hudson.

In 1922, after an American tour, Varsity easily won the intercollegiate crown but lost out in the O.H.A. race.

The Blue and White captured four more college titles during which time Conny Smythe took them to the Allan Cup finals against Port Arthur Bearcats in 1925 and 1926. But in both meetings the Westerners took the battered old mug.

In 1926-27, the university had two senior teams in the field and both were champions. The intercollegiate squad won the C.I.H.U. title to draw a place in the Allan Cup playdowns against Ottawa Edinburghs. The teams ended a two-game series with three goals apiece. A dispute about overtime arose and Varsity withdrew to make way for the famous Grads who crushed New Edinburgh in two games, 17-1. Smythe then took his O.H.A. champions to Vancouver to meet Fort William.

A Hectic Series

Toronto won a hectic series that saw seven games needed to decide the winner and thus qualified to represent Canada at the 1928 Olympics.

Boasting such stars as goalie Dr. Joe Sullivan, defencemen "Red" Porter and Ross Taylor, and forwards Hugh Plaxton, Dave Trotter and Dr. Lou Hudson, the University of Toronto Grads not only won the World's Amateur Hockey Championship, but in so doing left a brilliant mark for their Alma Mater in the World of Sport.

While their older brothers were across the pond, Varsity seniors took another intercollegiate crown. In 1929 and 1930 the Blues were the class of the O.H.A. as well as their own student loop. But then catastrophe hit the "rah, rah" boys, and the McGill plague started with only a brief respite when Varsity came out on top in 1932.

Bailey's Blue Boys

It remained for genial "Ace" Bailey to break a seven-year drought with his clever youngsters of a year ago. Not a big collection of stars, "Ace" welded them into a formidable force which lost but one game of an extensive campaign.

Mr. Sport

Warren Stevens, Athletic Director of the University of Toronto, as he appeared when he was the forward-passing ace of the Montreal Winged Wheelers in 1931.

Sports and Sports Page Develop Side by Side

A thumbing through of the old issues of The Varsity yields a wealth of items which show the development of sports at Varsity during the last sixty years. The progress made both in the field of achievement and of student interest and participation makes for a proud record. Even the equipment for sport is indicative of its development through the last six decades, from the time when golfers used the university campus for their pursuit of the ancient game to the present commodious Arena and Stadium and the Athletic Wing of Hart House. The whole saga of sport has been faithfully reported in The Varsity.

The first issue, that of Oct. 7, 1880, had a page of material lumped under the one head of "Varsity Sport". In the program for the annual Sports Day, for kicking the football a tug-of-war had been substituted of which "the final heat has been put in place of the three-legged race on the day of the major sports."

Meetings were being held to organize the erection of a gymnasium. At the annual sports meet a frosh named E. Wigle captured the Throwing-the-Cricket-Ball event with a heave of 95 yards.

Soccer Record Set

1880 was the year in which University College defeated the Toronto Lacrosse Club's soccer squad by "more goals than have ever been gained in any match in Canada"; but the scribe makes no mention of what this stupendous score was.

Professor Loudon was elected honorary president of the Gymnasium Association. The gym association had 218 members, and reported a surplus of $14.41.

In the big football game of the next fall, McGill defeated Varsity by two tries, and "everyone, including a large number of ladies who were present, seemed to enjoy the game thoroughly."

Indicative of the growing interest in sport, we learn that on Thanksgiving Day of 1882 there were six football games on the University Lawn.

Knickerbockers for Rugbyists

In 1883 there was a motion at the University Football Club meeting, "that the club next year use for their uniform, seal brown jersey, white knickerbockers, and seal brown stockings."

Later in that year a correspondent urged that football be played during the winter, suggesting that the snow be rolled, and that the surface be sprinkled with sawdust.

The popularity of cricket was on the wane in 1884, which called forth a rousing editorial in The Varsity. In the same year the locker fee for gymnasium members was raised to 75 cents. "This has led to some growling." A correspondent suggested that football teams choose their captains annually, instead of electing one for each game.

McGill defeated Varsity again, but after the game "the dinner was in every way a complete success, the bill of fare was excellent, the company large and jolly, and the speeches short."

Baseball Organized

A Baseball Club was formed in 1885, and in its first game it defeated St. Mike's by an 8-7 score. Four years later correspondents were advocating a baseball tour. The idea had effect, and a tour was planned to include Rochester, Utica, Harvard, Brown, Amherst, Cornell and Wesleyan colleges.

By 1888, $3,000 had been collected by the Gymnasium Committee.

The University Association Football squad won the Dominion Championship in 1890 by defeating the Grand Trunk Club of Montreal. The hero of the series was the famed "Watty" Thomson, one of the greats of Varsity athletic history.

Ice hockey as a Varsity sport was still in its swaddling clothes in 1892, but it was growing in interest, as shown by the entry of a team in the Ontario League series. The leading editorial in The Varsity of March 1st advocated the erection of a skating and hockey rink.

1,000 Watch Soccer

Soccer, or association football as it was then known, was a popular sport with students, as can be gathered from the account of a crowd of 1,000 students, male and female, which watched a game between Varsity and Osgoode.

The individual champion in the Annual Sports Meet at Rosedale Field was a youth named George Porter, now known to thousands of Varsity men as Dr. G. D. Porter, director of the medical department.

Blue and White Gridders Win Five Dominion Titles, Sixteen Collegiate Crowns

Interfaculty Innovations of Smaller Teams, Snapouts, Abolition of Throw-ins and Line Scrimmages Were Originally Scoffed at by Canadian Rugby Union; Rugby Dominated Sports Scene Since 1900

ALL-TIME GREAT WAS JACK SINCLAIR

Led by Captain Thrift Burnside, Jack Hobbs, John J. Gibson, Eric Armour and Alec McKenzie the Varsity rugby team of 1898 celebrated the opening of the Intercollegiate Union in that year by winning the first intercollegiate championship on the Lawn, as the front campus was termed in those days. That marked the beginning of an inspiring record of achievement in the football world.

That same Thrift Burnside later made several suggestions concerning the rugby rules which eventually had a decided influence on the game of rugby football as played today. The Canadian Rugby Union scoffed at the radical changes planned by this immature student but abolishing massed line scrimmages and throw-ins, changing team strength from 15 to 12 men and using a snap-out instead of heel-out made Mulock Cup play much more interesting and enjoyable for all concerned. It was some three years before the Union adopted the new-fangled ideas which had proven so popular in the interfaculty series.

Rugby had gradually been assuming the popularity that the track meets had held, and at the turn of the century really began to dominate the intercollegiate sports scene. The first games were played at Varsity, but rugby's growing popularity demanded that the stage be shifted in 1908 to Rosedale Field to accommodate the crowds. The little wooden stand which still holds down its pious position in the south west corner of the huge horseshoe on Bloor Street, had provided adequate seating capacity for the early games but could not hope to cope with the enthusiastic rooters once the game took hold.

The drama of the gridiron reached its supreme height in those early years, when in 1905 Varsity, coached by Rev. Biddy Barr, beat Ottawa Roughriders to capture the Dominion title. It was then that the great Casey Baldwin, and the equally illustrious Jack Lash, Bull Ritchie and Gord Southam, were in their hey-day. Exactly four years later, in 1909, Varsity again reached the top rung in the Canadian football world. Such stalwarts as Jack Newton, Hugh Gall, Smirle Lawson, and Charlie Gage played on that team. In the following year the fabulous backfield foursome of Gall, Maynard, Dixon and Foulds, possibly the greatest Varsity ever had, carried Toronto along the same route to the Dominion title.

U. of T. repeated in 1911 and 1914, years that saw Pete Campbell, Frank Knight, Laddie Cassels and Hume Crawford at the peak of their sport careers.

One More Dominion Title

A member of the half-line, Laddie Cassels returned to Varsity in 1920 to take over the coaching reins and pilot the Big Blue to another Dominion title. Joe Breen was captain of that team; Harry Hobbs, Jim Douglas, Gordon Duncan were members, as was Warnie Snyder, then in his first year. He remained to play on six Varsity teams and become one of Canada's top-ranking players. In 1921 Varsity had to content itself with the intercollegiate title. Then came the era of Batstone and Leadley of Queen's and the Tricolour domination from 1922-25. Snyder was in his last year, 1926, when Varsity broke mandarin position in the sphere of intercity's all-time great, was in his freshman year. Another student of medicine, he played rugby in a blue and white uniform for seven years, was a member of the 1926 champions and climaxed his career in a blaze of glory as quadruple threat half of Warren Stevens' squad that landed the intercollegiate championship in both 1932 and 1933.

Two years later Varsity hit the peak again with the 1935 team, the greatest that Warren Stevens ever handled. In that year, a generation after the Four Horsemen of 1910, another great backfield came to Varsity. It included Bobby Coulter, Joe Connelly, Hugh Marks, Cam Gray and Bob Isbister, as starchy an array as one might find on any lineup. Undelected throughout the regular schedule, a worried Varsity team prepared for the play-off with everything to lose and nothing to win. A new ruling had just been adopted by the Union whereby the first and second-place teams met in a final showdown. Needless to say a jubilant Moaner-coached Tricolour squad staggered off the field with a 7-6 win. Though conceded

Last Intercollegiate Champions Varsity Blues "Dark Horse" in '36

When intercollegiate sport was abolished in the fall, Varsity had gone for four seasons without an intercollegiate rugby championship. The last Blue and White aggregation to win the coveted Yates Trophy was the dark-horse crew of 1936.

The Beavers had suffered heavily through graduation that year, with stars like Coulter, Connelly and Marks all having received their sheepskins. Nevertheless "Steve" rapidly whipped a bunch of newcomers into shape for the wars.

Varsity surprised everyone by upsetting Balmby Beach at the start of the season to retain the DeGruchy Cup. After that a rapid string of victories ensued. Western and Queen's both fell before the Blue and White and everything looked rosy until the McGill Redmen stopped the Beavers 8-3.

Revenge came swiftly, however, and McGill was swamped 35-2 in the return game. The Tricolour of Queen's outmudded the Blues in the next game 6-1.

The Blues again avenged themselves when, after defeating Western 15-0, they downed the Gaels 11-3 in a sudden-death game to win the Yates Trophy.

Power-packed Rugby Team of '83 Smashed O.A.C. for 77 Points

One of the earliest Varsity rugby teams to gain a reputation for prowess was the power-packed crew that wore the Blue and White in 1883. Before the days when there was a regularly organized intercollegiate league, college teams used to play exhibition games with one another and with various other athletic organizations.

The Varsity team went through the year with only one tie and one defeat. They tied Upper Canada College early in the year 1-1 and were later defeated 23-1 by the City of Toronto Club. But despite these setbacks the Blue and White downed their traditional rivals McGill Redmen 16-1 in their annual game.

High spot of the season was when Varsity journeyed to Guelph and snowed under the O.A.C. team 77-0. The only names recorded for posterity as members of the team are Messrs. McKendrick, Bruce, Wigle, Hughes and McLaren, all of whom "played well for Varsity" with amazing consistency.

Warren Stevens Has Created New Post of Athletic Director and Preserved Balance Between Intercollegiate and Interfaculty Sport as well as Coaching Varsity Seniors to Rugby Championship in His First Year

WAS EXPONENT OF FORWARD PASS

The sensation of the football season of 1931 was the march of the great Montreal Winged Wheelers to the Dominion title, aided considerably by the forward-passing prowess of a boy from Syracuse named Warren Stevens.

Stevens' first glimpse of Toronto came when he appeared with that great team of Perry, Welch, Jotkus and company, on the greensward of Varsity Stadium, when Montreal completely routed a bewildered and outplayed Argonaut squad.

This was the first year that the forward-pass had come into use in senior Canadian football, and Stevens was unique in his position of maestro of the aerial attack.

The following autumn Warren Stevens made another appearance on the Varsity campus, which he has made his headquarters ever since his appointment to the position of Director of Athletics in that year.

The soft-spoken "Steve" graduated from the University of Syracuse with a Bachelor of Science degree. During his college days he played on the football, basketball and baseball teams, turning in impressive performances in all these sports.

It was no easy task which confronted Stevens when he took up his new duties in this university. As the first holder of a post novel in the experience of athletics on this campus, he had to create his own position of Athletics Director. Moreover, he had the job of achieving and preserving balance and harmony between the spheres of interfaculty and intercollegiate sport.

NEW DIRECTORATE

The following were elected on Friday to the Directorate of the University of Toronto Athletic Association: Don Findlayson, Gerry Prodrick, Hugh McMillan, Jack Mullett, Jim Murray.

"Steve" had the pleasure of coaching a championship team on his first venture in the Canadian intercollegiate league, the rugby squad rallying under his tutelage to cop the title. Looking back over the last decade, Stevens thinks the best football players to attend Varsity at one time during his stay here was the famous crew which included Marks, Connelly, Coulter, Isbister, Gray, Greco, Al and Turney Williams, and Holden.

In this academic year of 1940-41 Warren Stevens has begun a new field of activity. Last fall there was instituted the new course in Physical Education and Health, and "Steve" was appointed the director of the men's side of this important course.

In Memory

This Trophy is awarded to the member of each year's senior football team considered by his team-mates to be most worthy. It commemorates the gallant Johnny Copp, one-time member of the Varsity team, who was killed while attempting to apprehend a housebreaker.

Sports and Sports Page Develop Side by Side

Church of the Redeemer, and Dr. McCollum is still contributing to Varsity sport as chairman of the Athletic Directorate. McCollum, who weighed 148 pounds in his rugby outfit, captained the intercollegiate champs of 1901.

The contributor to Varsity athletic glory Varsity lacrosse team was the leading in 1901, completing an extensive tour with a record of no defeats throughout the season.

Cinder Track Enlarged
The Nesbitt Cup, emblematic of the city football title, came to Varsity from the vanquished Argonauts, decisively defeated by the Blue and White in the series of 1902. An impetus was given to track sports by the enlargement of the athletic field and the addition of a good cinder track.

The Canadian Intercollegiate Track Championship was won by Varsity in 1903, also the intercollegiate football crown. Rev. A. F. "Biddy" Barr and Captain-elect "Casey" Baldwin presented to the Intercollegiate Football Union Varsity's proposals that the snap-back system be substituted for the old-fashioned scrimmage. Their proposals were rejected.

The first action picture of Varsity sport depicted a football game between Queen's and Varsity at Toronto, in 1904.

Dominion Titlists
Writers in The Varsity of 1905 were deploring the absence of "good, systematic, and rousing rooting from the students' bleachers." For the first time in seven years Varsity was competing for the Dominion rugby championship. The bleacher seats at Rosedale field for the big game against Ottawa Roughriders went on sale to students for thirty-five cents each. Toronto, led by Captain "Casey" Baldwin playing his greatest game, won the title with an 11-9 victory. The student cheering of the day called forth a letter to The Varsity objecting to the use of profane expressions in the yells. A meeting of the University Commission in 1905 discussed the idea of a compulsory athletic fee, this fee to cover admission to all university games and other athletic privileges.

An editorial in 1906 called for the appointment of a medical examiner in connection with the gymnasium. Following the deaths of two men during rugby practices, the Athletic Directorate banned any man from participating who had not been examined. Faculty field days were coming into popularity, Wyckoff College holding its first meet in that year, at which a North American Indian student named Ahendew won the championship by a wide margin.

Many-windowed Shack, Bordered By Pig Sty, Was First Gymnasium

First Gymnasium of University, Built in 1866 was Located Somewhere on Present Back Campus, Being 100 Feet South of Hoskin Avenue and 300 Feet East of St. George Street—Was Behind U.C.

LATER MOVED TO MOSS HALL

Pail in hand, Mr. Frank Somers, Steward of the University of Toronto, wended his way to the pig-pen where he was accustomed to carry nourishment to its lone and solitary inhabitant each afternoon. The sty leaned against a long, wide, wooden, many-windowed shack which cast out throaty shouts of enthusiasm into the crisp autumn air. That shack was the first gymnasium of the University of Toronto.

Where was it located? Nobody can say for sure, but a few yards away stood Mr. Somers' cow-stable, described as "being in the potato field north of the kitchen" and which would have occupied today a position approximately 100 feet south of the present Hoskin Avenue, and 300 feet east of St. George Street. Thrown together in 1866 it served Varsity students for over a decade. A far cry from today and the million dollar edifice which is Hart House.

Intercollegiate rugby was unheard of in those bygone days. The greatest event of the year was "The Games." Many a student mopped a wet brow as he swung his scythe, clearing the front campus of a goodly crop of fodder in preparation for "The Games." Cricket was the headline on those old-time Saturday afternoon fetes, but foot-racing, jumping and riding came in for their share of attention too. Their long skirts tucked discreetly beneath them, the fair admirers sat upon the greensward, admiring privately their athletic hero, with massive whiskers, tight pants and all, whilst he performed for dear old Alma Mater.

Move to Moss Hall

But times change and with the years, sport came more and more to hold the important position it does now. And with the change Varsity kept pace throughout. The boards of the "shack" cracked visibly. She had served faithfully, but could go on no longer, and so in 1879 what equipment existed was moved to the ground floor and cellar of old Moss Hall, also the first home of The Varsity. Originally the Medical Building, erected in 1850, on the present site of the Biological Building, it had been re-christened Moss Hall, after the vice-chancellor. Athletics did not find the dim, dark confines of the cellar the best atmosphere in which to enjoy a bit of exercise, but it was over a decade before Varsity got its first big-time gym, large, well-equipped, as modern as the day. The annual Track and Field Meet now held the spotlight as Varsity men competed each fall with invited guests from sister colleges.

The Third Gym

In 1888 Moss Hall was demolished and for four years Varsity was without a permanent recreational centre. Finally, in 1892, the University Gym and Students' Union was erected on the present site of Hart House, only slightly to the east. Complete with running track and bowling alleys it was a first class gym, and was the focus for male attention until 1911. Here all the important dances of the year were held, the largest and best being the Rugby Dance.

The Bloor Bowl

Though it might seem incredible, the year 1911 meant even more than the winning of the Dominion crown. This feat provided a fitting climax to the opening of Varsity Stadium and the demolition of the university gym and Student Union to make way for the laying of the corner-stone of Hart House. For seven seasons, until 1919, when the new edifice was officially opened, a rambling wooden structure situated on Trinity Field near the university residences served as a temporary gym. The best thing about it was the swimming pool, pauperish in comparison to the modern tub in Hart House, but nevertheless a pool. One of the early intercollegiate water polo finals was staged in its icy depths. In the other wing Varsity's first basketball teams whipped themselves into shape between violent efforts of other indoor sports enthusiasts.

The old track and football field, its southern border still discernible by the rising ground behind Trinity College, was shifted north about 100 yards in 1911 and the present covered stand was constructed. It was not until 1924 that the Bowl boasted the concrete stands. Wooden bleachers had previously served the students for their Saturday afternoon jamborees, and many recall how Professor C. H. C. Wright was wont to dash across the field during a crucial moment in the game, madly waving his cane, to warn the student fans against rocking the stands as they kept time with the college yells. He had a horrible fear of the whole structure collapsing.

Athletic Directorate

Governing this vast sport scene is the Athletic Directorate for the Department of Athletics and Physical Education for Men, by far the largest department in the university; through it must pass every male student at some time or other during his sojourn at Varsity. At the head of the department stands the Athletic Association with Dr. John McCollum at the helm. This body legislates over all sport and men who play sport at the University of Toronto. Warren Stevens took over the Athletic Directorate in 1932, and found time to coach Varsity to its first rugby championship in six years, and repeated in his sophomore year. Behind the scenes labours Mr. T. A. Reed, for whom the special office of financial secretary was created in 1914. Today the Dean of Varsity sport still takes as wide and as active an interest in athletics as the first year he took up permanent quarters in the athletic wing. In his honour is presented the T. A. Reed Trophy, highest award attainable in interfaculty competition. Due to his wise and able guidance in all matters athletic Varsity enjoys her sound enviable position in college circles today.

The Varsity hockey team brought the intercollegiate title home from the east for the first time in 1907, and the successful exhibition matches of a Varsity curling team evoked a plea from the Sports Editor for the establishment of the game as a regular sport. The Athletic Association appointed Dr. Barton to the newly created position of permanent secretary-treasurer. The honoured name of Hugh Gall was beginning to dot the sports columns of the day. Indoor sports such as basketball and indoor baseball were growing in popularity with the students. The lacrosse team climaxed a brilliant tour with a triumph over the famed Crescent A. C. of Brooklyn.

Basketball reached the status of a big-time sport with the formation of an intercollegiate league in 1908. The new Varsity curling team was knocked out after the first round of the Ontario Tankard. Varsity won its first basketball encounter with McGill by a score of 24-20. The Varsity hoopers were the first holders of the intercollegiate crown, winning it in 1909.

The first issue of The Varsity in the fall of 1908 had likewise the first "news-paper" style of front page, and the headlines were proclaiming Varsity's chances for a Dominion title after its win over Queen's, by which Toronto got its first intercollegiate title since 1905. In the Dominion finals Hamilton Tigers defeated the Blue and White squad in what the Varsity termed "the greatest rugby battle in Toronto's history." (Continued on Page 44)

Speaking of Sport

By the Sports Editor

This column has gone through many rudimentary stages before establishing itself as the regular department for commentary on the athletic doings of Varsity. The first of its ancestors was a little column of remarks on sport called The Railbird which ran in the 19th century editions of The Varsity. Then followed The Bleacher and Comment on Sport, until one day there appeared in this journal a column entitled Speaking of Sport.

For a time the Sports Editor used to hold forth under a single-column head, until the need for more space for comments pressed the editorial to its present size. In the beginning there was no signature on the column at all, then an intrepid Sports Editor started to place his initials over his daily musings on the sports situation. Once the full name of the writer began to appear at the column's head, the practice persisted.

The Speaking of Sport has striven to give pleasant and intelligent interpretation to the various ups and downs of sport on this campus. A willingly given supply of material has always been forthcoming from Varsity athletes (both intercollegiate and interfaculty) and from the coaches and the staff of the Athletic Office.

From time to time excerpts from the Speaking of Sport have been quoted in other journals, and the column has been appreciative of the happy relationships it has held with other papers and of the serious consideration given to its efforts by the more experienced commentators of the downtown press.

U. of T. Boasts World's Finest Intramural System

Guided by McCutcheon, Varsity Interfaculty System Has Become Vital to Sport

Years of Investigation and Experiment Have Developed Sport Set-up which Embraces 4,000 Active Athletes; Prior to Inception in 1936, System was Decentralized; Has Helped to Supplant Intercollegiate Athletics

FACULTIES CLASSIFIED IN THREE GROUPS

A story of the intramural system, the life-blood of athletics at the University of Toronto, would not be complete without mention of John E. "Mac" McCutcheon, nor could Mac's story be told without mention of the intramural system. The two are inseparably interwoven.

Today this system is more or less accepted as a matter of course by the student. He reads accounts of basketball games between St. Mike's "E" and Aerial Navigation "B" and is apt to regard the whole business as rather useless and silly. But behind that one game stands years of preparation and work. It represents a system that is unique in the world today, which gives to the ordinary student the chance to participate in organized athletics, a chance he would not be offered in any other university the globe-round. It is the major unifying factor on the campus, a campus split into fourteen different faculties.

Mac Heads Intramural System

In the fall of '36 "Mac", with whom the word "genial" has been so often associated, and rightly so, was placed at the head of his own brain-child, the intramural system. For a couple of years prior to this date Warren Stevens had had in mind such a system, and on the suggestion of Steve, Mac made a complete survey of the situation. He spent two years preparing his report, delving thoroughly into the athletic organizations of more than a score of American universities. From them he gleaned a number of ideas, but had to alter them completely to fit the situation at Varsity. The intramural plan in the American universities is built entirely around fraternities and residences. This was carried over into Mac's report, but residence and frat athletics are entirely overshadowed by the interfaculty scene. In its completed form, the 36-page report recommended the organization of a department of intramural athletics. This was submitted to the Athletic Directorate, acted upon immediately, and has been followed through with minor changes to the point where it is today.

But what of sport at Varsity before 1936? As a complete program, it simply did not exist. Each sport was under the guidance of the vice-president of each university athletic club and his committee of management. These student executives worked directly through Mr. Reed, secretary-treasurer of the Athletic Directorate, and the Directorate itself, except for the sports staged in Hart House, which were helped along by Mac. Faculties organized their interested athletes as best they could, made their entries through the athletic office. Because there was no centralized controlling body, interfaculty sport continued only as long as interested groups of students got together. It is easy to discern what a difference the formation of the intramural department has made in college athletics.

The next major item incorporated in the report was the intramural all-year high-point scoring system, which divided the faculties into three classes according to their male registration and which gives a certain number of points for all entries, both individual and team, for group championships, interfaculty championships, runner-up spots and so on. At the time of the first presentation of the report it was thought that the point-scoring system would require approximately five years to perfect itself. On this, the fifth year of competition, the system is being changed in several minor instances as a result of changing registration and other conditions within the university generally.

Formed Intramural Committee

One of the major innovations was the formation of an intramural sports committee, composed of the athletic presidents of the fourteen faculties and colleges, whose function is to co-ordinate intramural activities and with the approval of the Athletic Directorate to set up its own policy in governing the operation of the program.

With the inauguration of the high-point championship, the need of a suitable trophy became apparent. With the approval of the committee the handsome award now in the athletic office was christened the T. A. Reed Trophy, after the "Dean of Varsity sport." Needless to say, the committee was deeply gratified when Mr. Reed, who took over the post of financial secretary, specially created for him in 1914, gave his consent that his name be so used.

Figures Tell the Story

The success of the new organization and the point-scoring system proved an immediate success. Figures speak for themselves. Even in the first year participation in individual tournaments jumped 45 per cent. In 1935 there were 102 entries in team sports; in 1939-40 there were 146, and Mac estimates that this year there will be close to 180. Or again, in 1935 there were approximately 1800 registrations made in interfaculty sport while in 1939-40 there were 3,933. The figure will be even greater this year.

One example of the far-reaching effects of the new set-up is the growth of extra teams. Inside of three or four years the figure has soared from two or three to forty or fifty. Another is the increased interest shown by the faculties, in the internal organization of their athletic associations, best typified by University College, where trophies are awarded to the man making the greatest contribution to the athletic life of the college during his sojourn there and to the man who has contributed most in any one year to the intramural high-point total. Such awards have meant a 74 per cent increase in intramural participation in University College. Or take the case of Aerial Navigation, who last year had 95 per cent of her total registration taking part.

Faculties Awarded Plaques

About a year after the creation of the intramural department individual and team awards were abolished and instead plaques were given to each faculty whereon are inscribed championships won. When the plaque is filled another is automatically awarded. For the School of Practical Science this has become practically an annual event.

Thirty-five championships, both team and individual, in 21 different sports, are declared each year. Records of all players and games leading to these championships must be kept. The amount of detail is enormous. Records of literally hundreds of Varsity athletes are on file in the athletic office, and they are being constantly checked and rechecked. Schedules have to be drawn up, reservations must be made, new plans put forward must be gone into in detail, referees must be secured for all games, injured players cared for, and so on far into the night. And still, with all this day-to-day detail time is found to plan new activities, put them across. Just in this past year, when the intramural activities reached an all-time high, four-down rugby, four-man basketball, swimming meets and skiing were all introduced.

From Infancy to Maturity

Guiding hand of this multifarious system is that of capable Mac himself. Through its five-year history it has been he who has nursed the system from its infancy, watched it grow under his care to become the complex but smoothly working organization that it

Intramural Plum

The T. A. Reed Trophy, named in honour of the secretary-treasurer of the Athletic Association, which is awarded annually to the faculty obtaining the highest point total in all-year intramural competition. This year's winner, for the fourth consecutive season, is S.P.S.

T. A. Reed Trophy Donated For Intramural Competition

As the interfaculty program of 1934 unfolded, it became more and more evident to Warren Stevens and Mac McCutcheon there existed a necessity of co-ordinating interfaculty athletics into one organization. How that was done after two years spent making a survey is told elsewhere in this section.

But when the system went into effect in the fall of '36, it was really a natural result was a parade of annual sports victories.

When Mr. McCutcheon set up this system he stated that it would take five years of competition before the scheme could be arranged to allow for such fluctuations. At present, the race is a wide open affair due to the fact that Mr. McCutcheon revised the method of awarding points by taking into account the sizes of the various faculties and colleges.

Mr. Reed's Colourful Career
Mr. Reed is called the Dean of Varsity Sports. A graduate in music from Trinity, he became choirmaster and organist at St. Matthias Church and later at St. Augustine's. While at the latter, Mr. Reed organized a large choir of boys which at one time had a membership of 80. For 25 years he was secretary of the famed Mendelssohn Choir.

"T.A.", as he is affectionately known, first worked in the bursar's office on his return to the university. A number of years later he moved to Hart House to take over the position of secretary-treasurer of the U. of T. Athletic Association. Under his sound financial guidance this association has flourished until now it is the largest of its kind in Canada.

S.P.S. Too Strong

As a result the first year of the cup race resulted with Trinity emerging victorious over the closely pursuing Meds and School. However since then School's enrolment has increased until now it is over 900 while both Meds and U.C. have registered drops. The is today.

Mac arrived in the athletic wing of Hart House in 1925, at the ripe old age of 21, to take over the duties of head basketball coach as well as those of gym instructor and examiner for the Royal Life Saving Society. Up until the arrival of Warren Stevens, Mac handled three basketball teams, senior, intermediate and junior. In 1928 and 1929 his senior squad never lost a Canadian engagement, consequently captured the intercollegiate title by four or five lengths. His intermediate bunch have won the championship for the last seven years.

Mac Directs Army Athletics

An active member of Phi Gamma Delta fraternity, Mac still takes gym classes, coaches intermediate basketball and examines for the Royal Life Saving Society as well as performing all his regular duties as Director of Intramural Athletics. A qualified lieutenant of the C.O.T.C. as well, Mac spent last summer in charge of the sporting activities of eight or nine thousand men at Petawawa, plans to be at the same task again this summer. A great organizer and a bear for detail, it would be no great surprise to anyone if the Canadian army suddenly divided itself into three classes according to male registration and with a certain number of points awarded per entry. At least, if the army benefits from Mac's efforts as has the University of Toronto; its sporting future is assured.

University of Toronto Upholds Soccer Tradition Of Old Country Athletics

Twenty-one of Thirty-one Seasons, Blue and White Elevens Have Triumphed in Intercollegiate Soccer Competition; Toronto, O.A.C. Battle on Even Terms in Intermediate Tourney

VARSITY HOLDS BLACKWOOD CUP

And now let us look at the Varsity soccer situation for a few minutes. The University of Toronto is undoubtedly the staunchest soccer centre of sagacity on the North American continent, and the long history of the Blue and White intercollegiate and intramural elevens is an interesting one. Ever since the last decade of the last century, Varsity teams have been playing organized soccer and many hundreds of notable players have lined up for their university or faculty in that lengthy period.

For the duration, or as long as the ban on intercollegiate sports remains in effect, Varsity is the proud possessor of the Blackwood Trophy, emblematic of senior intercollegiate soccer supremacy, as well as a half-share of the intermediate title along with O.A.C.

Senior Competition Starts

Organized senior competition began away back in 1904, but even before that time there were University of Toronto teams playing "Association Football". In fact, in the years 1889 and 1890 the Varsity soccer teams were Dominion champions.

The Blackwood Trophy itself is a fairly recent addition to the intercollegiate silverware department. It was in 1934 that Mr. Dennis-Nathan of South Africa, then a student at O.A.C., signified his intention of presenting a trophy for the soccer circles. This he shortly did, and the C.I.A.U. were happy to receive the handsome new trophy. It consists of an oxidized silver figure of a soccer player on the verge of sending the ball for a hefty ride, this design being mounted on a beautiful black base. The trophy was named in honour of Professor Blackwood of the O.A.C. staff for his continuous efforts in promoting athletics among Canadian students. It is up for competition only in the western group comprising Toronto, O.A.C., McMaster and Western.

No Varsity soccer story would be complete without mention of Professor C. B. Sissons, the game's best friend at the U. of T. Professor Sissons played intramural soccer with Vic in 1897, '98 and '99 and ever since that time has showed the keenest interest in both intercollegiate and intramural teams.

Interfaculty Soccer

Nestled among a gallery of other cups on display in the showcase on the landing of the main Hart House stairway is the ornate Arts Faculty Cup. This silver award goes to that soccer team which wins the interfaculty loop each year. It was first on the block in 1895, and has been competed for 36 times since then, S.P.S. having won it more often than any other faculty, being the top team on eight different occasions. U.C. has the amazing record of having captured the cup five times in the first seven years but of failing to make the grade since 1901. Dentistry is also a five-time winner, while Vic has succeeded six times. O.A.C., while an integral part of the university, fielded the blue ribbon eleven on four occasions, the last being in 1926. Knox had a winning streak that was a winning streak from 1923 to 1933 for six titles, while they share the present title with Meds, who, incidentally, have just won the cup once before, in 1938. This is the first year that joint champions had to be declared, but you can blame that on the weather and Wilbur, mostly the weather.

Thus, the University of Toronto can boast of a notable and sensational soccer saga. The grand old game of the British Isles is still functioning over there, as it will continue to do for many years to come. That its future on the Varsity campus is likewise ensured is certain and the familiar cries of "hands and corner" will continue to ring across the frozen fields.

In the fall of 1939 one of Canada's oldtime greats in the athletic world paid a visit to the Varsity campus to witness an intercollegiate soccer match. This man was A. N. Garrett, whose death a few months ago shocked the sporting fraternity of the Dominion. Mr. Garrett was a student at the University of Toronto in 1888, at which time he was chosen as a member of an all-Canada soccer team that toured the Old Country that year.

Waterpolo Crown Won by Varsity

When Varsity's waterpolo assemblage won the intercollegiate title last year they cut short a McGill hold on the Hershorn Cup that had been going on for a period of six years. Members of that team back at Varsity this year include Wimpy Rotenberg, Mac Carter, Doug Best, Jim Baldwin, Doug Green, and Tom Jackson. Bob Teffer joined the Royal Navy at Christmas, Doug Green the Royal Artillery just two weeks ago. Ollie Mabey and Mac McGowan were the other members.

Intercollegiate polo started back in 1910, and since then Varsity has taken the honours but an even dozen times. Otherwise the picture was a Red one.

In recent years the list of Varsity swimmers is as starry a one as any college might boast. The swimming title has rested at Toronto for the past four years. Fellows most responsible for this reign include Chris and Winst McCatty, Lorenzen, Shortreed, Nimmo, Menzies, Clarkson, Green, Staples, Clawson, Mendleson, Girvan and Galan.

The Dougall Trophy for intercollegiate swimming and diving supremacy was first presented in 1910. Since then Varsity has won it on twelve occasions.

Varsity Track Team Have Won Few Titles Despite Individual Stars

Brown Twins of Meaford and Larry O'Connor, Holder of World's 60-Yard Hurdle Mark, Have Been Speedballs of Varsity Track Squads During Recent Season on Canadian Cinder Paths

VARSITY TRAILS MCGILL THROUGH YEARS

OLYMPIC MILER

Bill Kibblewhite, Olympic runner in 1928 and the only man to win his bronze T for proficiency in the harrier alone.

Boasting more prominent individual track stars than any other Canadian university, Varsity has been unfortunate in failing to win the intercollegiate track championship consistently, except from 1907 to 1910. Interesting to note is the fact that either Varsity or McGill has always been the victor—neither Western nor Queen's has ever won the intercollegiate title.

Since inter-university competition began in 1899, McGill has won top honours on 24 occasions with Varsity coping the title 13 times.

The past few years have featured sensational performances by Wally and Harold Brown, stars of British Empire Games competition. Wallace holds two intercollegiate records—the running broad-jump and 16-pound shot-put. In the last meet, held at Varsity Stadium the Prides of Meaford combined to score more than half of Varsity's entire total of points.

Without doubt the greatest individual performer was Cobourg's gift to track—Larry O'Connor. In 1937 O'Connor set a record for the high hurdles in the fast time of 14 6-10 seconds, a mark which still stands. The same year Bill Fritz of Queen's and O'Connor set a record of 22 1-10 secs. in the 220 yards dash. O'Connor's other record is in the low hurdles which he established in 1936.

Perhaps the most notable year was back in 1937 when Varsity had no less than three Olympic stars on the track team—Larry O'Connor, Dave Crichton, one of the greatest milers ever produced at Varsity, and Gord McHenry the sprint star.

Hec Phillips Is Producer Of Track Stars

With a Reputation of His Own as a Track Star, He Now Develops Speedsters for Varsity Track Teams

RAN AT OLYMPICS

Because he is always ready and willing to give attention and time to the most ordinary man Hec Phillips has gained and maintains his immense popularity around and about the athletic wing, especially, of course, with trackmen. Keenness in an athlete Hec appreciates more than anything else, and no matter how mediocre a runner may be, if he displays enthusiasm and a willingness to learn Hec is always present to lend a helping hand. Varsity's track coach has not waited for the athletes to be sent to him. He has made them. Some rank among Canada's greatest runners.

Attended King's College

Hailing from Bonnie Scotland, Hec forsook his native north to attend King's College, University of London, for two years. While in London Hec crossed the threshold of a brilliant track career. In 1909 he started as a cross-country man but a year later turned to what later became his specialties, the quarter and half-mile events. Intercollegiate sport, as in eastern Canada today, was non-existent in England at the time, and Hec joined the London Athletic Club, the oldest club of its kind in the world. For three years he competed on their team, and it was not long before his excellent running, the short distances in winter, the cross-country in summer, came to the attention of England's board of selection for the Olympic Games. To make a short story shorter, Hec was selected (there were no trials at that time) to represent Britain at the Olympic Games in Stockholm in 1912.

However, Hec had planned to weigh anchor for Canada and in that same year he arrived in this country. It was not long before he was in the Army and back in the Old world again, but the war did not mean a cessation of Hec's track career. He immediately became Canadian Corps champion in England and France, established records while winning the English 660 yards and the Scottish half-mile championships.

Reached the Pinnacle

But it was after the war, when he returned to Canada, that Hec reached the pinnacle of his running career. Always retiring when it comes to speaking of his accomplishments, it is difficult to determine just how many Canadian and Ontario championships he did hold at one time or another, but the number was prodigious. He even held a Michigan State title. Needless to say, Hec went to the Olympics in both 1920 and 1924, still giving his greatest attention to his two aces-in-the-hole, the quarter and the half.

All through this period Hec ran for the Toronto West End "Y". As Larry O'Connor and Bill Fritz, both Hec's proteges, have been doing, he partici-

Genial Spirit Ideal Trainer Is Carruthers

Varsity Trainer Has Handled College Teams Since 1923 after Three Years as Assistant to Frank Carroll

ALSO TRAINS ARGOS

A youngster came groping off the ice at Varsity Arena, a stream of blood obscuring one side of his agonized countenance. Someone called, "Get Joe, he'll look after him."

Joe came into the dressing room, examined the wound and addressed the frightened youngster, "That's a lot of blood to flow from such a small scratch, kid." The young puckster, immediately set at ease, allowed Joe quickly and thoroughly to dress the cuts over his right eye and then send him off to see a doctor. The gashes really required a small mess of sutures but by that time the patient had recovered his composure due to Joe's touch of psychology.

Came to Varsity in 1920

Joe Carruthers, genial trainer of U. of T. athletes for the past two decades, came to Varsity in 1920. Until 1923 he worked as assistant to Frank Carroll and from then on took charge of the Blue and White's best performers.

A master craftsman—he knows all the A B C's of his art—Joe has also had the happy faculty of getting the best from his charges simply because he knew the temperaments of all of them.

In Joe's opinion the intercollegiate hockey teams of 1920-21-22 rank even higher than the great Grads of Olympic fame. "Players the calibre of Jack Langtry, Beattie Ramsay, Stan Brown and Bill Carson are all to scarce," Joe commented.

Trained Argos Last Year

Last fall, Joe was granted permission by the university to act as trainer of the Argonaut Football Club, but prior to then all his time was spent with college teams. His football teams never took to the field lacking condition. This fact is borne out when one considers the great showing always displayed by Varsity in pre-season games against Big Four and O.R.F.U. opposition.

Joe Carruthers has all the attributes of the ideal trainer. Gifted with a rare personality and a thorough knowledge of his work, he has always taken a personal interest in each of the hundreds of athletes who has come under his wing. No single person on the campus has more real friends than has Joe.

pated along with his stable-mates in the numerous New York meets held throughout the winter in Madison Square Garden.

At the turn of the last decade Hec was going in for coaching, meeting out most of his advice in the vicinity of Detroit and Windsor. It was while in Windsor that Hec made contact with Bill Fritz, now Canada's premier quarter-miler. Hec has tutored Bill ever since, even though Bill is a Queen's man. He also met Wally Graham, who later came to Varsity and established an intercollegiate harrier record that still stands.

One-Fifth Of A Title Separates Blue Squads From Men of McGill

Varsity-McGill Battle for Cage Supremacy Has Waged Ever Since Varsity Took Wilson Cup for First Time in 1909; 1939 Competition Resulted in Three-Way Tie Between Western, McGill and Toronto Quintets

ONLY FOUR TITLES WON BY QUEEN'S

Down through the years since the inception of intercollegiate basketball back in 1909 Varsity's Big Blue cagers and McGill's Redmen have been racing neck and neck for championship honours. Varsity now lead their rivals by the meagre margin of 1-5 of a title.

McGill and Toronto have each won the Wilson Cup on ten different occasions. In 1939 McGill, Western and Toronto tied for the lead and

CAGE LUMINARY

Joe Connelly, ace of Varsity's 1935 intercollegiate basketball squad and an outstanding member of the Blue rugby team in the same year.

Toronto First Cup Winners

Toronto captured the cup during the first year of competition. McGill won in 1910. Varsity walked home with the honours the following year, and McGill scampared down the stretch in front the next season. And so it went year after year as cage history was being made.

Last Year's Competition

In 1940 the Big Blue team took a 3-point triumph from McGill at Hart House one Saturday night. The next weekend they travelled to McGill and were scuttled 33-29. This defeat forced the minto a first place tie with Western with whom they had split a home and home series.

One of the most breath-taking, dramatic seasons in the history of local basketball took place the year previous as Western, McGill and Toronto ended up in a first place snarl. Almost every contest was filled with pulsating, poignant drama. The games were hair-raisingly close, and several times a victory might have meant a title.

Varsity played at London and were leading 37-32 with only four brief minutes to go. If they could hold their edge they would gain a title. Moose Rogin dropped in an accurate over-head shot to extend Toronto's margin to seven points. "You've won yourself a championship," grinned little Johnnie Aitchison to Coach Warren Stevens on the bench—too soon.

Krol Scores

Western's spectacular Joe Krol scored a field goal. Farmer sank a foul shot, and followed with a clean basket. The partisan London fans were shrieking wildly, hysterically as their favourites came within two points of a tie.

Red Cahill eased the pressure by scoring on a foul. Manness evened this with a point for Western. Then Krol, far out, took a pass, flexed his wrists and the ball swished cleanly through the mesh. Only moments to go and the game tied.

Clem Faust, the American star, put London two points up with only 15 seconds left. Aitchison was fouled as the whistle blew and scored his point after the game ended to bring the count to 42-41.

The following weekend McGill downed London by the identical score of 42-41 and defeated Varsity at Hart House 39-33 to pull themselves up into a championship tie with these two teams.

Western Wins in '38

In 1938 we back into the Frankie Dougherty and Johnny Powers era. The Blues lost the title to the undefeated Farmer-Hurley-Cassey London squad that year, dropping the final clash of the year 37-26 at Western.

So the years have been kind to Varsity cagers. They have their nose a shade ahead of their nearest rivals in title victories. Looking back the university can be well satisfied with the performances of the various basketball outfits that have glorified the Blue and White on the courts of the continent.

the headlines of those days association football was being referred to as "soccer football." The compositor was getting used to the new nomenclature by December of that year, when the soccer team was headlined as the new Dominion champions.

"Casey" Flies the Channel

A custom now passed out of practice was that noted in an issue of 1909 that only championship teams could be photographed in front of the entrance to University College. February of 1909 was the date of the first recorded intercollegiate swimming meet. A game of water polo between McGill and Varsity also took place at this meet. "Casey" Baldwin came back into the news with the announcement that the former football star was planning to fly across the English Channel. Smirle Lawson was the star of the football outfit of 1909, and students lined up for as long as 24 hours in order to secure tickets for the game with Ottawa Rough Riders, in which the stellar field of Gail, Lawson, Newton and Dixon led the Blue and White to another notable victory, following up their efforts with the winning of the Dominion championship, defeating Parkdale Canoe Club by a 26-6 score.

Ladies' Hockey

The first picture of the Varsity ladies' hockey team appeared in 1910. The fair pucksters were tastefully attired in sweater-coats and ankle-reaching skirts. The name of Jack Maynard was prominent, as the fleet Varsity half was then approaching the peak of his football career. With only a skeleton of its last year's team, the 1910 gridgers went through to another Dominion title, defeating Hamilton Tigers on their own grounds.

In an effort to revive a lagging interest in athletics at S.P.S. in 1911, the athletic executive at School decided to award colours to deserving members of the faculty's teams. It was a great year for Varsity hockey, with all three intercollegiate championships being won by Toronto. The first issue of The Varsity in the fall of 1911 featured a picture of the new grandstand at Varsity Stadium. The next issue showed the new building from the Devonshire Place side. There was a movement afoot to have the gymnasiums open in the evenings. Varsity became the proud holders of the Grey Cup for the third successive year by defeating Argonauts to win another Dominion title.

Temporary Gym

Students returning to Varsity for the 1912-13 term found the old gym taken down to make way for the building of Hart House, and a temporary gym erected for their use. An editorial urged the prohibition of smoking at Varsity Stadium. He writes, "Such a lamentable and caddish disrespect for women would not be tolerated at Oxford or Cambridge, or any of the better class universities of the world; and let us emulate these rather than the Scarborough Beach or Dufferin Park crowd." The famous Jim Thorpe, world's champion all-around athlete, brought his Carlisle Indians here for a football game with Varsity and soundly trounced the Canadian lads.

Early in 1914 the Varsity basketball team came close to being involved in amateur-status trouble when on their tour, to quote The Varsity, "Varsity were advised not to play against the New York College as they had played against Lawrence who had played against Roxville Centre, a team of semipro."

the moral victory later when the Union handed down legislation to the effect that the second place team must beat the twelve at the top of the ladder at least once, it provided small consolation to Varsity.

The Last Champs

But more satisfying than a moral victory, a year later these same Varsity Blues came roaring back to whip that same Tricolor squad soundly and thoroughly to annex the intercollegiate crown. Remember these names? Ralph Ripley, Red Nally, Turney Williams, Ken Harris, Butch Alison, Frank Sir-devan, Captains Gus Grcco and Al Williams.

And so we come down to the present day, recalling names of several of last year's squad who deserve more than passing mention. Charlie Prince, Beefy MacMillan, Ken McQuarrie, Doug Queen's reign, while Jack Sinclair, Var-Turner, Bill Schwenger and Chuck McLean are the outstanding ones. Jim Fowell and George Meen of Argos and Eddie Shuba, who played with Beaches last fall, would have seen action on the intercollegiate gridiron front in normal years, but they, along with the

Feminine Sports

Women Made Strides In Hockey, Basketball During Early Twenties

Evolution of College Women's Part in Athletic Picture was Rapid After 1921. Early Feminine Athletes Were Dignified by Title of "Ladies" in Sports Write-ups which Had Their Own Development

SPORTSWOMAN BEGAN IN 1930

One of the first things to tickle the imagination of the research-worker meandering into the past of the women's athletic system at the University of Toronto is this astonishing head, appearing in The Varsity, 1921, "Ban is placed on co-ed cheer leaders." Could it be that we are actually old-fashioned in this idea, instead of so ultra-modern, as we thought?

In 1921, the first feminine name under the label "Sports Editors" appeared on the masthead of The Varsity. At this time, those daring young things taking part in athletics were delicately referred to as Miss Kickovitch, Miss Plosh, etc., and headlines of a women's basketball game blared forth "U.C. ladies check and combine well to defeat St. Hilda's."

How times have changed. In 1924, a separate women's sports editor was named, but still no regular sports article was forthcoming. Games were written up as exciting affairs, and encouragement was offered to both those thinking of playing games and those pondering watching them. Time—stands still!

Several major changes from the old to the new system took place during the ten years following 1921. On Dec. 4th, 1922, the following head appeared: "Constitution for Intercollegiate Girls' Basketball." This constitution was adopted at a meeting attended by delegates from Canadian universities, Miss Parkes being one of the two from Toronto. On Nov. 27th, 1924, The Varsity women's hockey team joined the city league and copied with St. Pats and Aura Lee. On the 17th of the same month, same year, "at a meeting of the Athletic Directorate on Friday afternoon, it was decided that on Friday U.C. might enter two teams for the Women's Interfaculty Basketball Series." In 1928, this idea proving successful, U.C. entered a third team, a freshman team, and three years later, U.C. did likewise. Until 1931, the old one-third-court basketball was played, enabling each player to cover only one-third of the floor. In 1931, this was replaced by the present two-third-court game we struggle with.

It wasn't till 1925 that any official columns was dedicated to girls' athletic activities. Eva Powell started a column headed "Co-ed Gym Jots" which Phyl Griffith, now of the Evening Telegram, continued after Christmas of that year. Three years lapsed before, in 1929, another column "Co-ed Jottings" appeared occasionally to give news of Women's Sports. On Oct. 6, 1930, a column "Sportswomen" by W. A. L. made its first appearance and on the following day, this was changed to "The Sportswoman" which has been your daily digest ever since.

In conclusion we offer a few tid-bits smiled over by us as we happily perused the works of our predecessors. 1921—"The only disappointment of the event was the small number of spectators turned out." We feel for you, sister.

1922—"Varsity women are anxiously waiting to learn whether or not they will be able to travel to the Toronto-Queen's game on Saturday on the special Varsity train. Application has been made for an allotment of tickets to women but if there are sufficient men to fill the train, it is doubtful if the women's requests will be granted." Well, really!

Still 1922—"Write up of a girls' game—"collecting numerous scalps. Varsity eventually emerged triumphant." Well, alright.

1924—"Swimming baths in the Household Science Building is open each afternoon, etc." Who's crazy?

1929—"Under head 'U.C. Basketball' down St. Mike's, 55—"There were several fumbles over the plate." Whose plate? Say, what is this?

And that's that for another 60 years!

Jennings Cup Is Coveted Goal Of Local Icemen

A civil engineer—the man who laid out the first power line from Niagara to Toronto—also brought light to interfaculty hockey by donating the coveted dinnerware for which students on intramural sextets have skated their legs off between lectures since the turn of the century.

Symbol of the everything the flying stickmen of the decades have struggled for, the W. T. Jennings cup was presented to the university in 1901. Its purpose—to stimulate a genuine interest in hockey amongst the federated colleges and faculties and raise the standard of play as the years went by—has been triumphantly fulfilled.

Dentistry and Victoria College share top billing as the titans of interfaculty hockey; both emerged with the championship after 12 of the 41 seasons which have seen struggles for the trophy. The School of Science flattered to the fore nine times, Trinity mastered it thrice, while the Red-White-and-Black team has triumphed the past two seasons.

Most surprising of all is the fact that University College, in all its long history, never turned out a championship Jennings Cup sextet.

Developed Since First Great War

Varsity Scullers Nose Shells To Numerous Regatta Victories

With the sweep of flashing oar blades driving them on, Varsity scullers have nosed their slim shells to victories in many parts of the world, heaping laurels on the name of the university.

At Olympic games in Europe on occasions, at the Canadian Henley at Port Dalhousie time and again, in intercollegiate competition, and in various other regattas, Blue and White crews have been prominent.

Professor "Tommy" Loudon of S.P.S. was for many years the driving force behind rowing at Varsity. One of the all-time greats in Canadian rowing, "Tommy" brought the sport to Varsity and nursed it along through many lean years. He himself was cox of the Canadian eight at the Olympic games in Stockholm in 1912. Under his guidance Varsity crews won no less than eight Canadian championships in five years. They also won the North American intermediate championship.

In 1924 the greatest Varsity team in history represented Canada at the Olympic games. Men like Ivan Campbell, Laurie Wallace, A. T. Bell, Norm Taylor, Boyd Little, Jack Smith, Warren Snyder, Bob Hunter, and Bill Langford all wore the Blue and White under Tommy's guidance.

Next year Professor Loudon managed to interest McGill, and intercollegiate rowing competition between the Redmen and Toronto commenced. For two years the Montreal crew defeated Varsity but the Blue and White came back to win the championship for the next eight years in succession. Competition was finally discontinued in 1935.

Varsity crewmen created quite a stir two years ago when they set out to enter the Canadian Henley. Lacking a shell, a few interested students who later comprised the senior four scraped up some money and motored to Hamilton where a boat club was offering a shell for sale. They closed the deal and found themselves cleaned out financially. Nothing daunted them however. They bravely set out from Hamilton harbour and rowed the forty miles back to Toronto, their way lighted by a full moon. Unfortunately their long-distance training failed to win a championship for them.

not immediately affect the athletics situation at Toronto, as can be seen from the intention expressed in the first fall issue of 1914 to carry out the schedules in the various sports. "CHAMPIONS AGAIN!" screamed the headline of November 23, proclaiming the great comeback Captain Charlie Gage and his men to the positions of intercollegiate football champions. The academic year saw soccer, harrier and hockey titles also come to Varsity.

The years 1913-19 were a limbo as far as intercollegiate activity was concerned, although there were some "big" games such as Jack Maynard's Old Boys taking on the 34th Battery team of Kingston in a benefit rugby tilt. Comment on current sport was carried on in a little column called "The Railbird", which was changed in 1916-17 to "What's What." In those days Varsity sported a snowshoe club.

Intercollegiate sport came back in a blaze of glory in 1919, as Varsity gave Queen's a 41-3 drubbing in the first football encounter. The column of comment had now been dubbed "On-looker". The opening of Hart House by the Duke of Devonshire marked the beginning of a great epoch in the history of Varsity sport.

Hockey at 20 Below
The Varsity hockey team played against McGill in February of 1920, with the mercury at 20 degrees below zero. Interfaculty track meets in Hart House were booming.

The sport sensation of the year was the weekend when Varsity won four intercollegiate titles, in basketball, junior hockey, senior hockey, and the assault-arms. The fall of 1920 saw "Laddie" Cassels' gridders outdrive Argos by 16-3 to cop another Dominion crown. The Varsity of Dec. 16 carried the news that the rugby rules had been amended to reduce the squad from fourteen to twelve men, and the substitution of the snap-back play for the old-fashioned scrum.

The first "Football Issue" of The Varsity ran on Oct. 6, 1922, before the game with McGill. During this period "Conny" Smythe was coaching the Varsity junior pucksters.

The sports editor of 1923 looked back over three years of Varsity rowing records, and found that the oarsmen in that time had won the Senior Eight championship three times, the Junior twice, and the Eight-Oar American Regatta title once. This was the year in which Don Campbell of Meds inaugurated the half-time skits at rugby games.

First S.O.S.
The first Speaking of Sport column appeared on Jan. 21, 1924, and the sports editor brought out a special athletic issue. There was a good deal of discussion pro and con over the appointment of a pro football coach.

The basketball team came through with a garrison finish to win the 1923 crown by defeating Western 27-22, and in the golf team was the proud captor of the Rutan Cup.

The first appearance of the "Speaking of Sport" in its now-traditional two-column dress occurred on Oct. 26, 1925. The S.A.C. had a court case on its hands when it had to fine two students ten dollars each for scalping rugby tickets.

Olympic Champions
The years 1925-29 saw Varsity teams sweeping the board in all but rugby, which yielded only one intercollegiate crown in '26. These were glorious years for the hockey teams, which were completing a series of eleven straight titles. Most illustrious of the talented pucksters were the famous Varsity Grads, who captured the Olympic hockey honours in 1928.

One of Varsity's bleakest years in sport was that of '30-31, when Toronto lost eleven intercollegiate titles.

One of the most important developments in the whole history of Varsity sport came in 1936, when the intramural director, "Mac" McCutcheon, inaugurated the new point-system of interfaculty competition. Trinity College was the first to have its name inscribed on the coveted trophy.

New World's Record
A world's championship was won by a Varsity man in 1937 when Larry O'Connor topped the timbers of the 60-yard hurdles in 7.3 seconds. The race was run at the Maple Leaf Gardens track; the old record was 7.5 seconds. The "scoop" of 1938 was the reprinting by The Varsity of an interview by rugby star Paul Rowe's father, which implied that Paul would receive tuition at Queen's for playing football. After a lot of verbiage had filled the sports press for days, the flurry died down and Rowe decided to play rugby for Calgary.

A new record in the number of intercollegiate titles won was established by Varsity in 1939-40. The list included: Senior boxing and wrestling, English rugby, golf, gymnastics, hockey, soccer, swimming, water polo, and tennis, and a tie with Western in basketball. One of the greatest of all Varsity hockey teams went through a season of impressive victories, bringing the Intercollegiate Intercollegiate championship back from McGill after seven years' possession by the Red team.

The Second World War brought intercollegiate competition to an end, and gave the intramural system a chance to prove its worth, and to expand its activities to absorb all the intercollegiate players yet still providing scope for the athletic activity of all who wish to participate.

Varsity Tennis Team Has Retained Crown Since Victory in 1936

Coming of Bill Pigott and Bruce Hall to Varsity Turned the Tide in the Fortunes of the Blue and White Tennis Squad. Ousted McGill from Tennis Supremacy in 1936 After Closely-Matched Tournament

BRUCE HALL WON INTERFACULTY SINGLES

When Bill Pigott and Bruce Hall came to Varsity, the fortunes of the Blue and White in the intercollegiate tennis world suddenly took a turn for the better, after seven long, lean years.

Bill Pigott left Varsity in 1938 with the intercollegiate singles title. It was a fitting tribute to a great veteran, who had played on Varsity net squads, both intermediate and senior, for seven years. Bill first graduated in arts and then entered engineering. But tennis seemed to occupy his foremost thoughts. It was he and his team-mates who in 1936 ousted McGill, cocks of the walk for seven years, with the exception of one year when the University of Montreal won the title, after a play-off battle. Pigott and Company beat more than the Redmen. They had had to contend with Canada's No. 1 racketeer, Bob Murray, who had been mainly responsible for the lion's share of the McGill reign over the net. At the conclusion of the regular series of matches, McGill and Toronto were deadlocked with four points each. In the play-off Bob Murray retained his singles title, but Varsity's combined efforts in the remaining singles and doubles matches was enough to carry off the day by a narrow 4-2 margin. The Canadian Intercollegiate Lawn Tennis Association Challenge Cup, to give it its full title, has not left Varsity since.

Hall Stars in '37
In 1937 it was Bruce Hall who won the intercollegiate singles, beating his team-mate Pigott 2-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-4 in doing so. Varsity made a clean sweep of it that year, Hall, Pigott, Tomlinson and Snyder made up the championship combination while Hall's victory helped to win for him a berth on Canada's Davis Cup team the following spring. Pigott, conceded only an outside chance of taking the intercollegiate singles crown from his stalemated Bruce Hall in view of the fact that he had been beaten by Hall in the interfaculty tournament, made a supreme bid to go out in a blaze of glory. He did just that, whipping Hall soundly in three sets, 6-1, 6-2, 6-2. In that year Hall found a great doubles partner in Bill Small, and the pair teamed up for the first time to convert the 1938 tennis race into a runaway. University of Montreal, who fielded their excellent pair, Leclerc and Dusaulles, ran second. So Bill Pigott left Varsity, proud possessor of his first and last intercollegiate singles title, and Hall and Small kept up the tradition instituted two years before, but it was not they who pulled Varsity's third title bid out of the fire—it was the second-string doubles team of Ian MacCallum and Jack Mullett. The 1939 bout was all even. Hall had beaten Small for the singles, but the two Vicmen fell before a terrific doubles bombardment. The championship hinged on the last doubles match, between Mullett and MacCallum of Varsity and Cully and Robinson of McGill. Suffice it to say that after a staggered start, Mullett and MacCallum edged their rivals 8-6, 6-3. Thereby hung a trail, strung out for four years.

The Early Years
But what had happened in the early years of tennis? For Varsity the tennis scene was a far from bright spot in intercollegiate play. It all started way back in 1909 when some of Varsity's greatest rugby players were in their hey-day. Royal Military College won the first competition, and it wasn't till 1912 that Varsity snagged her first net title. She had to wait till after the war for her second, when a team that included Reid, Heard, Spencer, Little and Charlie and Bill Dickson swept the Blue to the top. Thereupon a seven-year famine set in. McGill completely dominated the play, and Varsity waited until the fall of '27 before a great team that included Walt Martin, Gil Nunn, Gunna, Beath and Salmond lifted the crown from the Redmen's brow. Balfour took over Salmond's position on the team when the latter graduated in the following year and Bill Noyes took up where the great Gil Nunn had left off. Bill Noyes it is who has been winning the graduate title at Varsity perennially. The new combination kept the cup at Varsity during 1928.

Dissolving Ghost Flits About U.C. On Moonlit Eves

If you were a student here half a century ago, you might have seen it yourself—perhaps after a bout with the cup that cheers. You might have glimpsed it before University College's main doorway at twilight, or some moon-lit night might have come upon it lurking on the stone corridor by the Roundhouse (Croft Chapter House) or flitting up the steps to the bell-tower. Some of the people who had seen the University College ghost described a broad, thick-set figure, some a "shapeless" one. But they all agreed that it had a black beard, black curly hair, and an odd black conical hat, and that if you went close to it, it would dissolve into the air.

It was said to be a workman who had mysteriously lost his life during the construction of the building. It never harmed anyone, but it was thought to be an ill omen.

W. J. Loudon, in "The Golden Age", volume five of his "Studies of Student Life", notes several instances of the ghost being seen. The registrar, Mr. Falconbridge, saw it near the Roundhouse at the time of the Fenian Raid in 1866. In 1892, the headie beheld it slide down the tower bell-rope and dangle in front of a Latin inscription, muttering strange words. He tried to rush at it and it vanished. A few months later he died.

Another legend of the tower is more substantiated. One night, by some miraculous means, a cow was conveyed to the top of the tower and the bell-rope tied to her horns. How musical she must have made the night!

What is more, the same unknown persons (presumably) who whisked "Bossie" up those narrow stone steps also managed to spirit her down. The rumples were never discovered, but for years afterward, many an old grad told as a joke how, in his wild young days, he had been the player of the prank.

Cultural Activities Draw Student Interest and Effort

Drama Committee Formed To Make Student Theatre A Unified Organization

President Cody Donates Award for which Member Drama Clubs Compete Annually; U.C. Won First Year

VIC 1941 WINNERS

Back in '35-'36, there was a great deal of agitation over the question of Hart House Theatre's status on the campus. Was it or wasn't it a student theatre? Opinion sizzled in print. The Varsity ran several editorials and news features. Finally, as a substitute for having student representation on the board of the theatre, there came into being the University Drama Committee, under the guidance of Mr. Charles DeLaford. To a certain extent it was to replace the Hart House Theatre as a dramatic group uniting the interests of the whole university. In March of this year, a cast drawn from many faculties produced Gogol's The Inspector-General, under the direction of Martin Loeb (then editor-in-chief of The Varsity) in Hart House Theatre.

Drama Festival

The following year, to stimulate interest, the committee inaugurated the Drama Festival, now an important feature of Varsity life. Dr. Cody graciously donated an award, and proved his very friendly interest by presenting it himself to U.C. for their production of O'Neill's The Rope. Vic, Trinity, and St. Michael's were also entered in the competition.

The Drama Committee rose to heights in 1937-38. The all-University production of A. A. Milne's Miss Elizabeth Bennett under Edgar Stone was attended with all the glamour due to its world premiere—a cable from the author—and recognition in the Champs Cat. In the fall, a cash prize of $25 was offered for the best original act play produced, if possible, as a feature of the Drama Festival. Unfortunately none of the entries were of high enough calibre, in the opinion of the judges. The award is still available. The same year, a series of five o'clock lectures on The Theatre was inaugurated, with such speakers as Ray Mitchell and Wilson Knight included. March brought a Drama Festival with no less than six entries and out of the two-night session, U.C. emerged victorious with a translation of Aino Kallas' Bath-Sheba of Sorensen. Prizes were also given for the best male and female roles.

Holiday by Philip Barry was the major offering of the Drama Committee during the next season, Willard Thompson directing.

Afternoon One-Acts

In an effort to draw the various societies closer together, the committee last year organized a Wednesday afternoon series of one-act plays in Hart House Theatre, with Trinity, Victoria, and U.C. rotating the productions. The Festival in January was won again by U.C. with scenes from Maxwell Anderson's Mary of Scotland. Instead of a major production on the Toronto campus, the Committee concentrated on the entry in the Inter-Varsity Festival held at O.A.C., that old standby, The Rope, and came home victorious over Queen's Western, McMaster, and their host.

Military schedules affected attendance at the Wednesday afternoon series this year even more seriously than last. Nevertheless the shows were carried for the fall term, but a Theatre Night was substituted for them in February, with St. Mike's once more back on the scene. The monthly night of three productions allowed many more people to attend. At the University Drama Festival this year, held in January, Victoria College was the winner with The Valiant.

Mandolins Give Way To Operatics

Victoria Music Club Has Switched from Mandolin and Banjo Program to Polished Light Opera

KNOWN AS GLEE CLUB

It is a far cry from the concert "by the Victoria Glee and Mandolin Club" held in the Victoria College Chapel on February 9, 1905, to the five finished performances of some light opera which the Victoria College Music Club puts on each year in the Hart House Theatre.

The scrapbook of the present Music Club contains "The doing of Victoria College Musical Organizations from the year 1 (almost)," and in it one can go back even farther into the past, away back to old Vic at Cobourg, where, with the co-operation of Demill College and Local Talent, a GRAND ENTERTAINMENT was given. The admission was 25 cents and the doors opened at 7 p.m. The program (which started at 8 p.m. sharp) contained Choruses by the Glee Club, Songs by individuals, and the whole was interspersed with lively Recitations.

Although after 1905 the Glee part of the club gradually won out over the Mandolins, it must have been no small battle. Since that time Vic's musical leanings have been to the voice exclusively, but at this 1905 concert, an Instrumental (Mandolin) Quintette did some intensely dramatic music called Le Secret. Mandolins with Banjo Solo, "by the Director of the Club", did Darkest Paradise and the same Quintette performed Darkest Dream. Not to be outdone in this southern atmosphere, the Glee Club sang Down ye Cry me Honey, a "Plantation Lullaby".

The first mention of opera in the program (not including the singing of the Battle Hymn from Rhenia) was in 1922, when An Act of Up-to-Date Grand Opera was presented. The program note said, "This number was written to prove that if you take the right point of view of it, Grand Opera is humorous. The subject is an alarm of fire in an apartment house."

The first full fledged attempt was "The Wishing Cap", an original operatic fantasy produced in 1925, and this was followed by a list of the standard great names in light opera, with Gilbert and Sullivan constantly recurring.

In 1927, the name of the club was changed to the Victoria College Music Club and the old name of Glee Club abandoned. The next season, Mr. T. J. Crawford became the director and has held this post ever since. The Vic Music Club has built up a reputation throughout the city as one of the most important amateur musical organizations.

Maine Debaters Will Meet U of T

Debating, which has declined considerably this year as a student activity, will have a revival on April 1 when a debating team from the University of Maine will visit the campus.

On a tour of Canadian and American universities, the Maine debaters will meet a Toronto team consisting of Bob Miller, IV Vic, and Eric Hardy, III U.C. Subject of the debate, to be held in Trinity College library, will be: "Resolved that a Pan-American union against aggression should be formed."

Vic Drama Has Evolved Through Years

Emphasis Has Shifted from French and German Language Plays to Modern Drama and Play-Writing

INTERRUPTED BY WAR

The history of the Victoria College Dramatic Society goes back to a group of Moderns Students who presented French and German plays at the Moderns Club's meetings in Jackson Hall around 1911. After Graduation this group turned to English plays which they presented at Victoria with the help of some of the Dons and undergraduate actors.

The Great War interrupted the activities of the informal club, but when peace was restored the Victoria Dramatic Society was formally organized—consisting only of women. Most of the male graduate members of the pre-war group became charter members of the Players' Club whose home was in Hart House Theatre.

In 1930 an enthusiastic lover of drama, Rev. E. W. Wallace, became Chancellor of Victoria College. He early suggested that the executive draft Dr. J. D. Robins, a veteran of the club's heroic age of 1911-14, as Honorary President. This they did, and Dr. Robins responded to their requests for advice with two suggestions for re-organization, first, that they should present one act plays regularly in Hart House Theatre, and secondly, that they should start "read-through" groups in order to get every member of the club in on some activity. These suggestions were acted on and to the first two the club have since added other activities such as the annual one act play writing contest open to all Victoria undergraduates, several diction classes, and the workshop theatre in Alumni Hall.

Trinity Dramatists Foresake Shakespeare

The Trinity Dramatic Society, as it exists today, is largely a post-war development; the first actual theatrical production took place in Hart House Theatre in 1921. Prior to that time a somewhat monotonous and specialized program of Shakespearean readings had constituted its activities, but with the immeasurable advantages of the Theatre open to it, and under the guidance of a few keen enthusiasts, the society achieved in the early twenties its proper and fitting emphasis: upon the production of plays and all that that implies—from the training of actors to stage designing. During the intervening years a great many first class presentations have been given, the program each year consisting usually of a three act and a number of one act plays. Increasing importance has been given to the latter type of production in recent years, especially since the formation of the University Drama Committee. During intervening periods, workshops, make-up classes, and other related activities have arisen sporadically, as interest has waxed and waned among the student body. A powerful stimulus to student participation was given in 1938 by the acquisition of a "home stage", amazingly well equipped for its size, in Cartwright Hall in the new St. Hilda's. Endowed with enviable equipment and an honourable tradition in the past, the Society seems destined for a full and active future.

Sub-basement Theatre Makes Hart House Varsity Cultural Centre

A Product of Massey's Vision, Hart House Theatre was Built as an Experimental Theatre for the Dramatically-Inclined in the University as well as for Other Groups in the Community in Hope of Spurring Canadian Drama

AUDITORIUM HAS SEATING CAPACITY OF 492

Far down in the sub-basement of Hart House, is Hart House Theatre, one of the most complete "little" theatres in North America. It is part of Hart House in a structural sense only, for its administration is entrusted to a body of four, the Board of Syndics of Hart House Theatre, directly responsible to the Board of Governors of the University.

History

Hart House Theatre is a product of the visions of the Hon. Vincent and Mrs. Massey, who have given much time to the study of the modern theatre. This institution was established as an experimental theatre for the University of Toronto and the wider community which it serves. Already, at the time of its inception, amateur dramatics within the University and its Colleges had reached a standard which deserved a permanent housing on an adequate scale.

University dramatics had begun seriously in recent years with the founding of the Players' Club in 1913, an amateur organization which presented two productions before the present theatre was built, using the dining hall of Victoria College as a temporary theatre.

Construction

The theatre itself is underneath the central quadrangle of Hart House and its roof is formed by a series of concrete arches of unusual size and strength, supporting this quadrangle.

The auditorium has a seating capacity of 492. The ventilation for such an audience presented a problem which was successfully solved by a large mechanical system.

Equipment

Hart House Theatre is very complete technically. Besides a switch board with about eighty switches and dimmers with interlocking devices and master-handles set on a light bridge over the stage, it possesses a projection booth at the rear of the house and a complete public address system. At one time the theatre had its own costume department, under a separate manager, for the manufacture of its own costumes and their rental. The theatre possessed a stock numbering thousands.

The technical staff, with the exception of the stage manager, was originally composed almost entirely of undergraduates who had charge of the electrical equipment, the workshops, and the property rooms. At present, however, two professionals are in charge of the stage and lights. Besides actually running the stage and lights for the various productions, they are available at all times to aid amateur groups with any technical problems that may arise. The present Manager, Willard Thomson, is overseas as a Lieutenant with the Royal Regiment of Canada and the chief electrician, Herbert Hale, is a pilot in the R.C.A.F.

Repertory

For many years Hart House Theatre had an annual season consisting as a rule, of eight productions. A subscription list was opened at the commencement of each season; the theatre was open to the general public, but students had reduced rates.

The actors were strictly amateur, ability being the only criterion of worth. Thus, while students and other university members frequently took part, the casts were chosen at large.

Present Productions

Today the theatre is used by the various college Dramatic Societies and Music Clubs for their annual productions, by the University Drama Committee, and for college revue such as School Nite, the Vic Bob, U.C. Follies and Dementicals. The Hart House String Quartet holds its annual season of four recitals here. In addition to these, the theatre is available to the many amateur dramatic groups outside the University, and is also the home of the Central Ontario Region of the Dominion Drama Festival. There are well over a hundred different plays and recitals presented here annually and since the beginning of the war many thousands of dollars have been raised for various War Charities through the facilities of Hart House Theatre.

Singing for Fun Is Glee Club Aim

In 1933, there was formed a new musical organization in the University of Toronto. This Glee Club, directed during its first season by Mr. Allan B. Sly, was given permission by the Board of Stewards of Hart House to use the name "Hart House Glee Club", after it had proved itself capable of "maintaining a moderately high standard" of good music. Until 1939, this privilege had to be renewed every year, but at this time, the quality of the music was such that it was made permanent.

In the fall of 1934, Mr. Sly moved out of the city, and the present conductor, Mr. Charles Peaker, F.R.C.O., began his long association with the Club. Since December, 1938, the Hart House Glee Club has been heard annually over the C.B.C. coast-to-coast network, singing Christmas music from the Great Hall. Their first public concert was a Friday Afternoon Recital, but their repertoire soon became so extensive that they were able to give a Sunday Evening Concert. It is now the custom for them to give the final concert of the Sunday Evening series.

Hart House Glee Club, founded for the enjoyment of singing, has always seen to it that the idea of preparing for a concert does not overshadow the primary idea of singing for fun. Members, who are not required to possess any great musical talents, are kept to an interested few. Thus during the

Young Composer Forms Orchestra

Seven years ago, John Weinzwieg, young Canadian composer and conductor, founded the University of Toronto Symphony Orchestra while he himself was in attendance at the University. During the seven years, this orchestra, supported by the Students' Administrative Council has given annual concerts of classical music, played for fun by amateurs.

That, say the conductor and the members of the orchestra, is the primary idea of the orchestra; to all students who love music to take part in the performance thereof as well as listen.

The most recent conductor of the orchestra, Godfrey Ridout, replaced the scheduled conductor, Don Ryerson, on very short notice this year when the latter's Naval duties conflicted with his symphony rehearsals. Mr. Ridout is perhaps better known as a composer, for his works have been played by major symphony orchestras in both Canada and the United States.

present was the Hart House Glee Club has suffered very little decrease in membership, despite the added burdens of Military training. Members of the Club give the credit for their interest to their conductor, Dr. Peaker, who, they say, has such a fund of geniality and such a high standard of musicianship that he inevitably attracts them to him—to sing for fun.

Faculty of Music

It gives me great pleasure to send greetings from the Faculty of Music to The Varsity on the occasion of its sixtieth anniversary. The Varsity has a most enviable record in the history of the University of Toronto, and many who have passed beyond the undergraduate stage continue to read its columns with interest. I trust that in the years to come The Varsity will continue to flourish as it has in the past.

Twenty-one-year-old Men Are To Be Called For Two Weeks at Camp

1. In regard to the requirements for summer camp, for members of both Battalions of the C.O.T.C., the following information has been received from Headquarters M.D. No. 2.

(a) All members of the C.O.T.C. Officers' Training Battalion will be required to attend camp for two weeks to complete the required training and to obtain their practical qualifications.

(b) Members of the Training Centre Battalion who have attained or will attain the age of 21 years between July 1, 1940 and June 30, 1941 will be required to attend camp for two weeks.

(c) Members of the Training Centre Battalion who were 21 years of age or over on July 1, 1940 are not obliged to attend camp but in order to obtain credit for 30 days military training under National Resources Mobilization Act must attend for two weeks.

(d) It is expected that the camp will be held from June 2nd to June 14, 1941 inclusive.

(2) The Board of Governors has modified its regulations with regard to military training in conformity with the above.

Students who are unable to fulfil the requirements respecting military training now prescribed by the Board of Governors must apply for consideration to the Registrar of the University giving full particulars. Their cases will then be dealt with.

Features of U.C.'s Mellow Interior Are Pictures Lining Every Wall

University College without its pictures can hardly be imagined. Venus di Milo and the dwarfs of Velasquez are part of its landscape. Few people stop to look at them—even at Venus—yet the halls would not seem right if they were not there. As for those in the classrooms, Turner and Constable, Italian primitives and French realists have helped to while away many a dreary lecture.

But the pictures were not always there; how they got there is a story. As early as 1887, Professor John Squair, head of the University College, French department, from 1883 to 1916, felt the need of relating art to the study of literature. In those days there was no Fine Art department. Professor Squair, of course, was particularly interested in French art and French literature. About 1900, he started a collection among his friends to buy photographic reproductions of famous French paintings. Sharing with him in the plan were two colleagues, Professors J. H. Cameron and St. E. de Champ. Together they obtained a grant from the President of the University, James Loudon.

Gradually a number of photographs representing the best examples of each school of French painting was assembled. Slides for projection by a lantern were made and lectures on the history of art became a regular supplement to the Modern Languages course. The slides were also used in a course on world history and in other lectures. Then the Italian and Spanish department decided that they wanted illustrations of Italian and Spanish art. When they were given their grant and proceeded to acquire reproductions, the German, Classics, and English departments in turn said that they must have pictures too. And finally they all got their pictures.

Anyone wishing to gain an appreciation of art could make a good beginning by touring U.C. The pictures are hung in their historic groups so that it is easy to follow developments. (This careful arrangement is put out every time the pictures are taken down during spring cleaning. Until order is restored, you are likely to find a martyred saint stuck full of arrows next to a ballerina in a gauzy skirt!)

Stop and look sometime when you are in not too much of a hurry. Greek and Roman sculpture and architecture are in the east wing of the front hall, Spanish painting in the west, French and Italian on the second floor in the domains of their own departments, and Renaissance on the way up to the library.

When the pictures were first bought there was a little discussion about whether certain nudes should be hung. Those which were not deemed "suitable" for students were relegated to professors' offices, where to this day they have rested under the austere glances of faculty members.

Bed-ridden Girl Crippled for Life Earns B.A. Through Extension Work

University records recently disclosed a story which combines tragedy, courage, determination and intelligence—the seemingly fantastic story of a girl who graduated in Pass Arts with an "A" standing through her course, yet she had never once laid eyes on the university! In fact she had never been near Toronto.

Extension Director W. J. Dunlop unfolded the gripping story of a crippled girl living on a prosperous farm in central Ontario. Filled with courage and ambition she had obtained her honour matriculation, even though she had been forced to lie flat on her back for years. Then she turned to thoughts of a university education. Letters were exchanged between that far-off farm and the university. Mr. Dunlop completed arrangements to have her supplied with mimeographed material covering the three-year Pass course.

Three years of constant effort sped by. The girl was doing excellent work and had obtained "A" standings in all her subjects. Time for graduation came around in June. Her name was read out in the list of graduates and her unseen fellow classmates showered her with flowers and gifts and telegrams. Those made her extremely happy, but the feeling could not compare with that experienced when she received her degree from the university she had never seen. It was a triumph of ambition over seemingly insurmountable odds.

Affiliated With National Parties, Political Clubs Flourish on Campus

Two Main-line Political Clubs Have Had Long History; C.C.F. Group Recently Formed on Campus

Although their activities have been somewhat curtailed this year, political clubs nevertheless exist on the campus as official representatives of the three main Dominion parties. Evidence of the interest taken by students in public affairs, their purpose in general is to further discussion rather than to build up a party organ.

Shortly after the last war the Macdonald-Carter Club was founded by several students, among whom the late Maurice Cody was prominent. It was officially Conservative, but aimed more broadly at "promoting an understanding of public questions confronting Canada."

The Liberal party is represented at the university by the Liberal Club whose expressed aim is "to uphold Liberal principles and to criticize constructively all administrations." From time to time luncheon meetings are held with guest speakers prominent in political circles. Last spring the late Honorable Norman Rogers, minister of national defence, spoke to several hundred male undergraduates at a Liberal Club luncheon in Great Hall.

In 1936 a C.C.F. Club was formed on the campus only to dissolve in a short time. However, it was reorganized in February, 1939, and has been built up to a strong position with some forty members. The club has numerous discussion groups and study circles on various phases of co-operative action, and regular open meetings are held. Among the prominent speakers have been Charles Millard, president of the Ontario C.C.F. party, E. V. Jolliffe, David Lewis, national secretary, and Andrew Brewin.

The Business Management of The Varsity expresses its appreciation of the loyal support of its Advertisers and urges the Student body to extend their Patronage.

Keen Interest in Theatricals Evincen by U.C. and St. Michael's

Since the day the first enthusiastic nucleus of the Guild met on November 29, 1922, to form a stamping ground for U.C. lovers of drama, all kinds and varieties of plays, discussions, and exegeses of well-known names in the theatre world, both in and away from Toronto, and still in the University, gained early recognition in the Guild. Periments have been attempted.

From the first the policy of the Players' Guild has been one, not just of producing plays "for the fun of it", but of stimulating student interest in the many aspects of drama, both as literature and as theatre. So a review of Guild activities for the past twenty years is one of a policy which included from year to year, the study of drama in certain periods or following its development through many centuries.

Until last year all Guild productions were given on the stage of the theatre in the Women's Union, with the occasional move over to Hart House Theatre for an evening show. The season of '36-'37 was one of the most outstanding in Guild history, especially for the complete re-equipment of the stage entirely by the student members of the group. '32 was memorable for in that year Guild membership was opened to all faculties and colleges who had no dramatic groups of their own or who were particularly interested in the work of the Guild. This is still the case and the Guild has certainly benefited.

Dramatics form a facet of St. Michael's activities that has always enjoyed great importance. The Rev. Joseph O'Donnell, C.S.B., who has had general charge of dramatics at the college for some years, believes that participation in them serves several highly useful purposes. First, that dramatics tend to develop a man's personality and powers of expression and thus combat the modern tendency towards a mediocrity and sameness of speech. Acting in a play teaches one, Father O'Donnell believes, to overcome the habit of slurring words and the all too common dislike of inflections and facial expressions.

In addition to this, Father O'Donnell maintains that a classroom study of Shakespeare, one of the mainstays of the English courses given at the University, should be supplemented by a study of his plays from behind the footlights. In an article in the college Year-Book in 1936, Father O'Donnell wrote: "Not to study the drama would be to pass over Shakespeare, and if one were to forget Shakespeare, what reason would he have for remembering anything else in English literature?"

With so strong a supporter of the drama putting forth such reasoned arguments for it, it is no wonder that St. Michael's College has long given amateur theatricals such a prominent place.

Varsity Staff Selects Hodgson as New Editor-in-Chief

News Editor Appointed By Students' Council To Succeed Larry Smith

Born in Ottawa, Hodgson Entered University College in 1939; Slept through Own Election Campaign

WORKED FOR C.P.

For the third consecutive year an undergraduate has been named editor-in-chief of The Varsity. After receiving the support of the staff of the paper over three other masthead candidates, Dent Hodgson, this year's news editor, was appointed to the position by the Students' Administrative Council at its meeting last Thursday.

Coming to Varsity from Ottawa two years ago, Hodgson enrolled in U.C., which his father and brother had previously attended. He confesses that he really came here because of The Varsity, and not because of the Pass Arts Course he wanted to take.

He first became interested in journalism when The Canadian Press phoned his home one evening in mid-January four years ago and asked if he would like to begin working for them next day. Prior to that time, his varying ambitions had included being an architect, a geologist and a cartoonist.

The next day saw Hodgson initiated into the mysteries and secrets of a newspaper office. Sweeping the floor, and running cokes, sandwiches and copy for the newshounds took up most of his time, but they permitted him to do the occasional bit of rewrite and cover minor sports. The first months with CP were spent on Capital Hill, but when the Session prorogued he moved down to the regular bureau to rounds of days and nights on duty there.

After almost two years working as office boy and studying for honour matriculation exams, Dent came to Varsity.

Last summer, he returned to the Canadian Press Bureau in Ottawa where he expected to be taken on again in his old capacity, but was surprised to be made a junior reporter with a fifty percent increase in salary — which now amounted to $15 a week. His experience on The Varsity along with the rewrite jobs and the occasional bit of sports reporting had stood him in good stead, and he now covered "background parliamentary stuff and spot news around town".

Returning to the university, Dent made the transition from cub reporter to news editor in one quick jump. A year in that capacity, and his talents were recognized and rewarded by the confidence of the entire staff who voted to have him direct the editorial policy of the undergraduate paper for this coming year.

Dent will undoubtedly go down in history as being the only editor of The Varsity to sleep through his own campaign speech. He had been up all the night before preparing another eight pages of this Jubilee Issue, and due to a little misunderstanding with his alarm clock, he overslept the elections and didn't even get a chance to vote for himself.

Before an editor is elected, the staff

Al Mallon Again Editor Of Year-Book

Students' Administrative Council Re-appoints Fine Arts Student Graduating This Year as Torontonensis Ed.

HAS REVAMPED POLICY

For the fourth time in the forty-three year history of Torontonensis, its editor has been chosen to publish it for a second year. This was revealed when the Students' Administrative Council last week appointed Albert Mallon, present editor, to edit the annual year-book again next year.

Mallon, who is graduating in Fine Art this year, plans to do graduate work at the university next fall and will thus be able to handle publications of the volume. Only three editors have had the distinction of editing the book for more than one year. For three years during the last war Herbert Turvey was editor. In 1922 and again in 1923 E. L. Wasson produced the book, and Fred Branscombe handled it for the years 1936 and 1937.

Of The Varsity always makes its choice known to the Publications Committee which considers it and in turn makes its recommendation to the Students' Administrative Council. Although the staff vote does not determine who shall be editor-in-chief, the man so chosen is usually the one to be appointed to the position.

Advance Date Of Graduation To End Of May

Will Allow Men to Leave for Camp June 2nd; Graduation Ball will be Held on Friday, May 30

S.A.C. GIVES GARDEN PARTY

Advancement of the date of the annual convocation to May 29 and 30 was decided upon at a meeting of the University Senate last Friday. The date has been advanced in order that men attending summer camp starting June 2 may be graduated.

It was announced at the same time that the Graduation Ball will be held in Hart House Friday, May 30.

Garden parties sponsored by the Students' Administrative Council will be held in the quadrangle of University College on the afternoons of convocation. At those functions the special S.A.C. honour awards will be presented to outstanding members of the graduating year.

The annual examinations in Arts will definitely start April 25, the Senate decided. It was stressed that exams in all faculties will start on the dates published in the calendar.

Jubilee Postal Rates

The Jubilee Issue of The Varsity may be sent anywhere within Canada, the United Kingdom, or the United States for three cents postage.

International Figures Honoured by University At Special Convocation

Lieutenant-Governor and Several Diplomatic Dignitaries Are Conferred Honorary LL.D.'s

MULOCK CONFERS DEGREES

At a Special Convocation of the University of Toronto held Friday, March 7, the degree of Doctor of Laws honoris causa was conferred upon five men of international importance.

Those honoured were Hon. Albert Matthews, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario; Hon. Jay Pierrepont Moffat, United States Minister to Canada; Sir Gerald Campbell, K.C.M.G., F.R.G.S., Minister of the British Embassy, Washington; Hon. Leighton Goldie McCarthy, K.C., Canadian Minister to the United States; and Air Marshall William Avery Bishop, V.C., D.S.O., M.C., D.F.C., Director of Recruiting for the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Each of them was presented to Chancellor Sir William Mulock for the degree by H. J. Cody, President of the University. After the conferring of the degrees, the honorary graduates addressed Convocation briefly.

"It is the function of the universities to teach men to think freely and to think straight," said Hon. J. P. Moffat. He traced the origin of democracy back to medieval universities, and asked, "What better forum was there for free thought?"

Sir Gerald Campbell told of the great strain upon diplomats during times of crisis, citing the date Lord Lothian as one man who had laboured conscientiously right up to the time of his death. "We are entering on a decisive phase of the greatest struggle in history," said Sir Gerald. "When the war is over, all our countries will regard the Atlantic as uniting instead of separating use in the faith of democracy."

Discussing the co-operation of the English-speaking democracies, Hon. Leighton McCarthy, until his recent appointment to Washington, a member of the Board of Governors of the University of Toronto, said, "We have developed a new and unique type of internationalism which does not interfere in the slightest degree with our own nationalism."

The Cover

The inspiring view of the Soldiers' Tower, Hart House, which so aptly hits the keynote of The Varsity's Diamond Jubilee Issue, is from the omnipresent lens of Keith Jackson, Staff Photographer.

A third year Schoolman, Jackson has accompanied newsmen to various scenes of interest during the past year, and has taken many more useable shots than The Undergraduate Paper could use in a decade. More than a dozen of the cuts used in the "Big Issue" were reproduced from his prints, including the picture-story of How The Varsity Goes to Press. His camera is as familiar a campus sight as the angle expert himself.
